LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1969

The House met at 2.00 o'clock, p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: Today we have many guests in our galleries: in the east gallery, students from York-Humber High School in Toronto, and Runnymede Collegiate Institute in Toronto; and in the west gallery, from the Moosonee Educational Centre in Moosonee. Later this afternoon we will be joined by students from Oshawa Central Collegiate Institute, Oshawa, and Harbord Collegiate Institute in Toronto.

Statements by the Ministry.

Hon. J. P. Robarts (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, you will recall that on May 6 I presented to the House an evaluation of the possible expansion of the GO-Transit commuter service to other parts of the Metropolitan Toronto region.

That evaluation dealt with the use of railway facilities leading into Toronto. The report estimated that it would cost a total of $14 million to extend the existing GO service from Pickering to Oshawa; more than $30 million to provide full service from Oakville into Hamilton; and between $25 and $35 million to provide full rail services to the area north of Toronto. That report noted that the use of existing rail lines for expansion of the commuter service had certain disadvantages. These revolved around the difficulties of fitting commuter services into the movement of freight and other conventional railway operations.

All the possibilities for full GO-Transit type of service on the various lines evaluated in the report would require an estimated government expenditure for right-of-way improvements, station facilities and equipment amounting to $94 million. Subsidies required to maintain a reasonable level of fares in relation to operating costs would amount to several millions more a year.

The report also pointed out that the right-of-way would still be owned by the railways. All decisions on the scheduling of trains would have to be approved by the railways and train movements fitted in with their other traffic.

In the light of these very considerable costs and these other important points, the report said consideration should be given to public transportation modes other than those operating on existing railway rights-of-way.

In my statement last May, I assured the House that the government could not accept a programme of such extremely high initial and continuing costs without first examining alternative routes and modes, and I also assured the House that we would be doing this in the months that lay ahead of that May statement. I also assured the House that the government would seek the co-operation of all local agencies in providing as co-ordinated a public transit service as possible within this region.

I would also remind members of the House that in the course of my remarks, I announced that through The Department of Highways, the government would extend additional financial aid to municipalities to assist in planning and improving transportation efficiency. This would involve extension of the 75 per cent subsidy to cover studies of all aspects of transportation; an increase to 50 per cent of the 33½ per cent subsidy available to cities and separated town for road construction; and that this increased rate would apply to the subsidy made available for subway construction in Metropolitan Toronto.

Mr. Speaker, I have reviewed the salient points of the statement on transportation I made last May to re-establish the perspective of the approach the government has adopted in the planning and implementation of its programme of transportation development.

Our objective is an integrated and balanced transportation system, not only for the Metropolitan Toronto area, but for other heavily populated regions of our province.

I want to stress those words "integrated" and "balance". From our own public transportation studies, and drawing on the experience of other cities elsewhere in the world, we fully realize and subscribe to the premise that freeways alone are not the answer to moving masses of the public. Neither is the solution to be found in concentrating on any one form of mass transportation. In the opinion of our own experts and supported by transportation experts elsewhere, the solution for surface transportation problems in densely-populated areas must be found in a balance of all forms of transportation—the automobile and public transit.

In the case of bus and other forms of public transit it is highly desirable that these should operate on an exclusive right-of-way, where possible.

It is imperative that all public transit services be integrated, using the best features of each to provide a convenient and unrestricted movement of passengers.

To this end, a highly-skilled group within The Department of Highways has been investigating a balanced, integrated system of transportation for the Metropolitan Toronto region, based on an immediate, medium and long-range approach.

The initial investigations, covering the immediate period of the next three to five years, have involved Gray Coach Lines Limited and Canadian National Railways. Gray Coach Lines was involved because it is the major agency operating bus service in the Metropolitan Toronto region and the CNR because it controls the majority of rail lines in the region.

The studies of the medium and long-range approaches are still in the preliminary stages.

However, conceptual approaches for immediate application have now been developed. The government of Ontario will immediately undertake further public transportation demonstration projects in the Metropolitan Toronto area. They are tentatively scheduled to begin operation in mid-1970.

Agreement in principle for active participation has been received from both Gray Coach Lines and the Canadian National Railways.

The new demonstration projects will involve bus services with express schedules, the introduction of experimental mini-bus services in certain areas, and the scheduling of local bus services so that they co-ordinate with the main line type of transit facilities.

These demonstration projects will involve an approach to the integration of several types of transportation services.

Included is a single fare system with transfer arrangement covering all modes.

Also a part of these projects will be new community bus stations with parking and the popular kiss-n-ride facilities similar to those provided by the GO-Transit railway commuter service.

Mr. Speaker, I should now like to outline in some detail the specific projects which the government will be undertaking:

(1) One proposed demonstration project would involve the introduction of a GO-Transit express bus service between Hamilton and Oakville, where connections would be made with all GO trains. New bus terminals to serve Bronte and Burlington would be located at the Queen Elizabeth Way. A third bus terminal would be in the vicinity of Main Street and Highway 403 in Hamilton. All would have passenger-waiting facilities and parking areas.

An experimental mini-bus service would be introduced in the Bronte area. Negotiations will be carried out with existing local bus operators at Burlington, Oakville, Clarkson, Port Credit and Long Branch to provide improved feeder services to GO stations.

Under this proposal, Gray Coach operations between Hamilton and Toronto would concentrate on an inter-city express bus service along the Queen Elizabeth Way and local service along Highway 2.

(2) East of Metropolitan Toronto, it is proposed to introduce an express GO-Transit bus service along Highway 401 between Oshawa and the Pickering GO station. New bus terminals and parking lots would be located along Highway 401 at Oshawa, Whitby and Ajax. This service would connect with all GO trains.

In addition, it is proposed to introduce mini-bus services in the Whitby and Ajax areas to provide feeder services to the new terminals and in the Pickering and Rouge Hill areas to feed into GO stations. Oshawa city bus operators would be asked to provide connections with the GO express bus service.

Gray Coach would continue to operate its services between Oshawa and downtown Toronto along Highway 401, Kingston Road and the Don Valley Parkway.

Another aspect of integration proposed is the introduction of a shuttle bus service connecting the Scarborough GO station with the Toronto Transit Commission's Warden Avenue subway station about a mile and a half away. Such a transfer facility, under one fare, would offer residents east of Toronto a wider selection of public transportation routes to reach their destination.

(3) In the northern corridor between Toronto and Barrie, it is proposed to introduce a combination of train and co-ordinated express bus services for rush hour commuting.

The proposed rail service would consist of three chartered Canadian National Railway trains operating during each of the morning and evening peak commuting hours between Richmond Hill and Union Station. Stations with parking facilities would be established at selected locations between these two points. Negotiations are underway with the Canadian National Railways in the hope that satisfactory scheduling of trains and financial arrangements can be worked out.

GO-Transit express buses would shuttle between Newmarket, Aurora, Oak Ridges and Richmond Hill to meet each of these trains. Additional express bus service would be provided between Barrie and Richmond Hill via Highway 400. Local bus services would provide feeders to the new transit terminals.

Apart from this express bus and rail service, it is also proposed that express buses would be integrated into the existing service between Richmond Hill and the Toronto Transit Commission's Eglinton subway terminal. During the off-peak periods, express buses would provide service between Toronto and Newmarket, with stops at the intermediate terminals. Local Gray Coach buses would continue to serve other points with improved service. Local and express buses would operate between Richmond Hill and the Eglinton subway terminal.

In addition to the improved schedules and frequency of service, other features would include new terminal facilities, with parking, at all of the points I have mentioned, integration of local feeder bus services at Barrie and Richmond Hill, and the introduction of experimental mini-bus services at Newmarket and Aurora.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to emphasize one point in respect to the proposed services to the north. In attempting to develop maximum utilization of all modes, the government has accepted the advice of the CNR that the only rail capacity available without resorting to costly and major modifications existed only on the line that we have selected. And even at that, it is severely restricted.

As I have pointed out the introduction of the proposed service north of Metropolitan Toronto covers the immediate period. The flexibility of this type of service makes it adaptable to any intermediate and long-range proposals. These could range from the provision of exclusive bus lanes on the freeway system during the intermediate stage of planning, to a long-range programme using new systems which could revolutionize the whole commuter concept.

In giving approval to proceed with these three demonstration projects, the government undertakes to provide not funds but financing for such rolling stock required for the GO express bus services, the mini-bus services and all station facilities.

In these projects we shall apply the qualities of service that were developed for the GO-Transit railway commuter service and which were found to be so highly acceptable by the public. This will entail consultation with equipment manufacturers to obtain possible new bus designs which will provide maximum passenger comfort with pleasing, relaxed environment and new designs for bus station facilities which will offer commuters comfort and convenience.

Mr. Speaker, I want to be clearly understood that as a matter of policy it is not the intention of the government to become a transit bus operator. The role of the government will be to provide leadership and encouragement to bring about an integration of all modes of transit in this region, under existing ownership, along with the development of a single-fare system.

Detailed planning to implement the concepts I have outlined is now underway. Negotiations will be carried out to develop the operational aspects with Gray Coach Lines. Discussions will be held with municipalities and local bus operators where they are involved.

Further, the government considers these demonstration projects to be highly significant advancements in the transportation system of this region. The flexibility of the co-ordinated system that we have worked out appears to lend itself to other areas of Ontario which are experiencing, or are likely to be experiencing in future, problems of the movement of people, such as Ottawa, London and Windsor. Discussions will be undertaken with these municipalities as the programme proceeds.

I should like to stress again that the announcement which I have made today is not a final proposal for the development of transportation services in the Metropolitan Toronto region. We have purposely retained a high degree of flexibility to permit changes in type and direction of services.

For many months members of The Department of Highways staff have been working as part of an interdepartmental planning project to prepare a proposed regional development plan for the area covered by the Metropolitan Toronto and Region Transportation Study and the immediately surrounding areas. An interim report from this group is before the government. We will be considering in the new year firmer proposals under the regional development programme for strategic patterns of development in this region. When, after consultation with local groups, a broad development plan has become policy of the government, all government-supported services—including transportation, water and sewage—will be adapted to support the basic plan for the region.

Mr. Speaker, in conclusion, I should like to publicly acknowledge the considerable cooperation and assistance extended to the government's planning group by officials of Gray Coach Lines and the members of the Toronto Transit Commission in developing these concepts.

I am confident the proposals we have adopted will yield further significant information and experience in our methodical search for economic and effective formulas for transportation systems in this and other areas of the province.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Correctional Services): I would like to announce that The Department of Correctional Services will establish a minimum security forestry camp in Dufferin county. Approximately three miles north of the village of Mansfield.

The camp, which will be administered by Guelph reformatory as a satellite institution, will accommodate approximately 40 selected offenders up to 24 years of age, serving short sentences.

The seventh of its kind, the camp is a further extension of The Department of Correctional Services' programme of reducing the population in larger institutions by providing smaller units.

The new unit will be located on a six-acre site in the Dufferin county forest. The site has already been cleared and modular buildings are being constructed by inmates at the Guelph Reformatory. Erection of the buildings on the site will be carried out by selected inmates under the supervision of correctional staff.

Existing forestry camps have proven highly successful as part of a rehabilitation programme which allows for more individual attention, provides healthful, productive work, and teaches good work habits.

The men selected for this camp will, under the direction of The Department of Lands and Forests, carry on such work as pruning, trimming, cutting poles, improving roads, and fire-fighting—tasks which will benefit the community as well as the men.

The camp is expected to be in operation next summer.

Mr. Speaker: Oral questions.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, further to the statement made by the Prime Minister: he indicated that there would be no funds but financing. How extensive would he expect that to be as the programme, which he calls an immediate programme, gets underway?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Mr. Speaker, I made that clear. I thought what I was making clear was the fact that we are not going into the business. In other words, we will provide the financing for other organizations that are presently in the transport business. It is not possible for me at this moment to give any figure which would be very meaningful. I want these figures myself, and when I have them, I will certainly be more than pleased to share them with hon. members.

But now, if we are to proceed with what is set out in this statement, we are going to have to enter into negotiations with a good many different groups of people. To date, we have been working with the TTC, Gray Coach Lines, and CNR; but you can see, Mr. Speaker, that this is going to involve local bus lines and other places, and it will involve local municipalities. And, of course, it is going to involve acquisition of properties and so on. So, if you bear with me—if I gave the hon. member a figure now, I would have the feeling it might not really be very meaningful. My experience has been, in the past, when you throw one of these figures out, sometimes you find out you are more or less stuck with it. Now, when I can get something I feel would be of—

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Something the Prime Minister would be happy to be stuck with.

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Well, I can think of various situations that have arisen around here in the last few years where a figure has been used for one purpose or another—and it recurs, and recurs, when it really may end up having no relevance to the situation at all. So I am just going to hold the figures until I am a little sure.

Mr. Nixon: Well, then, a supplemental question; perhaps for clarification. The group within The Department of Highways, and other departments, will be dealing with these other organizations on the basis that we are prepared to listen to their requirements for credit, and then assist them in meeting the credit required for this capital expansion out of provincial funds.

Would there be a subsidy associated with the repayment of these capital funds? Would it be tied to the—let us say—financial success of the overall programme; or would there be some kind of a guarantee that these companies might take part with—let us say—with a reduced risk?

Hon. Mr. Roberts: I am inclined to doubt that there would be the type of guarantee to which the member is referring, and no doubt we will be asked to put up funds for real estate, for parking lots and things of this nature; which we will be prepared to do. But I cannot tell the member the exact form as to whether in certain cases it might become the type of guarantee that he mentioned. I am inclined to doubt it.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Better not wait for the federal government to help in urban matters.

Mr. MacDonald: Who brought the Minister into this?

Mr. Speaker: The member for Windsor West has a supplementary.

Mr. H. Peacock (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Prime Minister if this announcement today either sets aside, or postpones, the introduction of a provincial assistance programme by way of direct grants to the municipalities with major transportation problems?

Hon. Mr. Roberts: No, Mr. Speaker. I think last May when we started the discussion of this, we pointed out then that we were making additional funds available to municipalities in order that they may study their total transportation problems. Now this in no way surpasses any programme that we presently have, or that we are developing.

This is an exercise into the whole area of commuter traffic. We think it will produce results that will be applicable in other parts of the province as well as Toronto—but we have to start some place. And I think I can assure you that this will not be in substitution for anything else we may have in mind doing.

Mr. Speaker: The member for York Centre has a supplementary.

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): A further supplementary to the Premier. Does this contemplate a re-negotiation of the existing CN GO-Transit agreement, and a basis of payments that assures that the charges are competitive with other existing types of transportation or similar types of transportation?

Hon. Mr. Roberts: I do not think there is tied to this any specific re-negotiation of our arrangements with the CNR. But certainly, from a price point of view, we are going to have to be competitive, but we subsidize GO-Transit to make it competitive; and the justification for this, of course, is the substitution of that form of transportation as against a creation of more highways and expressways. So whatever comes out of this, it will have to be a form of transportation that will be competitive. Otherwise it will not survive.

Mr. Deacon: Mr. Speaker, I am concerned about the cost charged by the railway.

Mr. MacDonald: A further supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Simcoe East has the floor.

Mr. G. E. Smith (Simcoe East): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Prime Minister if the city of Orillia and the surrounding municipalities would benefit by the announced transportation programme as far as rapid transit to the city of Toronto via Barrie is concerned?

Hon. Mr. Roberts: Well, Mr. Speaker, with the combination of services we are planning, I think probably the residents of Orillia and area would tie into this system, yes.

Mr. MacDonald: In the fullness of time!

Hon. Mr. Roberts: Well, you have got to start some place. But, Mr. Speaker, the concept of a mini-bus is not a big bus, as we think of a bus, but a relatively small vehicle that can cruise, for instance, the streets in some particular sub-division, and pick up people standing on the corner, and take them to a terminal where they will transfer to a larger bus or train.

Now, it is simply a method—and I think ingenious—that you do not need the size of a bus which operates on our highways. You need a small bus, similar to some of the school buses that you see, which can literally cruise down the residential streets in the subdivisions to provide those people with portal-to-portal service.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The Liberals are not up on this urban terminology; they do not understand.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order!

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, perhaps I missed it, but did the Prime Minister indicate when these experimental projects are going to be initiated.

Hon. Mr. Robarts: I believe my term was, hopefully, mid-1970.

Now a good deal of the planning has been done. As I pointed out, we must now enter into what will undoubtedly be fairly public discussions with a lot of various people. We intend to proceed forthwith and we hope that sometime in mid-1970 we will be able to start some of these services.

Mr. G. Ben (Humber): That is the government's programme for bringing pollution to the suburbs.

Mr. Speaker: Does the leader of the Opposition have further questions?

Mr. Nixon: Yes, I have a question for the Minister of Energy and Resources Management. Has he issued any guidelines or terms of reference to the hearing underway, beginning today, by the energy board in the Consumers-Union takeover bid? Would the guidelines include an indication that their reports should be made available before the offer from Consumers runs out on December 15?

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Minister of Energy and Resources Management): Well, Mr. Speaker, as the hon. leader of the Opposition knows, the government does not interfere with hearings before the energy board. As far as guidelines are concerned, we have requested that a report and recommendations be given to the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council as soon as possible.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary question: Does the Minister happen to know how many applications to appear before this hearing have been received by the energy board?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: I have no definite information, but as of Friday, I believe there were around a dozen applications, or interventions, that had been filed by the deadline on Friday.

Mr. Nixon: A further supplementary: accepting the fact that neither the Minister nor his colleagues would want to interfere in any way, there would be no objection, then, if there was a postponement based on a large number of hearings? The number of requests put forward since the time to prepare the basic statistics for an objection has been limited.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: This decision, Mr. Speaker, again, should be left up to the energy board. I indicated in an answer to a question, I believe of the hon. member last week, it is my hope that there will be no postponement.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, a further supplementary in this instance. Is it accurate that the government has asked for a report from the energy board by December 2, namely about one week hence?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: No.

Mr. Speaker: Has the leader of the Opposition completed his questions?

Mr. MacDonald: I have a question of the Prime Minister. Is the Prime Minister in a position to indicate when the report of the committee on healing arts, announced in the Throne Speech, almost two years ago, might become available?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: I do not think I can give a specific date, but it is reasonably immediate. It is in the process of being prepared, at the present time, and I would hope it will be available within, oh, possibly the next six weeks to two months.

Mr. MacDonald: Before the next session?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: I would hope so. We want the report very badly. It is bound to contain recommendations that would be of great benefit to us in planning some on-going programmes and we are looking for it at the earliest possible moment, and I have so indicated to the chairman.

Mr. MacDonald: My second question, Mr. Speaker, is to the Minister of Energy and Resources Management. In view of the statement of Dr. Chant, head of the department of zoology at the University of Toronto, a week ago, that if all the present accumulations of DDT in the possession of citizens across the province of Ontario were disposed of at one time, the result would be an ecological disaster, has the Minister investigated how serious this problem is and, if so, what steps are going to be taken to gather them and dispose of the DDT in the least harmful way possible?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, I have asked people in my department—and also this would involve, as the hon. member knows, The Department of Health—to indicate some possible disposal methods of DDT. Apparently there are not any available that would be considered of normal nature. As Dr. Chant indicates, to dispose of these things in a normal manner down a sink, for example, would be possibly very dangerous. I think that it may require some form of legislation.

The other suggestion I have to make, Mr. Speaker, is the fact that it is not a world-wide ban, therefore the product is still saleable in very many parts of the world, and also, as the hon. member knows on a limited basis on this continent. Possibly, it is possible to dispose of it in this manner, although this would be a long-term matter.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, by way of a supplementary question, the Minister made reference to changes in legislation—if the ban goes into effect on January 1, to cope with whatever danger exists in mass disposal, will have to be handled in the next two weeks. Is the Minister operating on the basis that the disposal may take place en masse as of New Year's day next?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: That is the point Mr. Speaker, I do not think that there will be any great disposal procedures taking place. For example, I do not think early in January that members will find that DDT or containers of DDT will be disposed of on any large basis: because, as I said, it is not a complete ban even in Ontario or Canada, and certainly it is needed in many parts of this world for various reasons. However, I think that either the federal government or possibly this government should at least indicate some directions and guidelines for the safe disposal of this pesticide.

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): As a supplementary question, sir, inasmuch as the Minister says he is having difficulty finding a way, may I suggest that because the small bulk of this material—

Mr. Speaker: Would the hon. member make it a supplementary question and not a suggestion?

Mr. Burr: Has the Minister considered burying this material at the bottom of some abandoned mine, where it would presumably be safe?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: This has been considered, Mr. Speaker, but then again there is the possibility of seepage. It depends on the mine, the depth of the mine and the location of the mine. But if we have to drill shafts, maybe this is the answer.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson (Victoria-Haliburton): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Has the Minister considered using the good offices of the various departments of this government as collection agencies?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: On a commission basis, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: If anyone wishes to turn this stuff in, should not the government offices in various parts of this province, be available for the citizens to turn such quantities in, so that they will be collected?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: This suggestion will be taken under advisement, Mr. Speaker.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Port Arthur.

Mr. R. H. Knight (Port Arthur): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Prime Minister. I would like to ask the Prime Minister, Mr. Speaker, whether he would consider launching an investigation into the living conditions of citizens of 70 years of age and over in the province of Ontario during this time of rapid inflation; and whether he would consider reading in Hansard my address of Friday in this House concerning our elderly citizens and consider implementing some of the recommendations made there?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: I shall consider that, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Minister of Agriculture and Food has the answer to a question placed by the member for Brantford (Mr. Makarchuk).

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. May I table this and send a copy of the answer to the hon. member for Brantford, as well as to the agricultural critics in the Liberal Party who, I believe, referred to the matter?

Mr. Speaker: I understand that it is a very lengthy answer.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes, it is very lengthy and detailed.

Mr. Speaker: I would like to point out to the member for High Park (Mr. Shulman) that the answer to the member for Brantford was the turn of the New Democratic Party and the question period goes to the leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Attorney General if the charges laid against Domtar at the Red Rock area, are designed to be a test case before further charges are laid against other sources of pollution associated with resource industry?

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Minister of Justice): Not necessarily, Mr. Speaker, not necessarily!

Mr. Nixon: I wonder, as a supplementary question, if the Attorney General can give any justification for the selection of that firm, rather than some others that are generally accepted even in our own light as putting pollution into the surrounding waters? How did you go about selecting Domtar? Are they the worst or have they failed to come under a programme for pollution abatement or what is the reason they were selected?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Speaker, the agency which draws to our attention, for instance, those firms guilty of pollution, is the Ontario Water Resources Commission, in this case they asked that charges be laid against Domtar.

Mr. Nixon: I do not know whether it is within the rules to ask a supplementary question of another Minister since—

Mr. Speaker: I think it will be a new question.

Mr. Nixon: All right, may I be permitted to do that now or—

Mr. Speaker: I think perhaps the leader has now lost his position of the head of the list.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): I have a question of the Minister of Public Works, Mr. Speaker. What action was taken as the result of your inspector's report of the Ontario Science Center which indicated that the rugs the draperies and the insulation of the auditorium, were all flammable?

Hon. J. R. Simonett (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker I have investigated or had the matter investigated and I might, with your permission, read a short statement which would cover that investigation.

Mr. Speaker: If the hon. Minister is answering his question by reading material, it is quite in order, but if he is making a statement then of course this is not the proper time to make it. I presume that this is the answer to the question.

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Right!

I am pleased to clarify some of the apparent misunderstandings and statements that are being made with regard to the safety of the staff and public at The Ontario Science Center.

Mr. Shulman: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the hon. Minister heard my question. I was asking a different matter today than what was referred to the other day outside of the House.

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Mr. Speaker, what I am trying to do, is answer the hon. member's question, if he would just listen I will not be more than three minutes.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): That is not the point.

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Firstly, may I advise that prior to construction, the plans and specifications were developed to the approval of the borough of North York Fire Department, with respect to all matters of safety.

Prior to the official opening of the center on September 27, safety inspector S. W. Greenslade, of my department spent three days, September 24, 25, and 26, reviewing again all aspects of safety in the building.

His report dated September 29, 1969, recommended certain operational procedures be adopted and included three items of a corrective nature, two of which he implemented at that time.

His report suggested additional fire alarm bells in the display area in "C" building. This is under review.

During the first day's operation a false alarm was activated by a child in "C" building and this alarm was responded to by the North York Fire Department. Approximately 20,000 people were in the buildings at the time, and when it was determined that the alarm was false the public were advised to return to the buildings and this was over the public address system.

I should like to quote one more paragraph from that report:

A fire evacuation programme was instigated with the co-operation of Mr. T. Maike, director of interpretation, and his staff. Also, the security staff were instructed on emergency procedures.

This report, Mr. Speaker, is the last report that has been made on this building.

The day-to-day operation of The Ontario Science Center is the responsibility of the center's staff. I am advised the borough of North York, since the official opening, have assisted, on several occasions, the management in ensuring that the daily operations are not in conflict with their recommendations and standards. The director general of the center is unaware of any situation or condition that is in violation of reasonable safety standards for this building.

Mr. Shulman: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker: is the Minister aware that since the opening of the building there have been 140 false alarms that have gone into the North York Fire Department because of the poor setting up of the alarm system?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Shulman: I am sorry, is the Minister not going to answer that? May I ask a further supplementary then?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: There have been a few false alarms, but again I do not think there has been that much problem with the false alarms—perhaps children have activated the alarm system.

Mr. Shulman: One hundred and forty to be exact, as of last night.

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Any child could activate the alarm system in this building.

Mr. Shulman: But they do not.

Hon. Mr. Simonett: They do not?

Mr. Lewis: Would the Minister characterize himself as a false alarm?

Mr. Shulman: As a further supplementary, Mr. Speaker. My original question was, "Has anything been done about the flammable rugs, drapes and installations"—does the Minister have any knowledge of that matter?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: No, Mr. Speaker, it has not been reported to me, but I suppose there are flammable rugs and drapes, in any building you go into. We live with them every day, so I do not think we should worry any more up there than we do here.

Mr. Shulman: As a final supplementary, why does the Minister not arrange to have them sprayed so they will be fire-proof?

Hon. S. J. Randall (Minister of Trade and Development): Make us an offer and we will send the hon. member up.

Mr. Speaker: Has the member for Downsview a supplementary?

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Mr. Speaker, have there been any actual fires, other than alarms, in the science center?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: No.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a question of the Minister of Energy and Resources Management.

Does he consider the charges laid against Domtar in the Red Rock area as a test case which may, or may not, permit him and the OWRC to proceed with other cases?

If it is not a test case, how does the OWRC select the company against which charges will be laid when there are other polluting companies in northern Ontario associated with resource industries?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, we do not necessarily consider this particular charge or prosecution a test case. We have had other successful prosecutions under the OWRC Act against paper mills. As far as this company is concerned, it is a matter of not co-operating with OWRC to the extent that we can get them into a programme—

Mr. Nixon: They would not enter a programme?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Yes, and because of the delay and the attempt over a period of time it was felt that there was no alternative but to lay charges. This particular plant apparently is dumping, or contaminating, a recreational lake quite close to the mill and, as I indicated last week in my estimates, there are other companies who are on a programme. In the event that they are not, this remedy is invoked.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary question: Is it true that this company is charged because they would not enter a pollution abatement programme rather than the fact that they are polluting because, as the Minister explained in his remarks, several companies are polluting but they are not charged because they are coming under OWRC supervision?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: As far as the charge, Mr. Speaker, under the Act is concerned, they are charged for polluting.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Public Works.

1. Is the Minister aware that his Deputy this morning issued instructions disbanding his safety department as of December 1?

2. If the Minister was not aware of that, in view of the increased hazards this will mean to all occupants of government buildings throughout the province, would he please look into it and take remedial action?

Did the Minister not hear my question?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of us disbanding the safety section of our department. I think when that happens it will be a policy decision of our department and the government, and I will announce it in the House at that time.

Mr. Shulman: Would the Minister mind contacting his Deputy and inquiring as to the instruction which was issued to all department heads this morning at 10 o'clock?

Mr. MacDonald: Is he not the Minister?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Yes, I am the Minister, and I wish some of the people that were instructing the leader of the NDP's member knew as much about that department as the Deputy and I do, because I only discussed this not later than this morning.

Hon. Mr. Randall: One of those $65 a week Quislings.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The member for—

Mr. Shulman: May I ask a supplementary, sir? Will the Minister report back to the House?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member has asked sufficient supplementaries in this matter. The member for Wentworth has the floor.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a question of the Attorney-General if I could.

Is the Attorney-General investigating the possible Mafia action in the city of Hamilton at this time?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Speaker, I gave an answer the other day, which I think is really an answer to this question. All criminal activities of which we are aware—and we are aware, I think, of most of them—are being investigated by the intelligence forces of our Ontario Police Commission and of the urban police forces and the municipal police forces—particularly of the large municipalities.

I do not know the particular specific case to which the hon. member refers, but I can assure him that the activities of the criminal people in Hamilton are being investigated continuously.

Mr. Deans: By way of supplementary, is the Minister aware of the statements of the police chief of the city of Hamilton today that he suspects Mafia irregularities and actions in the city of Hamilton and that he is concerned about them?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I am sure the chief of police of Hamilton must have suspected these long ago.

Mr. MacDonald: Why did he say it today?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I do not feel it is my place to tell police chiefs what they say to the public. I think none of us is so naive as to think that there are not criminal activities of organized criminals in cities such as Hamilton, Toronto and other places. If a chief wants to take that as a subject for an address, I think he has a privilege to do so and I do not intend to choke off that expression of opinion. But, to suggest that it is not being investigated, I would like to set that idea at rest. Certainly the activities of crime and criminals, whether it is organized or individual, are continuously under investigation.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Sudbury East.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): Is the Prime Minister aware that the International Nickel Company today announced the increase of nickel by 25 cents a pound? Does he not consider this to be inflationary at this time?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether that would be inflationary at this time. I think the price of nickel on the international market has gone up something like 60 per cent in the last three or four months, perhaps as a direct result of the strike that took place there when all production ceased. I do not know how companies can continue to pay price increases without raising the end price of their product. There is no other way.

This may be inflationary, but I do not know whether I am in a position to say that it is directly inflationary. I suppose that any price increase is inflationary. I was not aware that they had increased the price this morning, but certainly the price of nickel has been rising steadily for three or four months.

Mr. Martel: I agree with the Prime Minister that—

Mr. Speaker: Is the hon. member going to ask a supplementary?

Mr. Martel: Yes, I am going to ask a supplementary question. Is the Prime Minister, then, aware that International Nickel Company raised the price of nickel by nine cents a pound last year and five cents a pound for copper when there was no contract negotiation going on and they derived an additional $40 million profit on that increase alone?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Mr. Speaker, as I look at the activities of International Nickel Company, and believe me I am no apologist for them, I notice that in their expansion plans to meet the world's demand for copper, they are increasing production, they are bringing in new processes and they are looking for new sources of raw material. Undoubtedly, all this is going to cost money, it has to be financed in one way or another. Is the member—well, I will not parry a question with a question, but we come back to the position I am in, in this House, very often. That is, do these questions indicate this particular group in the House is advocating the establishment of a prices and wage board in this province?

Mr. MacDonald: By way of a supplementary question: The Prime Minister a moment ago indicated that there was no other way to meet rising costs than by price increases. Would the Prime Minister agree that there may be some possibility of meeting those rising costs by reducing somewhat the $148 million profits after taxes that the company had last year?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Mr. Speaker, there are many, many ways of reducing prices. You can do it by increasing productivity, you can do it by disposing of all profits whatsoever, in which case, I doubt very much if we would ever develop the International Nickel Company and its tens of thousands of employees at all. There has to be a profit motive and I think it is a good motive. I think if we dispose of it and if we so order our affairs that there is no profit motive left in our economy, our expansion will come to an end. Men work for profit. That is the whole basis of the current prosperity in this province and I for one am not anxious to chip away at the profit motive any more than—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Let me finish, the member asked the questions.

I am not interested either in limiting the right of any worker in this province to sell his services for the highest price he can get.

I used to do so myself when I was a practising lawyer and I do not intend to limit his rights to sell his services. He is entitled to everything he can get—in many cases probably entitled to more than he is getting.

Mr. MacDonald: The Prime Minister is not interested in controlling inflation.

Hon. Mr. Robarts: I am as interested as the member in the controlling of inflation, and I recognize the problems faced, particularly by people on fixed incomes in this province. We have a lot of pensioners and we are looking at pensions as far as our own pensioners in the civil service, our own ex-employees are concerned. We have the problem with teachers; we have the problem of all the older people, as the hon. member for Port Arthur was speaking about on Friday. We recognize these problems, yes; and we are well aware of the distress caused by inflation. But I do not think you can rule out every price increase on the basis that that will control inflation.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Martel: May I ask one further supplementary question: In the press release—this question is to the Prime Minister—they indicated a raise in three commodities of 25 cents. But the American price is ten cents cheaper than what we can purchase it for in Canada. Is there any justification for selling produce mined here ten cents dearer per pound than in the United States?

Mr. Speaker: Of course, this is not supplementary to the original question—

Mr. Martel: It certainly is. It deals with the whole pricing.

Mr. Speaker: Which was a question, with respect, to the effect of a price raise on inflation. And this, of course, is not supplementary to that. If the member wishes to place another question, in due course, in those terms, it will be acceptable.

The member for Middlesex South.

Mr. K. C. Bolton (Middlesex South): A question of the Minister of Justice: In view of the fact that the McIlraith bill, the expunging of criminal records, applies to federal offences alone, and in view of the fact that provincial offences are much more numerous, and that the records are equally a barrier to rehabilitation, does the Minister plan any parallel or complementary action directed towards expunging of provincial criminal records?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Speaker, this is a matter for government policy. I could tell the hon. members of the House, that we have considered this matter, that no policy has been determined. The McIlraith bill, as the hon. member refers to it, goes a very short distance in expunging criminal records.

Actually, there is very little of importance in that bill. And the matter of expunging criminal records is one that requires a good deal of consideration—for instance persons who seek employment have to be bonded, and all that sort of thing. It is a question of whether they are entitled to go forward and say: "I have never had any criminal record or any criminal conviction."

We have discussed it in a general way. I have discussed it with some of the federal officials, but no policy as yet has been determined.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Yorkview.

Mr. F. Young (Yorkview): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the hon. Minister of Trade and Development: In connection with the 669-unit OHC development just announced for Falstaff and Jane in North York, has the Minister made arrangements with the local municipality in respect to the education of the children emanating from this development? If so, what is projected?

Hon. Mr. Randall: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry, I did not hear it. In respect of what?

Mr. Young: In respect of the education of the children in this area. Because the schools there are now jammed full with portables, and gymnasiums full. I was wondering if arrangements had been made for the education of those children; and, if such arrangements are made, what are they?

Hon. Mr. Randall: Well all I can suggest to the hon. member, Mr. Speaker, is that we only get approval through the North York board, and the board of education at the time would also participate in those approvals. I assume that they know how many children are going to be in there and they have made arrangements to handle the movement of children into that area. Outside of that, I do not know if I can add any more to it. I would be glad to look into it and see if there have been special arrangements made.

Mr. Young: Mr. Speaker, as a supplementary, the approvals have been granted by the municipality for this development then? The Minister is satisfied that these arrangements are there?

Hon. Mr. Randall: Yes.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Speaker, on Thursday last I was in the midst of answering a question from the hon. member for York South when time ran out. I think your expression was that I had been saved by the bell.

I should like to finish that answer and to say that, in the case of the University of Toronto, to which the question was directed, the approving authority would be the Minister of Justice by virtue of two Acts, one of which is The University Expropriation Powers Act of 1965, which applies to the University of Toronto, and therefore gives the powers of expropriation in connection with that university, and actually practically all our Ontario universities under that public Act.

Therefore, by virtue of that and subsection five of The Expropriations Act of 1968-1969, by section five, subsection five, the approving authority would be the Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. MacDonald: I take it that supersedes all private rights to expropriation?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Yes, The University Expropriation Powers Act of 1965 is now the Act under which all our universities get the power to expropriate. Since, therefore, that is a public Act, they do not come under the hand of the Minister of University Affairs. For that purpose the approving authority is the Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Sandwich-Riverside.

Mr. Burr: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Social and Family Services: Has the Minister completed his investigation of the dismissals at St. Monica House, Kitchener?

Hon. J. Yaremko (Minister of Social and Family Services): Mr. Speaker, our contact with the St. Monica House has been on a continuing basis. I may say it is not so much a matter of investigation as an assurance that the very highly commendable work of this organization will be able to continue in the way that was originally planned. There is a meeting of the board of directors, I believe, tomorrow night, or the night after, and I think the conclusion of this matter should be a satisfactory one from the point of view of the young people who are to be the beneficiaries.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Sudbury East was on his feet a moment ago. Does he wish to place a question?

Mr. Martel: No thank you.

Mr. Speaker: The member for High Park.

Mr. Shulman: I have a two-part question for the Minister of Public Works, Mr. Speaker.

1. Were instructions issued last year that no building was to be leased or purchased before a safety inspection by the Minister's department?

2. Were, earlier this month, 35 requests put on the desk of Mr. E. W. Wrightman for inspections of buildings that have been put through, and had not been inspected before being purchased and/or rented?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Mr. Speaker, instructions are issued that no building is leased or purchased before it is inspected. Now as to the 35 that slipped through, I am not aware of it, and I would doubt very much if they had slipped through without inspection before lease or purchase.

Mr. Shulman: Will the Minister inquire as to the fact of this particular matter. The man involved is Mr. E. G. Wrightman.

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Yes I will, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Shulman: I have a question to the Minister of Public Works, Mr. Speaker. What is the explanation, Mr. Minister, for the fact that in this past year, your drivers have been involved in 28 automobile accidents?

Mr. Speaker: I would think that while that is a matter of public importance, at the moment it is not of such urgency that it needs to be discussed in the oral question period; and I would suggest that the member might direct that to the Minister privately by letter or otherwise.

Mr. Shulman: Well, if there is no one else, I have another question for the Minister of Public Works. Mr. Minister, what is the explanation for the fact that when the Science Centre was opened, all the fire extinguishers that were put in, were water extinguishers? And they all had to be removed because the large amount of electrical wiring would electrocute anyone who attempted to use these water extinguishers?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Well Mr. Speaker, I cannot answer why this happened. But I do know now that after the report came in, they have all been changed and we have no problem there.

Mr. MacDonald: What about North York Fire Department on that kind of proposition?

Mr. Nixon: The Minister had better undertake investigation of his staff.

Mr. MacDonald: They are being investigated right now.

Mr. Shulman: I have a question of The Minister of Public Works, Mr. Speaker. Mr. Minister, are you aware that your department did not approve the plans for The Department of Education building on Bayview Avenue to house film and exhibit films and that the department went ahead despite your failure to approve those plans? As one example, there is only one exit from the viewing room when your department insisted there be two.

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Mr. Speaker, I was not aware of that, but it could have happened. I would have to check it out with our department. Evidently, we were in the right and some other department was in the wrong, so I think the question should be directed to another department.

Mr. Nixon: Would the Minister care to check it?

Mr. Shulman: Well, can the Minister explain, how it can be that if his approval is necessary, if the approval is not given, that the other departments can go ahead anyway? Is there no control there?

Mr. Speaker: I would point out to the hon. member for High Park, that I allowed the question because matters of safety of even a few people working in the building are urgent and of public importance, but the supplementary now asked, certainly is not the proper question for the oral question period and it is out of order.

Mr. Shulman: Well is it not a proper supplementary as matter of policy, sir, which involves the safety of people in any building?

Mr. Speaker: I have ruled the question as out of order. Are there any further questions? This ends the oral question period.

Mr. Speaker: Petitions.

Presenting reports.

Motions.

Introduction of bills.

THE HIGHWAY TRAFFIC ACT

Hon. I. Haskett (Minister of Transport) moves first reading of an Act intituled an Act to amend The Highway Traffic Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Haskett: Mr. Speaker, this bill is to amend The Highway Traffic Act as required because of the new federal legislation concerning drinking and driving that becomes effective on December 1. The purpose of the bill is to amend The Highway Traffic Act for consistency with the renumbering of the sections in The Criminal Code, for elimination of references to the deleted offence of driving while intoxicated, and to apply existing mandatory licence suspensions to the new offences of refusing to provide a breath sample and driving with over .08 per cent alcohol in the blood.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, I am sure neither the hon. member for High Park nor The Minister of Public Works would wish to mislead the House and insofar as the various incidents at the Science Centre are concerned. I thought they would appreciate the information that is with the House. Platoon chief Simmons of the North York Fire Department has just advised me—there were not 114 false alarms, there were in fact 14 false alarms—

Hon. Mr. Robarts: That is par for the course—

Mr. Singer: —and secondly that there was a fire on September 18. The fire caused an estimated $400 damage. It apparently was caused by sparks from a welder's torch and it involved the screen in the theatre contained in the Science Centre.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, apparently I have been named as misleading the House, but the figure was not 114. I said it was 140 and that figure was received from a member of The Department of Public Works who confirmed it from an officer at the borough of North York, sir.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Singer: Platoon chief Simmons just gave me the information a few minutes ago.

Mr. Lewis: One would suspect this?

Mr. Singer: No; I would respect.

Mr. Lewis: Ah—respect!

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

Clerk of the House: The 31st order; concurrence in supply for The Department of Agriculture and Food.

ESTIMATES, DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE AND FOOD

Mr. Speaker: I wonder if I might have the attention of the members for a moment before we start on this order, because this is a new procedure.

I have asked the assistance of the Clerk of the House and I believe he has been in consultation with the party leaders and Whips. I understand it has been decided, and I think a proper decision, that this debate will proceed in the ordinary course of a debate in the House and shall be opened by my asking the question: shall the resolution for supply for The Department of Agriculture and Food be concurred in? And that then the chairman of the committee will lead off the debate to be followed by the spokesman for the Opposition party and so on, in accordance with the list arranged by the Whips.

If there is, or should there be in this or in any similar proceeding an amendment to the concurrence question, then of course, it can be properly moved and the debate will continue and the amendment and then the question will be put at the end of the period.

I am informed there is some agreement that the speech list provided Mr. Speaker, for this afternoon will probably only take up the afternoon session and if so, the vote of course will be in the normal course before the House rises. But I would point out to the hon. members that the rules of procedures adopted by the House do give two sittings, or this afternoon and this evening for consideration of the estimates of this particular department.

Therefore, when the appropriate time comes, I trust that if the debate has not been completed or is not nearing completion, that the Whips will advise Mr. Speaker, so that everyone will have the opportunity of speaking to this particular matter, if they wish to, because this is the first go, shall I say, of the new procedure and I think we should make sure that no one is cut off, that it is dealt with in the proper way and afterward I would be most pleased to have any remarks which either members of the committee or members of the House would wish to make.

This, so that when the education estimates come in we can deal with them in the best manner possible.

Therefore, I put the question: Shall the resolution for supply for The Department of Agriculture and Food be concurred in? Mr. Whitney, the member for Prince Edward-Lennox.

Mr. N. Whitney (Prince Edward-Lennox): Mr. Speaker, as the members all know, the procedure of dealing with estimates committee, came as a result of the report of the select committee chaired by the hon. member for Victoria-Haliburton (Mr. R. G. Hodgson) and it was decided that three committees would handle three estimates for The Department of Agriculture and Food, Education, and Highways—on a trial basis.

It is my privilege to serve as chairman for the committee on Agriculture and Food and I do feel the work of the committee was a success and I want to congratulate the select committee on the recommendations it made. I believe, as time goes on, a system we adopt can be improved from time to time. For instance, that need may come for a larger meeting room. We know there are some over in the Macdonald building, but nevertheless we did need to be close to the legislative chamber.

We made out very well, but on future occasions, it may be that a greater number of spectators would like to be present when these estimates are discussed.

Also, in the beginning we did not have the complete Hansard service that we had later on. Consequently, we did not receive copies of Hansard to correct until we were in the middle of our meetings, and due to people having to be away the occasional day, and due to a certain mix-up and Hansard not being continuous, I am well aware that not all members, the chairman included, were able to get Hansard corrected which they would have loved to have done.

However, by and large, I do believe that it was a very excellent exercise and I think satisfying to the members of the committee. I want to congratulate the Minister of Agriculture and Food (Mr. Stewart) and his staff on the replies they were able to give and the evidence they supplied from their knowledge and interest in the entire workings of the department.

He certainly did a most comprehensive job. I believe that questions were answered in an understandable way and it seemed there was much greater participation by the members in the debates that developed.

I want to express my appreciation to all members of the committee for their attendance and for their interest. Certainly I felt I learned more about The Department of Agriculture and Food than on any previous occasion in this Legislature, and I think that came about as a result of the direct participation of the members.

I might say it reminds me of the anecdote the hon. member for Muskoka (Mr. Boyer) told me a few years ago on the occasion of the opening of a new building. After the formal opening ceremonies, guests were being shown around. People got on one elevator, the doors closed and immediately the lights went out. They did not know what to do. There was a Chinese boy on the elevator and he said: "Everybody raise right hand", and they did. "Now," he said, "everybody raise left hand" and they did and the lights came on, so they asked him how he did this, and he said: "There is old Chinese proverb that many hands make light work".

And I think in this case, the proverb should be that many hands make work more lightening. This, I think, would be the conclusion of the results of the committee's meeting.

I might say that, as chairman perhaps, there was not the opportunity to participate in the actual discussion. I would like to mention a few of these things pertaining to the estimates of The Department of Agriculture and Food. For instance, for the year ending March 31, 1969, the total estimates were $51,562,000, and for the year ending March 31, 1970, they will be $65,865,000.

Of that amount, $9 million was formerly taken care of from the Treasury Department being advanced to the Junior Farmers' Loan Corporation which have been transferred to Agriculture at the period when the junior farmers' loan is being phased out. However, there is obviously a net increase of some $5,303,000 in the spending of The Department of Agriculture and Food.

Of this increase, approximately $2 million is the amount that is being used to expand extension services in our extension department, namely, assistant agricultural representatives and other services that are being given. To any of us who live in rural Ontario, I think that we are well aware of the great services that are being given in the field by our agricultural representatives and their staffs.

I know it has been my privilege to attend the awards night of the 4-H clubs on different occasions and I feel that there we have among the finest groups of young people that can be found anywhere in Ontario. I think that these people on our extension service staffs do work over and above the call of duty. They spend long hours, they lend of their time, their advice, and they are really very active. I think that we cannot express our appreciation or commend them too highly for the great service they give.

Consequently, I think no one would quarrel with that increase of approximately $2 million in that particular regard.

Now, there are, of course, other increases in our budget. There is an increase of approximately $1 million in grants to trade fairs, and so on, in order to promote the sale of agricultural products. I think this is all to the good because it has been proven we can produce in Ontario, but sometimes the selling is the difficult part. I think that money is well spent for that purpose.

We might say also that there is another approximately $3 million which is being spent on behalf of ARDA. There are some other items on which there have been some slight decreases. This accounts for the total of some $5 million increase in the budget of The Department of Agriculture and Food. There again, we feel that this money is well spent on the drainage propositions and the many requirements that the people in agriculture have and where capital costs would be so great that without this assistance they would be unable to carry them out.

This just forms a contrast with what I was reading in the paper where I understand that the federal government at Ottawa proposes to make a reduction in the agricultural budget in the ensuing year. We understand, according to what we read, that the Benson budget next year will, in total, be about $250 million, whereas this year's limit was $251.4 million. It appears there are going to be increases in certain parts of it because it says that the dairy support programme will feel the greatest effect with its budget cut by $10 million or more to $115 million. This would reduce the subsidy of about $1.36 per hundredweight to farmers by about ten cents.

There are other things that are mentioned. I am not going to go into any detail on that because that does not strictly refer to our budget, but there is one part that does. That is, namely, that there is going to be a reduction in the wool subsidy. I know a few years ago the federal government and the provincial government entered into a deal whereby they shared two-thirds of the freight rate bringing sheep east. They realized that lamb was being imported from other countries—and likewise, wool—and they realized that our wool did not bring a high price on the market.

As an encouragement to the sheep industry, they certainly did enter into this agreement. I know that myself, I imported two car loads of lambs, and I would like the Minister to state how successful this has been. But I think that at this time when there is the greatest market and the greatest demand for Canadian lamb than there has ever been, I think there should be some hesitancy in doing anything to injure this industry any further. We know that the people engaged in it find that there are difficulties; we know that at the present time, for instance, where formerly dogs were the natural predators, then coyotes, now we believe that the big predator is the hybrid—the cross between the coyote and the dog.

In fact, the local lands and forests conservation officer reports that four of the last animals that have been caught in Prince Edward county have been hybrid in nature.

I would therefore conclude my remarks by suggesting that our federal counterparts suggest to their friends at Ottawa that this is not the time to reduce the assistance to those engaged in agriculture because their income is not increased proportionately to the increase in wages. People are earning the money with which to pay for food with far less hours work now than ever before in the history of Canada. Much as we appreciate the need for a reduction in expenditure in various things, I would conclude by saying that the agriculture costs and agriculture assistance is the very last department in which any reduction should be made by either the federal government or the Ontario government.

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): Mr. Speaker, if I may be permitted a word of comment on my friend's remarks, my friend from Prince Edward-Lennox.

First of all, in relation to the federal government cutback, I do not intend to support or defend the federal government in that position. I think it is regrettable that they have seen fit to cut back on their agricultural budget at this particular time simply because farmers are experiencing a more difficult time to make ends meet than they have ever experienced previously, at least in modern times. So from that point of view it is indefensible that the federal government should cut back on their agricultural budget.

I also want to say, and to a certain extent, mirror the remarks of my friend from Prince Edward-Lennox in respect to the new experiments in dealing with the estimates of The Department of Agriculture and Food this year.

I want to say that, for my part, Mr. Speaker, I think this new procedure has a lot of merit and can certainly signal an entirely new era in dealing with the estimates in this House.

I think we had some good debates, Mr. Speaker, in committee. The crop insurance debate comes immediately to mind. I think there were a number of good points made. I think it was a debate which was certainly useful from the Opposition's standpoint and I hope it was helpful from the government's standpoint.

I do not want to repeat anything or very much of what was said in the committee. I want to concentrate, instead, on the rather detailed analysis, albeit a short one. I only have 20 minutes within which to do this, Mr. Speaker, and I will try and abide by that time limit.

Nonetheless, I want to devote my attention to an analysis of the farm income report. It was alluded to from time to time in the committee; but it was done more on the basis of supporting a point of view one happened to be advancing at any one particular moment. I think it is an important report. It certainly could change the direction and thrust of Ontario agriculture dramatically. It cost $750,000 of the taxpayers' money, and so I think it deserves more than passing attention.

Before I get into that, Mr. Speaker, I want to make one brief comment concerning the Royal Winter Fair. The Royal Winter Fair has just concluded, and perhaps this would be the most appropriate time to make this kind of comment. I relate the comments both to the Royal Winter Fair and to the CNE.

I think many of the breeders of livestock consider the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair as their show. In a sense I think this is somewhat unfortunate, when one considers that the Royal Winter Fair has an attendance figure of some 250,000 or thereabouts—the CNE has approximately three million.

Now I make that comparison from the point of view that I think one of our biggest jobs in agriculture today is to create a better understanding on the part of the consuming public as to what agriculture is all about. And it seems to me that at the CNE and at the Royal Winter Fair—but particularly at the CNE—it is vital that we should have an agricultural exhibit which goes far beyond the so-called show ring classics.

Let me give you an example of what I have in mind. I think that it would be very wise for the department, and perhaps they could do this in conjunction with the breed associations or any associations involved in any particular product—with, for instance, hens. The exhibit would be set up whereby the hens would be laying eggs right on spot, the eggs would be rolling down the cages, they would be gathered, they would be cleaned, they would be retailed, right there, and one could even go so far as to indicating the exact pricing on the farm, at the wholesale level and at the retail level.

One could do this with a whole number of products, one could do it with milk certainly, one could do it with beef, one could adjust it to include beef as well.

The point is that the agriculture community must undertake this type of public relations work on behalf of its own industry, if, in fact, the consuming public is to understand where they really get their food from; and where the costs really come from in the final analysis.

Well I leave it at that; and I hope the Minister will give it some consideration, and pass it along to the various associations with which he is connected and hopefully they will take up the torch.

Back to the report. Now the report received some favourable attention, and some adverse comments, I am sure that is not unexpected. Farmer reaction initially was rather favourable, although, once they begin wading through the thick volume of the report, the farmers' enthusiasm began to cool somewhat.

The severest critics, insofar as the rural papers were concerned, was the Country Guide, which attacked the report with a vengeance. In their editorial of February 1, 1969, the report was called a document for social revolution, a call to arms for a new battle in the class warfare that has echoed through farm communities for generations, aimed at shielding agriculture from the facts of life rather than helping it face them, turning agriculture into a public utility, and ends up by calling it a disaster by design—an invitation to bureaucratic strangulation of initiative.

Well, that is the Country Guide's opinion and they were rather caustic in it. Others were kinder. The Globe and Mail thought the report was quotable and comprehensive in its sheer scope of its inquiry. However, said the Globe, "It was a disappointing collection of bright ideas rather than the thoughtful examination of concepts that Ontario agriculture needed".

Frankly, Mr. Speaker, I think Ontario agriculture will be better off in the long run for having had the report. It lent credence to what many of us have been saying about agriculture for years, and it substantiated it with the prestige firm of Hedlin-Menzies researchers.

There was no doubt in my mind that this was a sweeping blueprint for farmer power in the province.

Many of the ideas were practicable and saleable. Others, of course, were not. In my opinion, there was an unnaturally heavy emphasis on the General Farm Organization; and, when it failed, almost everything else went out of the window with it. The Minister obviously felt that he had been soundly spanked by the farmers of the province, and he wasted no time in putting the ship on automatic pilot and heading for the sleeping quarters, bolting the door, and sailing off into the sunset.

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): That is just what he did.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): He has been in bed ever since.

Mr. Gaunt: Since that time he has surfaced only twice, Mr. Speaker, aside from the cat and dog problem with which we are all familiar. Both were very brief appearances: one to announce the hiring of the farm specialists and the other to announce the cancellation of the Junior Farmers loan programme.

There was one other occasion when he announced that the price of beef had fallen, but retail prices had not fallen accordingly—which was unfortunate because the government could not do anything about it anyway.

Now, there are only three things that the Minister has taken any action on in response to the report. The first was the GFO vote. The second, as I have already indicated, was the junior farmer loan; and the third was the hiring of the farm management consultants. Other than that, the Minister has avoided the report, he has even avoided a public discussion of it.

Many of the recommendations can only be undertaken by the farmers, or by their organizations. However, there are many other areas where the government has the sole responsibility. For instance, I would like to hear the Minister comment, and pass an opinion, in respect to a fertilizer review board.

The Minister made some passing comment the other day in response to a question from my hon. friend from York South, but other than that—

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): He dismissed it.

Mr. Gaunt: He dismissed it—right! But other than that I have not heard the Minister engage in any type of in-depth discussion of the matter. I would also like to hear his opinion in respect to the Ontario Farm Machinery Crown Corporation. I have a very good idea what the Minister thinks about this, but I have never really heard him say it.

What about the farm accounting system, Can Farm? What about the negative income tax for farmers? What about an Ontario Land Corporation which would be part of an overall land use plan for Ontario? One has to admit that the report is a genuine attack on the land problems in Ontario, which do exist, which do distort growth, which do produce strangulation and inflated land costs.

The committee recommended that the cost of education be removed from property tax in view of the fact that education is a service to people and bears no direct relationship to property ownership or its use. We, in this party, would certainly agree with that proposition.

The report recommends that the 4-H programme be changed and broadened with different emphasis. When some of these things were drawn to the attention of the Minister in committee he said, "It is just a report". If the Minister was really reflecting his true feelings, and I say, if he were really reflecting his true feelings, then I suggest that the entire report, at a cost of $750,000, was nothing more or less than a calculated plan to buy silence from the more vocal of his farm critics.

The basic contention in the report is that farmers have been sacrificed on the altar of the cheap food philosophy, but that something has to be done about it.

Responsibility for this rests with the farmer and his failure to co-operate to try and match production to probable demand, but the government is also tagged with a share of the responsibility, and hence, the onus for trying to do something about it.

If the Minister considers it as just another report, hence, not really worthy of very much second thought, then the farmers in this province are in even more trouble than they may have thought.

The Minister implied, although it went unsaid, that the report was unimportant and it really does not apply to conditions in agriculture as they exist today. In my view the report set out three goals for Ontario agriculture: (1) Acceptable returns for well managed farms; (2) Adequate incomes for farm operators; and (3) Maximum numbers of farms of efficient size in the industry. The last one can only be achieved by the industry itself.

There has really been no concrete indication that the Minister accepts these goals, and if he does, how does he plan to achieve them? Few investigating bodies have turned in more wide-ranging reports than this one. It indicated that farm complaints have been justified and that something worthwhile has to be done about them. It recognized that the agriculture industry has long been the economic blood of Ontario.

The committee obviously took the broadest possible interpretation of the terms of reference. It indicated on the way through that the government had been disorganized and short-sighted. The report indicates the need for government and the industry to establish some overall philosophy as to where agriculture is, where it is going and where it ought to be going. This is present in the report, but it is buried to a certain extent in the mechanics of implementation.

In some respects the report is a thoughtful examination of the concepts that Ontario agriculture needs. One can go through recommendation after recommendation and one finds the report coming back to the theme that the marketing system is not neutral. It serves those who are willing and able to influence its performance.

The report directly challenges the validity of the existing power structure on the political grounds of preventing violent upheaval and on the economic grounds of increasing the efficiency of the industry. Strong state intervention is urged in order to redistribute power in favour of the farmers, simply, because as the report states:

Unless immediate steps are taken to tackle this crucial issue, the entire agricultural industry faces a violent upheaval that would disrupt and destroy the social and economic structure of rural Ontario.

It goes on to say that almost half of Ontario farmer receive incomes inadequate to meet basic needs. From that premise the report concludes that the state will have to redistribute this power and create, in a sense, farmer-power, in order to correct the situation.

Examples of this are the food supply agency, the Ontario Land Resources Commission, the Ontario Farm Machinery Crown Corporation, the Fertilizer Review Board and the Rural Human Resources Council.

As far as I am concerned, some of the recommendations have a socialistic flavour while others are a kind of rightist state corporation. On occasion, one is left with the uneasy feeling that the provincial bureaucrats would gain more than the farmers.

The thing that gives me most concern about the report, is the supply management and its application to the province of Ontario. I agree with the concept of supply management, but I cannot help but fear the consequences if this programme does not work in concert with the other provinces of Canada. The point is, the province cannot isolate itself from the other provinces. Their productions, and more important, their shifts in production, are bound to affect our farmers here in the province.

I only need to cite the example of the chicken broiler marketing board which has instituted a programme of supply management. The chicken broiler producers enjoyed a short term benefit, but the programme is running into considerable trouble simply because Quebec is more than making up for any reduced production in the province and shipping them into Ontario to compete with our producers.

One can have so-called supply management in one province, but where there is risk of great interprovincial trade, as there is in many products, then supply management is limited in its effectiveness. When the chicken broiler producers marketing board gained power to set quotas and establish a price, there was something in the neighbourhood of 1,600,000 set per week. That figure has remained constant, while Quebec has more than doubled their production in the same period and are shipping that production into Ontario. Ontario broilers have dropped four cents in the last two months and predictions are that they will go even lower.

These are the facts of life and one cannot ignore them.

As far as I am concerned, Mr. Speaker, I feel the report, by and large, is a good one. It is readable, quotable and certainly understandable. I think Ontario agriculture will be better off in the future because of the report, provided the Minister provides some leadership in response to it. So far this has been totally absent. All government departments tend to insulate themselves against criticism and inbreed on their own advice. This department is no exception so the report has added a new dimension to the discussion of the problems and the possible solutions.

It is very difficult to judge what long-range effect the report will have on the redistribution of political and economic power within the industry.

Unless the Minister and the government are prepared to give leadership and direction, the report will gather must and dust on the shelf and the industry will wander through the quagmire of economic hardship while the Minister dozes.

And it is therefore my motion, that:

I move, seconded by the leader of the Opposition (Mr. Nixon) that this House regrets that the Minister has not given more serious attention to the farm income report and has made no acceptable attempts to ensure that farm operators receive adequate incomes and that well-managed farms receive acceptable returns on investment.

I feel this motion is necessary to underline to the Minister that we view this report as an important one, we view it as worthy of serious consideration, many of the things are quite acceptable in the industry, some are not, I recognize, but I think the Minister has a duty to accept this report, at least many things in it, and consult with the industry—

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): Like what?

Mr. Gaunt: My colleagues will be dealing with them on the way through the estimates.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): They have been raised a number of times.

Mr. Gaunt: They have been raised a number of times as my friend just said. So that somehow this government can assist agriculture in a real and obvious way.

Mr. Speaker: In amendment to the main question placed by Mr. Speaker at the beginning of the debate, Mr. Gaunt moves, seconded by Mr. Nixon:

That this House regrets that the Minister has not given serious attention to the farm income report and has made no acceptable attempts to ensure that farm operators receive adequate incomes and that well-managed farms received acceptable returns on investments.

The hon. member for Brantford.

Mr. M. Makarchuk (Brantford): Mr. Speaker, in rising to participate in this debate, I would first like to say that I agree with the member for Huron-Bruce in stating that the position of the federal government is indefensible as far as agriculture is concerned. But, I would carry it much further and indicate that most of their positions are indefensible. Of course, it being the just society or the main thrust of the just society, is being just for the rich leaves the farmer completely out—as well as most of the other people in Canada.

Personally, Mr. Speaker, regarding the committee system, I think it provided a better opportunity for the members to discuss the estimates. The senior civil servants were there and were able to participate and contribute to the discussions, and I think this resulted in better understanding of the department, the operations and some of the functions.

A serious examination of the present government's farm policies would indicate to me that this government is acting as the friendly undertaker whose function is to preside over the elimination of about 60,000 Ontario farms. If there is anything that came through strong and clear in those estimates it was the fact that the Minister and this government really were not concerned.

We have the Minister of Agriculture dedicated to his private enterprise philosophy and below him we see an ongoing battle. The battle here is between the corporate sectors of our society—the farm equipment manufacturers, the fertilizer producers, the processors, chain stores and others on one side, and on the other side, we have the farmers.

You would think that despite the constraints of the Minister's political philosophy, he would at least come down and try to referee this battle. The farmer is not really asking for more, he wants to compete on even terms, and I think this is the place and this is the area where this government has fallen down—to give the farmer a voice and a chance to compete on even terms against this large great force on the other side.

The matter, of course, is the area of agricultural costs, this is one sphere of activity which should occupy the time and the resources of The Department of Agriculture and Food.

We will just examine some of these matters and, of course, we will first look at tractors and farm machinery. We know that prices are being manipulated, there is no doubt in anybody's mind right now that the Ontario Federation of Agriculture is able to bring in tractors at prices that are about $2,000 or $3,000 lower than what farmers are paying for the tractors here.

We have figures on equipment, manufactured in North America, that sells for about $1,000 or $2,000 less in other countries.

This government in its operation of this department, if it was involved in a battle, would be battling on the side of the farmers. It is limited to what it can do, but it certainly can examine a lot of these pricing practices. It can examine the prices, it can appoint commissions, it can report to the farmers, stating where the profits are made, why are the prices so high. If necessary, the government itself should get into the business, it should set up Crown corporations, as suggested in the farm income report, and buy the equipment and sell it to the farmers at cost.

There is also the problem of farm equipment repairs. Again, this is a very serious matter. Many farmers find their equipment is tied up in critical periods or during harvest when they need it and they are unable to get repairs and consequently their input costs go up. Again, this is something that this Department of Agriculture and Food can either, through moral suasion—try that first—or through some serious discussions with the farm equipment companies, get to them and insist that parts depots be established in Ontario which carry parts from all manufacturers, depots that are open all the time—or at least in peak periods of demand—so farmers can and should be able to get the parts they need. And, of course, if industry, Mr. Speaker, is not prepared to do these things, then it is the responsibility of this government to step into this breach and set up its own depots.

The matter of fertilizer: The Minister did suggest that a Royal commission should investigate the matter. Now, a Royal commission, in my opinion, is going to provide more fertilizer, but it is not going to provide an answer to the problem. Why does not the Minister call the fertilizer manufacturers into his office and have a frank and comradely discussion on the matter of fertilizer prices? Why does he not get the expert help, the economic help that he needs to find out the input costs that go into fertilizer and find out just exactly where the money is being spent? Why are the costs so high? Why is fertilizer more expensive in Ontario or Canada in comparison to the United States? We expect the Ministers to report this to the farmer. Once again, if the companies are not prepared to lower the prices to the level that is at least available in the United States, the Minister or the Crown corporation or a farmer-owned co-op either financed through the department—or operated by The Department of Agriculture and Food—should go into this matter of obtaining fertilizer and providing it to the farmers at cost.

There is the matter of interest rates, again this contributes to the farmers' input costs. I was amazed as the Minister said that they did not try when they were getting out of the junior farmer loan business, that they did not try to negotiate with the federal government some level of interest or a certain level above which the rates would not increase on money that would be borrowed by the farmers.

The result now, of course, is that the farmers are thrown to the mercy of the financial wolves and their input costs are going up. I am also amazed at the fact that the farm committee suggested that the matter of farm credit should be consolidated but it should be operated by the province.

I think this has a considerable amount of merit. The province is certainly much closer to the farmer, closer to areas of concern and problems and in the better position to evaluate the need of the farmers than the department in Ottawa. The Minister, of course, of the department is very reluctant and has refused to step in and declare a moratorium, if necessary, in areas where farmers have suffered crop failure as a result of natural disasters.

Crop failure can put a farmer back or put him in a position where he will be incapable to continue as a viable economic unit and eventually will be forced out of farming completely. Just up to this point we have dwelled on the matter of input costs. Now, I think there are some matters that should be considered from the other side. For example, the matter of the prices that farmers get for their produce.

And again, we have a good example in beef prices. Here we have a situation where the beef prices were actually manipulated.

When the matter was first raised in this House, the Minister came up with a feeble excuse saying that Mr. Weinstein—and he is a Liberal, so of course, it is convenient—said that he suggested a boycott and consumption of meat dropped. As a result the farmer received less money for his meat. Which is not true.

Consumption, as the figures shown by the federal Department of Agriculture and Food statistics indicate, was going up in each one of those months. Consumption this year was higher than it was in the same month last year. I think the Minister, of course, can be excused a point here—that this is a matter of national importance, that he is not in a position himself to really control the importation of meat or stopping the transportation of meat, between the provinces of Canada. But I think he should make energetic representations, and I think he should report to the House the result of his discussions with the federal Minister of Agriculture and let us make public, or let us tell the farmers, just exactly what the federal Minister of Agriculture thinks about these matters. Let us find out where the chips are and how they fall.

I think the Minister and his department, and this is particularly the food portion of his department, should make an effort at least once a week, to come up with radio, television programmes and possibly notices in the paper, advising the consumers regarding a situation where meat prices are rising. They could come through with a commercial that could sound something like this: "Attention, shoppers, this week, Loblaws and Dominion Stores have raised their meat prices to anywhere from 15 to 80 cents a pound. This does not mean that the farmer is getting more this week for his meat, instead this is a devious effort by these two chains to obtain unjustified profits at your expense. If you do not want to be taken in, we suggest that you do your meat shopping here". Suggest some other stores, or suggest your local corner butcher store, or some other chains, or possibly suggest that they switch to the other meat products.

I am sure, Mr. Minister, if you did this for a few months, you would have a reaction beyond expectation from these stores, inasmuch as they are very concerned with their image, particularly when you are dealing with meat, and their meat departments. I am sure there would be a drop in the cost of living.

Mr. Nixon: It could be worded like the OWRC. What has The Department of Agriculture and Food done for you lately?

Mr. Makarchuk: Yes, it certainly could. There is also the matter of collective bargaining—

Mr. W. Hodgson (York North): Corporation store! Go in there and buy the products at cost.

Mr. Makarchuk: —the matter of collective bargaining by farmers. I think this is something that the Minister should encourage, of course. The GFO vote was a rejection, of everything that the Minister touched. But I think that some of the suspicion could be overcome, and this was touched on in the estimates.

I suggest that the Minister appoint individuals, such as Peter Twynstra, Walter Miller or Peter Myers to membership on the Farm Products Marketing Board. I think these individuals at least have the confidence of the farmers of Ontario, which is more than you can say for the Minister.

There was a considerable discussion of crop insurance in the estimates, and so I will not dwell on that here. But I certainly do not believe that crop insurance is the answer to the matter of crop failure. Typical of this were the conditions in Essex and Kent where farmers were unable to get crop insurance because they were unable to plant their produce.

I think the government should establish a direct fund, should set aside a sum, roughly ten or twelve million dollars a year which could be used, if necessary, to bail the farmer out if he suffers as a result of natural disasters.

At the same time, if the money is not spent and it could be used, the surplus funds could be used to help rationalize agriculture—or make farms into more viable agricultural units—if necessary taking land out of agriculture; if necessary, using some of the ARDA programmes, or some of the type of programmes as suggested by ARDA.

Of course, this would require economic planning, and this government really does not believe in these things.

Another matter, and this was mentioned in the estimates, is the fact that this government carries on very little economic analysis of the agricultural market. All their research is still directed, and has been directed, towards creating more efficient farms. This is commendable. But, at the same time, they should be doing a considerable amount of market research, trying to forecast the consumptions, the products that would be required. This is something that is done by large corporations, and something that the farmer cannot do—sell himself, individually or otherwise—and this is what the government should do.

There is the matter of land use again. The Minister refuses to get involved in this matter. We had an excellent debate on the problems in the Niagara Peninsula and I would like to read into the record—a brief was presented to the NDP mini-caucus in St. Catharines last Saturday, by Dr. John N. Jackson, chairman of the department of geography at Brock University, St. Catharines. And he says—and this is pertaining to the discussion we had on the fruit belt:

The pollution of a different type is continuing to desecrate the fruit belt. The hub of this issue is that this area is famed across Canada as a highly specialized agricultural locality which is most productive when under good management.

It has natural advantages of site, situation, soil and climate which provides a unique resource for Ontario, and which cannot be repeated with the same excellence anywhere in Canada. The other side of the coin is that the net return from a good quality fruit farm under top production with irrigation, a lakeshore situation and under competent management, is not likely to exceed $300 per acre.

Fruit farms thus become uneconomic in strict financial terms when land values increase to beyond $2,500 to $3,000 an acre.

There are variances to these figures, but the line of argument is clear. As land values increase—and these have increased in the fruit belt over the past six years from about $2,000 to $8,000 per acre for raw, serviceable land accessible to the growing cities of St. Catharines and Hamilton—the farming of land becomes an uneconomic proposition. The outcome is that perhaps not a farm in the fruit belt is viable as an economic entity at current land values. The best agricultural land in Canada.

Yet, farming has become impossible—does this contrast make sense? The most simple feature of the present situation is that no provincial policy exists for the fruit belt. Is it a vital asset for agricultural use in perpetuity or should its resources gradually wane into oblivion?

Well, what it really means, and he continues, is that this government has really been dilly-dallying over the whole thing. It has refused to act.

The Minister again refuses to come out with any statement as to whether the government is going to get involved; as to whether there is going to be a land-use plan for Ontario; or just exactly where this government is going.

There is the matter of vertical integration in farms. Again, in last year's estimates, the Minister made a big ado and sounded the alarm as to vertical integration and the problems it is going to cause the farmers. Naturally this year, he said he is not too concerned about it all. He does not seem to realize that not only will this result in the elimination of many farmers from the agricultural sector of our society, but will also result in higher prices to the consumer.

Under this Minister, and under this department, I cannot see any possible solutions to the problem. I suggest that the Minister resign.

Mr. C. G. Pilkey (Oshawa): The whole government!

Mr. Makarchuk: The ultimate solution of course—

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Correctional Services): We shall think about that.

Mr. Makarchuk: The ultimate solution, of course, is the removal of the government and naturally—

Mr. Lewis: Hear, hear! It is not an ultimate solution, it is an imminent one.

Mr. Makarchuk: An imminent solution—and Middlesex South has indicated the way it is going to happen in 1971.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Take another shot in the arm.

Mr. Makarchuk: Certainly we will support the Liberal amendment, but naturally—we cannot change it, but I would suggest, sir, that instead of the House saying "that this House regrets", I would suggest that "this House deploras" that the Minister has not given more serious attention, in fact I suggest that it should read, "Has not given any attention to the farm income report." And "has made no acceptable attempts" should be "has made no attempts"—that is the way it should read, to ensure the farm operators receive adequate incomes and that well-managed farms receive acceptable returns on investment. Thank you.

Mr. W. Newman (Ontario South): Mr. Speaker, as we come here today to discuss these final summations, shall we say, of the agricultural estimates, I am slightly amazed at some of my friends across the way who try to tell us the Minister of Agriculture is not concerned. Nobody could convince me or I think nobody could convince most of the farmers of the province of Ontario that our Minister is not concerned and is not doing things about it and does not care about the farmers of Ontario.

Mr. MacDonald: What, for example?

Mr. W. Newman: If the member will listen for a moment, I will tell him a few of the things.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. W. Newman: If I told the member all of the things he was doing, I could be here for two days. I would just like to comment, Mr. Speaker, on the moving of the estimates to the committee although it may have—

Mr. Lewis: That is an indictment in itself.

Mr. W. Newman: —taken longer in committee to discuss the estimates, it gave us a chance to thoroughly analyze the departmental estimates in many of the programmes and most of the programmes The Department of Agriculture and Food is bringing forward.

One of the things that came out of the farm income report and was perhaps one of the important things, were the extension services that were brought forward by the Minister of Agriculture and Food for the people and for the farmers of the province of Ontario—the farm management advisory service, the credit counselling, the feed advisory and testing service. Now these, along with the services that are already available, are a step forward with our modern day agricultural problems that we are faced with, that the farm management and advisory service has to be extended to many of our farmers who really are not taking full advantage of them. And now, because of the extra staff that has been put in the field, I am sure many of these services will be taken advantage of by our farmers.

Credit counselling, which is one of the most important things today for our agricultural people, we all admit that the agricultural people do have a problem with income. We all admit perhaps that the government in Ottawa should take a more active role in helping us in the province of Ontario municipalities to co-ordinate many of our programmes so that we can stop the thing that the member for Huron-Bruce brought out, the dumping out of broilers through an inter-provincial broiler scheme and we have a good scheme here in Ontario and they are dumping these into Ontario, which creates problems for our Ontario people.

We have a dairy herd improvement programme, which I think is perhaps one of the foremost programmes on the North American continent which has improved the lot of the dairy farmer. And those who are in dairy herd improvement have done a great deal to bring us the standards of production in the dairy industry and done a great deal to increase income of the dairy farmers today because of the effort put forward on behalf of our government.

The province is working, and I have heard it said that our agricultural representatives are nothing but armchair—I have forgotten the exact terminology that was used, but they sit back in their armchair and do not do anything and I can tell you this—

Mr. Nixon: Who said that?

Mr. W. Newman: I beg your pardon?

Mr. Nixon: Who said that?

Mr. W. Newman: It was not from the member's party.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. W. Newman: I would just like to say this: the agricultural representatives in the province of Ontario are the most dedicated people that I have ever worked with and I know in my own county, men who do not work an eight-hour day, they work a very long day and many nights on behalf of the people they are trying to help. The services available through these people and their assistants have done a great deal for the farmers to increase their income, increase their productivity and make recommendations to them.

The capital grants programme, which was brought out by the province of Ontario, which still has several years to run to improve the working conditions for farmers, gives them grants for drainage, for water, for silos, and so on, with various things that grants are available for, to encourage farmers to step out perhaps with some of our modern practices.

The capital grants programme has been a real boon to many agricultural people and many farmers in the province of Ontario. The drainage programme alone, which is carried out under the auspices of The Department of Agriculture and Food, has done more to drain many, many thousands of acres in the province of Ontario to make land more productive, to increase productivity, to help the farmers in our area.

One thing I would like to touch on perhaps is early farm income. Basically it is on farm taxation and farm assessment and I realize that perhaps this could come under another department of government, but I feel that farm taxes have a direct result on the farmer and his problem. And I notice in one of our publications, The Farm and Country, the hon. member for Huron-Bruce was commenting quite proliferously on the committee on farm assessment which has now reported and of which we all have a copy. He has made some comments on this and I would just like to say this, Mr. Speaker, and to those of us who are here, I feel this committee did a very conscientious and sincere job; I think they brought in a very fine report. I do feel that there is some room for correction, perhaps in the farm out-buildings.

They have come to a standard base on farm assessment, based on soil maps, based on sale value, whichever is less. For instance, in some areas of the province of Ontario where the sale value is less than $15 an acre this would be used as a base of assessment. They came up with this. They tried it in several parts of the province to see how it works, and they feel it will work. I feel that we have to give this a chance to work.

If we start to assess farms and farm buildings on a percentage basis of sale value, we destroy all the good productive land in our urban areas in the province of Ontario. And this is something that we have to get back to. I look at my area, perhaps because I am very familiar with it. I look around this great metropolitan area of Toronto, where some of the best productive land in the province of Ontario is growing weeds where it could be growing crops—but because of assessment practices in the past, which have not been adequate to protect the agricultural people, they were forced, in many instances—and will be, if this report basically is not implemented—forced off the land.

To give you a good example, in my own township last year, farm taxes were actually double. On a 100-acre farm where our taxes were running around $700 to $750 they went to $1,400 and $1,500. This is something the farmers cannot cope with, and if we follow the formula that the member for Huron-Bruce pointed out—taking a percentage of sale value because it is in a metropolitan area—this will not help these farmers.

It will force them off the land, so I think we have to look at all these things in the assessment field and farm taxation field from a realistic point of view, and I feel that this committee this summer—and I have to give them credit—did a great job on this.

I could go on at great length about the great job that I feel that our Department of Agriculture and Food is doing—that our Minister is trying to do for the people of this province. I hear criticism in committee, and I hear criticism in the House, of this department, and what he is not doing, and so on and so forth. And the GFO was brought out today. The Minister—and I say this in all fairness—brought legislation before this House to allow the farmers in this province a free vote for their choice.

It was no rejection of our Minister of Agriculture and Food, and it was no rejection of this government. And do not try to tell me otherwise. How do you know anything about agriculture?

Mr. Lewis: Well look at Middlesex South, I will take the member on a tour, farm by farm.

Mr. W. Newman: I would like to get the member out on the back 40 too, but that is beside the point.

Mr. MacDonald: We met the member on the “back 40”, and look what happened.

Mr. Lewis: The member has been looking at drugs. I have been looking at farmers.

Mr. W. Newman: Yes, well I looked at them both.

I feel very strongly that the GFO vote was a right for the farmer to express his own free choice. They were not guided and directed by this Department of Agriculture and Food as to which way they should go.

I might just touch briefly on the ARDA programme which I think—as you know the people in Ottawa let us down—our province has picked up, and that it is carrying on with these sorts of programmes to develop more economical units for many of our farmers in many instances where they are not economical units, taking them out of production, and putting them into some other and better use. As I say, I could go on and on about the job that this department is doing.

I would like to say in closing that I will certainly reject the motions brought forward by the member for Huron-Bruce, and the member for Brantford; and would like to say that I wholeheartedly endorse the policies of our Minister of Agriculture and Food and the job he is doing.

Mr. Speaker: I am sure the hon. leader of the Opposition will permit just a moment while I introduce a group of students and teachers from the Harbord Collegiate Institute in Toronto in the west gallery.

The hon. leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Lewis: A very illustrious collegiate.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I would certainly agree it is an illustrious collegiate. I used to teach there and I hope that the students and teachers are as interested in this farm debate as they should be. But certainly, in the brief ten minutes at my disposal, I want to support the amendment put forward by the hon. member for Huron-Bruce, because I believe in the years since 1961, when this Minister took over the responsibility for agriculture, that he has failed in his half-hearted attempts to improve the farm income situation. I believe further that in this period of time his policies have produced economic second-class citizens in the rural area, which is something the farm community is not used to.

Surely the hon. Minister can recall periods when farm families considered themselves leaders in the community, economically and otherwise. Now they are reduced to enjoying the fresh air and sunshine and perhaps that feeling that perhaps the fruits of their own initiative are much less productive than they should be, if this province were guided along policies which were designed to improve the agricultural economic situation.

In the years since 1961 there have been far-reaching changes in the community. I am sure the Minister knows as well as I that a good many farmers are leaving the land, their farms are being bought by those who have made their livings and their wealth elsewhere; that these farms are perhaps being kept in production to some extent but usually with a small herd of show cattle. Or perhaps with a bunch of horses which are then run on the tracks of the province; and of course, they get the grants that are available from the generous Treasurer to support the expansion of the race horse industry in this province.

I sometimes wish the Minister of Agriculture would show this same generosity of spirit in supporting other agricultural endeavours which I believe are at least as important.

Now I believe what has happened over these few years is that conscientious young men, who have committed themselves to a life in the agricultural industry, have found that they cannot make a decent living—a living which equates with what is available, even if they were going to go into factory production or almost anything else. The result is that these farms have been sold, and many of these young men are still struggling—some of them are not so young any more—to make a productive unit which will be viable to be passed on to the next generation, in which they can make enough profit so that they can prepare for their own retirement and, as a matter of fact, fulfill their basic responsibilities as productive members of the community.

Now, as I say, many of them are selling out. In my own home town, one of our best milk producers sold his entire milk quota and herd just a week ago, and I do not know what he is going to do. Perhaps he is in a position to wait for a little while and see what comes along.

There are others, like my hon. friend from Ontario South, who was able to subdivide part of his farm, as the urban development associated with the big cities netted a substantial profit because of the land that he held under those circumstances.

I know of other farmers who have been fortunate enough and wise enough to marry girls who were qualified as teachers. And while they are home tending their $150,000 investment—probably as well as two or three kids—their wives are out teaching for the county board. And while their best efforts as farmers are probably netting them $5,000 to $6,000 a year, the little woman, working as a teacher, is probably making $8,000 to $10,000 with prospects for an improvement.

I am not knocking this. Too many of my friends are engaging in this sort of a situation, and it is working out well for them. But it certainly reflects very poorly on the support this government gives to the agricultural industry when this is a fact. Some of my neighbours work in the winter for The Department of Highways and piece out their income with that. Others work in machinery repair and sales; some sell insurance; but very few of them have, as the only economic string to their bow, the working of a farm even of a size which the Minister and his advisors would indicate would be economically viable.

Now there are some answers surely. The member for Huron-Bruce has said most succinctly that the policy of cheap food is something that we have to cope with—we farmers have to cope with as politicians. Most people in the cities who earn their livings in other ways object strenuously when there is any increase in the price that they pay week by week when they go to the supermarket to get their food supplies. Yet the Minister knows, as well as we all know, that what comes as profit to the farmer is inadequate. And it can in no way be compared with the tremendous increases that have been granted often across the board—to those who are engaged in industry and the professions; that they have been left at the bottom of the totem pole because, in fact, there is no one to speak strenuously enough for them, and unfortunately their organizations which, though they are efficient, do not speak with sufficient strength to allow the community, or persuade the community, that the farmers should have higher prices for their produce.

The Minister, on the other hand, in supposedly following the admonitions of the report of the Farm Income Committee, had done away with the junior farmer establishment loans.

I remember when this Act was brought in, and since that time a good many young farmers have been able to take over from their fathers or establish themselves as farmers themselves by using the junior farmer establishment loan plan.

The interest rates at five per cent were payable and they were not subsidized to any great extent at the time this programme was brought in, but now, as they find themselves looking for further assistance in the capital requirements for modern farming, they are left at the tender mercies of the federal programme with a 7½ per cent rate—close to eight per cent under some circumstances—payable on their loans. If they look for it elsewhere they are facing ten per cent.

Many of them are very wisely saying that this particular industry, as it is supported in the province at this time cannot stand those kinds of interest payments. They are making other arrangements and usually it results in selling the farm for non-productive purposes to those people who come out from the urban centres and want to make farming a hobby and a pleasant place to live.

Well, certainly, this is what it is. It is a pleasant place to live, but this is not sufficient return for those men who are dedicating their lives to a way of life which I believe should return to them something in the vicinity of parity—as we would understand parity to be—a comparable return for investment, for effort, for education, for hours spent. Surely this is what we are all concerned with.

Now, other departments of government have embarked on programmes to assist the development of various segments of the economy. The Minister of Trade and Development (Mr. Randall) has more than $30 million to invest in a programme for equalizing industrial opportunity. I would submit that this department has done little or nothing towards bringing forward a programme that is meaningful.

To say the replacement of the junior farm establishment loans at five per cent with improved extension services or even with the capital grants programme is only to beg the question. The provision of capital at subsidized rates should be an integral part of any modern programme which is designed to meet the farmers' needs.

The Minister has said: What should he do as far as the farm income committee report is concerned? I was rather surprised when he said in the discussion in committee that he was not prepared to take further action to implement the recommendations and that in fact it was up to the industry to do what they chose as far as the other recommendations were concerned. Well, I think what he should do is move on the fertilizer price review board.

I do not agree with the member for Brantford that calling the fertilizer companies into his office for a little chat will mean very much. But I do think that the farmers need some government emanation which will restore their confidence in the fact that fertilizer prices are either justifiable at their present level or in fact that they can be reduced. The same is true for machinery prices.

Frankly, I am not very much in favour of the government setting out to form a farm machinery corporation itself, but I would say that the farmers are angry that this government has done nothing about the problem of the high cost of farm machinery in this jurisdiction—particularly when they have proved themselves that they can import this machinery to their own benefit and it costs as much as one-third to one-half reduced from what we pay here.

Now, I brought this to the attention of the hon. Minister of Trade and Development and he really did not seem to be aware that the problem existed. I think the Minister of Agriculture and Food is guilty of not taking sufficient action to support the farmers in their demand that if they are going to compete on the world market, as far as their products are concerned, that at least they have the availability of getting the lower prices associated with world prices for the inputs that are so necessary as far as modern farm production is concerned.

So far these reasons, Mr. Speaker, I believe that the administration and this Minister have failed in a budget in excess of $60 million of bringing forward programmes which are going to meet the real needs of the farm community. There is lots of talk, there are lots of commissions investigating but there are no programmes that meet these needs on a modern and viable way.

The farmers are gradually drifting off the land. The member for Brantford indicated 60,000, he thought, would be leaving the farm community. I believe the numbers to be much larger than that, particularly if we base the figures on the changes in the last nine years since this Minister took office.

So for that reason, Mr. Speaker, I urge the hon. members to support the amendment that has been put forward by my hon. colleague. I think this is what we need, we need some display in this House that there is a concern for farm income and the plight of the farm industry.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York South.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, two weeks ago today I had a remarkable experience and I want to make my comments this afternoon in the context of that experience.

The hon. leader of the Opposition and I were invited, for the first time in my experience, to share the head table with the Minister as guests at the banquet of the annual meeting of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture. We were asked to present not only the normal pleasant, but somewhat bland greetings that are brought by everybody who sits at the head table, but also to take a few moments and speak on policy. I took them at their word and I did so. Indeed, I spoke, in essence, on the substance of this amendment—what was recommended in the challenge of abundance, the report of the Minister's farm income committee, and what had not happened since then.

I want to come back to some details of what I said in a moment, but when I suggested that, since nothing has happened, the challenge was for the farmers to elect a government that would do something, the Minister, in characteristic fashion, rose and dismissed my comments as being "political grandstanding." Well, let me say to the Minister now what I could not say then: We did our grandstanding in Middlesex South, in Middlesex county, the Minister's county. The Tories lost 800 votes in the rural area and we gained 1,800 votes, in your own back yard. So do not dismiss it as grandstanding.

Indeed, just let me conclude this portion of my remarks: After I had made this comment, Charles Munro, who was being honoured that night as the outgoing president of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture and now the president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, was introduced with the normal great flowery words by the Minister as the guest speaker that night. In the course of his remarks what did Mr. Munro have to say on essentially the point I was discussing? Let me quote it from the official text which is going to be in the report of the OFA annual meeting, one paragraph:

It is a depressingly true fact that the Ontario farmers have seemingly gained almost nothing since the tabling of the report of the special committee on farm income. This should not be. The industry is standing still instead of moving steadily forward as it should.

Now, I wish the hon. member from Ontario county were here to listen to that comment from the leading farmer in Canada today at the OFA and CFA level instead of coming in and saying that he would have to talk for two days to recount the achievements of this government.

Now, let me get down to specifics. This is what I said at the OFA banquet. The recommendations of the Minister's farm income committee, for example, with regard to farm input costs, dealing specifically with the fertilizer industry, it noted that the normal prices have been maintained "in domestic markets through their own distribution system and through selling some of their surplus fertilizer at lower prices in the United States." The report added that Ontario farmers are placed at a competitive disadvantage because of the multiple pricing practices of fertilizer companies on international fertilizer markets.

Further, "if the cost of fertilizer to the farmers is to be kept at a minimum, duplication of retail systems should be resisted." For that reason, the report urged the immediate appointment of a fertilizer review board "to facilitate the development of an effective low-cost distribution system of fertilizer and to prevent the duplication of retail facility."

What has happened on that? I asked two weeks ago. The answer, Mr. Speaker, then, as now, is nothing. But more important, Mr.

Speaker, what is going to happen? And the answer again is "nothing" because the Minister told us so last week. When I asked him a question by way of supplementary to some issue that was on the floor, he immediately took refuge in the government's statement of a free enterprise philosophy by the Prime Minister the day or so before: namely, that it is the right and the privilege of the private sector to increase their prices, when and if they please—and that it is not only not the right of government, indeed they would be imposing themselves, they would be sticking their nose into something that is not of their business, if they were to investigate price increases of this nature.

Here, Mr. Speaker, is an abject refusal to accept the responsibility in an area where if the government does not do it, nobody else can do it.

The fertilizer review board is only one organization to do the job that the New Democratic Party has been pleading for in the establishment of a prices review board to investigate any exorbitant price increase. I know of no industry where it is more needed.

But let me move on to the farm machinery industry. The report concluded:

If the farm machinery companies are reluctant to put their own house in order, interference in this leadership system by farm organizations or by the government may be warranted in order to sever the direct link between manufacturers and dealers.

For that reason, the report recommended the creation of one central wholesaling agency for farm machinery to be administered by the farm machinery Crown corporation through which all manufacturers would be required to distribute their equipment.

Now, I was not surprised to hear the leader of the Opposition, as the leader of an old party, say that he is not happy with that, because in essence he, too, is not going to interfere with private enterprise, though for 30 or 40 years we have studied to death the farm machinery industry. In 1935 we had a study; two or three times every decade we have a study, and nothing is done, Mr. Speaker, nothing is done.

The interesting thing here, Mr. Speaker, is that these recommendations did not come from an ivory tower group of economists with no relation to the agricultural industry and its problems. This committee happens to be chaired by the Deputy Minister of Agriculture and Food, next to the Minister the most important and influential policy maker in this government.

It happened to have sitting on it two or three so-called "dirt farmers"—active farmers—Tom Robson, Gordon Hill and Malcolm Davidson, who are all active not only in farm organizations but active in farming.

These were not unrealistic recommendations. They were recommendations brought down by people who looked at the problems and said: "Look, are we going to do something about these problems or are we going to sit and talk for more years to come?" They made recommendations and nothing has happened. Nothing will happen because of the essential—I was going to say because of the government's free-enterprising philosophy—but let me be fair here, Mr. Speaker, we have a problem with farmers.

The farmers are constantly on the horns of a dilemma. They are plagued with a hang-up. The farmer is a free-enterpriser. He regards himself as the last of the rugged individualists but as long as he continues to believe that he is the last of the rugged individualists, he will be slaughtered in the marketplace by those who dominate the marketplace. The government gets away with it because farmers, to some extent, have the same hang-up as the government, so the problem is back with the farmers as well as with this government.

We have to do the educational job, to help farmers recognize that if they cannot solve their problems in the marketplace, they have the right to ask the government to bolster their position as a contravailing force in the marketplace so that they can get what they are entitled to. This brings me to my concluding point, Mr. Speaker.

In my view, the farming committee report was a very comprehensive—indeed, in some respects a revolutionary document, so revolutionary to some people in the province of Ontario have suggested in a whispering way, that it was written in Moscow. In my view it did not come to grips with the basic issue. How are you going to really cope with the inadequacy of farm income? How did this whole process begin? It was initiated at Vineland, because Tom Robson, speaking for the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, said that they had become persuaded that the only answer to getting a decent farm income was in incentive prices.

For a moment the OFA stood on exactly the same ground as the farm union had stood for ten years, ground which in essence stated this:

Agriculture's experience indicates it cannot get enough in the marketplace. It has never got enough in the marketplace to give an adequate income, a fair return for labour, a fair return for capital and everything that the farmers are entitled to.

Therefore, let us recognize if they cannot get it, and it is necessary to supplement farm incomes in some way or another, it should be called a consumer subsidy, so that consumer prices would not go any higher but it at least would assure the farmer an income which would meet the returns to which he was entitled in view of his labour and his capital investment.

That got lost, Mr. Speaker. You can hardly find the term "income incentive" programme in the report. It got lost in the shuffle and instead we have the proposal for a guaranteed annual income for farmers so that those who are on the verge of extinction economically will be caught in the net, and maintained from starvation.

That, I suggest to you, is not a solution for the basic problem of the industry. It may be the answer to a few marginal farmers. As a result, what you are going to have is bigger and bigger corporate farms plants, the only ones that can survive in the market. Family farms particularly those which happen to be marginal will be plowed under, and this government sits and presides over their passing.

That is why we obviously will support this motion. I agree with my colleague from Brantford, I would like to see it more strongly worded because this government has done nothing. May I quote, in conclusion, Charles Munro. If the Minister will not accept my criticism, accept that of Charles Munro:

It is a depressingly true fact that Ontario farmers have seemingly gained almost nothing since the tabling of the report of the special committee on farm income. This should not be. The industry is standing still instead of moving steadily forward as it should.

That is a devastating indictment of this government and that is why this House should support the amendment, including the hon. member from Ontario South. He, too, should be voting for this motion of non-confidence.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Kent.

Mr. J. P. Spence (Kent): Mr. Speaker, in my intention to take part in the estimates of The Department of Agriculture and Food for the year 1969, I do not want to overlap on any of the branches of agriculture of my colleagues. I am a little surprised, Mr. Minister, that the time that I thought would be allotted for these estimates has dwindled to a very small amount.

Mr. Speaker, the branches of agriculture estimates I wish to discuss, are ruled development in ARDA. Before I discuss these branches, I wish to say that the year of 1969 has been a very discouraging year for the farmers in general in the province of Ontario. It has been a year of unrest and discontent, with bad weather conditions in many parts in the province. I might say, for the first time in my life, I hear the farmers talking about refusing to pay their education cost taxes in many parts of the province of Ontario.

Mr. Speaker, it is nearly a year since the special committee on farm income brought down its report, the challenge of abundance, and very little action has been taking place. This report recommends sweeping and rigid recommendations. It is impossible for me to agree with all the recommendations on which I think some action should be taken. I understand, Mr. Speaker, that nearly half of the food in Canada is imported at the time when the special income committee says "there is abundance" not a scarcity. We have, in agriculture, been existing on increased production. Most of our planning has been directed to increased production.

This comes from The Department of Agriculture and Food, from our agriculture colleges and from those who sell imports to the agriculture industries. We hear on radio and television nearly every day that we should use this fertilizer or this chemical or something else which will increase the farm production by so many bushels per acre—but not enough is being done to sell or market agriculture products or take care of the increased production.

Another matter that concerns me is that there should be more information supplied to the farmers to assist them in making decisions on what crop to produce. Today the farmers should be better informed than is now possible. Accurate information of supply and demand relationship for most commodities is not available to the farmer until it is too late.

Another matter I think should be given study is transportation and storage facilities. In southern Ontario, for grain, we have some port facilities, but they are located in the wrong areas as far as where the grain is produced. As a layman, I understand these ports are controlled by the big companies. This should not be in all cases.

We in southern Ontario market large amounts of grain, corn, beans, wheat, onions, tobacco and so forth, depending on what the trucking companies can handle. Our neighbours the United States, ship corn into these markets by water at eight cents a bushel, while southern Ontario has to pay 21.5 cents per bushel to ship it by rail.

We need port facilities owned by Crown corporations or owned by the public so that no matter who wishes to ship corn or beans or wheat through these ports may do so and not find it is controlled by private companies. I believe this would increase the farm income by millions of dollars. We have a port at Erieau in my riding, where there is a deep water railhead and paved road in an ideal location. I have asked the federal government to make a feasibility study of this port and, Mr. Speaker, very little action has taken place.

Mr. Speaker, I say to the Minister of Agriculture, in the special farm income report, on page 162, transportation of grain in Ontario is mentioned as being usually by rail at a relatively high rate. A terminal elevator capacity at water points is unavailable in southern Ontario, forcing the production to ship to the eastern markets by rail or truck. There is also a shortage of box cars. This complicates the situation and promotes unnecessarily low prices for several months of the year.

I ask the Minister of Agriculture and Food to make a study of this port at Erieau to see if it is feasible, and to investigate the benefits it would bring to the agricultural industry in southwestern Ontario.

I want to say a few words on the crop insurance. I do not wish to re-echo what my colleagues have said but I believe many changes have to be made in crop insurance programmes if it is going to do the job required for those in the agricultural industry.

I was very disappointed to learn last summer that the crop insurance plan did not cover sprouted wheat caused by excessive moisture. I feel that if the farmers were covered for sprouted wheat, which caused a tremendous financial loss, this would have been the best advertisement the crop insurance plan could have received. I would recommend also that farmers who are unable to plant their crops because of excessive moisture or drought, should be covered by the Ontario Crop Insurance Plan.

I ask the Minister to give every consideration to make it possible for the farmers to buy crop insurance. Farmers should only need to pay 50 per cent of the premium when they purchase the insurance, and the other 50 per cent at harvest time, or when they collect their insurance.

Mr. Speaker, I suggest the Ontario government contribute 25 per cent of the premium, the same as the federal government's contribution. I also feel that if these changes are not made the crop insurance plan will fail in the province of Ontario.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to say something on the development of rural areas by means of farm adjustments, rehabilitation and resources development, to improve employment opportunities and income as is taking place in other provinces of Canada.

At first meeting these vague terms seem to assure us that this is a branch which will fill the gap between the federal ARDA programme and provincial EIO programme. Such is not the case.

However, this is not surprising, because there is only $13,632,000 allotted to it and this is nowhere near the amount needed to fill this gap.

What we propose to do is show the need for a broader programme in rural development, and suggest ways in which the province can co-operate with the federal government under the existing legislation to pick up the slack that exists in the economic planning of the province.

In my speech in the Legislature on December 17, 1968, I laid the groundwork for the principles that I wish to place before you, and I cite three specific areas in which the government could take immediate action. I intend to enlarge upon this basic theory of rural development and show how it has worked in other areas.

We have two alternatives open to us in seeking aid for slow growth areas, the municipalities either apply for designation under the equalization of industrial opportunity programme, or are part of an area designated by ARDA.

The recent federal legislation reduces the size of designated areas from 10,000 square miles to 5,000. This is a step in the right direction, but neither of these programmes covers the kind of problems raised by my colleague, the hon. member for Perth, during his speech on the estimates of The Department of Trade and Development. He described the experience of two farmers from his riding who attempted to get assistance from the provincial government to finance their trip to France to study certain kinds of beans. Assistance was not available to them because they did not fit in to these categories.

These men managed to raise the money themselves, went to France, brought back their findings and have harvested their first crop of this strain. You may say the story had a very happy ending. But for those two men and others who are going to benefit from their experience, it has meant a large cost. Had they not been able to raise the money themselves, the project would have been dropped.

There should be a branch of this department to which the individuals wishing to help with such a project such as this can apply. I urge the government to look into this matter carefully and at the earlier opportunity. This does not have to be a multi-million dollar undertaking, it can be done in co-operation with The Department of Trade and Development so that both rural and urban businesses can be covered. This is the first point that I wish to make, close the gap that exists between ARDA and EIO.

The concept of growth centres has proven to be off centre; and it is excluding all other plans. The planners have lost sight of the most important resources of all, the people themselves, and there is no reason why people who live in one area for generations should be uprooted for the convenience of the administration.

To illustrate this point I will call your attention to what has been done in the Atlantic provinces, Newfoundland and Nova Scotia, and I suggest you take note of these experiences because we are told that about two-thirds of Ontario farmers will have to seek another means of livelihood within the next ten years. They cannot be expected to go along alone.

Mr. Speaker, I will have to shorten my address but I do want to say that agriculture has become a two-job industry and that some better planning, a better approach, new ideas have to be taken to assist the industry. I am greatly disappointed with our agriculture committee here in the Ontario Legislature which has only met two or three times since this session began a year ago, and I think, this committee, Mr. Speaker, could help solve the many problems that face the agriculture industry in the province of Ontario if they would take a more active part to help to solve these serious situations facing the farmers today.

With that, I will have to say I support my colleague, the hon. member for Huron-Bruce on his amendment in this Ontario Legislature.

Mr. J. Root (Wellington-Dufferin): Mr. Speaker, I have listened with great interest to the remarks of the hon. members and I jotted down a few thoughts that I want to put into the record regarding the report from the committee and the amendment that is before the House. We have ranged pretty far this afternoon. I want to point out that agriculture benefits from the estimates of many departments. For example, this year's highways estimates for construction and maintenance provides something like $261 million on King's highways, and $168 million on municipal roads in addition to the head office budget. In other words, this great expenditure makes it possible to keep our road system open 12 months in the year giving easy access to the various markets in the province to the farmers in all parts of the province.

The same can be said of the educational budget which is now approaching $1 billion. This budget has made it possible for us to have many fine schools in rural Ontario, making it possible for farm children to have an education that was not available just a few years ago. This same amount of money has also reduced the property tax by the same amount of money provided in the budget.

The province has equalized Hydro rates and subsidized the cost of rural lines to the extent of something like $125 million or more, making it possible for the farm people to have this cheap source of power and modern appliances which have completely changed the rural way of life.

Now I want to say something about the benefits that have come to agriculture from the estimates that are before the House. For example, we think of the research programme. Today we have many new varieties of grain, grass and clover which have greatly increased our production per acre. We have new hybrid varieties of corn that have expanded the production of corn, one of the high-energy livestock feeds, into areas of the province where a few years ago corn was not looked upon as a crop that could be grown extensively. This comes about through our research programme.

Research has made for a better livestock industry. With a programme of research and better breeding we have produced better cuts of meat, such as beef, pork and lamb. We have developed livestock that does a better job of feed conversion.

The same is true of poultry with a much greater production of eggs and a much better feed conversion per bird. Our dairy herd improvement programme has led to better breeding with more production per cow—this was referred to by the hon. member for Ontario South.

The farmer today, because of research and soil testing facilities that are available, is able to make a much wiser expenditure of his dollars for commercial fertilizer and increase his production per acre for less money.

Herbicides and pesticides that have been developed in recent years through research programmes are playing a major role in a more efficient and economical agricultural production by the control of weeds and some of the pests that affect our crops.

The capital grants programme—and this is a multi-million dollar programme that will extend over some 12 years—has played and is playing a very important role in increasing production per acre on land available, the production per square foot of barn space and the production per man-hour, making our farms and our barns easier to operate on and in. We are aware that under this programme grants are available to assist in the erection or renovation of barns and other permanent buildings.

It assists in the erection of silos, where we are able to store such high-energy feed as corn. The development of wells will provide adequate water supply for expanding herds and flocks, the construction of farm ponds which can be used for either livestock or irrigation.

These grants are provided for in the estimates that are before the House. There are grants available for drainage where the wet corners of fields and wet fields in farms can be drained and brought under production. The removal of fences and clearing of fence bottoms makes for increased production and more efficient use of the power equipment that is used on the farms today.

I have already mentioned the capital grants to construct rural Hydro lines bringing power and labour-saving equipment into our barns and our dairy operations.

Some mention was made of crop insurance; this is something that is provided that can be of great assistance to farmers, particularly the farmers who specialize in certain crops. Many farmers carry their own insurance by diversifying their operations. There is a free choice: the farmer can either take insurance or diversify his operations and take his chances.

We have our grants for the agricultural and horticultural societies. Agricultural societies receiving financial assistance from the province provide for an annual competition, where the farm people every year strive for something better—whether it be the development of livestock, field crops or produce. This competitive system—which I suggest is the best system that has been developed to date—where there is an award for effort and development, has through the years played a very major role in bringing agricultural production to the high point of efficiency and quality that exists today.

The 4-H club programme, which involves our young people in many phases of life and stimulates their interest in agriculture, plays a very important part in a total agricultural programme. The effects of this will be realized more and more in the years that lie ahead.

I might mention the community centres and the grants that are paid under this programme. These grants have stimulated the development of many fine community centres where a local community spirit is encouraged, where the community centre halls, skating rinks and playing fields provide facilities that would not be available in many cases without these grants.

The matter of marketing is a very important matter as far as agricultural production is concerned. We have legislation provided by this department which has made possible the establishment of marketing boards and schemes where the farm people are able to bargain collectively if they so wish. Many of these programmes have played a very important part in stabilizing prices for farm commodities.

I have already mentioned that open roads for 12 months of the year play a very important part in orderly marketing. Under the many programmes that have been developed in recent years, agriculture has taken greater strides with regard to efficient, economical production than any other industry.

Now, I agree there are problems. Notwithstanding the fact that agriculture has become more efficient and is producing more food per man hour than at any time in our history, there are problems confronting the farming industry.

The farmer has to bid for his help in a labour market pool which seems to have accepted a five-day week as the norm. I think every hon. member realizes that you cannot operate a livestock, poultry or dairy farm on a five-day week.

Another problem which confronts agriculture today is the steady rise in wages that is reflected in increasing cost for equipment, which includes power equipment, which the farmer has to buy. In other words, if the same piece of equipment costs more money you are actually depreciating the value of the dollar. This creates a great problem for the farm people who have not seen a parallel rise in the prices the consumer is prepared to pay for the product of the farm.

I think we are all aware that the large corporations, chain stores, and so on, are able to import a product and sell it in competition with the produce of the Ontario farm, thereby restricting any rise in the price of farm products.

I am aware that the control of international tariffs is under the federal government, but this is a serious problem that confronts the farm people today.

I think, Mr. Speaker, we are all aware of the chain reaction that was started when Mr. Weinstein, the head of Loblaw's, made a statement last spring and suggested a boycott of beef at a time when the price to the farmer had finally advanced to the price that prevailed back about 1951 or 1952. For years the farmer had been taking a depressed price for beef and when it got back to about the same price, this statement was made by the head of a large chain store, that they should boycott beef. I think hon. members remember that little folder that came out of the Liberal caucus office on June 18 advocating a boycott of beef. Now, I want to be fair to the leader of the Opposition, he said that came out without his knowledge or without his approval.

Mr. Gaunt: And it did, without party approval!

Mr. Root: Yes, without party approval. I accept that. But the thing that surprises me, and this would indicate to me that the official Opposition is running in two or three directions, is the fact that key people in that party tried to draft the same man to represent them in the contest for mayor of the city of Toronto.

However, following Mr. Weinstein's statement, we have seen the price of live cattle drop. We know the price of finished cattle dropped almost ten cents a pound. When we realize that there are in the neighbourhood of 12.5 million head of cattle in Canada, using an average weight of 1,000 pounds per animal, this drop in the market removed approximately $1.25 billion worth of purchasing power from the farm people. I understand that several hundred men have been laid off in the farm machine industry in Brantford alone. This is but one indication of what these irresponsible statements can do directly and indirectly to the total economy of the country.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member's time, plus two minutes, has expired.

Mr. Root: The farm people are quite often the innocent victims or hostages that suffer from labour disputes and strikes. Most of us remember the strike on the seaway a little over a year ago when some 1,200 or 1,300 men were able to cripple that transportation artery that had been built at great expense to the taxpayer. I understand some 75 foreign ships were really held as hostages, unable to get out until the strike was settled. When this strike was settled some of these ships went up to the head of the lake and another strike by grain handlers made it impossible to get a load of wheat or grain, leaving the grain in the elevators or on the farm.

Mr. Speaker: I must ask the hon. member to endeavour to draw his remarks to a conclusion. If he were making a speech and watching the Speaker he would have seen him standing some little time ago to give warning.

Mr. Root: Mr. Speaker, could I ask you how much time have I left?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member has had now 13 minutes. The time allotted was 10.

Mr. Root: Mr. Speaker, I regret that I have overrun my time. I thought I had timed my notes to finish in nine minutes. Thank you.

Mr. D. A. Paterson (Essex South): Mr. Speaker, hopefully I can gain the three minutes lost, but listening to a farm debate, one usually learns a little. This is no unique occasion. There are two things that I have learned this afternoon. I am surprised at the first one and that is this: How closely allied the thinking of the leader of the New Democratic Party is to that of the Deputy Minister of this department and such great farm people as Malcolm Davidson, Gordon Hill and Tom Robson.

He underlined that a couple of times and that is very interesting.

The fundamental lack of knowledge of the critic of that department, I think, was underlined this afternoon when he mentioned the—

Mr. Gaunt: Liberal?

Mr. Paterson: No, the New Democratic critic, when he let one phrase drop, he said: "Let the chips fall where they may." I do not think he really knew what he was talking about in this phrase, but certainly I think the Minister will agree with me that the hon.

member did let a lot of chips drop and possibly some one from a farm background will let him know what that particular phrase means in due course.

I certainly support the amendment that was put before us by our critic opposing this particular farm policy to date. I do this because I feel that the emphasis of the Minister and his department over the years has been concerned with production to the neglect of the proper emphasis on marketing procedures in our province.

My remarks are related somewhat to my background in the fruit and vegetable industry, but they could apply to other farm products as well and some of the ideas that were contained in the farm income report.

In the brief time allotted I will restrict my remarks to an expansion of my comments in the committee regarding the moving of The Department of Agriculture and Food into the computer age. The technology of growing food and the availability of large quantities of food is apparently not the problem that it has been in the past, but today our problem is the distribution of foodstuffs to all areas of our province, or country, and the world, and to be able to do this and show a dollar return to our farmers in order that they may continue in business. Basically, I think if you put that in farm terms, what we are worried about is between the stable and the table. I think that is an old phrase that has been used and this is where the problem really lies.

My proposal for increasing the breadth of distribution, for increasing the effectiveness of distribution, for encouraging the balancing of production, is based on a provincial-wide telecommunication system utilizing a central computer centre at the proposed new Ontario food terminal.

I might say I proposed a similar plan about five years ago to farmers in my area but up until now it has not received much support. This support has been forthcoming, and I trust that the hon. Minister's officials will look at this proposal and hopefully it will be enacted. I am sure that the people in the telecommunications business and computer business can make concrete proposals to the skeleton that I am outlining here.

I can envisage a computer centre at this new food terminal that will be the memory brain into which all statistics of this department can be fed. This would include daily consumption records for the various areas of the province as well as seasonal consumption for Ontario produce as well as imported foods.

The brain would record acreages planted, expected yields, the expected dates of delivery of Ontario produce and extra-provincial produce.

It would be fed information on all foodstuffs brought for delivery from out of the province. It would report weather conditions in the major food growing areas of North America and how this is expected to affect the crops. So, minute by minute and hour by hour this information can be instantly made available by Telex or Translux into The Department of Agriculture and Food offices, sales agencies, farm offices, and the local growers who can assess this information in order to determine how, when and where to send their produce.

Inter-city movements and extra-provincial movements, could be determinel. All purchases and offerings would be recorded minute by minute and, no doubt, a weekly report of transactions could be developed for subscribers. This would be very similar to the stock exchange operation that now exists in our province.

Now, to support this suggestion, I can refer the Minister to the weekly report of the Ontario Greenhouse Producers Marketing Board, for they send out a weekly letter on marketing conditions; a report from Gonzales, King City district of California; the San Joaquin valley of California; the Tula Vista district of California; Dade county, Florida; plus our own local improvement. This gives the growers in our area the total picture of what is going on in North America.

Similarly, an advertisement from the Financial Post a few weeks ago by the IBM Company—and I would send this to the Minister in due course—reads:

OK. Pick out the cars with the apples from B.C. and the tomatoes from Niagara and the halibut from Newfoundland. You have got nine seconds. Impossible for a man, no problem for an IBM computer.

So the advertisement goes on to explain how many tons, how many box cars are moved very efficiently.

Similarly, there is a further article from the Financial Post on a grain exchange objective "A Market of World Scope" and I will forward this over to the Minister's department to read in further depth.

I hope, through you, Mr. Speaker, to the Minister, my suggestions may contain some little germ in order that it can grow to benefit our farmers in a profitable agricultural economy, and also assist our consumers at the same time.

Mr. Ruston: Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak with regard to this motion and the agriculture estimates. My speech at the present time looks like the official censor has gone through it because I had a number of pages and I have been trying to cut it down to allotted time. It is rather disappointing to try and get it in, but I will do the best I can.

The crop insurance plan was instigated by this government to relieve it of some of its responsibilities that it has faced with severe weather conditions in the last few years. This was due to the heavy subsidy the government at Ottawa was prepared to give it, the subsidy being 25 per cent of the premium and 50 per cent of the cost of the administration. If you will turn to page 12 of the third annual report of the Crop Insurance Commission of Ontario for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1969, you will see the enormous administration charge of $299,000.

This sum seems almost unbelievable when you consider only 1,850 contracts were written in that time.

In 1969 the acreage of corn insured amounted to a total of $14,366, an increase of only 45 contracts covering 4,200 acres. I can see no reason why the corn plan cannot be increased to the amount of 80 per cent of the average price over the last three years of the price of corn being the amount covered. I would suggest that the soya bean contract be increased to 80 per cent of the average yield in the county concerned. This would increase the coverage from 21 bushels to 24 bushels which then would barely cover the cost of production due to the low price of $2.50 per bushel. I also believe that the insurance plan should cover each farm in its own merit so that it would not be necessary to group all the acres grown by one farm, as we find weather conditions vary a great deal in the course of a couple of miles. The conditions of crops in some areas of Essex and Kent county this year were indeed examples of this.

I would mention that some of the farmers who planted soy beans on July 10 had a turn out of 20 bushels to the acre and these could not be covered by insurance due to the late date and yet beans planted in June went as low as seven bushels to the acre. I am stressing here the serious condition that we have been faced with in the spring and early summer of 1969. We must have assistance or help in some way. I would suppose that if the prices for the 1968 crop had been adequate, such as three dollars per bushel for the soy beans and corn marketed in the proper time in order that all growers could have received the higher price that prevailed in the spring of 1969, our farmers would not need crop insurance or assistance, as they would have been in a much better financial way at the beginning of the crop year.

I believe this government has a responsibility to see that the agriculture industry of Ontario keeps up sufficiently with other segments of our economy. I would suggest that they pay the claims on sprouted wheat for 1969 in the crop insurance plan and would strongly recommend, as mentioned by the hon. member for Kent, that this government match the federal grant of a 25 per cent premium on crop insurance.

I must plead with the Minister and the Treasury Board that we have a number of farmers in our area this year that have suffered the worst setback they have ever had and they need assistance. They are not asking for handouts, all they are asking for is a loan to tide them over for a year.

There has been, in some areas, from four to six inches of rainfall in one day, and two days later the same thing. Normal rainfall for three months is ten inches, this year it was 29. I would think that from 500 to 1,000 would be mostly affected and if they could only receive a loan of $25 per acre, up to a limit of $10,000, for those who are absolutely in need. I have not had the time to work it out in detail, but I am sure that officials and local councils and the agriculture committees of the county councils involved should work out some basis, perhaps quite similar to that mentioned above. This would at least give these people a chance to operate in the spring of 1970.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to discuss the soya bean industry of Canada, and since the soya bean industry is really an Ontario industry in total, I feel it should be given much more consideration by this government than it is given at this time. I would like to read into the records of a submission received from the soya bean growers marketing board, but feel I do not have time at this time.

In the letter the board says the provincial government should share some of the responsibility of this industry. Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that this government has a great opportunity here to encourage the production of soya beans in Ontario and I would recommend that this government pay to every farmer, producer of soya beans in Ontario, a growing remuneration for all soya beans grown in Ontario providing a minimum price delivered at the local elevator of $2.85 per bushel.

If you take the average price from the figures of 1966, 1967 and 1968, this would only mean 15 cents per bushel, over the three-year average which was $2.76 during that time. The 1969 crop was lower and placing this year's price with the above three years, the average price received would have been $2.62 for the last four-year average. In other words, it would be 23 cents per bushel needed to bring it up to the $2.85 price. I am not saying here, Mr. Speaker, that the maximum price should be $2.85, I am saying the minimum price should be $2.85 and, in fact, I believe in order to have a reasonable profit, the price should probably be three dollars per bushel.

I would strongly urge the federal combines branch and The Department of Corporate and Consumers' Affairs to make a very thorough study of the method of pricing soya beans here in Canada. Mr. Speaker, I realize I will be open to condemnation on this suggestion, but I feel we must take this step at this time. I also believe that if this Minister of Agriculture and Food is really interested in keeping the farming economy fluent in western Ontario, he should support this recommendation. First thing, I suppose, is where do we find the money. Well, the low price of soya beans is allowing the citizens of Ontario low-cost products from the farms of Ontario. We are really talking about $2 million over the average or less per year.

The money, I believe, is not so great when you see that the Minister of Education (Mr. Davis) can pick $48 million out of the Treasury's pocket to keep the county school boards operating or the Attorney General (Mr. Wishart) can find $7 or $8 million to run his legal aid plan to assist people who have been accused of breaking our laws, or even the hon. Minister of Trade and Development can hand out millions of dollars to large, affluent companies, some fully American owned, that they will create jobs in his so-called "designated" areas.

The province stepped out of the farm credit business, unlike Saskatchewan and Quebec who have loans available for farmers willing to assist themselves. I believe this government should be in a position to help any sector of their agricultural economy that is sagging, providing the potential need is there for the end product.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I feel that this government and this particular Minister have failed miserably in any attempt to see that the majority of the farmers of Ontario receive their fair share of the economy of the province. I believe the Premier has no choice now, but to ask for the resignation of this Minister.

Mr. Speaker: The other members whose names are on the list are not in the House. The Minister therefore has the floor to close the debate.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: There is before the House, a motion criticizing the department for not having implemented proposals that were recommended in the farm income committee report and since it is the motion, Mr. Speaker, I assume that we will be voting on, I want to deal, if I may, with some aspects of that report.

First of all, there has been much said and quotations have been made, with reference to a statement made by the president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, Mr. Munro, at the recent annual meeting as guest speaker. I must confess that I was concerned when I heard that statement, because I was of the opinion that Mr. Munro was not aware of some of the things that have been done and I want, if I may, Mr. Speaker, in the few minutes that I have at my disposal, to enunciate some of the things that have been implemented as a result of the farm income committee report which was presented to me. I have the original copy here presented to me on January 6, 1969.

This report is quite far-reaching in its implications. It delves into many fields that are of federal jurisdiction. It also delves into many fields that are under other departmental jurisdictions.

It does make certain recommendations as to what The Department of Agriculture and Food in Ontario might do. It also makes very far-reaching suggestions as to what the farmers of Ontario might do if given the type of legislation which they require to do it with. I want to mention, first of all, that the report refers to the elimination of competition in farm credit. It does propose that there be a farm credit bank established.

This we attempted to do through negotiations with the federal government in their farm credit policy and with the chartered banks. I think it is unrealistic to even suggest that the banks would enter into any type of agreement whereby somebody would be making credit available on their behalf to somebody else and they simply would not have any part of the idea. The federal government took the position that since they had a very extensive farm credit corporation established, with many people in the province of Ontario already representing their corporation, and inasmuch as their corporation was spread across the length and breadth of Canada in every province, they wanted the same type of policy to apply in each of the provinces. I think this was a reasonable position for the hon. Minister, Mr. Olson, to take in this regard.

We suggested to him the advantages of a co-ordinated credit approach to farm credit in Ontario, however, we simply could not get anywhere. We then took the position that if we were to withdraw from the field of farm credit because our loan was exactly the same as theirs, with the exception that our interest rate was five per cent and theirs was the going rate of interest—and I think all members will agree, and in fact the committee suggests, Mr. Speaker, that there should be established in the province of Ontario the going rate of interest, not subsidized interest as hon. members have suggested across the way, but the going rate of interest should apply and that is what the farm credit corporation has done.

We have accepted the position that the farm credit corporation will agree to provide the credit, we in turn agreed to use some of the money that we would save from the junior farmer loan administration, in the expansion of our extension services which is very widely dealt with in the report. We have to date employed 62 additional people in our departmental service, involving farm management, credit counselling, decision making and what I like to refer to as plain, simple kitchen table counselling because I believe that if we are really going to be effective in providing help to the farmers of this province then we have to do it on a personal basis.

No farmer is going to stand up in a public meeting and discuss his private affairs and how he runs his business. But if you go to him in his own home and sit down with him and talk to him, I think we can get somewhere. This really is taking The Department of Agriculture and Food management service and credit counselling right to the farmer. This is a major step forward. This has been done.

As Minister of this department, I discussed with the Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. McKeough), the farm assessment recommendation contained in this report at some length, privately. We agreed there should be some type of a committee established to deal with farm assessment per se. That committee was appointed. And we had the privilege of suggesting a nomination from our department in the person of Mr. Earl Haslitt, the director of our economics and statistics branch, to be a member of that committee.

That report has been tabled. It is now under study by members of this Legislature. You all have a copy of it, I assume. And I assume that the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs will likely be implementing the suggestions contained in that report. That has been done. The Ontario Farm Products Marketing Board already provides the opportunity for food producers of agricultural products, on a vote of the producers, to implement the quota controls that are talked about in this farm income committee report. That proposal is here now.

It is available, if farmers want to use it. One of the hon. members opposite has suggested broilers as an illustration of what is going on as far as quota is concerned—but what in the world is the use of implementing supply controls in the province of Ontario if you do not have it on a national basis? This is the problem. Quebec broilers are pouring into this province because there is no quota control in the province of Quebec and the province of Ontario cannot keep them out. So they are pouring in here.

Now are we to follow the suggestions of the Opposition and force down the throats of the farmers of the province of Ontario quota controls on other commodities that will restrict their production and allow provinces across this country of ours to ship products in here? Let us be reasonable, let us use a little common sense. If the farmers of this country want to implement these kind of things, they have the right to do it.

We refer to Can Farm, this business of farm accounting. We are actively participating with the federal government in this. We were offered 70 places last year and we filled them all on a trial basis. This year we are provided with 700 places and we have more than enough to fill the allotment.

Our extension people are going across this province teaching farmers how to use the Can Farm system, and it is a good system—I am all for it. But are we to say, as this report recommends, that every farmer in this province must use Can Farm, if he is to qualify for a capital grant or for any type of farm improvement loan or any other type of government assistance? Is that what hon. members opposite want us to do? I do not think so. But that is what you are suggesting we should do.

We are implementing a full-scale promotional campaign for all our agricultural colleges across this province. We agree that agricultural education is necessary, that it is important and we are doing this, right now, with one of the most extensive, full-scale promotional programmes that we have ever implemented. A suggestion that is contained in this report, it is underway.

It is being done today by every extension branch person across this province. And I go one step further, Mr. Speaker, if I may, and that is to use your good offices to encourage every member of this Legislature who knows a young farm boy or girl, who has the potential to use agricultural and home economics training, to enroll in one of these agricultural college courses because I think that is the way we can get this message across and done effectively and well.

We will be assuming our responsibility as members of this House, interested in the welfare of young people in the future of this great industry. The Rural Human Resources Council, proposed in this challenge of abundance report, I suggest to you, is already being looked after through The Agriculture Research Institute of the province of Ontario whose present responsibilities are to co-ordinate all agricultural education and avoid the duplication of unnecessary research and the wasteful expenditure of public funds.

That is being done today. Now why set up any other type of body to do it? The report supports that normal interest rates apply on everything across this province. We have adopted that position as it is suggested here because I think that you can get yourselves into a great deal of trouble when you start talking about implementing subsidized interest rates as the hon. leader of the Opposition suggests.

I was somewhat surprised to hear him say that. Sure, it is popular politically to say those kind of things but is it realistic? What does it do to land prices? We were criticized by people opposite and we were criticized by people in the farm organizations because we had a subsidized interest rate on farm loans. They said it drove up the price of land values and perhaps they were right. Because certainly, since this normal interest rate has applied, it has taken the steam out of land prices quicker than anything I know and brought them back to a more realistic price as far as farming is concerned.

Surely long term results must be our main concern rather than doing the politically expedient thing. With regard to the 4-H programme, it is suggested in this book it may not be everything it should be. Let me suggest to you this: that the 4-H programme in Ontario seems to me to be a pretty popular one. Last year in the home economics clubs of our province we had 16,000 girls participating, completing over 26,000 projects; and the number of clubs was 2,893. And that means an increase over the previous year of nearly 700 girls participating and 207 additional clubs formed. And then when you look at the agricultural clubs that we have—4-H agricultural clubs, 728 4-H agricultural clubs with 12,281 projects completed. Mr. Speaker, that is an impressive record for the 4-H programme in this province. We agree that it should be updated, that it should be revitalized, that it should be modernized to bring it up to the standards of today in modern agriculture as we face Ontario's conditions, and this is what we are continuing to do and we will always continue to do these things.

But let us not throw the baby out with the bath water. On the Feed Advisory Service, which is proposed in this "Challenge of Abundance"—we have that programme implemented today, we have had about two or three years of trial and error, working this programme out, now it is ready for public service and we have it in operation today so that any farmer can apply to his local agricultural representative, get the necessary material—the forms, the containers, all the rest of it—take it home, fill it out, put the feed in the containers, send it to the OAC of The University of Guelph and obtain analysis.

Our Feed Advisory Service is here. Another recommendation of this report. And then I come to the fact that there is a requirement in this report that suggests no one be allowed to get into agriculture unless he has the necessary requirements; education and all the rest of it.

I say to you, Mr. Speaker, that as long as I am the Minister of Agriculture and Food in this province of Ontario, that that requirement will never be implemented because I believe, quite frankly, that the farmers of this province, many of them, who have not had the good fortune to have the educational opportunities that some who wrote the report may have had, have done a pretty good job of farming in this province and what is more they are very highly respected citizens. I feel that recommendation goes just a little too far.

Now when it comes to the General Farm Organization vote, and this is really what this report says, the farmers of Ontario might very well form themselves into an organization, one farm organization, with one single purpose in mind and that is the strengthening of their position.

They left no doubt in our mind—all the members of the Opposition parties were invited, the members of the government party, ourselves and all farm organizations, to the Seaway Towers Hotel last winter to discuss this report. We spent three days there. There was no doubt in our mind that there was a strong request that legislation should be drafted providing for such a vote. We debated that legislation in this House. We took it to the committee on agriculture and food. It was debated there, but let me say this, Mr. Speaker, that is was and is the most powerful legislation ever granted to any group in Ontario society outside of government authority. There is no question about that whatsoever.

There it was. It was given to the farmers if they wanted to use it. It was supported by all parties in this Legislature. We amended it, we tried to do everything we could to make that legislation what the farmers of Ontario thought it should be, and what happened? It was opposed by farmers across the length and breadth of this province.

Why? I do not know. Hon. members opposite, suggest it is because of me! Well, all right; they supported it too. Do join the club!

Now, I tell you this, Mr. Speaker, that if the farmers of Ontario really want bargaining rights, if they really want control and authority in their own hands, divorced completely from government, they have it in that General Farm Organization legislation. But they rejected it. And that, of course, is their business.

Are we to suggest now, are we to interpret from what the hon. members in the Opposition parties have said to us today, Mr. Speaker, that we should take this report, that we should take that General Farm Organization legislation and force it on the farmers of Ontario? I do not think so. I think that is up to farmers themselves to make that decision.

I suppose that perhaps one of the things that was of the greatest concern to the farmers in this report is the food supply agency, where there was to be quota production, where there was to be controls, where a farmer would be told what he could grow and what he could not grow, and how much of it.

Mr. Spence: And the $2 million for expenses.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Well, perhaps that was it. But they said it was only necessary that there be $1.5 million with a maximum of $2.5 million. But just think, my hon. friend from Kent, what could have been done with that money. We talk about market research—and someone mentioned today that there has not been enough done on market research—and I would be the first one to agree. We have been production oriented in our research, and rightly so, because production research is a part of marketing. This can never be denied. If you can produce a hog for $30 instead of $40, that is $10 to the farmer's advantage.

So production research fits right into the programme. But that does not for a moment suggest that we should not do everything we possibly can to expand, as my hon. friend from Essex South has suggested, in this business of bringing marketing information through The Department of Agriculture and Food as a service of the farmers of Ontario, right into the seventies and into the next generation.

I think this is a good suggestion. I think it is an excellent suggestion, and, believe you me, we are going to take a real look at that one to see how it can be implemented. Because, in our department, we have already been looking at how we can provide better marketing information for our people—and this is a part of it.

But when you come back to this business of the $1.5 million, the $2 million or the $2.5 million; think of the good that could have been made of that kind of money in marketing research by the farmers themselves to do the job that has been done. But they have not done it and apparently are not going to do it. Now I think we as government have to get into the field and do it ourselves to a greater degree than we ever have before. I am always concerned that somebody is going to say: "Oh well, that is taking public money to do a job that they should be doing for themselves".

We are not doing it for other people in other sectors. But, here, however, I think we have to do it.

I was interested in the fact that our farm people took such a strong exception to the food supply agency—but frankly, I too am one of those kind of farmers who would have that kind of reservation, because I have never taken orders from anybody as to what I can grow and what I could not grow on my own farm and I hope to heavens I never have to.

But maybe that time will come, I do not know. I was interested in today's Globe and Mail to see an article that refers to the Saskatchewan wheat pool representing something like 60,000 farmers in Saskatchewan, suggesting that perhaps the time has come when they must accept controlled production.

Now, that to me is quite a step forward. That is quite an interesting step forward for them to make that kind of a suggestion. But what are the implications in that kind of a suggestion? The implications, as I see it, Mr. Speaker, may very well be interpreted that if Saskatchewan controls production of wheat which they obviously cannot sell, and they control production of feed grains, which they could sell to a greater degree than they have in the past—had such a policy been implemented to a greater degree—and they get into livestock production, then what does that do to the eastern Canadian livestock economy?

This is the real challenge that faces Canadian agriculture today, just so much so that we have asked that that particular matter be put on the agenda of the federal Ministers' conference on Wednesday of this week for discussion at Ottawa.

Because, I suggest, Mr. Speaker, we could be in very great trouble if, because of the limited sale of wheat and feed grains, livestock and livestock products—goes into production in western Canada to replace the sale of wheat or feed grains—then eastern Canadian agriculture can find itself in a very vulnerable position. I think that as Canadian citizens we should do everything possible to support the federal government, and anybody else who tries to sell grain beyond the borders of this country of ours. I take that position quite firmly.

Now, we intend to state our position, and we intend to state it very, very firmly when we go to Ottawa this week.

Many things have been said concerning many things we should do. Reference has been made to the fertilizer review board, by different members. The member for York South and the leader of the Opposition both referred to this fertilizer review board. A fertilizer review board could be set up. But let me ask you Mr. Speaker, what good would it do when most of the fertilizer companies are operated by management outside the province of Ontario? And certainly the product of many provinces, other than Ontario, is being used as ingredients of those fertilizers?

We have supported the position that a Royal commission should be established on a federal basis to study the fertilizer industry. But I believe that the real control has been demonstrated by the farmers of Ontario, in southwestern Ontario, who went over to the United States to a wholesale house and brought back fertilizer at greatly reduced prices to this province of ours.

I also suggest that many farmers who would buy from ordinary fertilizer dealers in the United States would be paying more for their fertilizer than they are from local dealers in Ontario today. Because when you look at what is happening in Ontario today, you have these fertilizer blending plants and the distribution plants located every few miles throughout the rural communities, certainly in southwestern Ontario.

Now, who has put theme there? The fertilizer companies in competition with each other? This report suggested we should have a review board who would only say there shall be one such plant in every so many areas to supply so many thousand tons of fertilizer in each community—and I wonder if that is really what we want to do.

Maybe that is a solution, I do not know. But I think this, that if there were many farmers in Ontario who were told that that little fertilizer plant down the road where they have been going whenever they want to get a load of fertilizer to plant their crop, in bulk, is going to be closed by the province on the government of Ontario's dictum, then there is going to be quite an outcry.

Many of us, as farm people, have expressed our interest in and support of such a place, we have wanted the opportunity, where we could take our conveyances—wagons, trucks, trailers, or whatever they may be—to that plant and buy the blended fertilizer that would meet the soil test requirements of our farm. In many cases one cannot buy fertilizer in standard blends. One has to have it blended to what is required, and be able to bring it home in bulk, and use it in bulk.

Now, we have demanded this, and the fertilizer companies have met that demand. We are saying to them that you are charging far too much for the service that is provided. But we say to them again, that you have to carry us in credit from the spring of the year right through until the crop is sold. And when we refer this afternoon to the prices for fertilizer in that large wholesale-retail outlet in the United States—do members know how their business is run? Cash and carry on the barrelhead. No cheques accepted unless they are certified cheques or cash in hand.

That is what happens over there. And I think that if you want that kind of an operation in Ontario, then perhaps a fertilizer review board might bring these kind of things out. But I feel very definitely that it would be quite difficult to really implement a fertilizer review board that would have any very great meaning.

I was tremendously impressed with the statements that were made by members of our own party this afternoon, Mr. Speaker. In particular, I wish to refer to the member for Wellington-Dufferin who suggests that the intangibles in agriculture cannot be measured in dollars and cents. This is something that I think we, as farm people, should think just a little bit about. We can have a really interesting debate across this floor, as was indicated this afternoon, and we can have debate and discussion that lasted seven sessions of two and a half hours each, as we did in our committee on Agriculture and Food; and incidentally, Mr. Speaker, I would like to join those members who have said that was a good experience. I thought it was excellent. I would like to see our estimates go before that committee again in the future.

I think it is a good way to do it really. I think it was a most productive and useful discussion, particularly the one on crop insurance. Many suggestions came out of that one that our crop insurance commission are working on today, and I have a report on my desk as to what progress they are making regarding some of the suggestions made.

But the thing that concerns me more than anything else is the fact that while we can talk about the economics of agriculture, how do we talk about the intangible values of living in rural Ontario today? And I venture to suggest that nobody can put a dollar sign on the opportunity of living in rural Ontario, to know what it means to be a farmer, to enjoy working with livestock and soil and crops. To place a value on that, you just cannot measure in dollars and cents. But too often we compare the income that we derive as free enterprisers in that type of an economy, to the lunch-pail carrier who has to be on the job at a certain hour, and who has to work under the direction of somebody else who tells him exactly what hole he is to punch in the piece of sheet metal, or what screw he is to put into that hole, or what bolt he is to fasten. It would drive me straight up a wall and I think it would a great many other farmers as well.

So, I do not think it quite fair to compare farm income with the lunch pail carriers income or that of the comparatively high labourers' income, because he faces a great many problems that are not obvious to everybody concerned. By the same token, I am the first to agree, and to admit that the theory that was suggested by the hon. member for Huron-Bruce, that an acceptable return on investment, that adequate incomes, that a maximum number of farmers be employed in the industry, is a very fine theory to which everyone of us would subscribe.

But I say at the same time, that it is not always possible for us to equate, in the type of free economy that we have today, all of those magnificent objectives with actual practicality when we realize that as a province, our limits go only to the borders of this province in every direction and no further particularly when we have nothing to say about what happens beyond those borders covering food products that will flow across it.

So, Mr. Speaker, I humbly submit to you that our department has done a great deal, that we are continuing to do a great deal. There is no more dedicated staff of people in the civil service of the province of Ontario, nor of Canada, than are the people of The Department of Agriculture and Food and I say that quite sincerely and respectfully of all of them.

I appreciate the team effort that they have put forward in developing ideas, in carrying out programmes, sometimes under difficult circumstances, and working long beyond the normal hours of employment, time after time, I suggest to you that this department is a service department that is fulfilling its objectives in doing the job that should be done, not to the disadvantage of farmers, but to the advantage of farmers, in helping them to help themselves. Therefore, I respectfully call upon all members of this Legislature including our good friends in the Opposition who have listened so attentively to vote with us in defeating the amendment.

Mr. Speaker: The question before the House, as put by Mr. Speaker was:

Shall the resolution for supply for The Department of Agriculture and Food be concurred in.

Mr. Gaunt, seconded by Mr. Nixon, moved that the question as put be amended by the addition:

That this House regrets that the Minister has not given more serious attention to the Farm Income Report, and has made no acceptable attempts to ensure that farm operators receive adequate incomes and that well managed farms receive acceptable returns on investment.

I shall, of course, put the amendment first.

All those in favour of the amendment will please say "aye".

All those opposed will please say "nay".

In my opinion the "nays" have it. Call in the members.

Earlier this afternoon, the following question was put by Mr. Speaker:

Shall the resolution for supply for The Department of Agriculture and Food be concurred in?

Thereafter, Mr. Gaunt moved, seconded by Mr. Nixon, the amendment thereto:

That this House regrets that the Minister has not given more serious attention to the farm income report and has made no acceptable attempts to ensure that farm operators receive adequate income and that well-managed farms receive acceptable returns on investment.

The vote, of course, is on the amendment.

The House divided on the amendment moved by Mr. Gaunt, which was negatived by the following vote:

APPENDIX

Mr. M. Makarchuk (Brantford) inquired of the Minister of Agriculture and Food on October 9, 1969:

What was the total amount paid to members of the special committee on Farm Income?

What amount was paid to each member?

What per diem rate was paid to each member?

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food) tabled the following written reply on November 24, 1969:

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1969

The House resumed at 8.00 o'clock, p.m.

Hon. R. S. Welch (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I might ask the permission of the House to revert to the presentation of reports.

Mr. Speaker: Agreed?

Agreed.

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, I have the honour of placing before the House, the report and the recommendations of the Hamilton-Wentworth-Burlington Local Government Review Commission. As the name suggests, the commission made up of Mr. Donald R. Steele, Mr. Brian W. B. Morrison, and Mr. Edwin A. Jerratt was retained to study the municipal government structure and to make recommendations about the structure and effect of a regional government in that subject area. This report is now completed. The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. McKeough) is presenting it to a meeting of area representatives and interested citizens in Hamilton tonight and naturally wanted the House to have the benefit of that report simultaneously.

Mr. Speaker: Also, I would like to inform the members that, in the west gallery, we have members of the 12th Willowdale Scout Troop from Willowdale.

Clerk of the House: The 13th order, House in committee of the whole; Mr. A. E. Reuter in the Chair.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE SUPERANNUATION ACT

House in committee on Bill 192, An Act to amend The Public Service Superannuation Act.

Mr. Chairman: If the hon. member would mind waiting while I get a copy of the bill, I shall call him first. Bill 192, An Act to amend The Public Service Superannuation Act. I understand there will be an amendment to this bill. Are there any questions, comments or amendments up to section 5?

Sections 1 to 4, inclusive, agreed to.

On section 5:

Hon. C. S. MacNaughton (Provincial Treasurer): I move that subsection 1 of section 5 of Bill 192 be amended as follows: That the number 100 in the fourth line of the subsection be deleted and that the number 130 be substituted therefor; so that section will now read:

Whereupon the contributor is, in the opinion of the board, re-employed or engaged in any capacity of the service of the Crown and works for a period of more than 130 days in any one year, any allowance or annuity to which he is entitled during such re-employment or engagement shall not be paid in respect of such period.

Mr. H. Peacock (Windsor West): Mr. Chairman, I am very disappointed in the Treasurer's amendment. On second reading, members on this side of the House discussed the elimination altogether of any period of restriction on the rights of former employees of the government to draw their pension in full. The Minister has come back to us with an amendment tonight replacing 100 days of employment with an extension of 130 days of employment. On second reading, we made the point to the Provincial Treasurer that once an employee has earned entitlement to a pension by right of service, that right should not be diminished if he is employed for a further period of time with some other department of the Crown, and that his pension should be paid to him in full regardless of further service beyond his normal retirement age or retirement date of service. I think, Mr. Chairman, we will have to vote against the Provincial Treasurer's amendment.

Mr. G. Ben (Humber): Mr. Chairman, because of the present system that we are operating under whereby we run two committees at the same time, I missed an opportunity to be here when this particular matter was discussed. I take a view opposite to what the hon. member just said, even though it may be a view contrary to that taken by my own party.

I believe there ought to be a diminution of the number of days that a pensioned person can work for the province, not an extension. Anybody who argues that there should be an extension is the kind who would deny to our young people a place in the sun. They are the ones who will keep the young people always young and incapable of taking the reins into their hands. They are the kind who will never let go of power. They just want to be in the driver's seat all the time.

Pensions, Mr. Chairman, were not created just to give a person a means of existence in old age. Every year, we have been slowly decreasing the age at which these pensions are granted. We have been doing that for two reasons—one, because we feel that the people, during the lifetime that they have worked, have earned the right to retire; and two, and this is something that the unions have fought for for decades and decades, is the right to retire at an early age to give the young people a chance to move up on the economic ladder, to move up in society, to finally assume control of their own destiny. So there are two aspects to it: one is the monetary aspect, and the other is the social aspect.

Mr. Chairman, if we extend the time period in which a pensioned civil servant can continue to work part-time with the government, we in essence are doing a number of things. We are admitting that we made a bad choice in that person to begin with, for if we had made a good choice, we would not have concerned ourselves with his retirement. That person or this government would have ensured that there was someone to take his place when he retired. In other words, we would not need him part-time or otherwise if he was a good and faithful servant because he would have prepared others to take his place.

Secondly, by permitting him to stay on, as I say, we are denying our young people the right to advance. We are being selfish, we are being dog-in-a-mangerish. General Motors will not permit a man to stay on past the retirement age. Eaton's will not permit a man to stay on beyond retirement age, and I am talking about the executives in senior positions, not the people down below. They appreciate you must make way for youth. You must give them their place in the sun and their day in the sun. This is the important principle here.

This is why I oppose any extension of the number of days that a retired civil servant can work for this government beyond what it is now. In fact, I would diminish it. I would wipe it out completely. It he has done his job well, he is entitled to his retirement. If he wants, I would not deprive him of the right to go and work elsewhere. He has earned his pension. He can draw his pension and work elsewhere for all I care, but I say he ought not to work for the civil service. The young ought to be given a chance to move ahead and show what they can do.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Chairman, this was discussed in the House on second reading, to some extent. I explained the background that prompted the original amendments which increased the time that a former contributor could be employed—which was, prior to the introduction of this bill, and still is, if the bill is not passed, 30 days. The amendment originally called for 100 days. The amendment was made on the recommendation of the Public Service Superannuation Board, and it is anomalous to the extent that it can work both ways. I am speaking chiefly to the member for Humber at the moment. I find myself in that rather anomalous position of agreeing with both sides of the presentation and that is not a very easy position to defend.

I explained on second reading that one of the reasons the restrictions were there was to prevent the very thing that the hon. member for Humber referred to, and that was to make it too attractive altogether for persons to seek retirement and benefit from retirement, which was in certain instances, the case. The anomaly again, in that sense, is, of course, that they can leave the public service altogether and draw their pension and there are no restrictions. So we have a situation where outside the public sector there are no restrictions; inside the public sector there are restrictions.

I made a commitment at the time of second reading of the bill that I would examine this again with those from the Public Service Superannuation Board who advised the amendments in the first place, and beyond that I made no commitment. I recall being asked, I think by the hon. member for Downsview (Mr. Singer), to commit myself to go with some modest amendment at this time and then bring in new legislation next session wiping out the restrictions altogether. This I have not found it possible or sensible to do, for a variety of reasons, but before I explain those reasons, and I will be brief about it, Mr. Chairman, I should tell the committee that 130 days is the equivalent of six months. It is half a year. If there are 52 weeks, and five working days in a week, and not concerning ourselves with statutory holidays, we are now proposing something that constitutes half a year, six months. It seems to me that this is very generous at this point in time, when you consider that the pension can be drawn and six months of employment can be added to a pension. It seems to me to be very generous.

The other point I explained on second reading was that the whole matter of pensions, pension benefits, and their entire relationship with pensions, to civil servants and others—as a matter of fact, employees of Crown agencies and the rest—is under very intensive study. This prompts me to suggest to you, Mr. Chairman, and to members of the House, that I am reluctant to proceed any further at this time until the results of that study are made known to me and I, in turn, can make them known to the House.

I think this is a sensible position for now. It is an interim situation. It was intended to be, as I explained on second reading, and still is intended to be. Whether it remains to be considered generous and fair enough in the light of the study that is being undertaken, I cannot say at this time but I certainly am not prepared to commit myself to go any further.

Indeed, possibly the original motion, and the original amendment, was sufficient. However, upon examination and upon discussion with the Public Service Superannuation Board, they felt this was reasonable enough in terms of practical limitations and I have to say to you, Mr. Chairman, I am not disposed to consider the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Windsor West. So, there we have it, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Peacock: If I could just ask the Provincial Treasurer one further question, Mr. Chairman. Before doing so I would like to say that is very, very inconsistent of him because if he had arrived at this limit of 130 days by some logical process, may I refer him to the limits placed in The Municipal Act on the entitlement of retiring employees to their sick leave. This gives them 180 days pay; no more, no less. Should they have sufficient service when they reach the point of retirement they can draw that amount of entitlement, 180 days pay, times the daily rate, if they have not had to draw from the fund for salary continuation during sickness. Now I do not see why this Act affecting civil servants of the province should in any way differ from the benefit made available to municipal employees, policemen and firefighters.

Mr. Chairman: Any other discussion?

Mr. MacNaughton moves that subsection 1 of section 5 of Bill 192 be amended as follows: That the number 100 in the fourth line of the subsection be deleted and the number 130 be substituted therefor.

Shall the motion carry?

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Chairman: Are there any other sections with amendments or comments or questions?

If not, shall the bill be reported as amended?

Bill No. 192, as amended, reported.

Clerk of the House: The Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor recommends the following:

fees and expenses to be allowed to returning officers and other officers in person for services performed under The Election Act, 1968-69, so far as they are payable by the province of Ontario under the Consolidated Revenue Fund, and be for the purpose of providing funds for the payment of such fees and expenses; the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may direct that accountable warrants payable out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund be issued from time to time in favour of any officer or other person, as provided in Bill No. 217, The Election Act, 1968-69.

Resolution concurred in.

THE REGULATIONS ACT

House in committee on Bill 125, An Act to amend The Regulations Act.

Mr. Peacock: May I ask why the bill on which the recommendation of His Honour, the Lieutenant Governor is based is not before the committee?

Clerk of the House: It is already on for third reading, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Peacock: It is something we did not take account of.

Mr. Chairman: On section 1. There is an amendment for section 1.

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Minister of Justice): When this bill, No. 125, was last before the committee of the whole, I indicated that if we could defer consideration I would be prepared to amend the bill. The Act as it is printed provides for a special committee to be appointed at the commencement of each Legislature. The result of our discussion as we undertook consideration of the bill previously was that perhaps it would be well to have such a committee appointed at the commencement of each session. So I move, Mr. Chairman—in accordance with that suggestion—I move that section 12 of the Act, as enacted by section 1 of the bill be amended by deleting subsection 1 and substituting the following therefore:

1. At the commencement of each session of the Legislature a standing committee of the Assembly shall be appointed to be known as the standing committee on regulations, with authority to sit during the session, and that the said section 12 be further amended by striking out "special" where it occurs in subsections 2, 3, 4 and 5 and inserting in lieu thereof "standing" in each instance.

The effect of the amendment, Mr. Chairman, is to make the committee a standing committee rather than a special committee; to provide that it be appointed at the beginning of each session and that it sits during the session; and the word "special", where it appears in section one, becomes "standing."

Mr. Chairman: Any discussion on the motion by Mr. Wishart?

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): Mr. Chairman, if I may.

I am wondering about the actual effect of this amendment, Mr. Chairman. The Attorney General has replaced the special committee with a standing committee of this Legislature, and that standing committee presumably would review all of the regulations that were brought in in relation to legislation.

Now I am wondering what would happen, for instance, in the interim when the session was not operating. Would this standing committee, at some future date when the session reconvenes or when we open the new session, would the standing committee actually review all of the regulations that have been undertaken during the interim? Is this the effect of this amendment?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Yes, that would be the effect.

I might point out, Mr. Chairman, that Mr. McRuer in his recommendations for the provision of such legislation as this bill, to review the regulations, did recommend that the committee should have power to sit during recess. Now, we considered that when the bill was first presented but we abandoned the recommendation to that extent, and felt it should sit during the sessions of the Legislature. With the amendment, it sits during each session still. We have not gone so far as to say it should sit between sessions.

To answer the hon. member's question, it would pick up any regulations that were passed between sessions and all regulations by the Act, subsection 2 of section 1, every regulation stands permanently referred to the committee. It will now read standing committee, so it will review all regulations. With the Legislature now sitting almost, we might say, throughout the year, it would appear there will be little time except a reasonable time between sessions when the committee will not be working because the session seems to be now lasting almost ten months, or thereabouts, of the year. So I think they will probably require what break they get. Anyway, we did not go to the extent of the recommendation that they should sit throughout between sessions.

Mr. Gaunt: Mr. Chairman: there is only one problem with that as I see it. I would agree with the Attorney General that the sessions are extending to almost ten months—nine to ten months of the year, if this particular session is any indication. However, if we do get a shorter session in the future, the standing committee may in some cases be reviewing these regulations after they have become operative and after the whole procedure has been set in motion. I really do not think that is the intent of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Yes, that is the intent of the bill. The regulations are passed by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, they will be effective, I presume, immediately; in many cases at least, they would be effective. It is not intended that the effectiveness of the regulations should wait until the committee has reviewed them and made its report. The committee's power is to review the regulations, to report back to the Legislature; it cannot, it does not, deal with government policy in the making of the regulations. It reviews the scope of the regulations to see if they are within the terms of the Act to which the regulations are appended, by which they become a part of the legislative power.

But I would not anticipate, I do not believe that it is intended for a moment, that the regulations should not be effective. The thought, I think, of this legislation is that we have never had this type of review in this Legislature; that the committee would review the regulations, bring back to the House a report, pointing out that in the opinion of the committee, perhaps, the regulations go beyond the necessity of the purposes of the Act or impose a penalty, perhaps, which they should not do—things of that nature, that are outside the scope of the Act. But it was never intended that the regulations should wait upon the committee or upon the committee's report.

Mr. Gaunt: Well, I did not infer, Mr. Chairman, that this particular committee would actually formulate government policy. I realize that is outside the jurisdiction of the committee and I did not want to infer that. The only point that I was making was that the regulations in some cases could be operative and in effect when the committee reviews them. Perhaps this is not such a bad thing but it seems to me that the committee would be of greater effect and of greater force if the regulations were reviewed prior to becoming operative.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the merit of the suggestion, but I see practical difficulties. It is necessary, to carry out the purposes of the legislation, whatever Act it may be, that there be regulations. They are framed, and carefully drawn; it is possible that they might need to become effective very quickly after they are promulgated or published; that is when they do become effective. It is altogether possible that the standing committee might not get around to dealing with them for a matter of weeks, possibly—a week, two weeks, five weeks, something of that sort. Whereas I think they must go forward, they must be effective.

The committee is at liberty, of course, to review them, to consider their scope and be critical of their provisions, and in its report, to say so to this House. But the government must take the responsibility for the policy which is carried forward from the Act into the regulations. The committee's duty is to review them and see that they fit within the intent and purpose of the Act. They must be effective. I think they cannot wait on the uncertainty of the time of review of the standing committee.

There may be cases, I would anticipate, where regulations may be prepared. And I am not sure of this but I think it may very well be possible that they could be submitted to that committee for its advice and assistance to the drafters of the regulations. But I think the general intent here is that regulations, once passed, approved by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council and thereby made effective on publication, are submitted to the standing committee on regulations for its review and study and report back. And I do not think you could contemplate that the regulations could not be effective until you had this report from the committee.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Windsor West.

Mr. Peacock: If I may, I would like to say to the Attorney General that one of the first tasks that I think should be put before the standing committee as he now has constituted it, should be an effort to arrive at a concrete definition of regulation where we have before us in the House and in the various standing committees, a number of terms, all of which countenance a legislative discretion or authority—order-in-council, regulation, order, by-law—what-have-you.

I imagine there are any number of synonyms which are used to refer to what this Legislature delegates to subordinate bodies as law-making exercise and I think it would be very helpful if the Attorney General's senior legislative counsel put before the standing committee various definitions of what constitutes delegated legislation or the terminology which has been used in Ottawa—statutory instruments, I think the special committee or standing committee of the House of Commons used in its study. This was its first undertaking. I think it is particularly important in this jurisdiction, this provincial jurisdiction, where so many statutes provide within them the delegation of law-making authority to subordinate commissions or boards that have application not in the general way but in a very, very particular way to individuals and corporations and municipalities and companies, just what it is that constitutes a regulation as opposed to a statute.

Secondly, I would like to say to the Attorney General and Minister of Justice, Mr. Chairman, that I was not able to comprehend too well in the report of the House of Commons committee on statutory instruments, how it was that a regulation came to be defined as an order or legal fiat which provided for a penalty in the instance where an offence was committed. I believe that this was one of the definitions used by that committee of the House of Commons to determine the definition of a regulation and I do not believe that in our jurisdiction at least, the commission of an offence against the order of a subordinate body to the legislative authority necessarily is a definition of regulation.

I think that the remarks that the member for Huron-Bruce, if they point to the exercise of a veto by the standing committee, are not well founded. The executive will, of course, want to continue the prerogative of law making through regulation, however it is defined, with the right of review by this Legislature of the exercise of that authority, and I think that the executive, while it may wish to continue that prerogative, has a responsibility none the less to assist the Legislature in reaching the decision as to whether the exercise of that executive prerogative has been carried out in accordance with the statute as the Attorney General has just explained.

So, Mr. Chairman, when the committee meets and takes up the task of the review of the regulations, I hope that that will be one of the items of documentation of material that is put before it at one of its early sittings: the assistance of the Attorney-General's senior law officers in reaching a very clear definition of just what the distinction is between the statute and the regulation.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Chairman, I would just like to speak briefly on that. I think perhaps we would welcome the help of the committee. We have not got a definition of regulation in this bill. I think of a regulation—although I do not offer this as a definition—as a subordinate type of legislation which follows a statute which provides that the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may pass a regulation to carry out the purposes of the Act.

Mr. McRuer in his volume on civil rights, volume 1, report number 1, at page 378—and these are not in the bill—lays down certain principles and I think we have become very aware of them and I would hope that the committee will use them because it is to the committee that he directs these words, or these recommendations. He said:

The following principles should be laid down to guide the committee in its examination of the regulations.

These are not included in statutory form in the bill but these principles would certainly be applied by the committee.

He says:

(a) They should not contain provisions initiating new policy, but should be confined to details to give effect to the policy established by the statute.

(b) They should be in strict accord with the statute, conferring the power, particularly concerning personal liberties.

(c) They should be expressed in precise and unambiguous language.

(d) They should not have retrospective effect unless clearly authorized by statute.

(e) They should not exclude the jurisdiction of the courts.

Which I think is very important—

(f) They should not impose a fine, imprisonment, or other penalty.

I am not sure all our regulations have been observing these things in the past.

(g) They should not shift the onus of proof of innocence to a person accused of an offence.

(h) They should not impose anything in the way of a tax—as distinct from fixing the amount of a license fee or the like.

Mr. Peacock: Well that washes out your Ontario hospital premiums and OHSIP.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Yes. Now these are some of the things the committee will probably be very quick to note in these principles, in the review of the regulations. This is, I think, the great virtue of this legislation in that it will give an opportunity for someone, a competent body of this House, to make this study bearing these principles in mind. He has two more:

(i) They should not make any unusual or unexpected use of delegated power.

A very important thing, and:

(j) General powers should not be exercised to establish a judicial tribunal or administrative tribunal.

Those principles, he said, should be followed by the committee in its study.

As to the matter of the definition, as I say, I would welcome some assistance on that and perhaps we might get that from the committee. I would not propose to draft one or offer an amendment here tonight to try to define it in the bill.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Mr. Chairman, as the Attorney General well knows, my colleague from Samia (Mr. Bullbrook) and I on second reading of this bill at some length took question with the Attorney General about the provisions of section 3; and those objections still stand.

I was tempted to move an amendment tonight removing the words that we thought objectionable.

Mr. Chairman: We have a motion—

Mr. Singer: Have we a motion?

Mr. Chairman: We have an amendment to section 1—

Mr. Singer: Well I was not addressing myself to section 1.

Mr. Chairman: —which must be cleared before we go on to section 3.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Chairman, I think perhaps I can offer some help here. The amendment which I offered to section 1, I think, is not the point on which the hon. member is addressing himself. I am sure he is quite agreeable to the amendment I moved but he is pursuing what he does submit—frankly he pursued “at some length” to use his own words, on second reading. I hope he will not pursue it quite so long tonight.

Mr. Singer: No, no; I have no intention—I have no objection to the amendment of section 1 if you want to put it, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: We should put it.

Mr. Singer: All right, and then I will make my remarks on section 3.

Mr. Chairman: Shall the motion as moved by Mr. Wishart carry?

Motion agreed to.

Section 1, as amended, agreed to.

Mr. Singer: Now on section 3, Mr. Chairman—

Hon. Mr. Wishart: How about section 2?

Mr. Singer: Section 2—I have no objection to that either. Do you want to carry that one, Mr. Chairman?

On section 2:

Mr. Chairman: Actually we are prepared for comments, questions or amendments to section 2 or section 3, whichever you have.

Mr. Singer: Oh well, I am in order now on subsection 3?

Section 2, agreed to.

On section 3:

Mr. Singer: On subsection 3; as I say, my colleague from Sarnia and I, at some length as the Attorney General underlined, and we think it is important, quarrelled with the words “but without reference to the merits of a policy or the objectives to be affected by the regulations or enabling statutes”. We fought our battle there. I think we divided the House. I am not sure—did we divide the House at that time?

Nevertheless we made the point. The point is obvious again, Mr. Chairman, because I just scribbled down as the Attorney General was talking—one of the tasks of the committee “are to determine whether the regulations fit within the intent and purpose of the Act.” Those are the Attorney General’s own words.

How the committee is going to do that without reference to the merits of the policy or the objectives affected by the regulations I do not know, and it may be that the Attorney General can see more in the English language than I can, but if the committee is going to be barred from talking about the objectives to be affected by the regulations, or the enabling statutes, then it means they cannot determine whether the regulations fit within the intent and purpose of the Act. I think that the simplest amendment that we suggested—and I am not even going to move it, I will just appeal to the Attorney General’s good sense—is to take out the words “or objectives to be affected by the regulations or enabling statutes”.

I think if he took those out then he would not be barring the committee in future years from determining whether or not the particular regulation is within the enabling powers in the statute.

With those words remaining and to my mind, Mr. Chairman, it leaves to the caprice of an arbitrary chairman of the committee the ability to rule out a serious discussion as to whether or not a particular regulation fits within the powers given by the statute. What I say very simply is that surely we do not want to give to a committee or to bar a committee from enquiring into whether or not regulations—if this committee has any purpose—are within the powers laid down by this Legislature. I will leave it at that.

We argued this point at some length. We were not able to convince the Attorney General at an earlier time. Perhaps this last suggestion might make some impression on him. I am not even going to move the amendment, I am just going to appeal to his good intelligence hopefully that he will accept this suggestion.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Chairman, again I appreciate the comments of the hon. member for Downsview, but, and this is not semantics that we are talking about, I think we have a different approach to the meaning of what is in the bill, the scope of the regulations, the language of subsection 3, to which he addressed himself "the committee shall examine the regulations with particular emphasis to the scope"—

Mr. Singer: And the method of exercising.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: And the method of exercising! How far do they go? How do they carry out the purposes and intent of the legislation, of the statute?

Mr. Singer: I left those words alone.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Yes. Now I think it is very necessary to say "but without reference to the merits"—

Mr. Singer: "Merits" yes, I agree.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: "Of the policy, or objectives". Now surely the government in bringing in a bill has to frame a policy, has to know its policy, and policy and objective surely meld one into the other, they are almost one and the same thing, the objective is accomplished by a policy framed into legislation. Now you cannot entrust under our system. I am not saying they would not be trustworthy but you cannot abdicate the responsibility of government and give it to a committee of the House, the responsibility, the obligation to frame policy, to carry out an objective which the government sees as part of its policy.

Mr. McRuer says this, maybe he makes it plainer than I do. It is brief, Mr. Chairman, at page 377 he says this:

The policy of the Act having been settled by the Legislature after full debate and discussion, ought not to be re-opened for discussion in the committee. The merits of the regulation, namely, an evaluation of the need for them and their efficacy, within the framework of the policy approved and provided for by the Act, are matters for which the government is responsible to the Legislature.

The committee has no business, he says, in that area.

It is not proposed that the functions of the committee should be to supervise the operation of departments of government. Elimination of the consideration of policy or merits should permit the committee to proceed in a non-partisan way as it has done in the United Kingdom and in Manitoba.

Mr. McRuer, I think, makes it clear that when it gets to the committee they are not to be engaged in whether this is wise, good, bad or indifferent. Do these regulations carry out the purpose and intent of the Act? Is this the method? Do they fit the method? You do not get into a partisan or political debate on policy and I think that the language is clear when it says:

The committee shall examine the regulations with reference to the scope and the method—these are procedures—but without reference to the merit or the policy or the objectives.

That was the way that I see it. I think it is just that my friend and I differ in our interpretation of the language. He did not move an amendment, but I could not accept it—I believe he did move one on second reading, Mr. Chairman, and I could not accept it then.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Chairman, by way of a postscript, I cannot find myself in disagreement at all with the section that the Attorney General quoted from McRuer. He says that you should not review the policy of the statute because that has been decided already. But I am saying that if the policies or objectives to be effected by the regulations, differ from the policies or objectives effected by the statute, then surely the committee must be able to question that. And in this section of this statute you are barring the committee from questioning.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: No, No, that is the scope. If they go beyond the Act they are into scope and that is right in the section.

Mr. Singer: Well, if the Attorney General is satisfied that scope is sufficient why then does he need the additional phrase "but without reference to the merits or objectives to be effected by the regulations"? If he merely said "but without reference to objectives to be effected by the enabling statutes," that would be fine. Why does he need the words "without reference to the merits of the policy or objectives to be effected by the regulation"?

Surely, if the committee is going to serve a useful function, it is one of its tasks, it has to be, to determine whether in its opinion the regulation in question is within the four walls of the enabling statute.

Not for a moment am I suggesting that the statutory provision can or should be questioned as to its policy or objectives by the committee. That has already been determined in the Legislature at some particular time. I am saying the committee has to have the task of saying, "In this regulation is there an objective that perhaps might tend to be beyond the powers of the enabling statute?"

I am sure one must start to say the statute is there. One cannot question the statute. The Legislature in its wisdom, or lack of it, has decreed that this is the statutory condition. It should come to the committee—and presuming that some day you are going to get an arbitrary chairman in that committee who says, "I will not have any talk about whether or not the regulation is within the power granted by the statute, because I have got those protective words." This is my fear.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I am sure you would get a minority report very quickly, maybe even a majority report against the Chairman in that case. But just very briefly, Mr. Chairman, to use the example that the hon. member for Downsview used, if the regulations, in the opinion of members of that committee, go beyond the policy and purposes as expressed in the legislation, then I think that committee would quickly come back with its report to the House and say, "These regulations are, or this particular regulation is, out of order. We criticize it because of its scope—it is carrying policy in the regulation much further than the legislation intends to go." That is why we think the report would say, "The scope of the regulation goes beyond the Act and is purely bad."

Mr. Chairman: Shall Mr. Wishart's motion carry?

Mr. Singer: That is on section 1.

Mr. Chairman: On section 1, is this carried? Are there any other comments, questions or amendments to this bill? Shall the bill as amended be reported?

Mr. Singer: How about calling? You said you called sections 1 and 2.

Mr. Chairman: My question, as put to the committee, covers that. Are there any further comments, questions or amendments to this bill?

Mr. Singer: We voted, Mr. Chairman, with respect, on subsection 1 and subsection 2 of section 12. I would just like that for the record, for whatever that is worth. I am not going to suggest we divide the House on it. I am going to register my objection, in some way, to subsection 2 of 12, the new 12, because, with great respect, I think the Attorney General is wrong.

Mr. Chairman: Are there any further comments, questions or amendments to this bill?

Shall the bill as amended be reported?

Section 3, agreed to.

Bill 125, as amended, reported.

Hon. Mr. Welch moves that the committee of the whole House rise and report a certain resolution and two bills with certain amendments and ask for leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of the whole House begs to report a certain resolution and two bills with certain amendments and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

THIRD READINGS

The following bills were given third reading upon motions:

Bill 134, An Act to amend The Day Nurseries Act, 1966.

Bill 219, An Act to amend The Drainage Act, 1962-63.

Bill 220, An Act to amend The Local Improvement Act.

Bill 221, An Act to amend The Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto Act.

Clerk of the House: The 12th order, resuming the adjourned debate on the amendment to the motion that Mr. Speaker do now leave the chair and the House resolve itself into the committee on ways and means.

BUDGET DEBATE

Mr. G. Ben (Humber): There are not many NDPers in the House, so I will give the member a hand.

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): That is very kind of the hon. member.

Mr. Speaker, a great deal of attention has been given these past few months to the subject of the development of northern Ontario. The Minister of Mines' (Mr. A. F. Lawrence's) three conferences in Timmins, Sudbury and the Lakehead certainly sparked additional discussion of the problems and difficulties that we northerners face in an effort to create growth and expansion of the north's economy. I did not feel that very many new problems or grievances were aired that have not been aired by northerners on countless other occasions when making representations to Queen's Park in the past.

I am sure many northerners approached these conferences with a mixture of scepticism and hope. We wondered, and still do, if anything really beneficial and dynamic will emerge from these exercises, since our voices have fallen on deaf ears so frequently in the past. Even with senior Cabinet Ministers from the north in the government, little encouragement has come to us from successive Tory administrations in Queen's Park as far as development is concerned. Even the Minister of Mines on Timmins TV's so-called Bear Pit—which was pretty tame—hinted that in the past when northern problems were discussed in the Cabinet little attention or interest was apparent on behalf of his colleagues.

When the present report was to be considered, he stated that full Cabinet attendance and participation would be required. I hope he has succeeded in accomplishing his aim in this regard as I understand such a meeting was held last week.

I suppose the element of hope northerners experienced was that many felt that perhaps—just perhaps—the Minister of Mines might be able to impress upon his colleagues, what northern Cabinet Ministers have previously failed to do, the seriousness of the feeling of alienation and neglect felt by northerners, so that constructive and dynamic policies may be formulated to take full advantage of the opportunities that presently exist.

To expect such from a Tory government, with its record of indifference and its commitment to out-and-out free enterprise, is a tall order, but on the other hand the point was effectively made on a number of occasions that public funds need to be committed not just to subsidies and hand-outs to the big corporations, but to promote public enterprises where the needs exist and where a viable industry can operate in those areas where private investment is lacking, that perhaps, just perhaps, a realistic, pragmatic politician like the Minister of Mines just might be able to convince his Cabinet colleagues of the wisdom of such a policy that will lead to real development of the north. We await, therefore, the outcome of these conferences with scepticism mingled with some hope that our faith in northern Ontario may evoke a similar response of faith in our future, leading to action from the Cabinet.

One point that northerners realize is that we ourselves must show initiative and resourcefulness to come up with ideas and plans to develop the north. We must be prepared to invest our money, our talent and our future in the opportunities that we see in our area if our economy is to expand. Basically, we must show a willingness to help ourselves rather than look to others to do it for us.

Even the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Roberts), in his "Design for Development" statement, said:

Local initiative, responsibility, and advice must continue to be encouraged and sought in any scheme of provincial planning and economic development.

Prior to that statement, the Prime Minister said:

The philosophy of the present Ontario government has always been to encourage and assist individuals to develop their full capacities, to encourage economic competitiveness, and to provide a climate of expanding employment opportunities for a growing labour force.

These words of the Prime Minister have a pretty hollow sound when the experience of one Zane Williamson of my riding is considered. The record of governmental red tape, buck-passing, indifference and unconcern is both shocking and disgraceful. A mild mannered and long suffering man has been both discouraged and infuriated with the treatment he has received in the last year and a half. If only the government took the Prime Minister's words seriously and acted upon them, we might get some solution to Mr. Williamson's problems and we might also come to think that the Tory government has some real genuine concerns for our problems.

Mr. Williamson came to Timmins from Ohio two or three years ago to teach at the Northern College of Applied Arts and Technology, Porcupine campus. He had been an engineer and builder back home in Ohio and had decided to try Canadian living for a change. As he explored the countryside in his spare time, he discovered a choice piece of property, some 32 acres, on Night Hawk Lake that had all the prerequisites for a thriving tourist operation — beauty, privacy, good beach, nice lake and all the rest of it. He proceeded to buy the property from one Prosper Deslauriers for about $10,000. He turned his inventive and imaginative mind loose on this property as far as its use is concerned. He has worked on it for some 18 months, has built a number of camper sites for use on a year-round basis and eventually plans to have 70 available.

Such things as moose hunting in the fall, ice fishing in winter, nature hikes in the spring or outdoor camping in the summer are all possibilities. He has built one $10,000 cottage, has plans for others and has a laundromat built and equipped, as well as an $11,000 sewage system meeting Department of Health regulations, already installed. All this represents considerable initiative and his life's savings of $50,000.

But there is one catch to all this. His tourist operation is in unorganized territory and is a half mile off the main Highway 101. His letter of September 11 to the district engineer of The Department of Highways in Cochrane outlines pretty dramatically the problem he is having. He writes, Mr. Speaker:

After working with the New Liskeard office, Department of Highways, for over one year, I still have a very poor road leading to our property here on Night Hawk Lake. I have spent over $1,500 and now it is, we believe, time for public maintenance of this one-half mile road. It was just suggested today by the New Liskeard office that we ask to be taken under a statute labour board. This is what we are doing in this letter and are hoping to have work done on the road within a week or so, as it seems to me that we have been given the runaround. Of course we know that there was a change in jurisdiction this past spring and this only complicated matters. After an inspection of the road and an evaluation of the investment we have in our business, it will be seen that it is time to do this much needed work on the road.

We have at present $45,000 in the 32-acre site and have just completed a 10,000-gallon septic system designed for 10 year-around families and 60 camping families.

Also we are waiting on delivery of three coin-operated washing machines and two large commercial dryers. These will be located in our laundromat. I have employed one man, full-time, for over one year and have used several day labourers. So you see, we have invested all we had and more; and what makes matters almost unbearable is the road. We would have opened for business this past summer but our work was not complete. We were delayed several times and for several weeks each time because our suppliers could not make deliveries. It has been a struggle, for after each rain the condition of the road was almost impassable and this has accounted for most of our delays. In addition to the loss of income from the summer tourist season we keep spending money buying gravel in order to get our materials in. This past summer we have put $300 or more gravel on the road just to get our gravel truck out of the mud. It is hard to realize that I have used approximately 4,000 yards of gravel and still require more. My employee and myself have worked every day and we plan to work all winter developing other features of our establishment. The north asks for development investment, etc. but where is the incentive, grants or help for the smaller investor than a Texas-Gulf Sulphur type investor? It will not be easy to have my 10 year-round trailer sites filled this fall if water is always standing on the road. I have even had camping families tell me that the road was too bad and they went elsewhere. We do need a better road and now.

Well, that letter was written on September 11. On September 18 to the 20 the northern conference was held in Timmins. The hon. Minister of Tourism and Information (Mr. Auld) talked with Mr. Williamson and assured him of his support and his help with the road. Subsequently, I was invited out to Mr. Williamson's place on a Sunday afternoon in mid-October after a rainstorm and the drive over that one-half mile road took all the courage I could muster because I did not think I could get in or get out without being bogged down in a couple of feet of mud. I thought I might seriously damage my car in the process. I needed no further convincing that action was necessary on that road, and so, at Mr. Williamson's request, went and talked with the Minister of Tourism and Information to be assured that he was pursuing the matter with the Minister of Highways (Mr. Gomme). Just to be on the safe side, I wrote to the Minister of Highways requesting his consideration and I received the following reply:

This is in reply to your letter of October 24, 1969 in connection with a request by Mr. Zane Williamson, R.R. No. 1, Connaught, Ontario, for financial assistance in maintaining the access road to his property on Night Hawk Lake, south of Highway 101. Under the present legislation, Mr. Williamson may secure financial assistance in two ways. Indirectly, he may appeal to the Statute Labour Board of German-Matheson Township to include the road in question with their road system. His contribution would then be in the form of taxes to the board who would perform work under a 50 per cent subsidy from the department. However, it should be noted that Mr. Williamson's property lies in the unorganized Township of Macklem. Should the board not agree to this arrangement, Mr. Williamson could apply directly to the district engineer of New Liskeard, Mr. D. A. O. White, for a special work order under section 91, part 12 of The Highway Improvement Act. The subsidy in this case is also 50 per cent. The applicant's share must be paid in advance and departmental approval obtained before any work is done.

And he goes on to outline some other things.

But Mr. Williamson has talked about that and talked about that for months and nothing has transpired. And then it was put over to the Cochrane district, it was transferred out of the New Liskeard district, so even the hon. Minister of Highways is behind time. In desperation, Mr. Williamson again wrote to the Minister of Tourism and Information and this is what his letter says:

It has been over a month since my letter of October 3, and as yet there has been no reply. What is the progress in regards to the funds that are needed by the Cochrane office of The Department of Highways? As was stated in my first letter, I have done some transit work and have prepared a set of plans. Since that time, I have been doing some bush clearing in order to facilitate the ditching work which is the major cause of the poor road condition.

You see, I am so concerned with this problem and the protection of my investment that I do not mind doing additional work in order to reduce the cost which must be shouldered by the provincial government. This is the easiest time of year to do this work, before the heavy snow, and there is a drag line available if this work is to be contracted out. We must have a return on our investment next year and without a better road this will be almost impossible.

Now when a man is in the process of trying to get a tourist industry underway and the hon. Minister of Tourism and Information is completely unconcerned about the man's problem even though it has been brought to him in a number of ways, it is rather a discouraging thing, it makes one wonder what really he is doing to promote tourism in northern Ontario.

It appears that this problem is not too much nearer a solution than it was way back last spring. In the meantime, he must drive, if possible, over this road with ruts knee-deep. At the same time with the gnawing concern in the back of his mind that next spring again, the road will be the same. Prospective tourists and permanent residents at the trailer park will be deterred and his investment will be in jeopardy and may go down the drain.

It is certainly not a pleasant prospect that this industrious and imaginative northerner faces as a result of governmental indifference. The half-mile road needs proper ditching and draining to eliminate the problem of the mud and subsequent ruts that will develop after a rain or in the spring break-up. He needs help and he needs it right now.

The previous owner was something of an inventive person and had thought of establishing a business, the manufacture of cores for rolls of paper at Abitibi at Iroquois Falls. Well, alas, his business skills did not match his inventive skills and he was never able to go ahead with his dream. But he also had the problem of the road and he spent over $900 of his own money, and him still a poor man, on some elementary ditching. Neither The Department of Highways nor Lands and Forests would reimburse him or do a similar amount of work. I tried unsuccessfully to get assistance for him and I guess in frustration or discouragement he sold his property.

The present owner, Zane Williamson, has presently spent over $1,500 of his own money on this road and it is still in impassable condition. He has done the necessary surveys and the drafting on his own to rectify the situation and still he gets the runaround. Surely, with the potentially bright future that this man's business has from a tourist point of view, it behooves both the Minister of Highways and the Minister of Tourism and Information to personally get involved in this situation to see that all necessary steps are taken to get that road in useable condition as soon as possible, so that his business can be opened, a return can be realized on his investment, and future expansion in the north can take place.

This man has shown his industriousness, his determination to do something for the north, his willingness to go more than the second mile to co-operate and find a solution to his thorny problem. Surely if the Prime Minister's words in "Design for Development" have any real meaning, or if this government, Mr. Speaker, is really concerned about individual initiative and industriousness as a free enterprise party like theirs says it is, then they must get this matter settled immediately and promote rather than hinder northern development.

All I am suggesting to this government is that they live up to their professed principles; that they practise what they preach.

There is one further, but unrelated, matter to that with which I have just dealt, that I wish to advance in the time remaining to me. The secretary of the juvenile and family court in the Porcupine, Mr. Len Bradley, has informed me of a very worthwhile and advanced approach that he, along with Chief of Police Gordon Beacock, of Timmins, have spearheaded and have had adopted in our area. I was so impressed with that which has been done by Mr. Bradley and the Porcupine area's juvenile committee that I feel it advisable to share it with this House with the hope that the whole province might adopt this very worthwhile procedure.

Mr. Justice McRuer in the second volume of his enquiry into civil rights, quite extensively explores the function of the juvenile and family courts in this province; and in the appendix to chapter 40, he examines, in an effort to improve the present situation, both Scottish and American recent developments in the field of the approach to be taken by the state in regard to juvenile offenders. As a novice on this subject I feel that the proposition of Judge Julian Mack in an article of 1909 on the role of the judge in the juvenile and family court, should equally be the concern of all working with juvenile offenders. Judge Mack wrote:

The problem for determination by the judge is not, has this boy or girl committed a specific wrong, but what is he, how has he become what he is, and what had best be done in his interests and in the interest of the state to save him from a downward career.

Such a philosophy of care, concern and rehabilitation should, I believe, be the guiding approach to take to young people in trouble.

In the Kilbrandon report submitted in 1964, which was set up to consider the provisions of the law of Scotland relating to the treatment of juvenile delinquents and juveniles in need of care and protection, or beyond parental control—and in particular the constitution of powers and procedures of the courts dealing with such juveniles—the following recommendations were put forth; and these might be found on pages 574 and 575 of Mr. Justice McRuer's report:

The committee therefore recommended that juvenile panels be established, whose sole function would be the disposition of the proper treatment to the juvenile. The panel would assume jurisdiction only after the juvenile has admitted his guilt, or his guilt has been determined by an appropriate court of law, the sheriff court. The committee noted that, as the basic facts actually were in dispute in only a limited number of cases, referrals to the sheriff court to determine the facts would not be many.

It was recommended, therefore, that all existing juvenile courts be abolished and that all juveniles under the age of 16 should be removed from the criminal courts and come under the jurisdiction of the juvenile panels, which would be empowered to order special measures of education and training according to the needs of the juvenile concerned.

The proposed juvenile panel would not be a court of law. It would be a lay body comprising persons specially qualified with regard to the problems of children. The panel would be a completely independent agency whose members should be appointed by the sheriff. The committee felt that it was essential that the panel always consider the child's need for special measures of education and training and should accordingly be empowered to exercise a continuing jurisdiction over all children referred to it, subject to a statutory upper age limit, and within that period should have the discretion to alter, vary, or terminate the measures initially applied in the light of the child's progress and response.

I suspect, Mr. Speaker, that these recommendations, as applied to our jurisdiction and modified accordingly, would have a good deal of relevance and would lead to improvement in the present state of affairs. At any rate, the existence of a panel something along these lines may be found in the Porcupine, in my riding, and I wish to read for hon. members the report of this Porcupine area juvenile committee from June 1966 to June 1969, since I think there are some very worthwhile insights to be found in this report.

The juvenile committee was formed in June 1966 at the suggestion of the chief of police of the town of Timmins, and with the approval of the local judge. Boys and girls under 16 years of age who appear before this committee come from the town of Timmins, three area townships, which comprise a population of 45,000, and the intervening unorganized territory. There are three police departments involved, which are the Timmins police department, the township of Tisdale police department, and the Ontario Provincial Police.

The committee is made up of a representative from the following organizations: the Porcupine and District Children's Aid Society, the probation office, the police department interested in the case, the welfare administration of the town of Timmins, and the clerk of the provincial court, family division. The committee meets on an average of once a month and more often if necessary. It is noteworthy to point out that practically the same personnel have attended all meetings and there has hardly been an absentee from any of the meetings. Like most innovations, there were some problems to be straightened out but it is now unanimously agreed by all concerned that this committee has been a real asset to the community, and in particular, to the children and families concerned. The reason for the formation of the committee was to hold court appearances by children to a minimum and at the same time give the child greater help than might result from a court appearance.

All children alleged to have committed offences under the Criminal Code of Canada, or statutory offences of local by-laws, are referred to the committee unless the committal of the offence is denied by the child or his parents. In such cases the matter goes directly to court. When a juvenile is suspected of having committed an offence, a copy of the police report is forwarded to the clerk of the judges court, family division. The clerk then visits the home, advises the parent of the offence and extends an invitation to the child and parents to attend the juvenile committee meeting.

The clerk at the same time makes observations concerning the home background. The average parent is most anxious to avoid the child appearing in court and the attendance of one or both parents with the child is close to 100 per cent.

The clerk then forwards a notice to the members of the committee, setting out the names of the child and the parents and the offence committed. Invariably several organizations represented on the committee have files or information concerning the family and any necessary information is taken to the meeting.

The meeting is held as informally as possible in the judge's chambers. The parent or parents and child are called in. A discussion of the child's conduct takes place rather than the fact that an offence was committed by the child. If it is obvious that the child is not going to be referred to the court, suggestions are made concerning supervision of the child, such as curfew, money allowance, companions, hobbies, school conduct and discipline. The committee members make suggestions and usually an atmosphere of co-operation is developed with the parents and child. A plan is then developed to improve the conduct of the child with the entire responsibility of implementing the plan usually given to the parents. If the parents feel they need help, voluntary probation is at times agreed upon. If the home conditions are considered to be the source of the trouble, the children's aid makes an arrangement to visit the home. If the home has insufficient money, the welfare department looks into the matter. If a child is a borderline mental defective—to help such a child—the community resources are explained to the parents. The help this committee gives to the parents and child is varied and constructive.

If the committee shows signs of disagreement concerning a child being sent to court, the parents and child are requested to leave the meeting and a decision is then agreed upon. Such action is followed where the child has been before the committee in the past, or the offence has been of a serious nature such as sexual misbehaviour or the use of drugs.

To finalize a case by the committee, the clerk sends a report to the judge setting out the name of the child, his age, the name and address of the parents, the offence alleged and disposition of same.

The following is a résumé concerning the boys and girls who have come before the juvenile committee from June 1966 to June 1969:

There have been 158 boys and five girls appear before the juvenile committee. 128 of these boys and two girls were left in their own homes with the offer of assistance, if required, by any member of the committee.

Two boys and their parents accepted voluntary probation to the probation office.

It was the decision of the committee that the remaining 28 boys and three girls should appear in juvenile court. Eighteen of these boys and one girl went to training school. Three boys were placed in the care of the children's aid society and seven boys and two girls were placed on probation.

Of the 128 boys and two girls left in their own homes by the committee, only 20 of these boys got into further trouble.

The purpose of the boy or girl and one or both parents appearing before the committee is to avoid, if possible, the boy or girl appearing in court. In some instance when a boy appears in court he is considered a hero among some of his pals. A number of these families appearing before the committee have dealt with one or all of the agencies represented on the committee. In some cases such experiences have not been of a pleasant nature and an antipathy has been developed by the parents against persons in authority. At these committee meetings, the parents soon realize that the members of the committee are simply trying to help them and their child and, if possible, to avoid the child going to court. The attitude of the parents changes to one of co-operation and this is considered by the committee to be one of its greatest achievements.

In my opinion the juvenile committee has been a success. This success may be largely attributed to the clerk of the provincial court, family division, who acts as secretary of the committee, and to all the dedicated members who give unstintingly of their time and their talents for the welfare of the juveniles of this community.

It gives a sense of real pride to read such a report to you, Mr. Speaker. I did have the privilege of sitting in on one of their sessions a week ago. I was impressed with the concern they have to do what is best for the boy or girl concerned. I believe they helped the particular boys and their parents in the various cases that came up, to face up to the seriousness of their actions and the implications of the same, at the same time as they communicated a real interest in the welfare of both parent and child. It seemed to me that they were supportive and that they were saying: "We want to help you and we shall do all we can to see that the community resources are available to you to help you cope with your problems and difficulties." I did not feel that a judgemental or critical attitude was shown, but rather understanding was communicated and notions of punishment were replaced with concepts of care and rehabilitation.

In most instances, when a boy or girl is brought before the committee, the charge or complaint is discussed and the child is dismissed on the first appearance.

The figures which I read are rather impressive—of the 130 that the committee left in their homes in the three-year period, only 20 have been back before them. Some measure of success is indicated.

Furthermore these 110 have been kept from appearing before the judge, and hopefully they have been steered on the right path.

As I say, Mr. Speaker, I am proud of what has been done in my area by this committee and I hope that the Attorney General (Mr. Wishart) will explore the work that it does and the success it has had, so that he may give serious consideration to the introduction of such committees throughout the province.

We northerners have our concern about the problems we face, and the indifference that Queen's Park frequently shows to us in the face of them. But on the other hand we have some good things to offer and we want hon. members to know about them — hon. members in the south—so that they can receive from us. Hopefully, the day will come when we are much more closely involved with one another's problems and concerned to improve each other's lot more so than hitherto has been the case.

Mr. G. Ben (Humber): Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to speak in this debate but I think I should point out that I had not anticipated there would be very much time for a debate and I am not as prepared as I am accustomed to be. In this instance I am just going to be rambling, so I ask the hon. members to forgive me for expressing thoughts that I may have on a variety of topics.

Mr. Speaker, I find it extremely embarrassing to operate in the system that we have introduced into this House on an experimental basis. Too many of us, I think, have discovered that it is impossible to be in two places at the same time, and as a result we are not as familiar with everything that is going on as perhaps we might have been under the old system. Many of us were not always in our seats. We were not always paying attention to what was going on but we had a better idea of the total programme of this Legislature because whatever did go on, did so either in this House or in some committee of which we were members.

Now we find ourselves being unable to appear in both places and the result is that we do not often express ourselves in a place where we should like to express ourselves and do not hear the comments of others on points which impressed us. This is an experiment; I imagine we will decide what we are going to do after we have been following the system for some time, but my own feeling, Mr. Speaker, is that we can go back to the whole procedure and by simply allocating hours to different topics as we have been at the present, we can all be at the same place and all participate in a debate to our hearts' content and still finish the business of the House with dispatch.

So I would suggest that perhaps we learn a lesson from this to the degree that we cannot do a proper job if we are only half here or half some place else and learn to stick to the topic before us and try to avoid repetition and we will be able to carry out the business of the people of the province of Ontario with dispatch.

In this particular regard, Mr. Speaker, I want to just pass a comment about your office. I have sat in embarrassment in this House watching Mr. Speaker being embarrassed. Too many people seem to get some kind of a thrill from embarrassing Mr. Speaker and what they are overlooking is that they are destroying the office and the institution of Mr. Speaker; a person who has played a very important part in our particular form of government down through the ages.

When Mr. Speaker is wrong, he is wrong; and he has been wrong and he knows he has been wrong. In acknowledging that he is not infallible he has admitted here when he has been wrong. Too many times, however, he has been wrong in doing what was right. But he has had to do wrong because the archaic rules under which we operate do make a wrong a right. When this happens, we should not take it out on Mr. Speaker but on the rules. In fact, we should not even take it out on the rules but what we should do is take out such rules.

How are we going to correct this situation?

First of all, I think we should remember that as we sow, so shall we reap. I charge the members sitting on the right of Mr. Speaker to keep in mind that the good Lord has not given them that office in perpetuity and some day, some day, they are going to find themselves in Opposition.

And government members remember that that every time they pass a rule restricting the Opposition, they some day will have to labour under that rule. Too many times rules have been passed in this House; that is, precedents created, which have restricted the members of the Opposition and I say to government members that the day will come when they shall reap what they have sown and are going to be crying that they have been gagged by the very rules which they are today passing.

Hon. A Grossman (Minister of Correctional Services): Can the member point out an instance?

Mr. Ben: Can I point out instances? Many instances in this House: One— all right let me point out one for the Minister. He wants one instance. One of the rules of this House is that if an amendment is passed, members can only restrict themselves to debating the amendment.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Did this government do that?

Mr. Ben: This is a precedent that was passed by—established by—the government.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: It may have been Mitch Hepburn's government, for all the member knows.

Mr. Ben: No, no; the member for Lakeshore (Mr. Lawlor) got up and inadvertently—I trust it was inadvertently—moved an amendment. He did not move the amendment inadvertently. He deliberately moved the amendment, but he was unaware at the time that by so doing he was going to restrict the debate on the amendment and we could not argue the main motion and it was the subject-matter of a lot of argument in this House. This is the rule that was held and this was the argument that we held and I remember the member for Riverdale (Mr. J. Renwick) completely ignored him and went on and we had a heated argument in this House.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: What has that got to do with the government? The rules are the rules of the Legislature.

Mr. Ben: The rules of the Legislature are those passed by the people in power or created by the people in power.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: That is nonsense!

Mr. Ben: You can say that it is nonsense, but this is what we were restricted to.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The hon. member must be thinking about the way they do things in Ottawa.

Mr. Ben: I am not thinking of the way we do things in Ottawa, I am thinking of what happened here and I remember that heated argument we had in this House.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: That is Trudeaucracy!

Mr. Ben: That is an example. So we must do something about this particular aspect. Another thing that disturbs me is the attitude that people are starting to evidence towards government. Starting about 1890, the movement was toward giving more power to government and creating bigger and stronger governments. It started with the Fabians and with people like George Bernard Shaw and others, who felt that the answer to all of mankind's problems was creating powerful governments which would take over all responsibilities and would put big business in their place.

This trend was accelerated with the advent of World War I and during World War II when, in order to carry on the war, the government had to take over more powers and take over the direction of much of what used to be in the private sector. People did not object at that time, they felt the only way to win the war was to give the government absolute power to carry on the struggle.

Unfortunately, once government gets power it is very reluctant to give it up.

World War I was followed by a depression and, again, people like Franklin Delano Roosevelt, with "The New Deal", convinced the public that the only way to cure the depression was to give the government still more powers. We saw the courts in the United States, the Supreme Court, changed and its members, to give effect to the programme or programmes that the "New Deal" introduced and even here in Canada and Britain it was felt that the only way the depression could be halted was by giving economic control, total economic control to the government.

Before the depression ended, we were in a second World War and here we had total mobilization. Again government got bigger. We did not care about it, we gladly gave the government the conduct of almost all human affairs and this continued right through until about 1960.

But starting in the 1960's, people started to have second thoughts about big government and they started to become a little dissatisfied with what big government was doing and what it was not doing. They were not so sure that what was happening was the right thing.

They started talking about my government—that is a phrase you seldom hear these days; they became completely divorced from their government; it became either, "the government" or "that government" or the "Tory government" or the "Liberal government", or just that "damn government".

But how often now do you hear the phrase "my government"? Very seldom!

How often do you hear "I do not like the way the government is spending my money"? It is always the government's money, these days, not, "our government" any more. I see this particularly in young people and it is extremely depressing.

Today government is big, but not strong. It is fat and flabby, it costs much, but it achieves little, promises everything, produces nothing. People are completely disenchanted. They are disenchanted with us as the people in this government. I say in this government, because people just do not put the blame on the people who form the government party. People are dissatisfied with all of us up here at Queen's Park and all of them up on Parliament Hill. They do not trust us now, any more than they trust members over there, and contrary to the opinions of the hon. members to the left, they do not trust them any more than they trust us.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): They trust us!

Mr. Ben: Then the member is living in a fool's paradise when he thinks that they trust him. I wished they trusted somebody.

Mr. M. Makarchuk (Brantford): All you have to do is think about Middlesex South, George.

Mr. Ben: I think about Middlesex South.

Mr. Makarchuk: Yes. As a matter of fact he has been having nightmares over it.

Mr. Ben: I think of Middlesex South and I say to myself, "What possessed them?"

Mr. Speaker, we have to do something to reverse this trend, because these people are justified in what they think. Because government has let the people down. It has ceased to lead them, it has ceased to speak for them and, as a matter of fact, it has even ceased to follow them.

Mr. Makarchuk: It sounds like something from Harrison Hot Springs.

Mr. Ben: The member for Brantford there must have been up at Harrison Hot Springs because he is still full of the hot air. Do you want to talk about Harrison Hot Springs, Mr. Speaker? Let us talk about it. I hold nothing good to say about Harrison Hot Springs. I have never had a high regard for what they call "thinkers". They have their heads so high up in the clouds they have to have somebody else tie their shoelaces, and it is about time some of them came a little closer down to earth and started concerning themselves with the immediate problems, and not with Socrates or Plato's Utopia.

Mr. Makarchuk: What about Trudeau's fat cats?

Mr. Ben: The thinkers' conferences produce the same thing year in and year out, the same kind of hot air that comes from the hon. member for Brantford there.

Mr. D. M. De Monte (Dovercourt): They had a thinkers' conference.

Mr. Ben: Sure they had their thinkers' conference and it produced just as much as Harrison Hot Springs produced and Harrison Hot Springs produced just as much as Kingston produced, and Kingston produced just as much as Montmorency Falls produced.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Ben: Do not apologize, do not apologize.

Mr. Makarchuk: We do not apologize. We are proud of the people who are at our conventions.

Mr. Ben: Regardless of the attitude of the hon. member for Brantford, the people are dissatisfied. The trouble with government these days, and the trouble with us, is that we have been marking time so long on one spot that we have cramped ourselves right up to our neck in our own apathy, and if we are going to get back the confidence of the people, we have got to start taking action and we have got to start taking this action in many different spheres—so many, Mr. Speaker,

I do not know where to start; I do not know if I could even cover a fraction of them.

One thing I will not discuss today is the subject-matter of health because that is going to be dealt with later this week, but there are a lot of other things that we could discuss. Let us start on municipal affairs for example.

I had to laugh when I was watching this confrontation as they call it between Mayor Givens and Pierre Elliott Trudeau — between "sir" and "go-go" there.

Mr. H. Peacock (Windsor West): Why is it fashionable to denigrate the member's federal leader?

Mr. Makarchuk: Which one is which?

Mr. Ben: It struck me as strange that Phil Givens, who had been mayor of the largest, or second-largest, metropolis in Canada, had not been able to grasp the problem.

On the other hand the Prime Minister did not have a clue either as to the problem of the cities.

Givens argues that the federal government should do more for the cities, that the cities are the big thing these days and this came from Colin Vaughan, an architect, and a real bright boy.

The Prime Minister on the other hand argues that it is a constitutional problem, and it is not the problem of the federal government, but the problem of a provincial government.

Well, I think, with all due respect to those two illustrious gentlemen of the same political faith as I, that they are both well off the mark.

Mr. Makarchuk: They should have soaked their heads in the hot springs in other words.

Mr. Ben: The problem of the cities does not need money from the federal government or from the provincial government to be solved. A city is much like an individual; it has a heart, a soul, a brain. It does things, so it must have arms. They say a city is moving in this direction or that, so it must have legs or some means of locomotion. I imagine it must have a circulatory system and that circulatory system is operated by money and brains and desires and goals and ambitions, but predominantly money. And, like a body, it can create blood to keep the circulatory system going; like a body, it can create it to the degree that you can take blood out and give it to somebody else who needs it; and if you are short of blood somebody else can put it in your veins to keep you going.

So what has been going on with our cities is that the federal government and this government have been draining this life-blood out of its cities from the one arm, faster than it could be replenished by the city itself or by transfusions that are being given in the other arm.

So I say, Mr. Speaker, we do not have to go crying to Ottawa for more money or blood, or to this government. All we have to do is ask them not to take so much out of us, and if they take less out of us we will be able to manage fine. I become extremely incensed when I read that Ottawa has a $400 million or a $500 million budget surplus for the first five or six or seven months, whatever the case may be, when I have to consider that about 40 per cent of that surplus came out of Metro Toronto. And while Metro Toronto is being made anaemic by all this blood being drained out of it, Ottawa has a surplus; and if they give you some back, they say, "Well, we are giving you the blood of life."

We need the blood in the metropolitan areas because we are being drained almost white by the higher levels of government and if they leave more for us we will be able to generate enough to look after our own needs and give some to others also. So I would like to see both this government and the federal government just take a little less from the cities so that we will not have to cry for so much from you people here.

In so far as the cities are concerned again—and I have to speak from that particular point of view since I am a city dweller—I have to consider the treatment the aged are receiving.

I do not know where we parted with the Judeo-Christian concept of "Honour thy father and thy mother". But somehow, somewhere, that got lost, and today the philosophy seems to be, "Get rid of the old goats as soon as you can because they are just a hindrance". And they will do it for any reason at all. Reasons just crop up left, right and centre, why we should get rid of, or isolate, our aged; our parents, our grandparents.

The strange part about it, Mr. Speaker, is that every time we come up with a reason it is ostensibly for their own good, that we have to have them with their peers, or the children are too much for them, or they are getting old and they cannot walk stairs anymore, or what would happen if we left them alone and they fell and hurt themselves—we always use compassionate reasons for shuffling them off some place, isolating them. Today, the word retirement is almost becoming equated with uselessness. We send them out in to the boondocks and to the very fancy senior citizens homes—oh, they are beautiful, lovely, but the people are lonely. They are rejected. As a matter of fact I was thinking of Handel's "Messiah" and that one part "he was despised and rejected", and this is what is happening to our old people.

Mr. Shulman: Sing it all!

Mr. Ben: I wish I could sing it all, it is very nice. But this is the way we are treating them. I do not know why. We worry about crime in the streets, but why not, what can we expect? We do not train our children any more the way we used to. Why? Because the grandparents are not around to do it.

Mr. Makarchuk: How about singing the amen chorus and sitting down?

Mr. Shulman: Sing the whole speech, the member has a beautiful voice.

Mr. Ben: Well, I thank the hon. member for High Park. At least it is an acknowledgement that perhaps I do something well.

Mr. Makarchuk: Has the member checked with the Toronto Opera Company?

Mr. Ben: Although I must admit I carried that last tune about as far as I can carry any tune.

Mr. Makarchuk: Maybe the Mendelssohn choir? They would consider the hon. member.

Mr. Ben: Yes, they do need someone to carry the tuning fork.

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): If the member wants to go mod, he should bring his guitar!

Mr. Ben: I think that hon. member must have the g-string in mind.

At any rate, Mr. Speaker, we have lost the three-generation unit. How many three-generation families do you find these days? Perhaps in the ethnic group of my colleague behind me there, the hon. member for Dovercourt. You still find among the Italians, God bless them, a tendency to have three generations in one house. The Jewish communities used to have that until all of a sudden they decided to build that beautiful home up there in north Toronto—what is the name of the place?—Bayview.

Speaking about Bayview, there was a fairly interesting article in the Commentary of March 1969, "Among the Ancient", by Dorothy Rabinowitz, and what a revealing article. The insight that this woman had into how our senior citizens are dealt with and the excuses given. If I may be permitted, Mr. Speaker, I just want to read a few paragraphs to give you one example—I do not know if it is Mrs. or Miss Dorothy Rabinowitz—she writes it anyway:

One woman, a social worker, explained to me that she wanted her mother to enter the Home so that she could be with her peers, of whom she had few living out at Queens in an apartment she had taken to be near her daughter [this is Queens in New York].

One knew, looking at the old woman, precisely how much peers would mean to her particularly in the face of separation from her daughter and grandchildren.

How many peers would there be? Everyone around her. Some 500 which is a very great number of peers to have, even if one knows or one wants them. Her daughter explained: "She has no one of her own age to spend time with. What can she do with the time all day rattling around in an apartment? When she had children it was different. I cannot spend so much time with her. I cannot imagine what she can find to do. She does not complain. All I know is, I cannot rest with her sitting there."

I am going to skip some parts of this. I want to get over to where the mother was asked what she did because she had a number of answers here.

The mother is enjoying herself — she was shopping, she was painting house, she was looking after the children, she was going out talking to her neighbours, she was having coffee parties. But the daughter, who wanted to get rid of her and have her with her peers, felt that was the answer. Her mother, in her opinion, was not happy even though she was cooking, even though she was shopping, even though she was washing clothes, even though she was looking after the children, even though she was going to these different meetings because she was not doing it with her peers. So off she goes to this home which this Dorothy Rabinowitz describes as one like the Bayview Home. What happens to these people?

Everything is organized for them. One sign painter there wanted to paint some signs. They would not let him because that was work—they had to call in a sign painter. This fellow had been a sign painter all his life and he wanted to paint some signs for them. No, they had to get a sign painter. He was not permitted to paint signs because painting signs was not one of the therapeutic programmes they have there.

Another woman did fancy needlework. Again it was not part of the therapeutic programme and she could not do that. But everybody felt they were doing their parents a great big favour shuffling them off to these homes.

Well, in some instances maybe they are, but I often wonder to myself how frequently are the wishes of the parents followed. Today in Toronto we have a huge development project stymied, stopped dead, because the residents refuse to have anything done in their area unless it is done according to their wishes and they are consulted.

That may be the way to go about it but it strikes me that very few senior citizens, very few of our parents or grandparents, are consulted as to their desires before we shuffle them off to some senior citizens home. As a matter of fact, I always thought it really strange that you could tell where a person was going by the name.

If it is a subsidized housing project we call it a park—Moss Park, Regent Park. If it has the word "park" in it, you can bet your bottom dollar it is a subsidized housing unit. If it is an old-age home, well, it is Lambert Lodge, McLaughlin Lodge — we label them. Oh, we are great, you know, we are all heart, and label them.

Mr. E. W. Sopha (Sudbury): It is an age of labels.

Mr. Ben: It is an age of labels, absolutely, an age of labels and abbreviations. At least if sometimes they would change the name and call it Kipling Valhalla or something of the sort, instead of always a lodge, park or manor. That really gripes me.

Now, what are we going to do about the aged? Well, I think the first thing we have to do is teach ourselves again to honour our father and our mother and their father and mother and teach our children perhaps to honour us. Another thing we might do is pay a parent bonus as we pay a baby bonus. We can pay a bonus to people who look after their parents and look after their parents in their homes, not out in the boon-docks.

Another thing we could do is buy up a lot of these large homes that used to be occupied by rich big families and give them at a reduced rental to three-generation families, large families. As a matter of fact, if we did this we might need less day nurseries because grandparents seem to have a sort of expertise at babysitting when we need babysitters. When we do not need babysitters they do not know anything about children, but when we need them, boy, there is no one like grandparents to babysit.

Or if we cannot find these big homes for big families and there is not room for the parents in a home that already has children and grandchildren in it, the least we can do is try to keep our parents and grandparents in the neighbourhood. We could buy or build accommodations or hostels which would not be huge high-rises but would hold at the most a dozen or two dozen couples who grew up in the area and whose families were still in the area, so that they could always feel they are still part not only of the human race but of their own immediate family.

We spend a great deal of money on recreation facilities for the young. Why then should there not be recreation facilities for the old? If we put up ice rinks in the parks, as we do in the city of Toronto, for people to use free of charge—

Mr. Shulman: We put up Legislatures for the old!

Mr. Ben: Why can we not, for example—and I am not trying to restrict it to this, but for example—construct bowling greens, lawn bowling greens, in the same parks that our elderly could use without having to belong to the local lawn bowling clubs.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Ben: Yes, we can build Boccia courts!

We should be able to build lawn bowling courts, and that is just one example. And I would not want it to be restricted to that one example.

An hon. member: What about chess tables?

Mr. Ben: Even chess tables!

As a matter of fact, we can even have recreational facilities geared to all ages. What I like to see is dances for our elderly where the youngsters act as chaperones, and where the elderly have no children or their children have moved away long distances, we could have for them, in each area in each community, what I, for want of a better word, would call a retirement retreat, where the couples can live in small—

Mr. Shulman: Retirement Acres!

Mr. Ben: There you go.

We have acres and acres of the type we have been discussing. I advocate a retirement retreat where couples can live in small cottages, or, if they please, small apartment units. Again, not high rise, but small apartment units.

Those who want to live out their days in their own homes I think, should be able to do so and should be relieved of education taxes. As a matter of fact, perhaps they can even be relieved, after they attain a certain age, of the taxes for general purposes.

If these people have a large income you can be sure that either Mr. Benson, or Mr. White, our own Minister of Revenue, is going to take it out of them one way or another, and since the change in The Estate Tax Act they are going to get it—well, they are not going to take it with them anyway.

Mr. Sopha: No profits in the stock.

Mr. Ben: So why do we not do something about it, and why do we not do something about it now?

Now, that is just one. I was talking about one segment of the population. Perhaps I should go to the very other extreme, our youth. I make it a practice, Mr. Speaker, when students from my riding come to visit us in this Legislature, where time and circumstances permit, to meet with them and let them throw questions to me, and frankly, Mr. Speaker, I am becoming more and more pleased with the awareness that these young people have of current events and current affairs, and the desire to be even more informed. The federal government has made known its intention of reducing the voting age to 18 and I can only hope that this government will follow suit, and follow suit soon.

Their opinions of us, Mr. Speaker, may not necessarily be too pleasing to ourselves. I find that many of them feel that we are hypocrites. We talk out of both sides of our mouths, we do not practise what we preach, and we tell them to be truthful but the white lie is the current mode. They believe that as legislators we would not do for a driver of a Volkswagen what we would do for somebody who drives a Rolls-Royce and that, because we accept campaign contributions which originate from business sources, or other sources such as unions, we are bought by the givers and are only their puppets. Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, that last aspect of it will be wiped out if we do reform our election practice and let our election expenses to a set limit, be paid out of the consolidated revenue, under the conditions that we have discussed in this House many, many times.

Youth must learn, Mr. Speaker, and most of the time we can teach youth what it must learn, but sometimes youth must learn in its own way and it is our duty to protect our youth against itself while it learns in its own way.

I am afraid that these days we do not give youth enough responsibility. We always seem to be putting blocks in their way. I was thinking today of the seniority system that prevails in unions. The purpose was to protect a man from arbitrary dismissal as he grew older and, some people believed, less efficient in his job. Frankly, I always felt that through seniority you acquired a certain skill which more than made up for speed, that what they lacked in speed they made up in accuracy. But it also seems to be a block to our youth.

Who is laid off first when there is a recession in the factory? Those with the least seniority, the youngest, who need the job the most because they have started a family. They have started a family, and bought furniture on payments, they have bought a house on payments, they have young children they have to raise, no savings whatsoever, and they are the first ones that are thrown out. I am not suggesting for one minute, Mr. Speaker, that older people should be thrown out of their jobs in those circumstances, but I do suggest that it is an onerous burden to bear knowing that if anything goes wrong you are the first to go. We must find some kind of a system or correct this, what to me, is an evil.

I think perhaps one way of making these youngsters better prepared is to give them a couple of years of what I call national service. Not military service, Mr. Speaker, national service. I believe that our youth should be given an opportunity to get to know our country better, and to get a better appreciation of what makes it tick and what makes it grow, and to blend the—well, I was going to say the two cultures, people call it two cultures, I think it is one culture—

Mr. D. A. Paterson (Essex South): Multi-cultures!

Mr. Ben: Multi-cultures together. I had the pleasure of serving in 425 Squadron, it was called the Alouette Squadron of the RCAF. It was a French-Canadian squad and I served in one of the two crews on that squadron, at the time I was there, that were totally non-French speaking.

Mr. Sopha: His name was Benoit at that time.

Mr. Ben: And many—

Mr. Sopha: George Benoit.

Mr. Ben: And many of the people, many non-French speakers, had a chance to learn French by being stationed in the province of Quebec, and many people of French descent in Quebec had an opportunity to learn English by being stationed outside of the province of Quebec. We are trying to become bilingual, Mr. Speaker, and I think if we had this national service scheme, we would soon become not only bilingual but practically bilingual—and perhaps my friend from Sudbury will correct me if it is practically or practicably bilingual.

Not only that, but we might be able to utilize the energy, the desires, that these young people have to change a lot of our deplorable conditions, to correct them.

I do not for one minute denigrate the good work that these people are doing in other countries, nor do I for one minute suggest that we should not be sending our young people to countries that are just emerging and that need assistance. But there is the saying that "one should remove the beam from his own eye before he would remove the mote from somebody else's," and it might be a good opportunity to clean up our own backyard before we send our people out to clean somebody else's. So I think that this would have some effect.

There are many things that these young Canadians could do. For example, they could construct hostels throughout Canada. They could construct nature trails and this is aside from just cleaning up a lot of slums—that would be the first task. But they could do a lot of these things.

And speaking of hostels, Mr. Speaker, I deplore the lack of hostels for our youth throughout the country. I asked the hon. Minister of—I think it is economics and development now. The department names change so frequently, I cannot recall what the correct name is—it is Trade and Industry now. Thanks.

Mr. E. Dunlop (York-Forest Hill): Trade and Development!

Mr. Ben: Well, Trade and Development (Mr. Randall)—it was changed last week again, was it?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Ben: Last week, I asked if he had given consideration to purchasing Rochdale College and turning it into a hostel and he said he had not considered that at all. Our hon. friend from Scarborough West (Mr. Lewis), who is not here with us this evening, interjected that that is what it is being used for at the present time. I guess if that is what it was, it certainly is not being used for a college.

Mr. De Monte: How about a zoo?

Mr. Ben: But the fact—well my colleague here, I think, is being facetious as was the hon. Minister of—what is it, Trade and Development or economics and development?—when he said that they should take butterfly nets in there, but I think they would be most—

Mr. De Monte: Trade and Development!

Mr. Ben: Trade and Development, thank you.

I think it would be most advantageous to future generations, if we did buy some of the buildings like that and turn them into hostels. At least it would be taking a step forward.

I just want to mention, in passing, the problem we are having with drugs—marijuana, amphetamine, LSD. There seems to be a trend afoot to legalize the use of some of these drugs for the simple reason that we are prosecuting people who use them. That would be the same as saying that we ought to legalize driving while one's ability is impaired because we are giving people records for doing it. I think we ought to find what causes our young people to take these drugs, if there is a reason for it and cure the cause, not just cover up the results.

I am rather baffled by people who subscribe to the theory that if we cannot prove these drugs are harmful, they ought to be permitted to sell. I always thought that our attitude toward drugs being sold to the public was, "You prove that the drugs are safe, you prove that the drugs are harmless, before we will let you sell them". But all of a sudden, for this particular type of drug, they are trying to convince us that we ought to use the reverse philosophy. Well, Mr. Speaker, I do not like that.

Mr. Speaker, I was saying to you that when it comes to drugs, we have to go and find the cause for their use. I do not profess to know what the cause is and I would be thankful to any member of the House who could pinpoint the causes, but I could suggest to this House at least one cause, and that is, inadequate housing. And inadequate housing is usually accompanied by poverty or poverty is usually accompanied by inadequate housing.

And it disturbs me that in an affluent age, in an affluent country, we still have inadequate housing. We just do not seem to realize the price that we pay for inadequate substandard housing. Our children are perpetually prejudiced by the lack of adequate housing, which usually denotes a poor environment. My colleague, the hon. member for Scarborough East (Mr. T. Reid) in speaking on the estimates of The Department of Education said, "More money should be spent to educate certain groups of children to give them a headstart, the poor children," and I applaud the intent of my colleague's statement.

However, research in the United States, where they did have or still have a headstart programme, indicated that although it did give a child a better start, because of the poor environment in which that child remained, it soon ran out of steam and fell behind. It does little good to feed all this learning into the child, under pressure you might say, when he had no opportunity whatsoever to put into practice much of what he was being taught, because his environment made no provision for the practice. So in the United States they are giving second thought to this. They are now discovering that a headstart programme without a modification of the environment to go along with the headstart programme has very little long-range effect. We must heed the lesson that they learned in the United States, and we must start changing the environment in which people live and changing it for the better and only then will the money we spent on these headstart programmes begin to pay off. And one of the ways of changing the environment, Mr. Speaker, is to create better housing, and do it quickly.

Mr. Speaker, I do not believe we should be demolishing so many existing dwellings. In Toronto, most of our fancy high rises are going into the most desirable residential areas where you already have the best stock of housing. Where they should be building these high rise apartments, if that is what they want to build—and I have great misgivings about the advisability of constructing high rise buildings—where they should be building them is in the areas that need redevelopment: Trefann Court, Don Mount or over the unoccupied spaces where the railroad yards are at the present time along our waterfront and also along Parkdale, all along the St. Helen's area, again along the railway yards, or out in Mimico where we have—I forget how many—hundreds of acres; or on the reformatory land out in Mimico and New Toronto and not where there is already good housing.

Another way we could preserve our housing stock is to encourage our senior citizens to rent out their excess space and not discourage them, as we are now doing, by the Toronto minimum standards of housing by-law. This by-law, you might say, Mr. Speaker, was intended to make houses warmer for the tenants. I think it has had the effect of burning them to the ground. What it is doing is imposing today's standards on yesterday's houses, and yesterday's houses are not unsafe, Mr. Speaker, simply because they do not have two convenience outlets in every room. They are still good housing. They are still safe housing even though a galvanized eavestrough is not painted. And yet, under the by-law, every surface must be painted or preserved. So if you used galvanized material, which is galvanized to prevent erosion, you have to nevertheless cover it with a coat of paint.

Do you know, Mr. Speaker, that under this minimum standards of housing by-law, of the city of Toronto, if you were to have aluminum siding on your house you would have to paint it even though now it comes in colours, because this by-law says you must paint all metal and wood surfaces.

If they only concern themselves with seeing that every dwelling was up to the standard to which it was constructed in the first instance, much of our existing housing stock could be preserved. I do not know how much was destroyed in the city of Toronto to date because of this by-law, but last time it was close to 500 dwellings. This was not for replacement, but simply destroyed because the owner felt that he was not going to spend $5,000, $6,000 or $7,000 to fix up the house because he would never get his money back.

Another way that we can relieve the situation—that is the shortage of living accommodation—is to be a little more broadminded as to how we supply this housing. For example, a government need not necessarily buy or lease or build a whole building. It can lease parts of it, just apartments in these buildings, and subsidize the tenants. I deplore the construction of these ghettos which are occupied exclusively by people whose rents are being subsidized, or almost exclusively by people whose rents are being subsidized. Why? Because it is attaching a sort of a stigma to poverty, and that is another thing that I deplore.

There seems to be a stigma attached to poverty. Some people say that we should eradicate poverty and that we are going to eradicate poverty and that we will eradicate poverty. Well, I do not believe it, Mr. Speaker. I believe in the scripture that poverty is ever going to be with us, but I believe that what we can do, Mr. Speaker, is remove or relieve the evils of poverty, alleviate the suffering which people living in poverty have to go through. I do not think poverty ought to be equated with suffering. Many people are impoverished, are poor, because the good Lord just did not see fit to give them all the faculties which he was prepared to give to us—

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Come on, the member is running out of steam.

Mr. Ben: —most of us, Mr. Speaker, for I exclude my friend over there.

Mr. C. Bukator (Niagara Falls): Does the member include the NDP—their group?

Mr. Ben: I was going to, but after that interjection I do not know.

There are many ways we can do this, Mr. Speaker, but I note that the hour—

Mr. Speaker: Would the hon. member wish to adjourn the debate before he starts on the other matters, or is he going to complete it within the next few minutes?

Mr. Ben moves the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps there is someone on the government side of the House who would deal with the next order of business?

Hon. R. S. Welch (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, before moving the adjournment of the House I would like to indicate that the Minister of University Affairs (Mr. Davis) will submit his estimates for the consideration of the committee of supply tomorrow.

Hon. Mr. Welch moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 10:30 o'clock p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1969

The House met at 2.00 o'clock, p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: Today we have visitors with us in the east gallery from the King George Public School, Guelph; and in the west gallery students from Kawartha Lakes School in Lindsay, and the Canadian Citizenship Centre, Rawlinson Senior Public School, Toronto.

Statements by the Ministry.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): Mr. Speaker, on a point of personal privilege. There is an article in today's press, sir, which states that an employee of The Department of Public Works has been fired, presumably under the suspicion that he had supplied information to me. As a matter of privilege and in defence of this man, I wish to point out I have never met this man nor has he supplied me with any information whatsoever. Any of the information I brought to this House came from entirely different sources. I think it is very important that the Minister should not victimize those who are not guilty.

Hon. J. R. Simonett (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, on a point of personal privilege, I might say that I was not the one who made the statement that he carried information to the hon. member for High Park.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Did the Minister fire him?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Well, that is another case. We are talking about one thing now. The member for York South is talking about another. I might say that I talked to Mr. Greenslade yesterday afternoon and of course there was nothing said by me that indicated we accused him of carrying information to anyone.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Minister of Revenue.

Hon. J. H. White (Minister of Revenue): I would like to announce a change in the retail sales tax regulations affecting bazaars and rummage sales, which will be welcomed, I think, by all members.

At one time these sales were exempted from retail sales tax completely, but this exemption was exploited to the extent that some control became necessary to protect legitimate commercial outlets. This control was achieved by restricting the exemption to those bazaars and rummage sales held by religious, charitable or benevolent organizations at which the total receipts did not exceed $500. Experience has proven that this amount is now unduly restrictive to those charitable activities which are increasing each year in this province in number and in volume of sales. For that reason I am pleased to inform the House that the exemption will be raised from $500 to $5,000 of total sales. This change will become effective on December 1, 1969.

Mr. Speaker: Oral questions.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Premier (Mr. Roberts). I want to know if he is undertaking an investigation into the administration of The Department of Public Works. Secondly, I want to know how long he is going to permit the unorthodox flow of information from his government departments on the part of the so-called spies of the member for High Park rather than a free flow of information to this House. I believe it has become ridiculous that this department and some others are completely disrupted by the activities of one member in this House and the fact that his government members are not prepared—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Nixon: —to give a free flow of information here. He can sit there and let it go, but we cannot.

Mr. MacDonald: The member is complaining because the Liberal Party was not contacted.

Mr. Nixon: We would like to have some information from the Prime Minister about this matter.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, on a matter of privilege.

Mr. Nixon: Oh, sit down.

Mr. Shulman: On a matter of privilege, the leader of the Opposition said I had spies in the department. I wish to make very clear, sir, that I have placed no one in this department. There are a number of disaffected employees who are so unhappy about the present administration of the department that they have been bringing me a great deal of information voluntarily, sir.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Nixon: It hurts me to see this administration fall apart under these circumstances. Surely the government has some responsibility to examine the administration of, particularly, the department that is under discussion at the present time. Surely the Prime Minister can give use some assurance that business is going on over there in some rational way.

Hon. J. P. Robarts (Prime Minister): This slight outburst of temper, Mr. Speaker, on the part of the leader of the Opposition will be dealt with in a somewhat quieter manner. There is no—

Mr. Nixon: Yes, well let us have some action!

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. Robarts: There is no indication that anybody is spying in The Department of Public Works. The Minister in charge of that department will deal, through his Deputy, with the employees in the department as the employees of every other department of this government are dealt with.

Now, I hope the hon. leader of the Opposition will not panic over a newspaper story. If he were to address a question to the Minister concerned, no doubt he could find out what, in fact, happened to this particular employee, but certainly, I think the Minister is quite competent and able to run his department.

These matters occur, we cannot put a muzzle on every public servant. We have about 50,000 civil servants and they have, I suppose, rights as well as everybody else. Just allow us to run the department and we will do it properly.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary question. In view of the fact that both the Minister and the member for High Park gave misleading information to this House yesterday, then surely the responsibility passes from the Minister to the Prime Minister in the events that have been discussed in the last two days. The Premier accuses me of responding in a pique of fury, or something like that. I would accuse him of renegeing on his responsibility to keep that administration working—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Nixon: —on a balanced basis. So I return to the question, is the—

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Nixon: I have a question. Is the Minister on a point of order?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: The hon leader of the Opposition—

Mr. Nixon: Is he on a point of order?

Mr. Speaker: A point of order.

Hon. Mr. Simonett: The hon. leader of the Opposition said that yesterday I made a statement misleading this House. I would like to know what that statement was.

Mr. Nixon: It had to do with the number of fires at the Centennial centre.

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Mr. Speaker, perhaps to clarify this, I was asked yesterday had there been any fire in the buildings in the science centre? My answer was, no. There was a flash fire caused by a spark from a welding torch hitting a screen, and that was a very small fire. I suppose it destroyed the screen. To me that is not a fire in a building that would destroy the building.

Mr. Nixon: All right, I would like to put a question to the Minister of Public Works if I might, Mr. Speaker. What action is he taking in view of the resignations and dismissals from his department to bring the administration of Public Works back into some order so that a free flow of information is coming to this House rather than through the rather tortuous channels that are used by the member for High Park?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Mr. Speaker, that is pretty hard for me to answer. Some of the rumours are brought in here by other members in this House. We have a gentleman who retired, superannuated at 60 years old and who was director of the safety department. The man in question worked for him, until three weeks ago, and had nothing to do with what has happened in this House. We found some of his reports did not appear quite the way they should. We questioned him about them. We know what the problem is. The man was suspended for three weeks. It will be three weeks tomorrow. He had a hearing last Thursday with the Deputy Minister.

I do not need to tell the members what happened here last Thursday night and I am not saying whether it was this gentleman in question or where the information came from. But I looked at the report yesterday morning and I think this man will be dismissed. He has the opportunity to grieve. He has 21 days to do that, where he can present his case with counsel or without. We will present the case of Public Works representing the government of the province of Ontario and the people of Ontario.

Mr. Nixon: It looks like this department needs some cleaning-up. Who is going to undertake that? When is the Minister going to undertake that? What could be more interrogative than that?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: What am I doing now? I do not understand what the hon. leader of the Opposition is getting at. If we find someone in our department—or in a department that I am responsible for—who will not follow the rules and regulations laid down by government, then I think it is up to us to either dismiss, suspend or take whatever action should be taken depending on the particular case.

Mr. Nixon: All right. I will accept that. A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, to the Minister of Public Works. Can he now tell the Legislature whether or not the system for safety control has been changed in his department, as charged by the member for High Park yesterday?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: No, Mr. Speaker, there has been no change as far as the safety groups are concerned in our department, other than that we are reorganizing the department. They will report to another director, but the safety groups will still act and perform the same duties as they have in the past.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary question. The charges made by the member for High Park are erroneous; is that true?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Right.

Mr. Nixon: They are erroneous.

Mr. Speaker: I think there need be no further supplementary questions on this particular topic. It is developing into an argumentative debate which is not the purpose of this question period.

Mr. Shulman: I would like to ask a supplementary, Mr. Speaker. My question is: Was there a meeting yesterday morning at 9.00 o'clock with the Deputy, Mr. Hillier, at which time all those present were informed that the safety department was being disbanded and the members being dispersed to various units around the province?

Hon. R. S. Welch (Provincial Secretary): He asked that yesterday.

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Mr. Speaker, the answer is no. I just explained to the hon. leader of the Opposition that there might have been a meeting yesterday morning of our directors advising them the safety departments were going to come under a new director as we had reorganized the department, but not to disband the safety group as a safety group.

Mr. Shulman: Who is the new director?

Mr. Speaker: I would rule there be no further supplementary questions of this topic.

Mr. Shulman: But, sir, the hon. leader of the Opposition has questioned my integrity.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. If everybody in this House asked six supplementary questions which added up to a statement of a case ending with a conclusion, that would be regarded as a speech. Indeed, some members of this House, if they ask a second supplementary question, are cut off. The leader of the Opposition is not in a privileged position in this House and I would request that the same laws and rules that are applied to others be applied to him.

Mr. Speaker: That is exactly the manner in which I have been trying to handle this situation. The question was directed to the Prime Minister. It seems to me that answers were provided to the best of the Prime Minister's ability under the circumstances, also by the hon. Minister of Public Works. Complete and further interrogation, in my opinion, will result in nothing more than an argumentative debate. There was no restriction on the hon. member for High Park. He has risen on a point of privilege and had risen on a point of order, and these were permitted. I think there should be no further supplementary questions in this respect.

Mr. Shulman: Sir, you are unfair.

Mr. MacDonald: One moment, if I may—at least five supplementary questions were permitted by the leader of the Opposition. Why cannot two supplementary questions be permitted by the man who is being pilloried by the leader of the Opposition?

Mr. Speaker: It seems to me that further supplementary questions can elicit no further information than has already been given.

Mr. Shulman: If you would just hear my supplementary question before you rule it out of order, Mr. Speaker. Sir, the question I was asking—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I have suggested to the hon. members that in my opinion the matter has been thoroughly and fully explored. I think that the question period is a period of time in which all members have the opportunity to gain information. I do not think there should be any restriction on any hon. members on the proper orderly supplementary questions. If the hon. member for High Park feels he has an important point I will permit him one more supplementary question.

Mr. Shulman: My question is very simple. What is the name of the new head of the safety department?

Mr. Speaker: Would the hon. Minister of Public Works like to answer that question?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Mr. Speaker, there will be a new organization chart out within the next three days or next week, and I will see the hon. member gets one.

Mr. Shulman: Does the Minister not know the name of the head of the safety department?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Maybe we have not made a decision yet. Give us time to make a decision.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, if there are no further supplementary questions, I have a further question of the Prime Minister. Has he been in consultation with the government of Canada over the requirement that $75 million in insurance will be required for our atomic facilities associated with Ontario Hydro?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: No, I have not, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary question. Is the Premier aware that this is before the Parliament of Canada now, and if so, does he intend to make any submissions to the committee that would be discharging its responsibilities?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: I believe I read the same news report in the morning paper the leader of the Opposition read, Mr. Speaker, and we will take what action we consider necessary as the situation develops.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York South is next in the questions.

Mr. MacDonald: I have a question of the Minister of Lands and Forests. In view of the availability of canal land because of the twinning of the Welland Canal, has the Minister made any approaches to Ottawa to discover what the disposition of this land is going to be and whether or not it can be incorporated into a provincial park?

Hon. R. Brunelle (Minister of Lands and Forests): Mr. Speaker, in reply to the hon. leader of the NDP we have had discussions with the St. Lawrence Seaway Commission as recently as last month. This matter is very active; it has been discussed at the second last meeting of the parks integration board, and it is coming up at one of the next meetings. Though this whole question is quite a complex one, and has quite a large area involved, we are pursuing it with the St. Lawrence Seaway Commission.

Mr. MacDonald: By way of a supplementary question: Are the present discussions considering canal land that was made available some years ago in the city of St. Catharines and which is today a great source of pollution?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Speaker, I could not answer this point specifically. I would say that the whole matter of the old canal and the new canal is being discussed as a total package.

Mr. MacDonald: When can people in the community expect to know something of the direction in which the government might move?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Speaker, I would hope that we may have some information, maybe, within the next month or two.

Mr. MacDonald: I have a question of the Minister of Municipal Affairs. In view of the admission by a number of candidates in the municipal election in Ottawa that they have been offered funds for their campaigns by developers and the admission by some that they have accepted such funds, is the Minister contemplating the proclamation of regulations which will make it necessary for a public audit of the source and amount of campaign funds at the municipal level?

Hon. W. D. McKeough (Minister of Municipal Affairs): No, I do not think it is necessary, Mr. Speaker, to do this. I am not aware of the reports from Ottawa at all. I have not seen the Ottawa papers for some days. I am aware of reports in the Toronto papers which indicate a certain amount of support for various candidates, financial and otherwise, and I do not think it is necessary to investigate these things.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Correctional Services): Support for all parties?

Mr. MacDonald: As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, the interjection prompts me to indicate by way of a question: Will the government move on this now so we will know where it is true and where it is not true? In other words, just let the truth out. Will the government move?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Mr. Speaker, we know that this is a great source of concern to the member. We wonder which union he is getting his money from.

Mr. MacDonald: That is publicly known, Mr. Speaker, and I will give the Minister an audited statement on it.

Mr. J. Renwick (Riverdale): This cloak of secrecy around this government will destroy it.

Mr. MacDonald: Right.

Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Attorney General. Has the Attorney General been approached by Kahntineta Horn with the contention that in both the original arrest and in the subsequent trials here, civil rights were seriously violated following the incidents in the Cornwall area earlier this past year?

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Minister of Justice): I do not recall that I have been, Mr. Speaker. I think there was a letter some three months ago. I am not certain of the content of it at the moment. I will look it up and let the hon. member know. I have had correspondence with Kahntineta Horn, some of it as long ago as two years, but I do not think it relates to this matter the member is speaking of.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that she had made representations to the federal Minister of Justice, who says that it is a provincial matter, would the Minister accept a copy of the letter that went to the federal Minister and act on it since it falls within his jurisdiction?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I most certainly would be glad to receive the letter, Mr. Speaker. If it calls for action, we will certainly follow it up.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey South.

Mr. E. A. Winkler (Grey South): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Lands and Forests. Have the officials of his department seized wild animals, particularly wolves, from the wildlife park operators of the Georgian Bay Tourist Association? If so, would he have them returned so they may retain them for public viewing?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Speaker, in reply to the hon. member for Grey South, I would say that if the municipality wishes to establish a municipal zoo with the animals in question—the wolves—we would be pleased to grant a permit to a municipal zoo at the request of the township.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Mr. Speaker, a supplementary question. One of our zoo-keepers is in court on Monday morning for holding a wolf more than ten days, although the Minister's men knew—all summer he had this. So they laid the charge after the season was over and a letter from the Minister to the operators says that a wolf is not educational. That is why it cannot—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member should pose the question.

Mr. Sargent: Would the Minister advise why he says a wolf is not educational? He had one in his exhibit at the Royal Winter Fair in the Lands and Forests exhibit. Secondly, clause (b) of the Act says that if it is for educational purposes they may be held in these zoos. So I would like to ask the Minister if he would review the situation and cancel the charges made against Donald Blair in Owen Sound because I think there has been an injustice here.

Mr. Speaker: I think perhaps the question is proper, although I do not believe it is supplementary to the original question.

Mr. Sargent: Well, I wanted to question him.

Mr. Speaker: We will permit the question as a question from the member.

Mr. Sargent: I will permit it, yes.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Speaker, I would say to the hon. member that I am in sympathy and that I can assure him that no charges will be laid if the township will make application to us as a municipal zoo, as a public zoo—

Mr. Sargent: They cannot do that.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: —because it is contrary to The Game and Fish Act to keep certain animals in captivity, mainly wolves.

Mr. Sargent: Sorry about that. The Minister is wrong; clause (b) says they can do it.

Mr. Speaker: Order. It must be a question, or a supplementary question.

Mr. Sargent: Will the Minister look into it?

An hon. member: You are going to be a wolf in sheep's clothing if you do not watch out.

Mr. Sargent: I have another question of the Minister.

Mr. Speaker: We will come back to the hon. member. The hon. member for High Park.

Mr. Shulman: I have a question of the Minister of Public Works, Mr. Speaker. Has the Minister seen a study prepared this last month by his department which shows that the number of car accidents by his drivers have gone up three times, a multiple of three in two years, and if the Minister has seen this study, has he looked into it to determine the cause of this increase in car accidents?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Mr. Speaker, I have seen the study and I do not think there was anyone able to say what was the cause. After all, accidents can happen. I think we are driving more mileage, we are using more vehicles and I think that should be left to the police and our police officers in the province to determine the cause and then they will notify us.

Mr. Shulman: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker. Is the Minister aware that the number of cars involved has only gone up by 10 per cent while the number of accidents has gone up by 200 per cent?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: This could happen, but there were not that many accidents. Perhaps we had a really good year last year, and maybe this is just normal.

Hon. S. J. Randall (Minister of Trade and Development): Do not cross the road.

Mr. Sargent: To the Minister of Trade and Development: I would like to ask the Minister if he is aware that as of November 19 of this year—last week, in fact—the federal housing authority in the U.S.A. made possible loans for mobile homes? In view of the fact that 90 per cent of the new homes in the States last year under $15,000 were mobile homes, would the Minister therefore consider making mobile homes in Canada available for home finance?

Hon. Mr. Randall: Mr. Speaker, we have discussed mobile homes before and I pointed out that we have talked to mobile home manufacturers and have said that as far as the Ontario Housing Corporation is concerned, if the municipalities will accept them, and if Central Mortgage and Housing will finance them, we will be quite prepared to assist in any way we can. We have had no reason to reject mobile homes except that many municipalities, as the member knows, have not got an area prepared for them and perhaps they are not as far advanced here as they are in the United States, particularly in the southern United States, regarding mobile homes. However, if I recall correctly, a few years ago the Minister of Municipal Affairs changed one of our bylaws here to make it possible for mobile homes to locate in the province of Ontario. So we have not put any barriers in their way, and Ontario Housing Corporation will be quite prepared to look at financing if Central Mortgage and Housing will do the same thing.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, you and I both know that the whole bottleneck is in the—

Mr. Speaker: Question, question.

Mr. Sargent: Would the Minister agree that the whole source of the programme, to start it rolling, must be to provide mobile-home parks? Would he, therefore, encourage municipalities; would he give them help along this line to give them direction, to the Minister of Municipal Affairs, to allow mobile-home parks as the final solution to the problem? That is the crux of the whole situation, mobile-home parks. Does not the Minister agree?

Hon. Mr. Randall: We place no restrictions in their way and I am sure the Minister of Municipal Affairs is aware of the fact that mobile homes would relieve some of the difficulties, but I may also point out to the hon. member that we have different conditions here in this part of the North American continent, compared to many of the parts of the United States. I was in Kenora last week looking at some homes there. They can sell a two-bedroom home for as low as $8,000, but I am sure in many municipalities they would not accept it. But as far as we are concerned, we are quite prepared to work with the municipalities on any kind of a home, whether it be mobile or otherwise, to see they get financing if the municipality will accept it.

Mr. Sargent: But will the Minister give loans on mobile homes?

Hon. Mr. Randall: Sure.

Mr. Sargent: Thank you.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Dovercourt; a supplementary?

Mr. D. M. De Monte (Dovercourt): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I was wondering, in view of the question brought up by the hon. member for Grey-Bruce, if there is not a restriction on prefab homes and a difficulty in financing those. Is the hon. Minister going to do anything about—

Mr. Speaker: I wonder if that is supplementary. The hon. member's question had to do with mobile homes. I think the hon. member is straying somewhat from the question of mobile homes.

Mr. De Monte: May I ask a direct question then?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member may ask a new question of the Minister.

Mr. De Monte: In view of the fact that the municipalities are having difficulty accepting prefab homes, and also in view of the fact that prefab construction cuts about 20 per cent off the price of a home, is the Minister trying to do anything to induce the municipalities to accept these prefab homes, and amend our bylaws in order to accept them?

Hon. Mr. Randall: Frankly, I have not seen any prefab homes that are 20 per cent lower than those built on the traditional basis and I am familiar with what some companies are doing, such as Alcan. We ourselves and Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, if they meet NHA standards, which most of them do, will finance them, but again the difficulty is that prefab homes are not permitted in some municipalities, but as far as Central Mortgage and Housing and ourselves are concerned, we have had no objection to financing them whatsoever.

Mr. De Monte: Mr. Speaker, by way of supplementary, is the hon. Minister attempting to induce these municipalities to amend their bylaws in order to accept prefab homes, because I understand the restrictions set down by CMHC and the Minister's department exclude a mobile home unit?

Hon. Mr. Randall: No, I do not think there are any major restrictions as far as we are concerned.

The Minister of Municipal Affairs is, as you know, working on the codes and bylaws for municipalities and I would hope when these codes and bylaws are made known, they are accepted on a provincial basis so that there will not be any restrictions by the municipalities and it will certainly help us house a great many more people.

I think you must remember that in some of these areas, where you were looking at homes last week—and I just use this as an example—a three-bedroom home was $12,500 without a basement. By the time you dig a basement and put that on a foundation you have $16,000 or $17,000. These are some of the difficulties we have with the municipalities; they do not want homes without basements; some of them do not want them with septic tanks. But as far as Central Mortgage and Housing and ourselves are concerned we are quite prepared to go in wherever the municipality will allow us to go in and finance them. I would think your question would be better answered after the code of bylaws and restrictions are brought out by the Minister of Municipal Affairs and accepted on a provincial basis.

Mr. De Monte: Do you mean that the bylaws will be accepted by all the municipalities in Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Randall: This is what we are hoping for, that we can get the municipalities to accept a standard set of bylaws instead of what we have at the present time.

Mr. De Monte: The cost that you mention, of $16,000: Does that refer to the cost of the home and the land, or purely the construction of the prefab home?

Hon. Mr. Randall: No, that is just the cost of a home. Then if you dig a basement and buy the land on top of that you would go perhaps up to $20,000, depending on the municipality.

In northern Ontario last week, I think they were saying they could buy a lot for $200 and, without a basement, they could put a house on, say, a concrete platform for $8,000 for a two-bedroom and $12,500 for a three-bedroom home. Now, we have not seen it done yet, but I am hoping it can be done. If they do not require a basement in that municipality and they can buy a lot for $200, you can finance and house a lot of people.

Mr. Speaker: Oral questions. The hon. member for Waterloo North.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): I direct this question to the Minister of Public Works. I am not sure, Mr. Speaker, whether it should be to him or to the Minister of Municipal Affairs. Why did the Minister wait until ten days ago to notify the city of Oshawa, that he had decided to move the regional assessment office from Oshawa to Whitby, and would not be needing the two floors of the new city hall, when in fact, he had signed an agreement with a builder for a leaseback arrangement in the city of Whitby last August?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Mr. Speaker, I think perhaps that question should be directed to me. I do not think there has been any final decision. I know there has not been any final decision made as of today.

Mr. Good: Oh?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: All right then; if the member does not want an answer, there is no use trying to answer it. Does he want the truth or does he want supposition?

Mr. Good: By way of supplementary. Why did the Minister tell the council of the city of Oshawa that he had made arrangements with the builder in Whitby?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Had the member been at that meeting he would have known that is not what was said at all. I said nothing has been finalized as of today, whether the assessment office will be in Whitby or Oshawa. We can get them accommodation in either place.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

Mr. Shulman: I have a question of the Prime Minister, sir; in the absence of the Minister of Health (Mr. Wells) it is of sufficient urgency and I am going to direct it to the Prime Minister. In view of the fact that over 100 persons have been taken ill with food poisoning at the Whitby Ontario Hospital within the last two days, will the Prime Minister, in the absence of the Minister of Health, arrange for extra help to be sent to that hospital to allow them to manage the very difficult situation they have at the present time?

Hon. Mr. Roberts: I am not aware of these circumstances at all. I will check into it to see what the problem is.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Trade and Development. Would the Minister consider the establishment of a mobile home project in some community as part of an answer for the easing of the housing shortage?

Hon. Mr. Randall: Mr. Speaker, I could say we will be quite prepared to look at any kind of a programme that will alleviate a housing shortage in any municipality. I will be delighted to talk to our people about it and see if one could be arranged. As I said earlier, we have to perhaps negotiate a development with the local municipalities to make sure of the services, the schooling and so forth. If they have no objection I will be glad to work with anybody that wants to put in a mobile home project.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sandwich-Riverside.

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Energy and Resources Management. Was the Minister quoted correctly outside the House yesterday, in saying that he was considering approaching municipalities to see if they could set aside disposal areas for DDT? I am wondering whether he meant collection areas or whether he meant disposal areas. If he meant disposal areas, is there any place in southern Ontario where a place could be found below the water table that would be safe for the disposal of DDT?

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Minister of Energy and Resources Management): Mr. Speaker, I did not mean collection areas, as it has been suggested by the hon. member for Victoria-Haliburton (Mr. R. G. Hodgson), I believe. The member may have noted in this morning's paper that representatives of The Department of Health are going around the province to various municipalities with the idea of working with the municipalities to set up some form of a collection area for the disposal of DDT.

As far as below-water-table areas are concerned, this of course, as I indicated yesterday, Mr. Speaker, would have to be safe from the point of view of seepage. DDT has a long life; this is the main problem with this pesticide, but I think that with the plans of The Department of Health some form of suitable disposal will be arranged that will minimize any danger to health or to the soil.

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary question?

Mr. M. Makarchuk (Brantford): Supplementary to that: Has the Minister considered the possibility of using some means of chemical neutralization for DDT—instead of disposing of it, neutralizing it with another chemical?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: No, not specifically, Mr. Speaker. I would like to re-emphasize that this is a problem for The Department of Health. The safe disposal of DDT is my colleague's responsibility as far as the province of Ontario is concerned. However, if the disposal results in contamination or pollution of any kind then, of course, my department becomes involved through the solid waste branch or some other branch of my department. The actual programme for the disposal of this pesticide really rests with The Department of Health.

Mr. Makarchuk: Mr. Speaker, we have more faith in the Minister of Energy and Resources Management than we have in the Minister of Health.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member had a question? The hon. leader of the Opposition, I believe, was trying to—

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Energy and Resources Management. Has the Minister contacted the management of Consumers' Gas in an effort to extend the deadline for the offer extended to Union Gas so that the pressure on the hearings by the energy board into this matter would be relieved somewhat and could take place perhaps in a more orderly way?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: No, Mr. Speaker, I have not done that, as the hon. leader of the Opposition suggests, because it is my understanding, after reading the offer and the information given to me, that if this particular offer expires—I believe, in the middle of December—a new offer will have to be made. In other words, under the terms of the present offer it is not possible to extend its terms.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Dovercourt.

Mr. De Monte: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Attorney General. In view of the fact that child accident fatalities caused by motor vehicles has increased over the past year—I understand, by almost 50 per cent—is the Attorney General considering requesting the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto to re-introduce the policemen on the school crossing areas?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Speaker, we discussed school crossing areas several months ago, earlier this year, and at that time I made the suggestion that, to a large extent at least, policemen be engaged as school crossing guards. I understand that a good deal of this policy has been carried out. I do not think it necessary to suggest that in every crossing situation you must have policemen. There are senior people, there are young people, some of school age, who are quite competent in some situations. But as I understand it, the Metropolitan Board of Police Commissioners, in conjunction with, and after discussion with, the board of education, did restore a goodly number of police to this function, and I would think that perhaps, observing the situation they will act in a responsible manner further, if that may be necessary.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Welland South.

Mr. R. Haggerty (Welland South): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Energy and Resources Management. In a press release in the Welland Evening Tribune, the Minister, speaking in Niagara Falls stated that there are at present 12 companies that are causing pollution in the Niagara area, and were given 30 days to correct the situation or charges will be laid. Will the Minister table in the House the names of the 12 companies in violation of the pollution control Act?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, a similar question was asked a week or so ago, I believe by the hon. member for Wentworth, and I indicated at that time that the 12 companies were not in violation. What I had said was that we had approximately 12 companies either in a programme or under order in the Niagara area. I also indicated that I would rather not name those particular companies because they are co-operating and there would be no useful purpose provided, in my opinion, by having the names publicized at this time. I indicated that if these 12 companies, or any one of them, were in default on a programme or an order, and they were prosecuted, of course this would become public knowledge.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent: I have a question of the Minister of Highways, Mr. Speaker. In view of the fact that the CPR is going to cut off our rail line to Owen Sound, we have no airport, and you can go to Europe faster than you can go to Owen Sound by CNR—we are cut off from the rest of the world—would the Minister accept an invitation to ride with me in a car from Shelburne north to Owen Sound, 46 miles, and I will give $1,000 to his favourite charity if it is not the worst highway in Ontario, and he will do something about it.

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Pay up.

Hon. G. E. Gomme (Minister of Highways): I think I will take up that challenge if he will drive with me over another one which I select, and I will assure one of the charities they will collect the money.

Hon. Mr. Simonett: It just cost the member $1,000.

Mr. Sargent: If he goes over $1,000 I will go over $1,000.

Hon. Mr. Gomme: Mr. Speaker, I will take that back. I do not like doing business with people who change their mind in the midst of a deal.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park was on his feet.

Mr. Shulman: I have a question of the Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs, Mr. Speaker. In view of Eaton's refusal to remove the Eldon electric car from their shelves, what action has the Minister taken?

Hon. H. L. Rowntree (Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs): The matter is being currently looked at and checked out, and I will have some observations to make when our investigations are complete. But at the moment we have ascertained that this particular toy has been checked by the consumer branch at Ottawa, and tested by them, also by the Toy Council of Canada. We are told that 200,000 units of this toy have been sold and there have been no accidents to date.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence (Minister of Mines): Would they not give the member his money back?

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs. In view of the facts that became public at the annual meeting of Revenue Properties yesterday, is the Minister ordering any further investigation into the activities of that company?

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member is aware the stock is not being traded and the necessary action has been taken to continue the suspension from trading—

Mr. Shulman: I suggested that four months ago.

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: —by the stock exchange. The matter has not gone unnoticed either by the stock exchange or by the securities commission. In view of the other charges that are pending against this company currently in the courts, I do not think that this is an appropriate time for me to make any additional comment.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Attorney General. Would he advise why it takes six weeks to get some information, and we still have not got it, regarding the report on electronic devices in Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Because it requires quite a comprehensive study to get the information the hon. member asked and we want to get him a full and complete answer.

Mr. Sargent: Apollo 12 has been to the moon and back and the Minister still cannot get the information. What is wrong with the Minister?

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member for High Park.

Mr. Shulman: A question of the Minister of Mines, Mr. Speaker. What action was taken by his department as a result of the statements made by H. D. Carlson in your department last year that INCO had refused to co-operate with the department and that it would not supply geological or drill information as other companies do in the province?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, we rely completely on a voluntary system of turning over of geological information to the government and to The Department of Mines. We feel that any other system would be completely unworkable as there are all sorts of complicated ways in which geologists could hide—if they wanted to, under any compulsory system—the information that we are trying to obtain. Therefore, we have to rely on the goodwill of the industry and we feel that we have to rely on a voluntary system of turning that information over to us.

Mr. Shulman: As a supplementary question, can nothing be done if a large company like INCO flatly refuses to co-operate?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: My understanding is that the relationship between the department and INCO now, as far as this aspect of getting geological information from them is concerned, is a lot better than it has ever been before. There still may be great room for improvement with that particular company, but, nevertheless, I gather that we are getting more information from them now than we ever have before, and certainly, as far as my own staff is concerned, and the methods and ways we have of storing this material, we have a lot of changes taking place right now so that we will be in a better setup fairly shortly, I would hope, to be able to receive the information and store it in a more meaningful way than we have in the past.

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary? Two or three other members have been trying to get the floor. The member for Waterloo North.

Mr. Good: I asked my question.

Mr. Speaker: All right, the hon. member for Sandwich-Riverside.

Mr. Burr: A question of the Minister of Energy and Resources Management. Has the Minister made any enquiries of the plastics industry to ascertain whether the synthetic lubricant called PCB—polychlorinated biphenyl—is used in Ontario and whether it is used in hazardous circumstances. My concern arises from the mystery kill of 10,000 birds in the Irish Sea, which has been traced to this synthetic material.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, I will take the hon. member's question as notice and have a reply for him later.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Algoma-Manitoulin.

Mr. S. Farquhar (Algoma-Manitoulin): To the Minister of Energy and Resources Management: Is the Minister aware that his recently announced policy for a support to small municipalities for water and sewage works excludes municipalities otherwise qualified for this assistance by virtue of the fact that they have even limited facilities? And would the Minister consider making an exception to this policy in a situation where qualifying municipalities are in a position where they have to provide these facilities now to recently established schools and hospitals at some distance?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member is correct in that the policy is mainly for new treatment facilities and new waterworks. If the hon. member would let me have the information about the particular municipality he is concerned with, I will look into it for him. However, it would be quite a major change in policy if we included new treatment facilities—for example, additions to existing treatment facilities or a new type of treatment facility, such as a secondary or a tertiary plant as opposed to a primary plant.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent: A question of the Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs. What legislation is there for corporate mergers; what length of notice should they file with the Minister's department before a merger is to be consummated; and if there is legislation, what holdbacks are there and how many have been stopped because of prior advance notice to the Minister?

Mr. Speaker: I would think this question is not one of any urgency. The information may be available—

Mr. Sargent: It is more urgent than you know, Mr. Speaker, it is going on all the time. The Minister should answer it.

Mr. Speaker: Order! The hon. member may direct his enquiry to the Minister; it is not a question of urgent public importance to direct on the floor of this Chamber.

The hon. member for High Park.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order—

Mr. Speaker: It is not of urgent public importance and the information may be obtained directly from the Minister.

Mr. Sargent: Well, what is more urgent than that?

Mr. Shulman: A question of the Attorney General, Mr. Speaker: Inasmuch as the Atlantic report has been completed, why has it not been released?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: We have not received it yet for release.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Timiskaming.

Mr. D. Jackson (Timiskaming): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Municipal Affairs: has the Minister received a request or requests from northern municipalities to have the basic shelter exemption grant converted to an unconditional grant to the municipalities and, if so, has he considered it? And does he have an answer at this time?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Mr. Speaker, we received a request from a great number of municipalities endorsing a resolution by the town of Barrie. I would guess some 100 municipalities. And this was part of the brief of the mayors and reeves presented to the Cabinet about a month ago. The letters are in the process of being acknowledged, stating that the Prime Minister and the Treasurer and myself have all indicated that if the grant is to be replaced, it will be replaced with something which will provide the same amount of money and with something which will provide the same benefit.

Mr. Speaker: If there are no further questions, we will move to the next order of proceedings.

Petitions.

Presenting reports.

Motions.

Introduction of bills.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by the Minister of Correctional Services, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled, An Act to amend The Landlord and Tenant Act.

Mr. H. Peacock (Windsor West): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, the seconder—

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Well, the Minister of Correctional Services was here a moment ago.

Mr. Shulman: Well, he is not here now and he cannot second a motion if he is not in the House.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Well, if the members want to be very technical.

THE LANDLORD AND TENANT ACT

Hon. Mr. Wishart moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend The Landlord and Tenant Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Speaker, I might make some comment about the bill at this time, and say that it carries into effect virtually all of the recommendations of the interim report of the Ontario Law Reform Commission. The exceptions are the rent review board and officers on that board.

The function of the rent review officer was primarily mediation and that function is given in large part to the Landlord and Tenant Advisory Bureau, which is set up in the administration under the bill.

No rent control is provided for in the bill.

The bill applies to residential tenancies only—not to commercial tenancies. It applies to all residential leases, oral or written, and many provisions will apply to past, present and, of course, to future leases.

The bill applies to tenancies and leases notwithstanding any other statutes and notwithstanding any agreement or waiver unless the Act expressly states the contrary.

A copy of the lease must be delivered to the tenant and there is no obligation upon the tenant until a copy of the lease has been so delivered.

Security deposits—

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): How can he deliver an oral lease?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Well, that would be a written lease.

Security deposits may no longer be required after the Act comes into force, except that one month's rent in advance may be required to ensure payment, and that must be applied to the last rent period.

The present security deposits will be dealt with under the Act in the following way: Interest will be payable at six per cent per annum, compounded annually. Such deposits with interest shall be paid to the tenant within ten days after the expiry of the lease or tenancy. If the landlord desires to claim any part or all of the security deposit, he must get an order of the judge to so retain the money or have the consent in writing of the tenant. The tenant is to receive notice of any such application so he may have the opportunity to oppose the making of such order.

Distress is abolished as far as all future leases are concerned. In the case of present leases, distress still applies, but not to future renewals of present leases.

Where the consent of the landlord to sublet is required, the Act provides that it may not be unreasonably withheld. There may be applications to the court for relief by the tenant or by the landlord.

Mr. Singer: Can that be contracted out?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: No.

I should report there is no requirement in the Act saying that there must be in the lease the right to sublet, there is no proviso which says that there must be written into the lease the right of a tenant to sublet. But where the lease contains the right to sublet, it cannot be unreasonably withheld. I think our thinking there, if I may offer this, Mr. Speaker, is that to require a landlord in making a lease to say that a tenant may sublet to anyone would be requiring a landlord to lease to unknown persons, possibly straw persons.

Mr. Singer: The Minister gives with the one hand and takes away with the other.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: No, I think that is not the way to express it.

Mr. Singer: There has not been a thing changed in that one.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: As to privacy, it is provided that except in emergencies, the landlord may not enter unless he has given the tenant 24 hours' notice except for the purpose of showing the premises to prospective tenants after the notice of termination of the lease has been given.

A landlord may not alter the locks during the occupancy except with the consent of the tenant. I think—although I do not have the note in front of me—my recollection is that the tenant may not alter the locks either.

Mr. Singer: Does the Minister use the word alter in his statute?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: We use the word alter, I believe, or change. If the hon. member will permit I might just check the section to make sure. The section reads, Mr. Speaker, section 94 of the bill:

A landlord or tenant shall not during the occupancy of the rented premises by the tenant, alter or cause to be altered, the lock on any door giving entry to the rented premises except by mutual consent.

As to possession:

Unless the tenant has vacated or abandoned premises the landlord must have a writ of possession to regain possession.

And he could not put a padlock on the door, for instance.

The tenant may oppose any application for possession on the grounds that the notice to quit was given because of complaints to authorities or because of attempts to enforce or secure tenant's legal rights.

There is provided in the bill a landlord and tenant advisory bureau to be set up by local municipalities to include a metropolitan municipality forming part of a regional. In other words the board would serve the region.

Such municipalities may establish a bureau to advise people and that bureau would seek to mediate disputes, advise, and investigate complaints, and inform and educate the public. I would point out that it has no sanction to make orders or to enforce them. It is not a rent control or a review board in the sense that it exercises rent control.

Mr. Singer: Does it have any power to summon witnesses?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I think not, I am not sure of that.

The doctrine of interesse termini and covenant in posse and in esse are abolished. Those are things which I will explain as we discuss the bill.

Mr. Singer: I am very glad about that.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Well, they are quite important. Ordinary law respecting frustration of contract, mitigation of damages and interdependence of covenant, shall apply to all tenancy agreements.

We have a clause in the bill providing that reasonable access shall be given to authorize representatives of election candidates for the purpose of canvassing, or the distribution of election material.

Mr. MacDonald: Onward we march into the twentieth century.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Do not confuse that with bakers' and butchers' and merchants' delivery boys.

Mr. Singer: Is that provincial and federal?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: That is right, provincial, federal, municipal and school boards. The bill provides that the landlord must keep the premises in a good state of repair and fit for human habitation and that he must comply with the health and safety standards required by law.

The tenant is responsible for ordinary cleanliness of the premises and the repair of wilful or negligent damage to the premises.

Where the lease provides for acceleration, the tenant may pay the rent due and complete his obligation, including reasonable expenses of the landlord and he is thereby relieved from acceleration. This is similar to the clause in mortgages.

The bill provides for notices of termination, for times of service, for the possession and all the other phases for both written and oral leases, and these are set out in detail in forms which we have devised and attached to the bill.

There is a penalty of not over $1,000 for violation of the Act in respect of security deposits, the entry of canvassers, the alteration of locks, and recovery of possession.

Those, Mr. Speaker, are the main features of the bill and I would point out that, as I say, practically all of the recommendations of the law reform commission have been carried into effect except the rent review which was a recommendation going a long way toward, if it did not actually provide for, rent control.

This report, which is implemented so largely in the bill now introduced to the House, I would ask hon. members to note, is an interim report on landlord and tenant law produced by the Ontario Law Reform Commission. I would like to say to the members that in the large study in the whole field of property law being carried on by the law reform commission, this was one, of course, of the areas of study.

We asked better than a year ago that this particular field, which seemed to be giving us such concern, should be hastened and the study completed. That was done, but it is an interim report. The studies are going on in the whole field of property law and I anticipate that when the report of the law reform commission is final there will be further recommendations bearing on the field of landlord and tenant. For instance, this bill only deals with residential tenancies. I am sure someone will ask me: "Why did you not, in the bill, produce a standard form of lease?"

There is an answer to that but perhaps there may be some recommendation with respect to that when we get the final report. But I want the hon. members to be aware that studies are still going forward and this report, which we did receive, and which we have implemented here, was an interim report dealing strictly and solely with landlord and tenant situations.

Mr. J. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, if I may just ask the Attorney General two questions.

Is it his intention that this bill would be passed at the current sitting of the Legislature?

Is there in the bill any authority for a tenant to withhold all or any portion of his rent in order to enforce compliance by the landlord with his obligations under a lease?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: It is my hope, Mr. Speaker, that we would get on with the discussion of this bill and with the necessary readings of it to get it through at this session.

I am told that the legal bills committee is at present engaged with the discussion of The Assessment Act, but I would hope it would complete its consideration of that bill in time to enable this bill to be dealt with. My own feeling is that since we have gone so fully in the implementation of the recommendations which we were offered; since we have taken the length of time we have in hearing representations from both landlord and tenant groups, construction associations and persons interested in the provision of residential habitation, building and all that sort of thing—we have given it a great deal of consideration on the part of the government—I would hope that it might meet with reasonable approbation from the members of the House, and that it might not take so long as you might expect for a bill of such importance.

I am very anxious—the government is anxious—that we might get it through before we adjourn this session.

The other question from the member was: "Can a tenant withhold his rent to enforce an action by the landlord of an obligation?"

No. I think if I interpret that right—I hope I do—that if the tenant refuses to pay rent, he is guilty of a breach of one of his covenants. On the other hand if the landlord is guilty, as the tenant is apparently alleging, of not carrying out some obligation on his part, they would both have a right of action. If one were to go to court, I presume the other would have as part of his defence a set-off, if there is a breach of covenant. The covenants are interdependent and I think if the tenant withheld his rent he would force the landlord to sue and then he would reply that the landlord has not carried out his obligations. The court would then have to decide it. I think that would be the case.

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

Clerk of the House: The 24th order, House in committee of supply; Mr. R. D. Rowe in the chair.

ESTIMATES, DEPARTMENT OF UNIVERSITY AFFAIRS

Mr. Chairman: The Department of University Affairs. The hon. Minister.

Hon. W. G. Davis (Minister of University Affairs): Mr. Chairman, in speaking to these estimates I have a prepared document which, if it is agreeable to the members of the House, I will table and have made available in Hansard, and I shall be reading excerpts from that touching on the highlights, and perhaps a little more than that, in order to move the discussions ahead.

In 1969, more than ever before, higher education has become a focal point of public attention. Indeed, it is literally true that one can hardly pick up the daily newspaper without finding several items that relate to the university community.

While such news items deal with a wide variety of topics, you will be aware that those that capture the greatest amount of attention are usually related to the problem areas, of which student activism, in its various forms, and the costs of higher education have tended, of late, to be among the most prominent.

It would seem appropriate, therefore, that in introducing the estimates of The Department of University Affairs I should speak of these areas of public concern along with certain other closely related matters.

To concentrate solely on the problems, to the exclusion of Ontario's many positive accomplishments in higher education, would, I believe, be to place the emphasis in entirely the wrong place. In typical Canadian fashion, we often tend to take our achievements too much for granted while concentrating on our areas of difficulty. This is not so much a negative approach, I feel, as a reflection of our desire to create a better educational system. But since significant achievements in education are only attained through careful planning, considerable thought and effort, dedicated determination by all concerned and unprecedented public support, both moral and financial, perhaps Ontario's achievements in this area are deserving of a few moments of our attention on this occasion.

It is only slightly over five years ago that The Department of University Affairs was formed and the committee on university affairs enlarged and reorganized to co-ordinate—in co-operation with the university presidents—the dramatic expansion of higher education in Ontario that was then under way. In a province whose educational system spans over 150 years, a five-year period is obviously relatively short. Yet a brief statistical summary indicates how much has transpired during the past half decade.

PROVINCIALY ASSISTED UNIVERSITIES OF ONTARIO

	1964-65	1969-70 (Estimated)
Total enrolment	43,969	100,002
Post Grade 13 under-graduate students	37,085	88,581
First year students	13,552	30,022
Graduate students	5,421	11,421

The percentage of the age group—and this was a matter, Mr. Chairman, we discussed—the member for York South (Mr. MacDonald) and the leader of the Opposition (Mr. Nixon). I can recall some years ago, when we were discussing the percentage of age groups compared to other jurisdictions, it is pretty encouraging. When we were debating this in 1964-65 the percentage of the age group was 11.8 and in this current year it is 20.1, a pretty significant increase in a relatively short period of time.

I have included, Mr. Chairman, for the information of the members opposite, the breakdown of enrolments in the various institutions from 1964-65 to 1970, and I shall not read them, they will be in the record.

The operating grants, the financial aspects, from $42,666,000 to $262,647,000; and in the area of capital support $45 million, roughly, to $119 million, in that same five year period of time.

With respect to student assistance:

	1964-65	1969-70 (Estimated)
Student awards, scholarships and fellowships—provincial contribution	$4,350,000	$39,715,000
Number of post-secondary students assisted by grants, loans, fellowships and scholarships	10,553	65,000
Teaching staff at provincially assisted universities and the Ontario College of Art	3,247	7,800

In the words of the report of the committee on university affairs (1968-1969) which will shortly be distributed to the members of this House:

It is probably fair to claim that Ontario, with less stress and less wasteful duplication than most other jurisdictions, has successfully met the challenge of a fantastic growth in demand for university places . . . without coming apart at the seams, with real net improvements in quality and competence.

A system of higher education which stresses quality as well as quantity obviously cannot stand still. All who are active in its operation or instrumental in its support must constantly strive for meaningful change and improvement. A list of activities and accomplishments in Ontario in recent years indicates very clearly the results of such effort. I might cite, for example:

1. The development of new approaches to teaching and course organization that has taken place on nearly every campus of our province. A good example is the implementation of the McPherson report at the University of Toronto to provide more liberal course options in the arts and sciences.

2. The addition of new programmes and courses to meet changing social needs as, for example, computer science programmes and environmental studies at a number of our universities, and the expansion and modification of courses in medicine, engineering and architecture. One might mention also the remarkable expansion of university programmes of part-time study. York University, as an example, has as many students enrolled in degree programmes at Atkinson College as it has full-time day students.

3. The emergence of an effective university system in which 14 provincially assisted institutions discuss common problems and work toward common objectives through a co-ordinated effort while maintaining their distinctive characteristics and considerable local initiative. In this context it would be appropriate to express my appreciation of the excellent work of the members of the committee on university affairs and the members of the committee of presidents of universities of Ontario, whose joint efforts have resulted in co-operative solutions to so many problems.

4. The wider participation of both faculty and students in shaping the procedures and mapping the future of our colleges and universities.

5. The development of the initial stages of integration of programmes of teacher education and university programmes so as to ensure improved quality of teaching in our elementary and secondary schools in future years.

6. The success of Ontario's universities in attracting and keeping good university teachers despite the unprecedented expansion that has taken place and strong competition from practically every jurisdiction in North America. In this area there has been some alarm expressed, of late, in regard to the relatively large number of scholars from other countries who have taken positions in our institutions. While acknowledging that this issue has given rise to varying reactions and that we could benefit from more precise statistical information, let me say that I feel this is a problem we must look at carefully. There may be a need for our universities to address themselves to the question of maintaining a reasonable balance.

The creation of a sound base on which to build for greater numbers of students who will enrol in our institutions of higher learning during the next decade.

8. The successful introduction of an operating grants formula to ensure both adequate levels of support and equality of distribution of public resources.

9. The development of a similar approach to capital funding, this year on an interim basis, pending introduction of a fully developed capital formula—an achievement many thought could not be attained.

10. The development of programmes of student aid that ensure financial barriers do not prevent able high school graduates from going on to post-secondary educational programmes.

These latter accomplishments have given Ontario what has been described as the most sophisticated system of university support in this country.

This is but a partial list of what has recently taken place and most would agree, I am sure, that it is an impressive one. It reflects the collective talent and determination which have become important characteristics of the Ontario university system. It reflects the sound judgment and counsel that the province has received from the committee on university affairs and its ability to obtain effective co-operation from the academic community, primarily through the committee of presidents.

Admittedly, these major achievements have not been attained without difficulties and very frankly, it is unlikely that the further gains in higher education to which we look forward with confidence in the years to come, can be won without overcoming even greater challenges. Clear indications of many of these problems are already with us and since the hon. members on the other side of the House are always ready and willing to concentrate on problem areas, perhaps I should oblige them by spending the remaining few minutes of my time in discussing some of the difficulties—it is not all-embrasive—facing the university community.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): There may not be anything left to do, when the Minister has finished.

Hon. Mr. Davis: We hope not.

Without doubt, the one element of university life today that proves most disturbing for much of the general community is that of student unrest—a worldwide phenomenon that has become almost a part of our way of life. It ranges from Toronto to Tokyo, from Cambridge, Massachusetts, to Cambridge, England. It is found in Europe and Asia as well as in North and South America and, indeed, I think one can say it is found on both sides of the Iron Curtain. It is indicative perhaps, of a general and growing dissatisfaction on the part of many of our young people with the general state of the world in which they live, and with the institutions and organizations that are responsible for that general state of affairs. It reflects a basic desire to make things better both for the people of today and for those of future generations.

I should editorialize here and say these are very personal points of view that I am expressing.

Mr. Nixon: I do not think the Minister is going out too far.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I never like to go out too far.

Like many phenomena, it comes in various forms, and displays itself through a variety of activities. Student activists seem to represent a whole spectrum of ideologies from ultra-conservative to ultra-radical. The willingness and ability of officials within universities and government to cope with the situation have also varied so that the general climate which is developed, differs considerably from one part of the world to the other. Certainly the one common feature seems to be an awareness that a serious problem exists and that something must be done about it.

While our own province is, of course, but a relatively small part of our world, it cannot hope, nor should it wish, to be isolated from world events. It should neither be disturbing nor surprising, therefore, that a certain amount of student unrest has come to the campuses of this province. What should be recognized, however, and I want to emphasize this, is that it has come, to date, in a relatively mild form and that, as such, any difficulties involving our students might be regarded more as a reflection of a trend rather than a trend itself. I do not make this observation with any false sense of complacency or in the role of one who is unwilling to face the realities of the situation. One can never be sure, given the ingredients of what is taking place, that tomorrow will not bring to this province certain of the types of difficulties that have been experienced in jurisdictions relatively close at hand.

I feel strongly, however, that if we are going to discuss our current problems in Ontario in a constructive and meaningful way, we should do so with the proper perspective—a recognition of what really has happened as well as the potential of the problems which we must strive to overcome.

Given the current situation, and the relatively strong contrast between what is taking place in this province and what is happening elsewhere, it seems appropriate to ask why Ontario universities have not been affected in the same adverse fashion as certain others. The answer, I assure you, is not simply good fortune. Neither is it because our students lack the spirit or desire for change that exists within young people in other parts of the world. Such explanations not only oversimplify what is taking place; they are frankly misleading. Beyond question, the major reasons why trouble on Ontario campuses has been restricted to a small number of relatively minor protestations, relate to the constructive efforts that have been put forth by university administrators and faculties on the one hand, and the majority of our student leaders on the other. Much common sense has, in fact, prevailed. A good deal of the high level of ability which we have always associated with universities, both within the teaching and student bodies, has been applied. An ongoing, constructive dialogue has been initiated and all of this has been coupled with a recognition, by most of those directly concerned, both of the need for change and of the need to find proper vehicles by which such change can be brought about effectively.

What everyone should understand, both those who sympathize with the difficulties which our universities face in these trying times, and those who may tend to be critical of our institutions of higher learning, is that on every campus in this province meaningful and constructive steps are being taken to increase participation in the government of each institution by both faculties and student bodies. I have, in an attempt to keep fully informed on these developments, solicited from each institution an account of the specific approaches that are being adopted, and collectively they offer impressive documentation of the manner in which our institutions of higher learning are meeting the challenges which now confront them. A summary of these developments is set out in the Report of the Minister of University Affairs for 1968-1969, which will be issued shortly.

I think, Mr. Chairman, it is included in here so that one need only look at the commission report from the University of Toronto.

The nature of some of the current changes was reflected in the recently released report of the Commission on University Government at the University of Toronto. But Toronto is not alone in seeking new approaches to university organization. I would remind you that three separate university Acts were amended this year in order to provide the legal basis upon which greater faculty and student participation could take place. Each was the result of extensive campus discussion and subsequent agreement. In addition, as you are aware, new legislation for the Ontario College of Art should be approved by this House before this session ends. Other such charter amendments will undoubtedly be requested at future sessions. Our universities and colleges are attempting through a process of evolution, rather than revolution, to provide for changing circumstances in a manner that will allow both a sense of equilibrium to be maintained and the institutions to move forward with their important work of teaching and research.

The attitude of this government, in regard to required changes within our universities has, of course, been made quite clear on numerous occasions over the last two or three years. We are convinced not only that no uniform or common solution can be applied to all 14 provincially assisted universities of Ontario. Rather, given the desire, the talent, and the background of understanding that is prevalent within our university community, we feel that each institution should be allowed to evolve through this period of change in the manner which its members deem most appropriate. There may still be a few members of this Legislature who do not subscribe to this position, even though the approach has been widely endorsed within the university community itself. Yet I am convinced that even those who may have lingering doubts will soon, as a result of what is being achieved, come to see the real merits of allowing local initiative and action. The ultimate goal is both sound solutions and varied approaches to complex problems—the very essence, I believe, of our university system.

Recently, Mr. James Reston, who is widely regarded as something of an observer, but not one with whom I always agree, began a column that I think was somewhat relevant, and I quote from it:

The political reaction to the campus disorders is now running very strong. The threat of anarchy is now producing the threat of repression, and politicians all over the country are trying to put the university wreckers up against the wall . . . in many ways it is a sad story, for in the end, it could easily mean more political interference and control of the universities, more opposition even to legitimate dissent, reduced state and federal funds for higher education, more separation and hostility between the races, and more trouble for the idealistic students who want fundamental but nonviolent changes in our society.

This is just the type of situation which we have so far been able to avoid in this province. It is the type of situation which we must strive hard to continue to avoid. We have a role to play in this Legislature, Mr. Chairman, that I believe is important. We can help to shape public opinion in a positive way amid conflicting viewpoints, often compounded by emotion. We must keep to the forefront of our thought the importance of our universities, and the potential of the students who attend them, in the development of our country. We must try to assist those who, through responsible thought and action, are trying to avoid the dangerous extremes while reshaping our universities to the needs of the future.

On these issues countless words have been written and spoken. Some of them, in my opinion, make sense; much of what is uttered, unfortunately, is nonsense. Every once in a while, however, I come upon expressed positions which, to me, bring balance to what, at times, seems to be an undisciplined situation. Perhaps, therefore, I might conclude this portion of my remarks by noting one very recent statement which I encountered, and which, in my opinion, deserves consideration by everyone who is interested in the well-being and development of our institutions of higher learning and of their student bodies. It is taken from the lead editorial in the

Manchester Guardian Weekly of February 6, 1969, which was entitled "Student Reform or Revolution?"

To build a liberal democracy has taken centuries. To destroy it could be a matter of months. We must beware of undervaluing Parliamentary democracy merely because of its imperfections. The students are impatient, and they have some things to be impatient about. But the most immediate of these concern university affairs, and most of them are now beginning to be put right. These grievances are not so intolerable that they justify a total assault on the system itself. It, too, is being reformed. Reform is a dirty word to the dedicated revolutionary, but it is the better and more civilized course.

Having spoken of students and the student attitudes of today, perhaps I might move to that other area of public attention, money—the costs of higher education. In a logical sense, the natural sequence would seem to be to open this phase of my remarks with a few words about student awards. This, after all, is the one programme which brings government and students at the post-secondary level into contact one with another. It is, to be frank, a subject of controversy in the minds of some of our student body as, inevitably, any programme is likely to be which sets as its goal equality of educational opportunity and, as a result, the allocation of funds to those with the greatest need.

In many instances where differing opinions exist, one can often divide the basis of disagreement into two areas possibly. The first relates to a misunderstanding of basic facts, while the second relates to more fundamental differences of outlook, or, if you wish to add higher tone to the discussion, "philosophies". If all relevant data is available, we need not argue about the first and we should not hesitate to discuss the second. Let me, then, as an initial step, try to clarify certain of the basic facts about the Ontario Student Awards Programme, the means by which we attempt to ensure that students of this province are not denied post-secondary education because of lack of financial resources:

1. The Ontario Student Awards Programme is intended to supplement rather than replace family and/or student resources.

2. The province attempts to assess objectively the ability of the family and/or the student to provide for a student's educational costs, in order to determine the additional funds required.

3. The basis of the objective assessment of family and student contribution is one which has been developed by the federal government, in conjunction with the participating provinces, for the Canada Student Loans Plan.

4. Given this participation in the Canada Student Loans Plan and the included fact that families are expected to contribute, if able, neither students nor their parents can be regarded as free of their share of the obligation on the basis of arbitrary decisions on their part.

5. The programme, in its present form, is expected to assist over 60,000 young people of this province in the current year, in addition to those who qualify for scholarships and fellowships.

6. We are attempting to the best of our ability to combine the inherent equity which basic rules provide, with the degree of flexibility required to deal with individual situations.

The philosophy upon which the Ontario Student Awards Programme is based is sometimes questioned. This is not surprising since there are many opinions as to what an effective student awards programme should be. These range all the way from those who advocate student wages or stipends for the "work" of attending university, to others who assert that no financial aid whatsoever should be given to a privileged minority out of the public purse. While such extremes may seem far-fetched at this point, given on the one hand the limitation on the tax dollar and on the other hand the clear evidence that student aid is opening the doors of educational opportunity, we are, nevertheless, of the opinion that no thoughtful approach should be discarded out of hand without careful study.

Further, having encouraged others to acknowledge changing times and to consider new approaches and new ideas, we feel that it is important that those associated with The Department of University Affairs adopt the same attitude in this area of responsibility. We have learned, however, that Ontario is not alone in its desire to find better approaches to student aid. Thus, while taking steps to gain the knowledge and insight that it will take to improve our own programme, we have also encouraged our sister provinces to join with us, through the Council of Ministers of Education, in the search for better ideas.

We have in turn been encouraged by their response and, to a considerable extent, by that of the federal government, and a special study group is now at work on a co-operative and far-reaching study that will hopefully give us new insights into this very important area of higher education.

While we have every confidence that this co-operative endeavour with our colleagues in other jurisdictions will lead us towards effective new approaches to student aid, we feel we must also continue to look to our own specific responsibilities, to keep our own programmes under constant review, and to seek, on our own initiative, modifications to our basic programme, which, if valid, may be of considerable use to our colleagues in other provinces.

For that reason I have encouraged the Ontario Committee on Student Awards, a body which was formed some two years ago to advise the Minister about student awards programmes, to give consideration to and initiate, as required, any important studies which its members feel need to be undertaken. I am pleased to report that the committee has initiated research undertakings in several key areas which its members feel require careful analysis. For example, this advisory body has set in motion investigations of the following types of problems:

1. Accessibility to post-secondary education in socio-economic terms, including a comparison of the family incomes of the present student population with patterns that were common in former years and the effect of awards programmes on these changes;

2. The attitudes towards and opinions concerning the current and alternative programmes of aid as expressed by both students and the general public. What is the general attitude, for example, toward the idea of student wages, student grants and/or student loans? Is the concept of the loan really a deterrent to families from low socio-economic backgrounds?

3. The cost and feasibility of alternative aid programmes with special attention paid to amounts of capital required, and the general economic consequences.

The committee has engaged experienced researchers to undertake much of this work. The first of the reports, "Student Financial Assistance Programmes," by Dr. Gail Cook and Dr. David Stager of the Institute for the Quantitative Analysis of Social and Economic Policy of the University of Toronto, has been received and released as a public document. Earlier, a component of this study, dealing with the attitudes of secondary school students toward higher education was also released. Other reports will follow on the same basis. These studies, I am sure, will shed fresh light upon this important area of social concern and allow us to initiate constructive changes—changes based on fact, not on unsupported opinion.

May I reiterate, therefore, before ending my remarks on this particular issue, that our concern about, and action within, the field of student aid moves forward on two separate but related fronts.

There is every evidence to suggest that the basic programme currently operated within this province is as good and equitable as any that can currently be found within North America. Yet we constantly question its accomplishment in our search for equity and opportunity. We shall, therefore, continue, in consultation with our student awards officers in the various institutions, as well as on the advice of the committee on student awards, to attempt to make whatever modifications and changes are required to ensure fairness in the distribution of funds and adequacy in terms of the scope of the programme.

In the meantime, given the trends which are already clear to us, we must continue with a search for new information, new ideas and, I am sure, eventually new approaches to student assistance in co-operation with our sister provinces and the federal government. Further, we are aware of research which is now being undertaken by people in jurisdictions outside our country as well. We have made contact with many of them, we are exchanging ideas, and we will remain alert, to the best of our ability, to everything worthwhile that other people can provide. It is within the perspective of these activities, I trust, that any subsequent discussion about student assistance will take place.

Now in the concluding portion of my remarks, may I turn to the general question of university financing? Earlier in these remarks, I set forth comparative data for the last five-year period. The results, I believe, are quite dramatic and give a strong indication of the rate at which this area of public support has developed in recent years. Much of this increase has, of course, been related to the growth in enrolment which has taken place within our institutions of higher learning and for which the operating grants formula automatically adjusts. Some of it has obviously reflected the increasing cost of living which has been part of our way of life in recent times. Much of the cost of higher education in recent years has reflected real improvement in the level of support to our universities in order that they might meet the challenge of the more complex world for which our young people are being prepared.

I should, perhaps, emphasize that this year is somewhat different since the increase in operating grants is accounted for almost entirely by enrolment and rising costs. Nevertheless, these estimates reflect a dollar increase of almost $50 million over actual expenditures of the last fiscal year. In a period of financial retrenchment, expenditures of this magnitude, however essential, give rise to a number of reactions. On the part of an increasing number of people within the general public there is the feeling that we have reached the end of the line; that we cannot afford to increase to any significant extent the amounts being directed to universities in future years.

Those who hold this point of view would seem to gain support for their conviction by what has happened in many other jurisdictions where expanding university costs have been placed under severe restraints. On the other hand there are many people, particularly within the university community, who feel that we must continue to direct still more rapidly increasing amounts towards higher education to maintain viable staff-student ratios and quality of education in the face of continuing expansion.

This attitude, I believe, reflects a combination of factors, not the least of which is the fact that increased support in recent years has led to increased aspirations among members of university faculties and administrations. There will always prevail within the university community a desire to conduct programmes that are of the highest standards—standards which are often adjudged on an international basis. Advocates of this position feel, with some justification, that nothing is more important than the teaching and research programme conducted within the university setting. This has led some people to comment that universities can, in pursuit of worthy goals, readily spend every dollar that might be provided to them.

The task of government, I would submit, is to determine how many of these dollars will lead to optimum public benefits in the broadest sense. One the other hand, there befalls the universities the task of convincing the general public about their requirements. A major part of this responsibility is to give clear indications that support now being received is being spent wisely. I should like to come back to this point in just a minute.

There is one further obligation which must be faced in providing financial support; that is, to ensure that whatever funds are available are distributed equitably. For, however little or however much is provided, each institution must be convinced that it has received its fair share. In Ontario, a great deal of time, study and attention has been given to this issue. As a result we have come a very long way in recent years and we have set ourselves on a path that should provide us with even better techniques for determining and distributing university support in the immediate future.

I realize that it might be considered inappropriate or, indeed, even a display of political partisanship, for a Minister to indicate that in this province we might happen to be leading the way in a given field of endeavour. The truth of the matter is, however, that in this regard it happens to be the case. And perhaps it is not really improper for me to so indicate since the judgment of the Minister is reflected as much in his ability to accept new ideas as they are forthcoming from others as in initiating them himself. Much of the credit in this case must go to the committee on university affairs and to the committee of presidents as well, for their collaboration in bringing about the introduction of such techniques as formula-financing to the area of university support.

Those who are willing to tell us about better ways by which government university relationships might be handled in this province would do well to reflect upon the results of our present patterns. The operating grant formula is but one example. The year 1969-1970 will mark the third time in which the formula has been applied and it is generally regarded by those outside Ontario, as well as those within, as a pattern as good as any yet devised for distributing available moneys. We know that it can be improved, and we know that its introduction has given rise to different kinds of problems which must constantly be kept under review to ensure that the overall quality of our educational programmes is not adversely affected or that the emphasis on courses and programmes within the university is not distorted.

It will be of interest to you to know that there is a joint subcommittee, involving the committee on university affairs and the presidents, which meets regularly to discuss formula problems as they become apparent, and that a substantial number of changes and modifications intended to meet, in a constructive way, the requirements of our universities, have been carried out in the past two to three years. In the meantime, as already noted, increasing attention has been directed towards the question of capital development. In many ways this is a more complex, and therefore more difficult matter. Nevertheless, once again on a co-operative basis, the department, the committee on university affairs and the presidents have committed themselves to the task of developing some national objective means by which capital funds might be allocated and appropriate development of our institutions of higher learning guaranteed.

As in the case of the funding of capital projects, interim arrangements have been necessary as we move toward a more definite pattern. That is why two years ago, on a retroactive basis; the province moved to a 95 per cent level of funding of approved capital projects and broadened the scope of that arrangement to include all the essential types of facilities needed for appropriate university life, save for residences, for which a separate set of provisions—including the establishment of the Ontario Student Housing Corporation—were made. In the current fiscal year provisions for capital allocations were taken a step further with the development of an interim formula device which enabled the department to get a well documented assessment of actual need for future years and, at the same time, to ensure the appropriate distribution of the available funds.

I do not intend to outline, in any detail, the methodology that was employed in this regard. All of the documentation was made available to the institutions and to the press at the time of the budget announcement on March 4, 1969, and can be provided to any interested member of the House. It was our hope—and initial reactions have indicated that this will be fulfilled—that universities will use this documentation as a basis for effective dialogue with the department and the committee, as well as a basis for sound future planning, and thus contribute to the eventual development of a more complete capital formula which we hope to have ready to apply in the very near future.

I am not sure, in outlining these few facts, if all members of the House are aware of how significant this development is. The initial work that has taken place in Ontario over the last year or more has aroused great interest from other government and advisory bodies throughout North America and elsewhere and, consistent with my previous comments, we have been most happy to share with them the thinking that has been developed.

There are, of course, many specific and difficult problems for which we shall have to find answers. For example, while the approach of the interim formula gives promise of a device which will provide most adequately for new space requirements at universities, it leaves for other approaches such questions as funding of non-building requirements, including site development and utilities, the replacement and/or renovation of existing space, and, of course, the special types of situations which appear at given universities including, as but one example, the emergent institutions. Nevertheless, the very ability to identify these problem areas is, to my mind, a strong beginning toward eventual solutions that will allow us to cope with them adequately.

Our system, of course, will continue to grow. In the current academic year, our university enrolment has passed the figure of 100,000—which once again is a figure I remember giving to this House some five years ago and there was some doubt that we might achieve this—not counting the church-related universities and colleges. We must now gear ourselves to the fact that the next decade will probably see that figure doubled, even though the rate of increase can be expected to moderate.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Our figures were a little closer.

Such growth will take place despite the fact that we will offer post-secondary education in other forms which will also expand at dramatic rates. The challenge of the future, therefore, will obviously be related not only to developing but to operating, with true effectiveness, a large and complex system of post-secondary education that will serve the interests of our people. It will give rise to problems of cost, it will give rise to problems of inter-relationships, but most important, as we already have seen, it will also give rise to problems of human development. We must develop a system that keeps at the forefront the importance of the individual with his needs, his problems, and his potential to contribute to a better society. This will not be an easy task and it will challenge the thoughts and the imagination of our most intelligent and inventive people.

As part of the process of confronting these problems, we have appointed a Commission on Post-Secondary Education. The approach that the commission will take should ensure that every interested person and organization will have full opportunity to contribute toward the attainment of worthwhile goals in higher education.

We have in Ontario a relatively young, vigorous and fast-growing university community. In relative terms it is perhaps among the best on this continent, and this reflects the contribution of all who are involved in the university community—students, faculty, administrators, governors—as well as the government and, not least important, the general public, who provides the tax dollars.

Admittedly, higher education is not a field of endeavour in which sweetness and light are always likely to prevail. Indeed, widely differing points of view and dissent are essential. I marvel at the imagination of those who are led to state that the patterns of government-university relationships in this province are stifling dissent and dialogue. I see no evidence of this, nor have I any desire to see it.

It can be stated, however, not as an item of controversy, but as a plain fact, that both universities and the government are going to have to do more to share with the general public the kinds of problems we face, and explain with clarity and conviction the requirements that exist. We need not deny the existence of problems or shortcomings. Much remains to be done. But this should not detract from what this province has accomplished to date in higher education. Ontario's record, I believe, speaks for itself. Now our purpose must be to improve and develop patterns of post-secondary education that will meet the needs of our young people and of our changing society.

Mr. T. Reid (Scarborough East): Mr. Chairman, I have listened with interest to the Minister's remarks and I find myself in disagreement with some points but also in agreement with a fair number.

I would like to take as my starting point his statement on page 29 that:

The challenge of the future will obviously be related not only to developing, but to operating with true effectiveness, a large and complex system of post-secondary education that will serve the interests of our people.

I would like, in that context, to deal with the question: "university education, for whom in this province?" The question of the present efficiency of the co-ordination efforts among our universities—of the co-ordination of efforts among our universities—and thirdly, fairly briefly, the issue of what has been called "the de-Canadianization of the universities in Ontario," as part of a general continuing trend of the de-Canadianization of Ontario itself. I would like to deal with those aspects in order.

I must point out—and this is not a commercial—but a book entitled, "Student Power on the Canadian Campus," as edited by Tim and Julyan Reid—it just came out last week.

Mr. Nixon: The Minister should buy a number of those, I should think.

Mr. T. Reid: I think I have a copy going to the Minister, through the mail.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Is it complimentary?

Mr. T. Reid: It will be complimentary. It is only $2.95. I hope it will sell in the high schools so that we have—

An hon. member: Autographed copies?

Mr. T. Reid: Yes, they can be autographed.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): A commercial by any other name—

Mr. T. Reid: —is still a commercial!

The point is, Mr. Chairman, that this book contains a number of articles by myself, but the most important article, however, for the purposes here, is written by Julyan Reid, and I would like to use it as the basis for my comments this afternoon. I did not write it but I share some, but not necessarily all of the points of view expressed in it.

I would like to lead with the question: "Education, for whom in this province?" To ask the question, "education for whom", particularly university education for whom in Ontario, is to ask what role the university should play in the just society. Today we do not question the proposition that every Canadian in Ontario should have equal access to the benefits of society including the benefits of education. But there is a strong feeling among the young that the university, despite its "objective" criteria of scholarship, is really geared to maintaining the status quo in terms of the class system.

John Porter supports this assumption. He says:

Education at the university level is to a considerable extent the privilege of a numerically small occupational class.

He was, of course, referring to Canada. This book was written in 1965, entitled "The Vertical Mosaic."

Now, one of the key questions among the valid questions in the student protest movement in this province—and in Canada is: Who gets to university and why? The universities traditionally have prided themselves publicly on their objective criteria for admission and for granting degrees.

In the past, ethnic quota systems have certainly existed. For example, one can ask, how many Jews have been admitted to medicine at McGill? But these ethnic quotas have been surrounded with such secrecy that one can assume that even the university administrators did not consider the tactics publicly honourable.

As the Minister well knows, in tracing the facts on who gets to university, in the 1950s the federal Department of Labour noted in a case study that:

It is quite clear that children from middle class and professional homes enjoy a higher survival rate in the educational system than would be predicted from an examination of patterns according to which intelligence is distributed among students.

And that was the 1950s.

Then we come into the census data of 1961—which I have put in the records of this House on numerous occasions—in which we see that the children of the rich, the children of the professional classes, the children of the well-educated, have a much higher survival rate in the school system than children of manual labourers, and so on, and therefore they, the former, are the ones who have the choice of whether or not to go on to university in this province.

Then we come to 1965-66, in which the Canadian Union of Students, in conducting a sample survey of Canadian undergraduates, had results which verified earlier findings; those findings being that Canadian university students are:

By and large not representative of the Canadian class structure but rather bear the characteristics of the middle and upper classes of Canadian society.

Mr. Chairman, the study also concluded that only 35 per cent of Canadian university students were from blue collar or working class families, compared to the 64 per cent of employed Canadians who held jobs which are so classified. The point here is that the socio-economic background of university students in Canada and in Ontario did not nearly reflect the socio-economic background generally in Canada and in Ontario.

So we found that in Ontario in the mid-1960s much of the intelligence, creativity and other inherited abilities of a vast number of people were being wasted. About one of every four non-farm families was living on an annual income of $4,000 or less and more than half of all foreign families live on incomes of $2,500 or less. At the very most, in the mid-1960's, 20 of every 100 children of such families in the age group 19 to 24 were attending regular daytime school or university. That was the situation, roughly, in 1965. Then we come to a study done this summer in Ontario—study entitled, "Student Aid and Access to Higher Education in Ontario," by Edmond Clarke, David Cooke, George Fallis and Michael Kent. I just quote briefly from that study to show that really, over the last decade, the characteristics of university students in terms of their socio-economic background have not changed to any great extent, if at all.

Mr. Chairman, the study consisted of administering a questionnaire to 8,700 representative students in 25 high schools across Ontario, and here are some of the conclusions of that study. It is a massive study; I have it with me here. I quote briefly:

The Ontario Student Awards Programme was initiated to ensure equality of educational opportunity at the post-secondary level.

If this phrase is to be meaningful, it must imply that any student who is capable and wants to have a post-secondary education, is financially able to do so.

Yet, many young people, because of economic and social factors, never seriously consider going to university. Large numbers of students never reach the level where they are able to enter university and thus become eligible for student aid, because they give up before then.

The authors went on to note that only the very brightest, highly motivated lower-class student gets to the stage where he is able to obtain a post-secondary education. The authors conclude:

Therefore, if the objective of the student award programme is to be really meaningful, the socio-economic mix of the students reaching the final year of high school should not be very much different from those who started in the educational system.

In short, Mr. Chairman, present student award programmes have very little to do with educating the children of the poor in our society.

I have made this case before but the point I want to make specifically here is that if you look at the evidence in terms of the studies done in 1950 in Ontario, if you look at the census data of 1961, if you look at the Canadian Union of Students' survey of 1965, if you look at this year's massively documented report on "Student Aid and Access to Higher Education in Ontario," you find in answer to the question, "who in Ontario gets to university?" that it is still vastly disproportionately the children of the middle class and well-to-do in our society.

I predict, Mr. Chairman—almost deplore, but predict with some certainty, I think—that the census of 1971 will show, despite all the financial aid programmes across Canada and Ontario, that the participation gap in higher education, especially university education, between the rich and the poor has widened, not narrowed in the 1960s. Financial aid at the top, at the university level, makes it easier for a larger group of those who reach the university gates, to get in and stay in. It does nothing for those who lose out at the beginning: the poor, the culturally deprived, the different language groups. Discrimination against them begins in the early grades. The slum-child in Ontario is not getting within miles of the gates behind which all the money and opportunity wait.

John Porter states that for the higher professions, like law and medicine, such training is even more a preserve of upper-income families. For example, in 1961 dollars, and in terms of the 1961 census, one finds that four per cent of Canadian families had incomes of more than $10,000, and their children accounted for more than 22 per cent of the doctors in medical school. We find that the same four per cent accounted for 28 per cent of all the young people taking law in Canada.

I suggest that, between 1961 and 1971, you will find, of course, a larger number of families with real incomes over $10,000, but I suspect that they will still account for about the same disproportionate number of places in law and medicine. And I think that the onus of proof is on the Minister and others to prove that that prediction is not, in fact, true, almost nine years after the census of 1961.

All these studies seem to strengthen the student claim that the role of the university in Ontario today has not changed fundamentally since the 19th century when it was the bastion of the upper classes and served as a training ground for the perpetuation of an elite. If the universities' admissions policies in this province are ideally so objective, what is the reason for the large, disproportionate number of middle-class and wealthier students gaining entrance? It is not, as many well-to-do people would like to think, because the wealthier are born inherently brighter than the poor.

One has to look further down the education line to the quality of our schools, especially rural and slum schools. The middle-class children, who have often gone to nursery school and junior kindergarten, arrive at grade one with a head start. From that point, the poor, the culturally deprived, the language minorities—already at a disadvantage—continue to slip back.

Mr. Chairman, the implications of this process of educational discrimination are far more far-reaching than the personal and mental development involved in education. They are certainly more far-reaching than even the economic growth of this country which has, as one of its strategic variables, the steady production, if you like, of talent developed through the formal education system. The implications are these: The university system is complex and stratified. The level at which one emerges from the university is the single most determining factor of status and income in future life.

Thus the university plays a powerful role in who governs society and who fills the top jobs. The university has now become the principal mechanism of job allocation at the top. Status can now be passed on through university places and hence important jobs, where formerly it was mainly a function of inherited wealth. For example, a doctor may not have property to pass on to his son like a wealthy landowner of 50 years ago, but he can pass on status and future income by getting his son into medical school. Perhaps this explains some of the admission policies in the medical schools. The son of a doctor is given preference sometimes because he is "more likely to become a good doctor".

Another problem raised by the question, "education for whom," is the concept of the ethnic quota. In the United States, black students have demanded minority quotas in the universities. In Montreal, students recently demonstrated to make McGill a French-speaking university. The last five years have produced an upsurge in demands for a change in the ethnic distribution of rewards in society.

Since gaining the key occupational positions in society, Mr. Chairman, is determined by graduation from university, admission rates of various ethnic group to different faculties and professional schools is of prime importance to those groups. One can think in this city, particularly, of the large Italian ethnic group. I think I should add that the demonstration to make McGill French is a bid for the privileges in the economic, legal, medical and corporate world of Quebec that comes from being a McGill graduate. Since many positions of privilege are based on family connections and other non-educational factors, the transformation of McGill would not automatically open all doors in that province. But the bid is symbolic; it is a bid for proportionate access to both education and the resultant job, power, and economic guarantee that a McGill degree has traditionally provided the English in Quebec.

Now, the case I am about to make, of course, is for quotas or goals in our universities, for the people who have been deprived of educational opportunity in Ontario. In that context, I think we have to have policies with regard to this following question: What happens to the academic standards of the university when an ethnic, or what I would call, a quota for the disadvantaged in our society, is adopted? It may well be, Mr. Chairman, that a system of selecting students which takes ethnic balance into account will reduce the academic level of the institution. But this would be a short-term loss. In the long run, such action would have the social effect of liberating much talent that is now constrained by the legacy of past discrimination. Over a time, I believe with this article by Julyan Reid, that the net social effect should be a raising or at least a maintenance of the academic standards of the universities in this province, as well as greater social justice within the Ontario society.

This would be, in effect, inverse discrimination in the interest of long-term justice and a gamble for a renaissance of new talent and greater excellence in the future. McGill is just an example from outside of this province, but all universities in Canada, especially those in Ontario, for this discussion, will do well to examine their admission policies in this light.

Now, I have used the term "ethnic quota" to apply to numerically large groups in society, such as the Negroes in the United States who are distinguished by colour, or the French Canadians in Canada who have constitutional rights for their language but who statistically fail to share the benefits of society, including the benefits of university education in proportion to their numbers.

A quota, Mr. Chairman, for students of poor or culturally deprived backgrounds at our universities in Ontario will be more difficult to assess. But even in this field, there are precedents. In Chicago, I believe, the Crits programme took rural students who failed the college boards and gave them four-year scholarships. Predictably, they started off badly but many caught up by their last years and did extremely well and others contributed strongly to the student life of the university as well as managing to pass in traditional manner.

I would submit to the Minister, Mr. Chairman, and to the people of this province, that the universities have little excuse to avoid examining their role in relation to the oppressed groups in Ontario society. If the university is to collaborate with our social goals in terms of government contracts and stress on manpower needs, how can the universities in this province avoid the stated aims of the Minister and, indeed, of the Prime Minister of this country?

And if the university sets itself up as an objective critic of society, independent of specific ideology but searching for truth and ideal social goals, how can it avoid the most pressing and most immediate soluble problems of the access to university education gap?

Mr. Chairman, I quoted extensively from that article and interspersed my own remarks into it. I have known the person who wrote it, for about nine years, and share her views in this regard.

I simply say, in concluding that portion of my remarks, that the central issue in Ontario in education, in my opinion, is the question of who benefits from the education system. The Minister and I have discussed this in committee with regard to elementary and secondary school education and I have reminded him of the link between that and who gets to benefit from university education in the province. I submit that in addition to some of the programmes or ideas I have expressed about early childhood education, there is another way in which we can help break the cycle of poverty and redistribute power in our society: through the acquisition of places in universities in this province.

There is a programme—undoubtedly the Minister knows about it—at the University of Toronto, in which a very few students—I believe it is no more than half a dozen—have come directly into university from outside the normal admission requirements. These are students who left high school, or perhaps failed in high school, some of whom are still in their teens, and they have been admitted to the University of Toronto on a trial basis.

Many members of faculty, and I believe certain senior students, are tutoring them extensively so they can catch up. And I suggest that perhaps the Minister, over the next two years, while he is still Minister of Education or on the government side, could really examine the question of special admission requirements and what financial aid he would give the universities which adopted this type of special admission requirement.

It is getting into a very difficult area and the Minister is very much aware of the difficulties in this. But I suggest, Mr. Chairman, that if any university—perhaps even a community college, but particularly universities, because that is related to the power structure in our society—if any university in this province accepted students from the culturally oppressed groups outside of the normal admission requirements to give them a special head start in the university programme, that the Minister's department ought to make a great deal of financial resource available to those universities.

Well, I shall leave this; it is a very complicated area, but I think it is necessary. One could get into trouble making the following analogy, but surely, if the universities in the United States are willing to take in students from an oppressed group in that society outside the normal admission requirements, surely the universities of this province could do the same thing for the oppressed groups in our society. And I would hope the Minister would offer leadership in this area.

The second point I want to turn to, Mr. Chairman, is again a very sensitive area since we are talking about the relationship of the government to the institution in society which is perhaps almost more sacrosanct in terms of its independence and freedom than any other institution in our society. I want to let the Minister know that my thinking has shifted over the last year to some extent, and also that the policy of this party has shifted to some extent. I have here, Mr. Chairman, the third annual review, 1968-1969, entitled "Campus Forum" put out by the Committee of Presidents of Universities of Ontario. I have read this document with great interest and I have been following the activities of the Committee of Presidents of Universities in Ontario quite carefully—ever since 1962, when it was established. I knew about it when I was involved in university administration starting in 1963 then I have followed their activities.

The document is an interesting one, and I would like to quote briefly from it in order to lay the basis of my recommendations to the Minister. In its first chapter, entitled "Looking Outwards", the reports of the committee of presidents states this:

This chapter will take stock of the extent to which the universities of Ontario have moved from isolation to co-operation and involvement in a wider society of which they are a part, to assist the trend of future development in this direction and consider the adjustments that the universities are likely to make, in tune with such development.

Then the report goes on:

Creation of the committee of presidents in 1962 was the first significant step toward systematic co-operation among Ontario universities.

It goes on to say:

Over the next four years, from 1962 to 1966, a number of specialized sub-groups were established. Beginning with the academic year 1967-68, the universities have embarked on various co-operative projects. Among them the library transit system, the co-operative use agreement relating to university libraries, the bibliographic centre project, the common admission procedure, the appraisal of graduate programmes, to bring in together representatives of discipline groups and a newly formed computer co-ordination group.

I say this with some regret but, in my opinion, for a group of people who ex officio got together in 1962—which is seven years ago—the degree of co-operation and co-ordination among the 14 provincially assisted universities in this province has been a great deal less than it should have been.

I can document this with some examples. I will just drive this one point home. I think, again for a committee that got together seven years ago, we should now have had one university library in this province, one computer centre and a great deal of centralization of decision-making at the graduate school level. I state that unequivocally for the first time.

Now, why do I say this? I just do not see the co-operation that should have been reached by this time. I also just like to remind the Minister of one comment in the report by one college or one university. The report is from the presidential committee on Glendon College in June 1969. This is a report that was put out by a tough-minded group of members of the board of governors at York, including some of the first great businessmen in this community, and the consultant members of the staff and so forth. In their section on page 13 under finance, the sub-section entitled "Analysis of Data", that committee makes the following statement:

As Ontario universities have not evolved costing systems of great sophistication, which the committee could use as a guide, it was necessary for the committee to work out its own approach to this analysis. Two criteria were observed. The revenue assignable to Glendon would be that which was available to the university because of the Glendon student unit formula grants and fees. Secondly, in addition to the direct costs assignable to Glendon College, indirect costs would be assigned in such a way that if a similar analysis was carried out for all university divisions, the cost would be exactly accounted for.

It goes on to say:

It must be emphasized that the result is not a budget nor a projection of a budget, but a statement of assignable income and direct and indirect but allocatable expenses. This method of analysis is a tool useful for the purpose of assessing the viability of one segment of a larger operation.

The point I would like to make is that surely the presidents of the universities of this province should have had a costing system of "great sophistication" which this one particular committee, for example, could have used as a guide in assessing cost and revenues at the education institutions in Ontario. Now, I use that as one example, although I believe that at the medical school of the University of Toronto, the same attempt was made at least five years ago. There could be other examples to make the flat statement that there has not been enough co-operation among the 14 provincially assisted universities in the past.

Now we get to the question: How do we put at least a candle under the university presidents? I think it was in Bill 11 that I introduced in this House, establishing the universities commission, and I maintain as I did several years ago, that the universities commission in this province—made up of representatives of the government—government-appointed people—and of the universities together, including some teacher representation, I think that that 15-man commission—could become a substitute for the Minister's department, and for the Minister's advisory committee on university affairs.

I maintain that one could set up that commission and have, within three years, very effective and cost-saving co-operation among the universities in this province, especially for the university library. It is utterly beyond me why there cannot be one university library in this province without impinging upon any of the autonomy of any university.

It is utterly beyond me why we cannot have one computer centre network, particularly with the possibility of the decentralization of computer facilities for all the universities in Ontario.

Of course, even related to the community colleges. Now, getting into a much more sensitive area—because I think the statement the university presidents make about the vetting of graduate programmes in this province is very weak, to put it in the mildest possible term I can—I do not think there is really very effective vetting on the establishment of new graduate programmes in this province.

I think that we should really have, if you like, under this independent universities commission, one central university senate for graduate work in this province. I think, Mr. Chairman, for example, that in Metropolitan Toronto, it would be possible to have one central department of economics made up of economists from York, economists from the University of Toronto, economists from Atkinson College and perhaps some of the economists from Ryerson. We should have in this city, for example, or in this metropolitan area, an Economics Association of Metropolitan Toronto. I would think that you could still have students actually resident at the York campus of York University, but sharing the total resources of the economists available in the Metropolitan Toronto area.

I think it would not be a monolithic hand over all economics in the metropolitan area. I think safeguards could be built up. But I do not think the Minister—when he tells us he always accepts the advice of his advisory committee, which is his way of gaining independence, he says—I do not think that advisory committee and the Minister can get through the necessary degree of co-ordination and co-operation among the 14 provincially assisted universities in Ontario.

They do not dare do it because it is an arm of government. That is why I maintain the position we have in this side of the House that, with the universities commission, we could get better quality programmes, better library services, better computer services to the teachers and the students at our universities than we will get under this present system. That is the point of departure for us.

The final issue I want to raise at this time, Mr. Chairman—as the Minister noted in his own paper if not in his own remarks—is what is being called, in emotive terms, the de-Canadianization of our universities in Canada, as part and parcel of the de-Canadianization or the Americanization of the Canadian economy and of the Ontario economy.

The basic document that is being used is, of course, the book by Robin Mathews and James Steele entitled, The Struggle for Canadian Universities, which came out just recently. I have not had time to do more than read the book; I have not had time to analyze their sources of data, the limitations of their data and just what they mean when they talk about an American teaching at a university in Canada. The problem is essentially one of Americans teaching in sensitive areas of the curricula in our universities.

But I do know—how can I say this—I do not think we have got the facts. One problem with the statistics in the book is that you are not too sure whether some of the people in those statistics are Canadians like myself who have done graduate work in the U.S. and graduate work in the U.K. For example, if the statistics related to the time before I left university work at York, am I called an American in those statistics? Now, there is some question.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): I do not think there is any question. You are not called an American.

Mr. T. Reid: It is really thorny, I tell you, I have been through it—

Mr. Lewis: Thorny in one university only.

Mr. T. Reid: Well, we will go on to this. What I would like to see the Minister do—either himself, through his advisory committee, or in conjunction between himself and the committee of presidents of Ontario, or at his council of Ministers on the national basis—is really get the facts on this. I think this is a serious problem. If it is as extensive as Mathews and Steele say it is, that is a serious national problem in our universities. It is serious and one can go into the sociology of it, and probably the member for Scarborough West is going to do that. I leave it to him to do it, if he touches on it.

But we must find out just what the facts are on this, or else find out where they are teaching and so forth; and I think we will need sociological data as well as hard factual data because I just do not like it. I can tell the Minister that I know of departments—you know this is micro-evidence—and it is macro-evidence that is needed—I know of departments, for example, where there are 20 Canadian citizens who have done their high school work in Canada, their undergraduate work in Canada and then may have done their graduate work elsewhere. And I know how that group of 20 Canadians in this one particular department went out and hired Canadians. Why? Because their friends were Canadian; because they went to university with them. They met them down at Yale or Princeton or Chicago or Berkeley and they knew that they were Canadians down there. They knew they were Canadians over at the London School of Economics.

A group of 20 Canadians hire Canadians, because they know them, because that is the way the old-boy network works when you are hiring at the universities. I also know that the same thing happens at the other departments made up of 12 Americans out of 16 people, and the people they know are Americans—people who have done their high school work in the States and who with very rare exceptions, have done their graduate work in the United States; people who are culturally American, who, in their educational system of primary and secondary school, learn about the United States.

They come up here and we do not know what happens to the curriculum they teach, particularly in the sensitive areas: history, political science, economics. Some of them, and I can name them—again this is micro-evidence and one cannot make judgments on micro-evidence—I know of Americans who have come up to this country and who know more about the urban problems of Montreal than any Canadian national. But there are many, of course, who, because they are Americans, because their experience is American, just do not know much about, say, political science in this country; and I find that bad. I would like to quote just one section from an article in this book I mentioned before. It is by Robert Rae, one of the outspoken and articulate student activists in Canada. And he says this in an article—he calls it “In Defence of Student Activism, a Reply”; he is replying to George Woodcock, and he says this:

I would agree that many of the remedies proposed for this issue about the Americanization of our universities, mass deportation of American teachers for example, are far more dangerous than the problem itself. But what, on the other hand is particularly enlightened or internationalist about merrily importing American professors, American textbooks and purely American course material? Canada's status as an intellectual transplant colony is complete unless we can nourish our own universities with our own resources.

I just say again, Mr. Minister, take this to your council of Ministers and insist that that council of Ministers does this research in terms of the Canadian context. Get the presidents of the universities of Ontario to really look into this. I suggest to you, Mr. Minister, that there is a problem here but we do not know what kind of problem because we have not yet got the type of data we need, both quantitative and qualitative. I will just leave it and conclude my remarks with that.

Mr. Lewis: To that thunderous ovation, Mr. Chairman, let Hansard show, I will begin my remarks. I have curiously enough, some remarks on paper which will emerge at some point when they are typed or duplicated, or I would have given the Minister a copy, I want him to know that.

Mr. Chairman, I want to take a shortish time in this lead-off to state some basic convictions about university life. I am deliberately avoiding repetition of detail in favour of certain general principles within which we in the New Democratic Party can make our more specific case during the few hours that are available. There are, essentially, three areas of interest: first, the question of university governance, student power, curriculum change, freedom and dissent on the campus, that whole complex of issues.

I begin by registering a strong protest against the cynical and mindless way in which Ontario's university administrators invoke the bogey of violence to divert attention from central issues. President Bissell of the University of Toronto is particularly shabby in this instinctive ploy. Perhaps it was the year's sabbatical at Harvard which did it, but President Bissell all too easily slides into accusations of "sabotage" and "saboteurs" in supposedly sophisticated argument. True, he hedges his analysis with annual homilies about the undoubted sincerity of many students, and touching references such as: "Of all institutions, the university should be the most tender toward dissent." However, when the chips are down, the old tactics prevail.

Except perhaps for Murray Ross of York University, most Ontario presidents join the predictable refrain. Thus, it was not the least surprising to find that in their recent working paper "Order on the Campus", the university presidents' committee began the second paragraph with these words:

There can be no doubt that violence constitutes a serious danger to the survival of the universities as places of teaching, research and scholarship.

This, in Ontario! Let the Minister concern himself with the attitudes and predispositions of his university presidents!

Then, laborately conjecturing on the various forms that violence might take, the enlightened presidents observe:

Violent action is unnatural to the university and yet the only response by which violence can be contained is the exercise of counter-violence. The university recognizes that in such circumstances there is no acceptable alternative to enlisting the police for the protection of the academic community.

I depart from my text to say that I would have thought those were the observations of an agent provocateur and not of a university president. One would think that the effort was to stimulate violence rather than to avoid it.

Fortunately, Mr. Chairman, the public response was uniform. Condemnation rang so loud that presidents backed away with unusual haste. But it does not soothe just to know that the would-be autocrats were routed, or that they themselves realized that these procedures are distasteful.

Let it be said, loud and clear, louder and clearer than even the Minister might say it, that the University of Toronto is not Berkeley or even Columbia. We are not, in this country, engaged directly in the madness of Vietnam, nor do we mirror the savage racial fracticide of American cities and campuses.

We have avenues of dissent and protest unknown in the United States. In the entire province of Ontario with its 14 state-assisted universities there has not been a single incident of recent memory which would be said to harbour serious violence. Even parallels drawn to Sir George Williams are loose and irresponsible. In that instance, a combination of race and French-Canadian student protest produced ingredients which cannot be duplicated in this province.

Mr. Chairman, that is not to say that we in this party condone neurotic extremism—by word or deed—in either country. It is sad that Professor George Woodcock can write an article in Saturday Night entitled, "The Ominous Politics of the Student Left," and appear to make a case. For most of us as social democrats, the behaviour of some, almost exclusively in the United States, is disheartening and repugnant. Irving Howe put it well:

Much recent behaviour of insurgent students goes against the grain. Destroying computers, occupying buildings, breaking up meetings, shouting down teachers in classrooms, this has nothing to do with the socialist or radical tradition. It is a strange mixture of Guevarist fantasia, residual Stalinism, anarchist braggadocio, and home-made tough-guy methods. This is not the path for serious radicals.

No, it certainly is not, Mr. Chairman, but serious radical overhaul of existing university structures is what the present ferment in Ontario is all about and it will not be disarmed by the creation of straw men in order to stigmatize the reformers.

I think that what president Bissell, and his colleagues, and the Minister, fail to understand is that powerful demands for change are rooted in a fundamental social analysis, and that the demands are irresistible. Every limited effort to appease the reformers from Duff Berdahl to the ambitious CUG report for the University of Toronto is doomed to failure because the basic issues remain unresolved.

Of course, not all reformers are activists, Mr. Chairman, but it is becoming increasingly clear that a majority of the student body desires a change in the substance and direction of university life. The quality of this change must mean, within the foreseeable future, a revolutionary transformation of post-secondary education in Ontario.

Mr. Chairman, it will no longer be tolerable to have universities run by a self-centred oligarchy, vesting all power as, for example, at the University of Western Ontario—in an entente one might rather call a consortium—among the Canada Trust Company, the London Life Insurance Company, the London and Midland General Insurance Company and the Huron and Erie Mortgage Corporation.

It will no longer be possible to exclude students or faculty from any, I repeat any, function of importance in the university. It will no longer be permitted to see universities conduct their affairs in anti-democratic and secretive fashion behind closed doors. It will no longer be countenanced to condone research projects funded—as in the case presently at the University of Toronto to the tune of $1 million—by the United States Air Force, the United States Department of the Navy, the United States Department of the Army, the United States National Aeronautic and Space Administration, the Canadian Department of Defence Production, and as a final touch, NATO. It will no longer be acceptable to watch universities slide into the role as technological handmaidens of North American society.

In his address to the Empire Club of Toronto, the then president of York University, Murray Ross, expressed it thus—and I am going to quote at a little length because he puts it rather well:

The student feels particularly at home in and identifies with the university not just because of formal affiliation but because it is one institution which has traditionally shared his rebellion against materialism and conformity. Yet it appears to be becoming just a handmaiden of the new technology. Its methods, its organization, its curriculum all seem to be tailored to the requirements of the outside world.

When a computerized graded report is the only means the student has of measuring his intellectual progress, when professors cannot be found in their offices because they are away on "task forces" and consulting missions, the student may conclude that the university has abjectly surrendered the job of stirring up and challenging its students and its society, and is instead trying to enfold itself in it.

As he sees it, the university nowadays is bent solely on producing grist for the economic mill, turning out generation upon generation of dull, unimaginative and highly skilled recruits for computerized careers in the lifeless world of the machine, and the efficiency expert. He views the university as Professor Henry Aiken of Brandeis saw it in a recent lecture which he gave at York University: "An educational monster which devours its young, processing them into a kind of all-purpose compost for refertilizing the great briar patch of the national society."

That is a pretty impeccable authority, Mr. Chairman, and if the Minister does not discern the grounds for quiet or unquiet revolution, then his Toryism is beyond redemption.

Moreover, Mr. Chairman, it will no longer be acceptable for the university to transmit, uncritically, all that is most odious in the values of this corporate system; or to persist in a middle-class student body defying penetration by those of lesser economic means; or to surrender to the Americanization of faculty and content; or to be seduced by the new managerial stratagems which wink ominously from the pages of the University of Toronto's CUG report.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, it will no longer be credible for the Minister of University Affairs to avoid outspoken involvement on the dubious grounds of respecting academic autonomy—I depart again—which grounds he surrenders willingly in instances like the Ontario College of Art, and will again if his resistance is similarly uninformed. Public funds now underwrite universities to a level of 85 per cent or higher. The bland Minister cannot forever refuse to lead or he invites serious trouble. When an entire community is seething with change, there is no virtue in the advocacy of impotence.

It was Dante who said, Mr. Chairman, "The hottest places in hell are reserved for those who, in times of moral crisis, preserve their neutrality." The Minister not only preserves it, he transforms it into a fetish. One wonders to what end he is destined. After all, when you solve the separate school crisis you may ascend.

There are, after all, certain elemental standards which should govern the future:

1. Students must have the same rights as any other member of the academic community. A democratic university must abandon rules which purport to govern the private lives of its members. Involvement with discipline, if administered at all, should be minimal. There are civil and criminal proceedings available outside, as to all citizens. As the president of the American Association for Higher Education put it:

Colleges are not churches, clinics, or parents. Whether or not a student burns a protest card, participates in a civil rights march, engages in premarital or extramarital sexual activity, becomes pregnant, attends church, sleeps all day and drinks all night, is not really the concern of an educational institution.

2. Top-level restructuring of every university in Ontario is imperative. There will be many variants, but the ground rules are clear. Students, faculty, genuine community representatives—labour, farmer, urban renewal associations, tenants, consumers—and indeed delegates from among university employees, from clerks to maintenance workers, must all have a say in top-echelon government. No one group need be dominant, but none can be excluded.

3. As my colleague, the member for Riverdale (Mr. J. Renwick) indicated just last week, it is not sufficient to restructure and then to leave it. There must be accountability—accountability to given constituencies which are represented, whether by way of meeting, referendum, report, or any other suitable direct exchange, including, Mr. Chairman, this Legislature, as much as the Minister might wish on occasion to eschew it.

4. Restructuring must filter down to every faculty and department, perhaps by way of parallel committees which make it necessary for open meetings of both students and academics to approve important decisions. This will be controversial. It would involve questions of hiring, tenure, promotion, firing of faculty, and admission and graduation of students. But if true participation is to be honest and real, nothing less would suffice.

5. An end to the evaluation system is indispensable to reform; major changes in emphasis for curriculum and teaching would become a focal point—even research of potentially compromising kinds, for instance, research with military implications, should have a greater scrutiny through student-faculty committees.

6. The perpetuation of class must be fought on all fronts and here OSAP shows its Achilles heel. The university community must mobilize itself to tackle the Minister, if necessary, in the struggle to change loans to grants, to shift those grants to the elementary and secondary systems, and to liberate the university from a middle-class preserve.

7. The university should develop a much more critical social role for itself; exploring, provoking, pricking the status quo in a way which commands anger, confrontation and change.

There are, of course, many other avenues. Two of them I have yet to examine briefly. Suffice it to say that the Minister is indicted by his refusal to provide direction for one of the most important of contemporary debates.

Mr. Chairman, the second theme I would tentatively like to explore is the Americanization of Ontario universities, or, in the even more awkward phrase: the de-Canadianization of Ontario universities. One begins to sound like a splinter political group.

Whichever side one takes, the evidence is incontrovertible. It is not necessary to summarize every particular, but the basic facts are clear.

The proposition of Canadian academics on arts and science faculties has dropped 25 per cent in seven years. It now stands at 49 per cent of the total. Further, from 1963 to 1965, approximately 58 per cent of all new appointments went to non-Canadians; from 1965 to 1967, this figure rose to about 72 per cent; for 1968 it would appear to have reached 86 per cent. Moreover, there is inevitably a disproportionate concentration in the humanities and social sciences.

The roll call of universities is equally discouraging. Useful analyses have been done of various departments at Carleton and Waterloo by Robin Mathews and James Steele; of the University of Toronto recently by Dan Drache; of Windsor by the three graduate students who reported just two weeks ago.

Hon. Mr. Davis: The member is not buying all of that?

Mr. Lewis: The pattern of de-Canadianization is what I am buying.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, but I mean the reports as being completely objective.

Mr. J. Renwick (Riverdale): He said that.

Mr. Lewis: I said that I am buying the pattern which is evident and I think there is enough documentary evidence on hand even from the Pauline Jewetts of this world, to underpin it.

Back in August, in fact on August 8 of 1969, the Minister of University Affairs answered Professor Mathews' analysis of the University of Waterloo with a whistling-in-the-dark response showing that two-thirds of all graduate students at Ontario universities—both MA and PhD—are Canadian citizens. In isolation it seems impressive. But how then to explain the apparent lack of employment of increasing numbers of Canadian scholars? Let me elaborate:

From 1963 to 1967 the number of Canadians taking higher degrees rose from 9,785 to 14,151. That is pretty impressive. During the same period, additional faculty hired rose from 3,040 to 4,716, an increase of more than 1,700. Yet in the same period, the increase in the number of Canadians recruited went from 1,284 to 1,320, a total jump of 36—a growth rate of three per cent. At the same time, recruitment of non-Canadians went up from 1,756 to 3,396—a growth rate of 93 per cent. What then, assuming that Ontario mirrors, or indeed accentuates the national pattern, is happening to our employable graduate students?

It would be bad enough if we were simply confined to the numbers game. But the implications are far more serious.

We are, in Ontario, increasingly subject to an imperialism of ideas. It is impossible to avoid—whether at a university or at a place like OISE—the creeping Americanization of both course substance and methodology, with political science and sociology being most vulnerable. These trends are both subtle and explicit: American university education has developed very particular forms, attitudes, nuances and methods which are foreign and inescapable. While it is possible for large numbers of American academics to incorporate Canadian adaptations, it is more likely that they will import an identifiable legacy, viewpoint or ideology.

There is nothing deliberately malevolent in so doing. That is obvious. But the very act has sinister, yes, sinister implications for Canadian educational autonomy. Unless, of course, correctives were evident; but they are not. As with the erosion of economic sovereignty, we are simply succumbing to the continentalism of ideas with very little protest from this Minister.

It is not enough to say, as the Ontario university presidents do in their 1969 report, that “scholarship is universal.” That is too simple-minded to be taken seriously. Nor is the Minister in his usual form when he says to Professor Mathews in his letter:

I must also express my regret at the anti-American tone of your comments which appear to do a disservice to many able American scholars who have opted to make Canada their permanent home.

Mr. Chairman, the Minister knows that is not the argument.

Are the French, the Dutch, the Italians, the Germans, the Swedes, anti-American because they make citizenship a mandatory condition for any academic holding a permanent post? Are the Americans and British anti-Canadian because they employ so few foreign academics at their universities as to make the numbers negligible? Of course not. The difference between this province and its government, and those countries is that we have almost no pride of citizenship left. We have surrendered autonomy on so many fronts that we are naked to assault from almost any source. And one in particular. And in education increasingly.

It is not without significance that Canadian educational publishing is on its last legs; that Litton Industries, RCA, Raytheon, IBM, Time-Life and Xerox have taken a monopoly stranglehold on the production of educational hardware and technology; that the few "Canadian" concerns left in this field are almost all subsidiaries. What is to become of our fledgling educational world?

Which brings me back to the central issue, Mr. Chairman. Whenever Mathews and Steele advance notions to alter the present trends, they are dubbed immoral, illiberal, racist, neo-Nazi, proto-Fascist, chauvinistic, anti-American, protectionist, restrictionist and intellectually obscene. What poppycock. It is a dead giveaway for the truly repressive mentality.

No one is advocating a quota system. I repeat, no one is advocating a quota system. Few have set out a table of percentages to suggest who would be desirable and in what numbers. Many have suggested that at least in the area of faculty heads and senior professors, an herculean effort should be made to fill these posts with Canadians. That is an innocent and tentative enough proposition. But, beyond that, I feel the situation to be ominous and critical. Events cannot be allowed to take their normal course.

Mr. Chairman, we say this to the Minister. It would take only three months for a complete analysis to be made of the patterns of nationality, citizenship, first-degree source and final degree source for each university in Ontario. It would take about the same time to examine scrupulously the numbers and destiny of all our graduate students, whether at home or abroad. It would take perhaps six months to make a study of the influence on courses and methodologies of large numbers of expatriate academics.

This is the course I urge upon the Minister. Then let him table the findings, hear submissions, open debate and evolve a policy. The results of such an enquiry might be wholly reassuring. I suspect, however, that it might find us well down the road to academic servility, as we have been found on so many other roads, Mr. Chairman.

The third and final theme in which direction I shall fleetingly nod is that of the university as landlord. Not just the University of Toronto has suffered the arrows of outraged fortune of late, but it is, perhaps, the most dramatic illustration.

Somewhere along the way, Mr. Chairman, the University of Toronto forgot that it was a community of learning and developed the style of a blockbusting developer. Indeed, at this point, the question of expropriating powers is perhaps irrelevant, because on the one hand no expropriating bylaws have been requested since the new Act was passed, and on the other, the university usually behaves in the fairly crude, but predictable, pattern of buying up intermittent homes, allowing them to run down, and then purchasing the deteriorating neighbourhood holus-bolus.

Next thing we know, judging from this morning's paper, the university will reveal that it gives contributions to candidates running for municipal office.

The university of Toronto is one of the most—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Not with our funds!

Mr. Lewis: The University of Toronto is one of the most overcrowded population centres in Canada—a burgeoning 40,000 people, originally thought to be confined to the first 26 acres purchased in 1956. But throughout the 1960s it bulldozed its way past the intended northern boundary of Harbord. In the process, Kensington, Huron-Sussex, Ramsden Park and now the Annex have been involved in a whirling commotion of land deals which makes amateurs out of your run-of-the-mill developers.

As the Toronto Globe and Mail editorialized on November 17:

The University of Toronto has for too long shown itself to be a citizen without a conscience, a community so steeped in its own parochial ethic that it has become oblivious to the likes and needs of the municipality surrounding it.

And that is the crux, Mr. Chairman. We can go into the details later, but the University of Toronto has devoured so much land in so short a time, in such an unprincipled fashion with so much incipient anxiety and near panic, that government itself must call a halt. The University of Toronto receives, as landlord-owner, such extraordinary tax concessions, that one or two Cabinet Ministers have the right to intervene and demand an accounting.

It should be insisted that no further development take place without consultation with the local community immediately affected. There are residents' and ratepayers' groups desperate to know just what the university's intentions are. Furthermore, this Minister, and the appropriate colleague, should peruse all expansionist proposals in the light of the official Metropolitan Plan. Approval would be contingent on adherence to the best planning principles. Finally, the university should be prohibited from making any sales of, or swaps for, existing land, whether with a private developer like Greenwin or a public institution like the board of education, without Ministerial approval. Somehow, sense must be gently knocked into the heads of that university administration.

Mr. Chairman, that ends the context of the remarks within which many of us in this party will pursue the debate. I might say, so be it. The Minister performs well and masquerades well. Many have seen in him a modern Bonaparte, although his arm is inextricably trapped, if I may say, by his "waistcoat".

I might say, Mr. Chairman, that we hope to lock horns fairly fiercely in the hours that remain.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, I will just reply very briefly to some of the observations that have been made. I always find it of interest whenever members, and this is human nature, I guess, Mr. Chairman, relate existing or current problems to how they see things at that precise moment without, perhaps, the total degree of recollection to some issues that are also relevant. If the hon. members do not quite understand what I am saying I refer to this issue of Americanization. It is one that has given me very great concern, and yet I sit here in this House, Mr. Chairman, and I listen to the members opposite, including the last member who spoke so eloquently—and really with substantial merit on some points, though not on all—and I heard him not relating, you know, matters relating to elementary and secondary education as determined in this school system. I have heard him quote at great length from American authors, on American situations, American experience, all because it apparently tied in with his own outlook, his own thoughts, that related to many of the situations that he wished to develop in this Legislature. And, once again, I do not necessarily agree with some of them.

Mr. Lewis: Surely my thoughts have always been derived from Spain and Poland.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, I think, Mr. Chairman, if memory serves me correctly, that while their families may have originated from those great jurisdictions some years ago, that most of those sources quoted to me by the member for Scarborough West, are probably American citizens.

Mr. Lewis: No, no; that is your faint recollection, surely!

Hon. Mr. Davis: I was even intrigued by the member for Scarborough West—am I right; West or East?

An hon. member: That is the member for Dovercourt.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —in perusing some of this material written by, Mrs. Reid? The author says he has known the authoress for some nine years, and agrees with her. I do not know how he could help but agree. But once again it is intriguing, and I just pass this on. It is very intriguing to me to see once again some of the references in that article—

Mr. T. Reid: That is Canadian.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —written by a Canadian, but the references and situations relating to the University of Chicago. I am not sure, perhaps it was the University of Illinois, but that does not matter, it was in the same city. The references related to other situations and source materials from outside Canada—you know, very learned scholarly works—drawing for sources of information and parallels from information outside our own jurisdiction but written by a Canadian author. This, to me, is worthy of some note and perhaps some consideration because we all do it. We all do it.

Mr. T. Reid: You did not read the whole article—there are two U.S. examples out of ten, I think.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh, I am looking forward to reading it in its entirety. However, let me move to another point; the hon. member for Scarborough East referred to the University of Toronto as landlord—I am not going to get into an extensive—

Mr. Lewis: Scarborough West. Why do you not say the socialist and the Liberal? Then it will be easier for you.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, all right. Well, I am not going to get into a lengthy discussion as to what the University of Toronto has done or is doing, and so on. I have my own problems with that institution such as the little expropriation in Erindale two or three years ago, if memory serves me correctly. I think I can tell the hon. member that I do not believe there has ever been a plan filed for expropriation since about July 1967, or some time in 1967. I think that those responsible recognize that far more has to be done to involve the communities where growth must take place and I think there is an indication, a very real one, that the university has done, and is intending to do it.

Mr. Lewis: They blockbust. They do not expropriate.

Hon. Mr. Davis: The hon. member raised one point of Kensington, which is a matter of some concern, and I am sure he would agree with the letter that did appear in the Globe and Mail—the paper which gives a very objective picture of these situations—from Stephen Langdon as it relates to the activities of the SAC and the University of Toronto with respect to the Kensington situation.

Mr. Lewis: Did you reply to that?

Hon. Mr. Davis: It is here.

Mr. Lewis: Do send it over to me.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I will, I will.

Mr. Lewis: I would appreciate that.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am sure the hon. member cannot help but agree with the content. I will not read the whole letter but I recognize that he would share Mr. Langdon's point of view, although perhaps not Dr. Bissell's point of view which was also printed on that particular occasion.

Dealing with, Mr. Chairman, who attends and who does not attend, we have discussed this really in the education committee. I tried to point out in my preliminary remarks—perhaps they were rather clumsy—that we know that the student award programme does not solve the problem of young people who do not leave the high school system. We know that there are things to be done, and very frankly, as I said to the education committee, we do not at this particular moment pretend to have all the answers, but there are some interesting statistics available to us. The thing is not by any means completely negative. I cannot divide this into percentages of totals for our total society, but the hon. members perhaps would be interested in knowing that of the young people in university who come from income groups under $3,000, this represents 6.9 of the student population. Without going through each figure under $8,000 income—and I cannot say whether this is middle income or upper income—I leave this to the hon. members to assess.

Mr. T. Reid: Does it say between $3,000 and $8,000?

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, no, under $8,000—47.7 per cent of the students at Ontario universities come from this income range.

Mr. T. Reid: About half.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Right. About half. Mr. Chairman, I cannot debate with any great knowledge as to what this represents right across the province, or right across the country. It does indicate that a good percentage of students are coming from families whose income is something less than $8,000.

Mr. T. Reid: Was that last year?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, this was 1968-69.

Mr. T. Reid: How many families under $8,000?

Hon. Mr. Davis: There were 47.7 per cent and there is a cumulative total there of student awards. This would be interesting to the hon. members, too, that 70 per cent of those who received student awards come from this category. These figures do not include the independent students who are once again separate and apart from this, but it is some indication that while we do not say for one moment that we have resolved the problems of students who do not move into grade 13 and from there on to university—

Mr. Lewis: What do you mean by independent students?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Independent students are those where the question of parental contribution is not involved in the determination of whether they receive assistance or not.

Mr. Lewis: With those figures only, do those involve only those receiving—

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, these involve only those who are assessed on the basis of parental support.

Mr. Lewis: Parental support?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Parental support, right. As well as their own contributions.

Mr. Lewis: So there might be a few left unaccounted for?

Hon. Mr. Davis: The independent students would account for some and they, I think, would perhaps go roughly through the same situation, but it is very hard to determine because they do not show parental income. They have been designated as independent students.

Mr. T. Reid: What proportion of the people of Ontario have family incomes under $8,000?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, Mr. Chairman, this is the point. I cannot relate these, you know, to the income ranges right across the province, but I think it fair to say that when you have close to 50 per cent from families with income under $8,000, this is some marked change from ten years ago. I do not think there is any doubt about it.

Mr. T. Reid: You mean 80 per cent of the families in Ontario have incomes under $8,000? Eighty per cent of the parents?

Hon. Mr. Davis: But no one has ever stated that we have the same balance in the universities; we do not have it yet in the high schools.

Mr. T. Reid: There is nowhere the same balance, nowhere near—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, I really did not interrupt the hon. member too frequently during his remarks. I am just trying to—

Mr. E. W. Sopha (Sudbury): But you missed the whole point.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, no, I see the point. Mr. Chairman, it is something we have discussed in this House for the last four years. We have discussed it, related to whether there should be free tuition, whether there should be more of this, more of that. All I am saying is that the student award programme is relating to students who have need. Now I am asking the hon. member for Scarborough East—he says, you know, change it all from loans to grants—that is fine, that in my view is no simple solution to it:

(a) It requires a substantial increase in investment which he would be prepared to make;

(b) It does not in itself solve the problem that we have been discussing, and what I am asking him, and am asking the member for Scarborough West, are they not prepared to recognize that there are thousands of students who were receiving support under the student award programme who, in fact, needed support? I am not debating whether or not there should be more.

Mr. T. Reid: Red herring.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh, no red herring at all, Mr. Chairman, I think it is very valid.

Mr. MacDonald: I would hope.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, no question. As I said at the education committee, I hope that some of the members will join in enthusiasm in voting for that particular estimate.

I will move to Glendon just for a moment or two, but not for too long, perhaps to suggest to the hon. member that the report prepared at Glendon by the board of governors for Glendon related to some cost analysis—the universities do have relatively sophisticated cost analysis but once again they are not perfection. They are very difficult in multi-faculty institutions and, of course, the purpose of that report, I think, related to the problems at Glendon relative to the type of programme they were producing as to whether or not it should receive additional assistance.

Mr. T. Reid: Did you read that statement?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well I met with the people who helped prepare it and I have discussed it with the principal of Glendon as to whether or not, because of the type of programme, there should be some assistance related to it, and this was part of it.

Mr. T. Reid: That is not the issue here.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, I will not pursue it any further but I will say that it is not completely unrelated.

On the question of having one library, or the philosophy of the hon. member for Scarborough West with respect to the commission—I do not want to debate this again—I can just say to him through you, Mr. Chairman, that this matter has been canvassed, it has been discussed with the universities, it has been discussed with some of the most knowledgeable people we know.

While there are imperfections in the existing system, I do not think anybody wants to move to the form of grants commission or commission envisaged by the hon. member as being any better solution to the problems we face, and I just put it very simply that way. I just do not think there is anything in that, which would improve on what we are presently doing.

Just once again on this question of Americanization—I just throw this out, Mr. Chairman, I do not think we should confine it just to Americanization. I think the studies—and we are in the process of obtaining information—will be necessarily pretty well confined to the province of Ontario. Hopefully we will get some information from the other jurisdictions, but I think it has to relate to faculty from outside Ontario and Canada.

I think it must relate to the number of faculty people who come from the U.K. or Commonwealth jurisdictions because it could be that the percentage coming from the U.K. or the Commonwealth jurisdictions may not be too dissimilar to the percentages coming from American universities.

I think the whole thing must be looked at and I would just say, Mr. Chairman, that we can sort of stay away from Americanization or de-Americanization, and perhaps concentrate on our studies on what is the Canadian content in faculty at the universities. Perhaps that would be more constructive.

Mr. Lewis: We want you to speed your studies so that there is still a Canadian content to study.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, we are coming along. I have some preliminary figures, Mr. Chairman, but I really am going to wait for another two or three weeks because they may not give the picture. I just noticed in Professor Mathews' book—I think there is a quotation there that the number of Americans on faculty probably account for between 10 and 20 per cent. This is his own rough figure, and I should point out to the hon. member for Scarborough East, part of my reaction to some of Professor Mathews' statements, especially his suggestion that we legislate this thing, that we legislate that the Chancellor must be a Canadian, that all faculty members must be Canadian, that everybody must be a Canadian. You know that if this Legislature was to put it down in statutory form, and—

Mr. Lewis: You do it for all the other professions.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, I would regret very definitely having to take this type of approach to determine this problem. I think every member in this Legislature would regret having to legislate this sort of thing.

I can recall the leader of the Opposition in one of his very enlightening—and he has many moments—

Mr. Nixon: Now be careful.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, it is true, I think it was two or three years ago, I was reading the debates—

Mr. Nixon: You certainly have not much to do.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well no, I always make a point of rereading Hansard as it relates to education. Mind you, some of it is pretty dry, Mr. Chairman, and I will say the Minister contributes more than his share, but the hon. member for Brant, when he was discussing the estimates, said we have a shortage of teachers, we need more qualified personnel. This was elementary and secondary schools, not universities. He asked why we do not open the doors, why we do not broaden these situations, to let us have some of our American friends who are qualified in these fields and teachers from elsewhere move into the school system because they can bring some expertise and some assistance that we just could not otherwise get.

Mr. Nixon: I thought you were going to quote a more recent statement about that.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am not quarrelling with what he said because there is some merit in it.

Mr. Chairman, I have talked too much already today. We spent a few minutes with the CRTC. This morning and I am sort of running out of voice.

Mr. T. Reid: What happened?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I do not know what happened. I am anxiously waiting the results.

On the question of the vetting of the graduate programmes—the member from Scarborough West once again—this is an argument used before—

Mr. T. Reid: East.

Hon. Mr. Davis: East. He suggests there be a single graduate situation as well as computer centre and one university library. I find that a very interesting concept. I can only tell him that there would be, I think, some very substantial opposition, not only from the faculty but also from the students with respect to the single library centre.

Mr. Lewis: Would you put it in Barrie, Orillia—the end of the GO line?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am wondering where it would go, I have been trying to assess this. Brampton would be delightful but not really acceptable.

Mr. T. Reid: One library with decentralized books!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, of course, that is not what the hon. member said but I was hoping this was what he meant. I agree there must be, and there is, far greater co-operation with respect to the library service than existed some years ago. Now, Mr. Chairman, I have made a number of other notes, I hope and I trust, on some of the highlights raised by the members opposite. I was particularly interested—

Mr. Sopha: You did not say what you were going to do about Americanization of the universities.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, very simply this: I think this was a suggestion, really, from the member for Scarborough West and by others. It is something the universities themselves are doing. We are studying and obtaining the statistical data that, you know, will make sense and that we can all then discuss. I think this is very important before we start making emotional decisions perhaps on information that is not too relevant. I am not going to be critical of the study made in Windsor but those who are somewhat knowledgeable will question really—

Mr. Sopha: We are Canadians; we are never emotional. We are the most phlegmatic, docile, dull people. We are never emotional.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, I know the member for Sudbury too well. I know that he is emotional from time to time.

Mr. MacDonald: Sometimes he is, very.

Hon. Mr. Davis: And for many years back.

Mr. Lewis: When he throws off his Imperial shackles.

Hon. Mr. Davis: But I shall be able to assure the hon. members of the House, Mr. Chairman, when this statistical information is available to us.

There was a very interesting review of the book of Professor Mathews in last weekend's Globe magazine, where once again, it may not be just the totals that are relevant. It will be a breakdown that is most useful and this becomes very complicated—it takes quite a period of time. A breakdown of the faculty representation as it relates to the specialties within the university is also very good.

What I am saying, Mr. Chairman, is that I have expressed this on other occasions, it is not new today; we are concerned about the number of Canadian personnel in our universities and we are in the process of obtaining figures that we hope will have some validity for some further discussion here. When we have them available, we will certainly make them available to all the members.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Chairman, would a question on this be appropriate now? If the Minister will permit, the whole thing that shocks me about this as much as anything, is the fact that there are qualified Canadian graduate students or qualified Canadian academics who seem to be relegated to a second or third place when the opportunities for these positions come up. I think this is apparent in what has been said here this afternoon. I find it very surprising. Is this in fact true? Can it be verified in the figures that are available to the Minister and if so, what possible explanation could there be if someone with a Canadian background is available and, other things being reasonably equal, that he not have as good a chance as anyone else for the appointment?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, once again I cannot speak with the precise data that I hope we will have some time in the not-too-far-distant future. I think there are a number of Canadian graduate students, or Ontario graduate students more particularly, who are taken on faculty. I do not think there is any question about this. But, I think probably the survey will determine that in some fields, particularly in the social sciences where perhaps our graduate programme is not yet fully developed—there has been a larger percentage of faculty from outside Ontario than in many of the other faculties.

I think that a number of Canadian graduate students have been taken on at the university, there is no question about it, and some very able ones. But there are some fields where our own graduate programmes were not commenced, quite frankly, as soon as they might have been and this is where I think we will find there is a higher percentage of non-Canadians. I do not use the term American, because you will find a lot from the U.K.

Mr. Nixon: Part of your statistical review, then, would include the number of qualified Canadians who had to leave the province or the country in order to get employment.

Hon. Mr. Davis: If you will assess the total number of positions offered, I think you will find that there is perhaps one PhD graduate from a Canadian university available for every three potential teaching positions. Ontario is, I think, perhaps contributing more than its proportionate share right across the country but I think this is the rough figure.

Mr. Nixon: One Canadian available for each three positions?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Right.

Mr. Lewis: With great respect, may I just interject to say, Mr. Chairman, that quite apart from where the Minister gets it, the vast majority of those who have been hired over the last two years have not had PhDs whether American or Canadian. They are being hired with MAs, so the figure is just not pertinent.

Mr. Chairman: Before we get into the actual consideration of the votes and the manner in which we will deal with them, we should determine whether or not we are going to take it vote by vote.

There are three particular votes in this estimate. Departmental administration, university support and university policy. I am not at all certain that it is going to be an easy matter to separate the discussion in any way. Would the hon. Minister think it desirable to attempt to separate discussion in this department?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, really there just are the three votes, and as far as I am concerned, it does not really matter.

Mr. Chairman: I am sure that where the difficulties arise in trying to keep things in order, and if the committee concurs with me and the hon. Minister concurs, we will permit any sort of discussion at any point on any of the three votes. Is this agreeable?

Agreed.

Mr. W. G. Pitman (Peterborough): I want to stay on this Americanization issue for a moment, Mr. Chairman. It seems to me that we are going to be terribly hung up on the nature of the statistics which the Minister is gathering. If we are playing a numbers game, we are not really going to get very far. What we really have to find out is, I think, where they are in terms of making decisions within the university, particularly within the faculty and within the departments, to what extent the existence of an American at a pressure point in a faculty, perhaps as a department head, is having upon the rest of that department. There are indications, for example, that when the head of a department is American, he tends to create an American department or an Americanized department. And I think that this is the problem. Just getting the numbers, I think, is very much like OISE. I mean if you drag in all the caretaking staff and you drag in all the cleaning women, I am sure you will get a Canadianized OISE.

Hon. Mr. Davis: They have anyway.

Mr. Pitman: Oh, I know that. I realize that I am exaggerating but the point I am trying to make is that you can make these statistics create any kind of a picture that the Minister wants.

If the Minister's letter to the Toronto professors is any indication of his own feelings about this matter then I think that the danger is that the Minister may very well be having statistics collected which will bring out his own predisposition, which is essentially that it is not a real problem. And I think, Mr. Chairman, it is a real problem.

An example is the fact that we still have tax relief for two years for Americans to come over, for some strange reason. I know that is not his policy, it is a federal policy, but this is the kind of—

Hon. Mr. Davis: We have nothing to do with that.

Mr. Pitman: I realize you have nothing to do with that. As I say, it is something which has to be put into the mix in terms of things which are encouraging Americanization. I think we ought to look at the courses that are being created in these universities, and particularly looking where there is a high rate of Americanization, particularly in the social sciences—what I think one person has called the “white rat” kind of psychology which seems to be an obsession with some of our American friends. Well, let us find out what has happened to the nature of the university.

Mr. Nixon: Like heavy-water physics with our Canadian friends.

Mr. Pitman: Let us just see if we can find out what the effect of Americans on all these pressure points is, and it will be far more than counting heads or counting legs and dividing by two. It is going to be a demanding process. This is really a research project, you know, in which we can have some sense of feeling that the realities are going to be revealed, and not just a sort of a silly numbers game that will be conducted over the next nine months or so.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I think part of the debate is related to a numbers game up to this point. I think it becomes a pretty subjective type of study or analysis of somebody, if you are saying the Minister should—or his department is to determine within each individual institution, within each individual faculty, where pressure points may or may not exist, and to what extent that individual may be in a position to determine curriculum and what have you.

With respect, Mr. Chairman, I think this is perhaps asking a great deal. No one wants to play the numbers games at all—but I think we should all know roughly—hopefully using the same basis for data so we know in fact what we are talking about. Then perhaps we can make some of these determinations, and surely there is some responsibility—and I am not talking about the university administration. I am talking about the people within the universities themselves.

Surely if the member for Peterborough were on the senate of Trent University—no, no, but let us say he were—and he is a Canadian where there is a preponderance of Canadians, I think about 65 to 5, and the senate sensed that an American in that institution was exercising pressure on a very sensitive educational area, surely those people are competent to come to grips with the situation without somebody who knows very little about it moving in.

Data—yes—I hope on criteria that we can all understand, but to get in and assess where pressure points may or may not exist and how competent a single individual is to exert these pressures, Mr. Chairman—surely these are things that have to be determined by those who work with these people on a day-to-day basis—and can be, I am sure.

Mr. Pitman: Mr. Chairman, what we have really seen here is that the universities have not been able to cope with this situation and I would suggest to the Minister that perhaps what he has given is an excellent argument for an open commission to which faculty members, to which students can discuss this whole matter. Bring it out in the open. Let us have a discussion of this.

It seems to me we have been carrying this thing on where you have had students, at least graduate students, and professors, in Canadian universities rushing around surreptitiously trying to gather information; going through presidents' filing cabinets and doing everything they can to find out what is going on. Why not bring it out in the open? Let us have an open discussion of it.

Now, we do suggest in the area of art that Canadianization is important enough that there be Canadian content rules in the CBC.

Well, why does the Minister find it such a pernicious concept that we should legislate, do something specific to indicate to the universities that they should have a degree of Canadian content?

That this should not be just an absence of American professors but Canadianization of the atmosphere—because this whole bit of “publish or perish” and large lecture-style education is essentially American importation. It goes far more than just simply counting heads as to how many Americans there are in the faculty.

It is the total education experience of the young people going through our universities and the way they are going to look at their country; the way they are going to react to the problems in that country. So that it is one of the most important matters I would think that this government could possibly come to grips with.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, just to reply to this very briefly. No one is minimizing the importance. All I am saying is, I think the figures will reveal that the percentage or number of Canadians at every Ontario university will be substantially higher than any American percentage or number, and I am singling out the Americans now, leaving out the U.K. or Commonwealth, and this is never raised. I am very intrigued to a degree, but—I am just saying, I am telling you the fact—it has not been yet. And to say that, you know—

Mr. Pitman: It is a sick society there.

Hon. Mr. Davis: And to say that, you know one could almost get the impression from the hon. member for Peterborough—let us take Trent University with which he is very familiar—let us for fun take Trent because I think it is a very good university, and say that because five per cent of the faculty—

Mr. MacDonald: Name one that you do not think is good.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Five per cent of the faculty at Trent University comes from the United States, 17 per cent from the U.K. or Commonwealth and some 12.5 per cent from other jurisdictions—that because this percentage is much less than the total of 65 from Canada, the faculty, the senate, the people involved in Trent University cannot make these determinations internally. If the hon. member for Peterborough is telling me that the whole programme in Trent has become Americanized in the last couple of years. I do not believe it.

Mr. Pitman: Well, I do not believe it either but—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, why not use that as a relatively typical example?

Mr. T. Reid: Mr. Chairman, I would like to get my two bits in on this. I object strongly as a member of this House to the Minister pointing his finger at my friend from Peterborough and trying to dismiss his argument because he teaches at Trent University. You did that to me last year. Sit down and listen—are you on a point of order or not?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, I—

Mr. T. Reid: Sit down. You did it to me last year.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order, I recognize that on a point of personal privilege the hon. member for Scarborough—

Mr. T. Reid: Are you on a point of order or not?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, I am, personal privilege—

Mr. T. Reid: What is your point of order?

Hon. Mr. Davis: The hon. member suggests that I sit down and I am on a point of personal privilege. I want to point out to him that when I referred to the member for Peterborough, and I know of his very recent—listen, he does not quarrel with it, because Trent University happens to be in his constituency. It is a very good university. He had some association with it, and all I am doing is using it as an example.

Mr. MacDonald: It is also proud of him.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Certainly he is. Why should the hon. member for Scarborough East be embarrassed?

Mr. T. Reid: Point of order. I am not now. Just take this—when you talk to me or you talk to the member for Peterborough, use other universities. Otherwise we will suspect your motives.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh, do not be so sensitive—

Mr. Lewis: You see there are advantages to never having graduated—

Hon. Mr. Davis: I just try to relate things to people; things that people understand; it is as simple as that.

Mr. T. Reid: Mr. Chairman, I would like to suggest to the Minister that one of the things he should get in his data, if he is not already getting it, is the rank and the nationality of members of the faculty and particularly whether or not the chairman of the department has other administrative responsibilities in the university. This is very important. Hopefully he will be getting that.

I would just like to throw out to him some of the very intricate relationships that do exist when we discuss this issue. For example, there tends to be a trend that people who have been educated—Americans have been educated at American high schools and American universities, including their undergraduate work and their graduate work—they tend to view the social sciences in a very quantitative way. This is what the member for Peterborough meant when he talked about psychology being “rat psychology.” The same is true of political science, the same is very true of economics. And what you find because of this cultural bias of American social sciences, as opposed to Canadian, as opposed to many of the approaches taken say in the U.K. and Sweden—

Hon. Mr. Davis: As opposed to, or different from?

Mr. T. Reid:—as opposed to a more philosophical bent in social science and economics, and so forth. You find that the Americanization of the political science department means also that the type of political science being taught is highly quantitative, that there is a reliance on opinion surveys to a great extent, that the whole philosophy of political science gets twisted—let me continue—

Hon. Mr. Davis: I just want to say that must suit you, though—

Mr. T. Reid: Pardon? No, I cannot stand economics; it is the only thing I—

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, no, no. The survey thing. Certainly you are telling us about the surveys you have conducted. You rely on them very heavily.

Mr. T. Reid: No, we are in balance with proper principles and philosophy and views of society—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, and the surveys come in with the information you want.

Mr. T. Reid: Well, if you are doing a survey on the United States issue, what are you going to do?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Sure.

Mr. T. Reid: This is objective—

Hon. Mr. Davis: I read your survey—

Mr. T. Reid: Well, I am waiting to see yours. But the point is that Americanization brings in a whole bunch of related problems, not just the numbers game. It brings in the whole philosophy of what subject matter or what discipline has been taken in that particular department. And there have been examples in this province of Americanization also meaning the quantification of a particular discipline and the pressure on people in that department who happen to be Canadians with research degrees, say, at the London School of Economics or Cambridge—not myself—who have literally been forced out of the department. I think this is the type of sociological input the Minister must consider and study.

The other emphasis—and this is related to my argument about the need for a great deal more unity, perhaps even having a single post-graduate framework for Ontario—is that there is a link between the degree of Americanization in various disciplines and the drive to have a graduate programme at that particular university in that particular discipline. What we have seen in this province over the past four years, as something which is correlated to the degree of Americanization in particular departments, in particular universities, is that drive for graduate programmes. Before, quite often, there was an excellent teaching department within that particular discipline and that particular university.

So, underlining that remark I made about the need for co-operation, if not an institutional framework of some sort for graduate studies in Ontario at all 14 provincially assisted universities, is the view that one of the reasons this must be done is that this is an output of the Americanization of the universities of this provinces. And this is related to what the member for Peterborough is saying. It cannot just be a numbers game, a counting that one must consider—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Surely that is the beginning.

Mr. T. Reid: It is the beginning, but if you are going to dig, let us start digging.

Mr. Lewis: But that has already been done.

Mr. T. Reid: The whole question of the selection of courses for specialization—every year in every department in every university in Ontario there are people in those departments who want to teach their own specialties at third- and fourth-year level, and of course in the graduate level. The whole status relationship, if you like, is being imported in direct representation to the Americanization of the various departments at particular universities. What happens is that someone who has spent five years studying the development of certain Senate committees of the federal government in the U.S. wants to have a graduate course specializing in the analysis of those various committees of the U.S. senate in Washington. So, this type of things is happening.

We find the whole twisting of the curriculum, in terms of specialization, starts to come about, not because of any malicious intent to take over Canada or to take over our universities, but simply because a good academic who has specialized in certain American institutional history, certain types of American political science or economics, is extremely competent—and we are talking about competent people—that they want to teach that speciality. And, for example, if 12 out of 18 members of a political science department are Americans who specialize in these areas of American study, they put pressures—this is a pressure-point argument—for courses in their own specialization, particularly at the graduate school level.

I am just saying that I think the Minister should examine the hypothesis, if you like—I am not prepared to make it as a statement yet—that there is a direct relationship between the Americanization of universities in Canada and the twisting of the whole value structure within the universities toward graduate studies, toward semester work as opposed to term work.

I am the first one to say in conclusion on this point, Mr. Chairman, that a lot of things would happen to Canadian universities, even if we had no American teaching in them, because the pressures across the border are so immense. But surely that is an argument for being even more concerned with this issue that we are raising on this side of the House. If there is an area in which we can do something, in opposition to this flood that is coming across our border—cultural flood, academic flood of ideas and concepts about education—surely that is all the more reason to move in on those areas where we can at least control some of our own destiny in this province and in this country.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Sudbury.

Mr. Sopha: I just wanted to speak on another subject, Mr. Chairman. One joins in this debate with a great sense of trepidation because if you are outside the immediate field of involvement in education, you would recently get the impression that the educators are becoming a priestly cult, and they have entrapped all knowledge, and if you are not the Minister of University Affairs, and if you are not part of his bureaucracy, if you do not belong to OISE and you do not teach at a university, then your opinions on what is going on in the universities is not worthy of much credit.

That is a growing impression, especially since the publication of the Hall-Dennis report, that a mere layman gets of the great world of education. And yet outside, if you are outside, I feel somewhat like the member for Grey-Bruce (Mr. Sargent) in this regard, when he views the lawyers talking about the law. But if you are outside, you see many things that are wrong, that call for correction, and I want to treat one of them and you, Mr. Chairman, will know precisely what I mean when I speak of this. This autumn I tried my darndest, with the greatest effort, to get three students into the law schools, any one of six of them, in Ontario, and I failed dismally.

Each of the law schools apparently the six of them, had had something like 1,100 applications for admission to the first year. Probably there was much duplication, probably a great many arriving at the stage where they were ready to take up the study of law, applied to all six. In the pleas that I made to three of the law schools—I do not mind citing the names of the three that I pleaded with, to let any one of these three in; they were, Osgoode Hall, the University of Toronto and the University of Western Ontario where I have the good fortune to have personal friends on the faculty—the basis I put it on, I thought, was a quite legitimate one.

North of the French we do not have a law school. The students must, perforce, travel some 250 miles, remove themselves from their homes and take up the study of law in a far distant centre. And I thought quite validly that there might be, on the part of the law schools of the province, some sort of definition of area whereby they would allocate a certain number of places—I have lost the attention of the Minister entirely—to people who come from northern Ontario. The reason I feel that, is that when I began to reflect upon it, I realized that in at least three districts of northern Ontario, Mr. Chairman, the districts of Manitoulin, Sudbury and Algoma, all of the lawyers in those districts are located in the major urban centres.

I hastily add that in respect to Manitoulin, the lawyers are located in Sudbury, which serves that district with a lawyer two days away. All of the lawyers in Algoma are in Sault Ste. Marie; all of the lawyers in the district of Sudbury are situated in Sudbury. I suspect that the same obtains for the district of Thunder Bay because they are all located in Port Arthur and Fort William; I suspect the same obtains for the district of Kenora, that they are all located in Kenora, I do not know. It would be interesting for somebody who is aware to tell me whether that is the case. It is said, so far as the southern part of the province is concerned, that one of the staff at Osgoode Hall has made a study of the situation and has determined that there is a surplus of lawyers. That must only be true in Toronto, this metropolitan area. Certainly in northern Ontario, there is no surplus of lawyers, in the light of the geographical basis upon which I put it, Mr. Chairman, and you are very well aware of the difficulties encountered by the large numbers of people who have to travel great distances to avail themselves of legal services.

The second important aspect to emphasize is the very type of people we want in northern Ontario—no, I had better not put it that way—it is in our interest in northern Ontario to attract as many professional people as possible, because without being immodest about it, in many of the centres, especially in many smaller centres, professional people often do and can give that sense of community leadership and do devote themselves toward interest in matters of social concern or, to put it another way, we have a great dearth of professional people in northern Ontario.

I was very much distressed to learn that in our law schools there are quite a number of Americans, quite a number of American students, and I am willing to state as a matter of principle and defend it, that no American student takes away a place in a law school from a native Ontarian. The native Ontario young man has first claim to priority to that place in the law school. And my surprise is somewhat enhanced when I realize that at the end of a course of study in law, in order to practise law, it is necessary to become a citizen of Canada.

"There is no call to the Bar can be made with respect to a person who is not a citizen of Canada, he must swear that oath of allegiance, he must become a British subject"—I think this is the way the law society still puts it, that only a British subject may be a member of the bar. So I wonder about the intentions of these Americans who are at present located in our law schools.

In respect of Osgoode Hall at York, I took this matter up quite extensively with Dean LeDain, and he promised to let me have some figures in respect of the numbers from northern Ontario who are at present in that law school, but I have never heard from him since. I hope he will not mind that reference too much. He just forgot about it, I suppose, but I have noticed in the popular press that he is engaged rather heavily in studying marijuana, or some other exotic substance, and that may be the reason.

But I complained most bitterly about what seems to me something of a discrimination against young people from northern Ontario who might very well, after they are called to the Bar, come back into the north and add to the numbers of those who are in a position to give leadership, a commodity desperately needed in northern Ontario, as Bishop Carter, who has since become a world figure, said a number of years ago at the launching of the University of Sudbury.

And I say that if we are to reach the potential of what is four-fifths of the land mass of Ontario, then we have got to encourage larger numbers of such people to come back there. The older I get the more concerned I become about it and I wonder at some time whether I will leave the field of politics at all and initiate some form of separatist movement in northern Ontario. If we cannot get justice from the people who rule us here in Toronto, then ultimately it will be necessary for us to determine alternative courses of action in respect of that area of Ontario that in so many ways, and in this, seems to be neglected.

I wonder what the Minister of Education and University Affairs and his bureaucrats—and I use that term in its respectable sense, its accurate sense, not the way the Prime Minister uses it, when he uses it, but meaning the people who staff the administrative side of government—I wonder whether his bureaucrats make any regional studies to determine, not only in respect of law, but the other professions like engineering, what the regional quality of the university is, how many people present themselves from the various regions of the province? What legacy of sophisticated and trained talent is available to the various regions, or is it just helter skelter? Another matter of great merriment, as one looks at these educators and the way they run things in this very close-knit world, is that if you have not got 66 per cent you might as well take—what do they call the course now—they take a special course—

An hon. member: Make-up course.

Mr. Sopha: Make-up course. They go back and repopulate the universities for another year in order to make up the marks to get into the professional schools. Well, I am desperately interested in these aspects. After all, people in northern Ontario pay taxes for the support of these institutions the same as anybody else, and they are entitled to expect that sufficient numbers of plain people will come out of the universities and come back to endow their community with their talents. I strongly suspect that the Minister of University Affairs does not care about that aspect at all. It is just a matter of who presents himself, no matter where he comes from, and if he is fortunate enough to get in then that is all well and good and pay no heed to the long-term, sociological implications.

I have long ago learned not to ask the Minister of University Affairs any questions. I do not ask him any questions because you do not get much of an answer from him, and I have adopted the technique for many years now. I tell him what I think he should do. What he should have done a long time ago is take the steps to initiate the founding of a law school at Laurentian. That would be a solution.

We have not got a single professional school in northern Ontario, in the classical professions. We have no medical school. We have no law school. We have no school of engineering. In that type of sophisticated training we have none at all. We have some professional schools in some of the newer disciplines, which is a nice way of putting it. The newer disciplines, such as social work, but—

Hon. Mr. Davis: And teaching!

Mr. Sopha: And teaching!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Not very new!

Mr. Sopha: No, it is not very new. Well, not a profession in the sense of the older ones. But, there is the problem yet: I sit across the lake and I look at Laurentian University with all its troubles; I am not going to relate them here. The Minister will never accuse me of being connected with Laurentian although I am on the board of regents of one of the founding colleges there. But I sit and I look at those buildings across the lake and this is the last point I want to make and I have no reticence about making it at all. You sit and you see the most elaborate, expensive, luxurious—all those words fit—buildings going up and the buildings are related to the comfort of the administration. The administration's comfort comes first. They have the most elaborate office space that would outdo that of any bank president, the president of the CPR or anybody else. You can see that the first priority of the board of governors at Laurentian and the senior administration staff from the president down was to look to their own comfort first.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Sopha: Students come last.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Not at hunting!

Mr. Sopha: Students come last.

Not at hunting; that is true, to their great discredit.

They ought to have established a student centre many years ago. The number of books in the library so far as I am concerned, is deplorable. But what they did is, they built lots of office space and bought a very elaborate home for the president and housed him very well. One of the best houses in town was purchased at a very early time. They bought a whole apartment building for the staff. They just routed everybody out of the apartment building downtown and it is true to say that every contact of Laurentian with the city of Sudbury has been abrasive. It has been an irritable contact. Every time they have come into contact with the community of Sudbury, relations have worsened. And one wonders when the students are going to have adequate facilities in which to meet, discuss and learn from each other and engage in—what is the modern word—dialogue, and do all those sorts of things. But I suppose sometime in the next decade, there might be some hope on the horizon.

Well, a lot of money is spent, but I suppose next year I will be faced with the same problem in respect of the law schools which was the subject that I started out to talk about to these young men who come to me and say: "I tried to get in. I wrote to them all. I have been turned down, and could you be of any assistance?"

Well, of what assistance can a politician be? The one thing you cannot do if you are the true ombudsman, is that you cannot say, "I cannot do anything for you". You cannot close the door or give them a blunt refusal against making some effort. But if you make the effort, you know that you are going to end in failure because you get up against what I call this very cohesive, insulated type of educational clique who in many ways—whose notions appear to be, if I may borrow the word—simplistic.

They will tell you that if you have not got 66 per cent, there is no use applying, and yet there was never any proof that because a law student in the first day had 66 per cent that he was going to end up a better lawyer than a man who had 59 per cent. That proposition needs to be demonstrated. And of course, we know that it cannot be demonstrated.

I just trust that The Department of University Affairs will do something; and I remind myself now I am one of those on the outside looking in, one of the taxpayers and representatives of the taxpayers. I remind myself that the Minister of University Affairs himself, not so many years ago, told the presidents—I think I am right, I think it was the presidents of the universities, a body that seems to have surrounded itself with more power than the Kremlin—but he told them at some dinner that the day would soon come when they would have to be sensitive to the society about them.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, it was actually at a lecture at York University.

Mr. Sopha: All right!

He went on to say that if they did not demonstrate the necessary sensitivity that it would not be long until the public sector would begin to show them how it needed to be done. I think I paraphrased accurately what he said.

Well, this is a good area for him to get started, because I have no difficulty at all in digesting the notion that in the light of the vast amount of money that the public pours into universities, that the public, through the Minister of University Affairs, has a moral right to tell the universities, or suggest to them, or advise them, in what ways they might demonstrate sensitivity to sociological and economic needs.

I have no trouble with that at all and I do not see that interfering with academic freedom, but these institutions operate within the framework of society, they are supported by society, and they must be relevant to the needs of society.

All right; I have spoken, Mr. Chairman, about one area of frustration that I have encountered as a member.

I have been sort of critical of President Mullins, and I just wanted to say this about him. I noticed in a recent meeting that he advocated the early establishment of a law school at Laurentian, and that incensed some of the faculty there. The faculty are not prepared to allow President Mullins to determine the priorities of development of the university, and now they have got a number of the students in support of them, thus adding to the anxieties of President Mullins' life. But they want to wrest those initiatives away from him.

Well, I say, "God speed, President Mullins," in the establishment of a law school and a medical school and any other type of professional faculty. And I want to add this about it—I hope I am not taking up somebody else's time—all the Minister of University Affairs has to do, I say to my friend from Scarborough East, to show the prestige of his position, is to make a speech somewhere. He drops a pearl, and ripples would not be an adequate way to describe the reverberation; he sets up tidal waves, absolute tidal waves.

I recall in that regard that the Minister made a speech somewhere about the establishment of a teachers' college and right away President Mullins wrote to the Minister in the next post and said, "Laurentian—establish it at Laurentian". A few weeks later the Minister made a speech about the establishment of a medical school and the next day President Mullins wrote to him and said "Laurentian".

Hon. Mr. Davis: He does not miss many there.

Mr. Sopha: Well all credit to him.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I have not made a speech about the establishment of another law school.

Mr. Sopha: What President Mullins does not know is that notwithstanding he wrote to the Minister, it may be six or eight months, if ever, before he gets a reply. He may have to send a smoke signal or telephone him or something.

Hon. Mr. Davis: He has got his teachers' college.

Mr. Sopha: Because this Minister certainly is not attentive to his mail, he is not much on the mail, he is not much on answering.

Now if I could briefly advert to the question, I would like to have some form of reply in respect of this vexing problem of assistance to Ontario students studying abroad. I went through the travails of the geographer from Laurentian studying in England. The Minister was not here, but I brought this up under the Treasurer's estimates, and I am not going to repeat that, though it was quite a story.

But yesterday came in the mail a query from a student who is studying at Stratford, a resident of Ontario. He has a wife and one child. He wrote to the member for Eglinton (Mr. Reilly) and myself at the same time; one, because he lived in the Eglinton riding before he went to Stratford, and two, because originally he is from Sudbury. He tells me of the desperate financial straits that he is in, with a wife and child, no resources, and apparently no funds available from the student loan or student awards programme.

I do not see what the justification for that can be, because it is in our own self-interest for these people to go abroad. I do not have to elaborate on, or argue that. That is so perfectly apparent. I know from experience, that the student awards programme is not functioning very well, because they do not answer the mail either. And when you are told about it and write to them; weeks go by, six, seven weeks. Asking for an investigation into the refusal of the many who come to see all of us, you wonder why you have not got a reply. You call them up and you are told that their mailing address is different from their location. The mind really boggles to hear this, but having called up you say, "Why do you not answer your mail? What about these three or four students that I wrote to you about six weeks ago?" Mr. Bethune is not to be criticized because he has not seen your letter at this point. He has not seen it. He is the boss somewhere and he rustles about when he finds your letters, and then gives you a reply.

There has to be something wrong with a system like that for me to say you are spending $1.5 billion and yet you ought to be able to look after your mail a little better.

We may have to do something about cutting down the amount that you have. I really believe—finally, the last point I am going to make—that it is time this Minister got out of his portfolio. He has been too long a time Minister of Education, and I think he has got too close—he really has got too close to a subject—and it is an almost quasi familiar relationship. I was going to use a more colourful word, but I will not. It might be misunderstood, but he knows the word I mean. It is about time that he bailed out so that we may put somebody like the Minister of Mines (Mr. A. F. Lawrence) with some fresh ideas in here to have another look at this whole programme, and I would hope for his own political future—if he does not mind a little free advice at two minutes to six—that for his own political future he might very well divest himself of both portfolios and get into something safe and comfortable, like Attorney General. And the Attorney General (Mr. Wishart) can become the new Solicitor General whenever we appoint such a body.

Now the Premier (Mr. Robarts) is not here. Nobody will tell him that I made those comments, but he has an unerring accuracy of eventually following the Cabinet changes that I advocate. Thank you very much.

It being 6.00 o'clock, p.m., the House took recess.

ESTIMATES, DEPARTMENT OF UNIVERSITY AFFAIRS

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Sudbury East.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): Thank you, Mr. Chairman, for giving me this opportunity, as I have another set of estimates running. I want to turn to a subject that is dear to my heart and, hopefully, it is going to become dear to the Minister's (Mr. Davis's) heart. When the Minister presented us with this booklet, and I read through it, I noticed that the Minister indicated here on page 26, and I quote:

Planning is under way for an addition to the college of education of the University of Toronto and for refurbishing the present building.

I was, to say the least, slightly dismayed, Mr. Chairman, that in there it did not say that plans for a college of education at Sudbury, to be located at Laurentian, were under way.

I want to go back to show the Minister how he can save some money, hopefully, and to prove to him why we must have a college of education in the Sudbury area. I am going to use the material I gathered for the Throne Debate last fall and try to present the same facts, because I believe the Minister was not in the House on that occasion, due to other commitments, and I want to ensure that he knows what I said.

Hon. W. G. Davis (Minister of University Affairs): I read it, but I will listen again.

Mr. Martel: I want to drive the point home tonight, and maybe it will be the coup de grâce that will give a much-needed building and facility in Northern Ontario.

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Minister of Justice): In Sault Ste. Marie.

Mr. Martel: No, I am going to prove to the Minister—

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): The Lakehead.

Mr. Martel: I am going to prove, Mr. Minister, to the Attorney General why—

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): These are all beaten paths.

Mr. Martel:—why Sault Ste. Marie is not the natural choice either.

The college of education could be, and should be, and must be located in the Sudbury area, in northern Ontario immediately. This Ontario College of Education could, in fact, be opened to students in the fall of 1970—I have changed the date because 1969 is now gone by. It must be started in the fall for very valid reasons. One, which has been outlined already, is that some 18 per cent of the teachers in the high schools at the present time are unqualified. The number of unqualified personnel will increase because the emergency courses, for all intents and purposes, in summer schools, except at the Lakehead, have disappeared. This means that complete reliance will have to be placed on the existing college of education for the majority of teachers who will supply the secondary level. This source is inadequate at the present time.

Coupled with this is the fact that the secondary schools will receive their greatest influx of students in the next seven to ten years. One can readily see that we are in for a rather rough time—not just in the north, although primarily in the north, but in southern Ontario as well. As if it were not bad enough, we in the north cannot get graduates from the Ontario College of Education in the south. They just do not go to the north. I believe in our area, in the year 1967-68, we were successful in getting 14 graduates, and in the north as a whole we were successful in getting 65 graduates, out of 1,000 graduate students from the Ontario Colleges of Education. Even those university graduates from the north do not return in great numbers to the north.

To substantiate this, Mr. Chairman, I would like to quote some studies recently done in England on regional colleges of education. It was revealed that students travelling long distances to colleges of education did not tend to return to their place of origin in significantly large percentages, but rather stayed and accepted positions in the proximity of the college of education which they were attending.

A paper in the magazine Education for Teaching in the autumn of 1967, called "Regional Origins of Students in Colleges of Education" by William Taylor, refers to a study made of a college of education in the Bristol area in southwestern England. The study was made over a period of years and it was noted that approximately 80 per cent of the students attending it came from within a radius of approximately 50 miles. Of this 80 per cent, two-thirds accepted positions in the local schools in that area after graduation. The other 20 per cent came mostly from Wales—approximately 100 miles away—and of this 20 per cent, it is significant, Mr. Chairman, that only three per cent returned to Wales to teach upon graduation.

The author of this report argued that the low rate of mobility for 80 per cent of the students was as a direct result of the regional nature of the college. Had the college been farther away from the area, the local schools would have been much less well served, and certainly this holds true in northern Ontario. For the purpose of this report, we might call this a factor of loss by osmosis. The osmosis might be the result of practical teaching experience in local schools. The pressure exerted by salesmanship of local school boards and by principals during the period of training, and a natural tendency by students to locate for their early years of teaching in a known educational environment.

It is quite obvious, when we take all of these matters into consideration, that unless a college of education be opened up in northern Ontario, we are confronted with some rather grave problems. It follows that a college of education must be located in the north and I want to suggest—and I am not being parochial, Mr. Chairman—the Sudbury area. It might appear that way but hopefully when I get through even the Attorney General will agree with us that it is imperative that it go to the Sudbury area. I hope he is listening.

In the various documents that have come out in the last two or three years, including "Living and Learning" and the McLeod report, it has been indicated that teachers' colleges should house teacher training from kindergarten to grade 12 or 13 and a teacher attending one of these should be able to teach at any level. That is, if my understanding of these documents is correct. Let me quote from the recommendations of the McLeod report:

A programme for teacher education be provided by universities. The programme be of four-year duration, leading to a baccalaureate degree and professional certification, elementary and secondary school education be offered within the same university.

Mr. Chairman, the same university and by the same university. This is according to McLeod and the Hall-Dennis report.

If we are going to try to establish this in the north, we should try to establish it in a locality that is central. Consider the area that I feel a college of education should serve—it would include the North Bay area, the Timmins area, Sault Ste. Marie and Sudbury.

With the Timmins to Sudbury highway nearing completion—we were guaranteed last night by the Minister of Highways (Mr. Gomme) that it would be completed by 1970—this means the Timmins students could drive down in a couple of hours. With North Bay only 80-odd miles from Sudbury and with the Soo 200 miles, roughly, from Sudbury, you have a focal point that brings students by a variety of means of transportation—primarily road for university students, I would imagine—to an area that is focal or central to the whole region. I see the Attorney General watching me; I am sure the Attorney General has to agree on that point anyway.

At the present time, by the way, included as modes of transport there is air, the CNR and the CP, so you do not have much of a problem—it is a very central location. But what also is very interesting is that at North Bay, you are in the process, or contemplating, planning building an elementary school or training school for elementary teachers associated with Nipissing; at Laurentian, you are now building or finishing an Ecole Normale and you are contemplating a teachers' college in the Lakehead or an OCE. That is three different structures.

The point is are we going to adhere to this policy? If we are going to have plans from people who do studies and make reports and then we ignore the reports, this seems to be ridiculous. You are going to end with three universities, three libraries this way; you are going to end up with three gymnasiums, three cafeterias. Three of everything, Mr. Minister, including classrooms.

Yet, the studies indicate that rather than having this diversity all over the province, we should be trying to consolidate it and put it in an area which would satisfy the need. I do not think there is an area—and I am not being parochial again—outside of Sudbury that can serve the whole mass of northeastern Ontario if you locate it at the Soo or at the Lakehead.

Mr. J. Jessiman (Fort William): You are a little loose on your mileage.

Mr. Martel: Students are not going to go to the Lakehead from North Bay, they are not going to go from Timmins and they are not going to go from Sudbury. I doubt if they will go there from the Soo because the transportation is not adequate. They will come to southern Ontario. If you are going to try to save the province money, the time to do it is now while only one structure is being built; the Ecole Normale which is almost completed.

If you are going to serve a bilingual community, it would be advisable, where an Ecole Normale is being constructed, to finish that aspect including the training of French high school teachers and fill in the rest of the complex with the English counterpart right there. We would not have triplicate facilities being built. This would greatly reduce the cost to the province, transportation-wise and so on, as already indicated; it is there. There are a lot of other reasons, sociological reasons. For example, the people in Timmins have many related people in Sudbury because they are involved in mining industries; they know many people. It makes it much simpler to find accommodation. I am just trying to get a few more reasons.

Mr. Jessiman: You had better check with the hon. member for Thunder Bay.

Mr. Martel: For the member for Fort William, I am not trying to eliminate the necessity for a teachers' college there. It serves 200,000 people maybe?

Mr. Jessiman: Locally 250,000.

Mr. Martel: The area I am talking about serves 700,000 people. Another factor, of course, is in teacher training you have to have good high schools. I think that the Soo has certainly some high schools which have top-notch performances. So has the Sudbury area, North Bay and Timmins. We have the real training ground for students who are attending Laurentian, Nipissing and Algoma to train and stay right in the area. I say, economically and logically and in keeping with the reports of the various committees, that there is only one area in which this Minister can move to save the province money and to provide the best teachers possible for northern Ontario, and that is at Laurentian. I would appreciate the Minister's comments.

Mr. Jessiman: The member for Thunder Bay should be defending his own area.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I anticipated that the member might want some reply. This has been discussed, of course, on other occasions.

I would point out two or three things to him. I am sure that he would agree with these. Firstly, as far as the department is concerned, the question of the integration of teacher education into the universities is something that is in a state now of flux; it is in process, and of course, we can apply other thoughts to it that perhaps were not possible some two or three years ago.

I think one should also point out to the hon. member that there already is an existing facility at Thunder Bay. It is a very fine facility, and I am sure he would not want to see it not used, so perhaps it would make sense to continue with the teacher education programme there. I do not think there is any doubt, and I would agree with the member for Sudbury, who did not really ask me to reply, I think he told me, 'you will put a faculty of law in Laurentian' — I do not think there is any doubt that if there is a faculty there, a professional faculty, there is no question of the possibilities of creating an interest and retaining people in those geographic areas; no doubt that they are better than if there are no facilities there.

We found this with the interim summer course at the Lakehead this year for secondary school teachers. Now, can the member now question the validity of the course per se? That may be a subject for some other occasion, but the fact is, it was oversubscribed and the teachers were prepared to stay in the northwest and the northeast. There is no doubt this attracted a number of secondary school teachers into the profession who otherwise would not have gone if the course had not been offered in the Lakehead. I can only say to the hon. member that we recognize the new college that is being built at Laurentian which will be integrated, of course, with that institution, that one should always broaden one's horizons and anticipate the possibility of extending it into the secondary school field as well.

Mr. Martel: Could I ask the Minister one question? Is there a possibility you might just delay the addition to the University of Toronto and the updating to at least provide us with a much, much needed facility? You now have—what is it? McCarthy?

Hon. Mr. Davis: MacArthur.

Mr. Martel: MacArthur. You have got University of Toronto. Where else have you got OCE located in southern Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Davis: London.

Mr. Martel: The south has some. We do not have any, you know. We northerners get rather frustrated at the slowness in which things come to the north. In other words, when the demand is filled in the south, then we might consider the north. In this case I am asking the Minister to consider the north first and allow those people at the University of Toronto to just put up with the inadequate facilities for the present time. But at least provide us with a facility.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, I will not prolong this but if the hon. member would discuss this just very briefly with the hon. member for Scarborough West (Mr. Lewis), he will recall, I am sure, a speech, a rather impassioned plea that he made, relative to the totally inadequate facilities, he calls it, up at OCE here in Toronto. He said: "Mr. Minister, it is time to get that rebuilt, or renovated, or build a new facility." He really had that as one of his number one priorities.

Mr. MacDonald: You have a lot of catching up to do with this government.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Listen, we are always in the process, but I think perhaps we might check this out.

Mr. MacDonald: What was it Dr. Jackson said—100 years behind the times and we have gained about 50?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, that was five years ago so I think if you asked him today, as I said in the education committee—

Mr. MacDonald: You are now only 25 years behind.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, no. He would say we are perhaps even ahead of time now.

Mr. MacDonald: You are going to trip over your own feet if you do not look out.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, one has to be careful of that. However, I think it should be pointed out that to say we have completely neglected teacher education in the north is not quite right because the new teachers' college at Laurentian will be a very excellent facility, a first class facility.

Mr. Martel: No one is disputing that. All I want is a college of education.

Hon. Mr. Davis: All right. All you want is a college of education. I have made a note.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Correctional Services): Will yesterday be soon enough?

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Chairman, I would like to renew my annual plea to the Minister for reconsideration of the way the Ontario student awards plan operates in relation to students attending American universities. Coming, as I do, from the southwestern part of Ontario, a lot of our students have only one alternative when it comes to certain types of education and that is to go into the United States for their education.

However, the department, in its student award programme, does not allow the students any portion of their award to be recognized as an award and as a result this is a real penalty to the student who can travel just across the border and get a type of education and in some type of discipline that he cannot get here in the province of Ontario. May I, at this time then, ask the Minister if he is giving any consideration to changing the student award programme so that the student attending an American university would be treated the same as the student attending a Canadian university and not discriminated against in relation to the award programme?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, I find the suggestion a little more intriguing this year than last year after listening to some of the discussions earlier this afternoon. We could almost say there is a bit of a contradiction. We were discussing, Mr. Chairman, this afternoon the desirability or the concern — I think a very valid concern — about the possibilities of others than Canadians — if I can phrase it that way—in our universities; the desirability to improve the numbers of Canadians, the Canadian content. And then we are asked, when resources are limited, to provide student assistance for those students who will be studying outside the province.

Mr. E. W. Sopha (Sudbury): Surely, this is different.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am not saying it is exactly the same but surely if there is—

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Then why are you wasting our time with all that? It is a different case!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Because I think it is partially relevant.

Mr. Sopha: Well, this is very spurious.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, I think that if funds are limited surely we have the obligation to apportion those funds. I would agree with the member for Sudbury with respect to entrance into professional faculties. I think priority should go in that instance to students from Ontario or Canada, and I think priority has to go—if there is a limitation on funds — to students who are studying in Ontario institutions.

You know, if funds were totally unlimited—in other words if we had all that anybody would wish for this type of programme — sure you might consider it. But surely, if we have to, as we do, set certain priorities, the priority must be for students in our own jurisdiction. There is nothing I think illogical about that.

Mr. B. Newman: The Minister does not understand though that if some of these students were to attend a Canadian university, you would have to give them a much larger award than what you would give them were they attending an American university. You are really saving money by allowing them to go to school in the United States.

You would have to come along and build at least one more university in Ontario to accommodate those Canadians or those Ontario students who are attending American universities at the present time. So you are really saving money, Mr. Minister, by providing them with some type of forgivable loan or by allocating some part of that award programme that would be forgiven, to those students who are attending American universities.

Were American universities to treat the Canadian students and the Ontario student exactly the same way as we treat American students I would not be as critical as I am. But the American university charges the Canadian student a higher tuition than the Canadian university charges an American student.

For example, in the State of Michigan right now, a Michigan resident pays $480 to attend university and the Canadian has to pay $1,670 in Canadian funds to take that same programme at the American university.

If they are going to penalize our students for attending their institutions then I think that we should have reciprocal agreements with them. We should require their students attending our universities to pay a triple tuition fee just as they charge our students.

I am not asking for that really. What I am asking you to do is to give consideration to the Canadian student and the Ontario student, and I will make the plea for the Windsor resident student who is attending a school in Detroit or its environs.

He cannot, in a lot of cases, get that programme in a Canadian university, but he can over there in the U.S. You are discriminating against him; you are being completely unfair to that student who would like to further his education in the U.S.

You may say, well he is going to get his education over there and he does not return. With the new immigration laws, there is a two-year waiting period right now for anyone attempting to enter the United States by visa.

He has two years to wait before they will even consider his application. So, Mr. Minister, you are being completely unfair to students who could travel only two or three miles, or maybe five miles, to get an education. You would prefer to have that student come back into Ontario and travel 120, 230, or 370 miles for that education. I am referring to London, Toronto and Kingston.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Would you not like to have—

Mr. B. Newman: Well, they cannot get the programme in Windsor. I am referring to students who cannot get the programmes they want in Windsor.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No student at all?

Mr. B. Newman: Then our Canadian universities will not accept that student with a Grade 12 education.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Quite.

Mr. B. Newman: Whereas the American universities will accept that, and yet that same student will get that degree from an American university and he will come back and be accepted as a teacher in a Canadian university. Yes, they are accepted. They are teaching at St. Clair College, they are teaching at the University of Windsor. See how you are discriminating against the Canadian who wants to attend an American university. You are being completely unfair with him and I think you should reconsider your attitude towards the student loan with these Canadian students—and I should really refer to the Ontario students attending universities in the United States.

One of the universities over there, that I can mention, Mr. Chairman, has nine per cent Canadian students. Nine per cent of the university with a population of 18,000. If we had to turn around—and provide a university in here for those approximately 1,500 students, you would have to build another facility in here. Why don't you see this, Mr. Minister, and have some consideration for the Canadian and the Ontario student who wishes to get his education in the U.S.? It is cheaper for you in the long run.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, with great respect, it is not cheaper in the long run. A good number of the students who are going to Michigan, to Michigan State—very fine universities—to Wayne, another institution of higher learning in the State of Michigan, and elsewhere, are doing so with Grade 12. The hon. member knows this. It is also, I think, relevant to point out that we have a number of American students studying here in this jurisdiction who have “replaced” Ontario students going elsewhere, but I do not think that it would be necessarily a question of replacing.

These facilities are built in here in this province. I think there would be other ways, but hopefully this sort of situation will not arise. We are in this position, Mr. Chairman: Who has the first priority, if there are limitations of funds, a student who wants to go to Erindale College—I won't go to Trent or York, I do not want to upset anybody—or a student who wishes to attend Wayne? And while the member for Sudbury says that my argument is a bit specious, I am not sure. What about the cultural influence, the Americanization of students who are studying in the United States, who will be returning to this jurisdiction? That is a bit of a contradiction to some of the things we were saying earlier.

Mr. B. Newman: All right, if the Minister considers that a contradiction, why does not the Minister consider then, buying out the radio station in Windsor, CKLW that is up for sale right now, and have that as an outlet, so that at least we can come along and have Canadian content over that television station rather than practically all American content? So, Mr. Minister, you are speaking out of both sides of your mouth at the same time.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Why not—

Mr. B. Newman: We have a facility that is available and can be used very well for educational purposes, and you are going to allow it to carry on the same ways that it has in the past. So, Mr. Minister, what is the difference whether a student goes to university over there and he comes back and is productive in Canada? It matters not.

Mr. R. Haggerty (Welland South): Or you hire professors from the United States.

Mr. B. Newman: Or you hire professors from the United States says the hon. member from Welland. Mr. Minister, you are completely wrong in your approach. You are completely wrong and I hope—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh, I do not think so.

Mr. B. Newman: You are completely wrong and I hope you would certainly reconsider. I notice your Deputy comes from Windsor, and I think that he should brainwash you a bit, so that you—

Mr. Nixon: What do they do for an education down there?

Mr. B. Newman: Were is not for the facilities across the border, he probably would not be where he is today.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I would say this, that somebody much closer than the Deputy Minister has a certificate from Michigan.

Mr. B. Newman: The only thing is that I am a little disappointed that he has not been able to point out to the Minister the discrimination that the Minister is practising in not allowing a student to attend a university of his choice. He tells him he has got to go to an Ontario university or he will slap his wrist and not give him a student award.

Hon. Mr. Davis: We do not slap their wrist at all. We leave them alone.

Mr. B. Newman: Mr. Minister, why do you not treat the Ontario student attending an American university the same way as you treat a Canadian student attending a Canadian university? You are discriminating against them.

Mr. MacDonald: I got your point.

Mr. B. Newman: Well, I know, but I am trying to drive it into the Minister's head, this is the thing. It will never help convincing the hon. member.

Mr. W. G. Pitman (Peterborough). It may very soon.

Hon. Mr. Davis: You do not really believe that.

Mr. B. Newman: Well, apparently that fell on infertile ground. I will only tell the Minister now that when we come back in here next year, you will hear the same thing and you will hear it until we are over there forming the government, Mr. Chairman.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, we will both be old, old men by that time.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Do not be so smug, you are on the skids now.

Mr. Pitman: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if I might add to the plea of the member for Windsor-Walkerville, in relation to this whole business of the process of awards before I begin the main comment I want to make.

It seems to me that an even more serious problem exists in our country in that students who go from province to province are placed at a serious disadvantage. I think that this is something that surely should come before the council of ministers, and which surely should be resolved as soon as possible. Because if we are going to have national institutions in our country, if, indeed, we are going to have, particularly French speaking students coming into Ontario—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, if we are talking about students awards; a student who is studying in another province is eligible for assistance, if they qualify.

Mr. Pitman: No, I mean those who are coming from another province to Ontario—

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, but any student from Ontario, is looked after if they go elsewhere in Canada.

Mr. Pitman: Yes, but I am talking essentially about the Minister's jurisdiction, although it is not his responsibility.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, okay.

Mr. Pitman: I am concerned about the fact that there are universities in Ontario who are encouraging students to come from other jurisdictions, other provinces of Canada, who want, indeed, to build a national university—well, with specific purposes. Let us take Glendon College, which is attempting to draw people from other parts of Canada, and particularly trying to draw them from the province of Quebec, and I think that the whole thrust of this university is distorted as a result of the fact that this cannot be done. I would ask the Minister, in relation to this same problem, to bring this matter, with some degree of effectiveness before the council of Ministers because I think this is really distorting his own jurisdiction here in Ontario. I think there are students in Saskatchewan, in Alberta, in British Columbia, who would like to be in an Ontario university, and I think there are Ontario students who should be meeting those students in an Ontario university. Even more so, there are students from Quebec who should be at an Ontario university, if we are going to create some kind of nationality.

I am not going to get into the Americanization argument again, but simply to indicate, if we want to really "Canadianize" Ontario universities, I think this should be the first step we should take.

Hon. Mr. Davis: It is expensive.

Mr. Pitman: I recognize that, but the cheapest way to give university education in Ontario would be to have every student, indeed to force every student, to go to the university which would be within 50 miles. You could draw circles and make everyone go "local" the same as you do with teachers' colleges. But you would not want to do that. That is not the kind of university spectrum you would want to produce in this province, and you encourage students, if they wish, to go to other universities because of the educational experience available.

In fact, you do not even do it for arts and science, which I think is important. There are students who are going right across the province to secure arts and science courses at the University of Windsor, who could be getting that course at Carleton, and it is a very good thing that there is that kind of a mix in each university. Well, I am suggesting that that mix should be broadened, should be Canadianized, and I would hope that the Minister might work on that in his usual effective way at the council of Ministers the next time he is there.

May I turn to another point, Mr. Chairman, which I want to deal with, I hope not at too great length. I suggested last year, in my comments on the University Affairs estimates, that this province desperately needs some kind of a five-year plan. We are still operating year by year, and it is very difficult for universities to know exactly where they are going on this basis. The second point I would like to make is that I think someone must decide exactly what we are doing. What kind of a pattern of post-secondary education are we trying to produce in this province?

Now I know the Minister will probably say that this is the job of the Commission to Study Post-Secondary Education, and although we must congratulate the Minister for having appointed the commission, I would very much like to know how the commission is getting along; how many meetings has it had. The statement of the Minister indicated that we would be getting a report from time to time, but I do not think we have had a report yet, and I suggest to the Minister that the decisions which he has given to that commission to make are crucial, are critical at this point in time. I suspect that with the delay in appointing the commission, we may very well have made a number of decisions which we will not be able to reverse, and that unless we move very, very quickly, that we are going to be, I think, in some serious trouble.

I suggest to the Minister that Ontario is in limbo between what is essentially two different traditions. We have the British tradition on the one hand, which tends to consider university as an experience which really is relevant to a fairly small number of the population, perhaps only 8, 9 or 10 per cent. Then you have the American tradition across the border which essentially regards the university as an extension of compulsory universal education; well, perhaps not compulsory, but at least universal education. One tries to find exactly where the Minister of Education in Ontario stands in this game.

Mr. J. L. Brown (Beaches-Woodbine): Impossible.

Mr. Pitman: Well, you see, the problem is that this, I think, is a basic point. Last year in his remarks, and on the introduction to the estimates the Minister said that by 1975 I think, he would have double the number of enrollments in the universities in Ontario. He said by that time he would probably have 25 per cent of the age group from 18 to 21 at the university level. And he said that probably about 25 per cent would be in the colleges of applied arts and technology by the same time.

Now, my question really is, where do you get this figure. Where does the 25 per cent come from? And is 25 per cent at the bottom of the projection, or the top of the projection? And is that what the Minister regards as the plateau at which we start to level out, or is it simply 25 per cent on the way to 50 per cent, 60 per cent, 70 per cent. In other words, exactly, where are we going?

This, I think, is the problem that the universities are facing. But the problem is that this decision is not being made by the Minister; it is not being made by the politicians and I think it is the responsibility of the politicians, to decide the ends of the educational system. I suggest to the Minister that really, the means are deciding the ends, and I am not at all sure that the Minister has very clearly in his mind what the end is.

I know that anyone who says we should restrict the university population to a certain percentage of the population is immediately going to be put upon by all sorts of people for being an elitist, for being an intellectual snob and all sorts of other things. But I do suggest to the Minister that he is realistic enough to know that we have to make a decision, that putting 100 per cent of the age group from 18 to 21, or even 50 per cent of the age group from 18 to 21 in a university may very well be somewhat beyond the means of this province, if the university education means in 1985 what university education means in 1969. In other words—

Hon. Mr. Davis: But will it, this is the point?

Mr. Pitman: Well, I suggest that is a very pointed question. Will it? That is exactly what people in universities are asking. Is the Minister really suggesting to us that what we want really is not a university but a post-secondary institution of a pseudo university type. Now, I think this is an important point because if you look at formula financing I would say this is the means that the Minister is using to try and place the money in the hands of the universities.

We will come back to formula financing in another context, I hope, in a few minutes, but I think that that procedure, for example, does encourage universities to add to their numbers. It encourages universities to go out and procure students. It encourages universities, in some cases, not to be quite as definitive as they might be as to who would benefit best from their programmes, because the larger you get, the sooner will your formula financing make your university financially viable, and I think this is a very real problem. As well as that, it encourages large classes, the very things that the students are concerned about. It encourages post-graduate work, and post-graduate work of such a quantity that the nature may very well be undermined.

Universities may feel that they are being pressured, being influenced to encourage post-graduate work in Ontario, because, of course, it is by that means that you get "money in the bank," once you have enlarged your post-graduate course beyond a certain level.

At the same time you are using this system of encouraging universities to enlarge, what I call the Grade 13 machine disappears. Now, with all of its faults and heaven only knows I would agree with the Minister that we did blessed little, I think, to improve the Grade 13 examination over the years—to make it a more reasonable method of sorting out those who should go on and those who should not—at least, not those who should go on and those who should not, but rather sorting out the direction that young people should go once they have reached Grade 13.

The point is that there is nothing now, at all. Last year I discussed with the Minister what 60 per cent meant and he kept saying that the 60 per cent is what the universities required. I kept saying to the Minister that 60 per cent really does not mean very much now, because 60 per cent may be very different in one school to another.

I think now what you are going to see happen is the universities are going to say, "Look, we don't know what 60 per cent is, not only that but we don't even know whether the universities will give us a mark of 60 per cent", they are starting to use A, B, C, D, or Roman numerals, I, II, III and IV, which all mean different marks in different schools.

On top of that, really what the Minister wants is an individual education in an individual high school, so what we will do is we will simply ask each principal to hand us a statement saying, "Well, he has completed Grade 13" or whatever the Minister calls Grade 13 at that point in time, or "We think he should be at a university" and passes it on to the university who then use their tests and their various methods to decide who is going to go in and who is going to stay out. But this is going to be very difficult for the Minister and it is going to be very difficult politically for universities (a) to have to turn down people who previously would have received perhaps an entrance to university and, (b) it is going to be even more difficult if it means they are not going to get the formula financing advantage which they would have by enlarging their institutions.

I think this is a very real problem because certainly the presidents in their annual review for 1968-69 "Campus Forum," bring up this whole matter, discussing the whole question of formula weights. They discussed the problem on page 28, the fact that they assumed that the basic unit should rise to 11 per cent. Of course, the decision was that it should go to 5.5 per cent.

"As a result," as the presidents themselves say, "three universities reported they had budgeted for a deficit. Some stated new programmes had been cut back or postponed. Renovation and maintenance of physical plant, or replacement of furniture and equipment were cancelled at most universities, as was the purchase of library books."

A moment ago the Minister said maybe university education is going to change. Well, if that is the case—

Hon. Mr. Davis: I did not say that.

Mr. Pitman: Well, he said perhaps it is going to change.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, all right.

Mr. Pitman: The point is I am simply trying to quote the Minister accurately, and in all fairness I think it is important that universities know if the Minister does want university education to change, if they are expected to plan the educational experience at the university level.

If it really will be an extension of the secondary school, then I think they can stop fighting against what is an impossible task, and that is to provide what the Minister calls university education a la 1960 in 1970 when they will not have the resources to do this, and when they are going to be forced, as the presidents themselves say, to increase in average class size.

Are there any two elements which are more related to quality of education? This is the problem that a great many of the universities face, as the Minister knows. They could not cut down in the wages of professors because it is quite impossible against the rising cost of living to suggest that the professors' wages could be either cut or that they could be held below the ten per cent increase which you find going across the province.

It is in these crucial places of library books, and particularly in the area of size of classes that the crunch really comes. This is the whole point.

Are we going to lower the quality of education, university education in Ontario, on the basis that we are trying to have an open-ended system over which there is no control related either to a Grade 13 mark, and where there is an encouragement in the formula of financing, to increase the size of the universities so that the per unit cost will be less and less?

I raised the point of autonomy last year. The Minister said in his opening remarks, "There is, therefore, no more indication in 1968 than previously to indicate who shall teach, who shall be taught, or what shall be taught at a university in Ontario.

I think the pressure now is certainly on what shall be taught. I think it is now very clear that no new courses in certain areas are going to be accepted, so that in a sense that is a levelling off in autonomy.

But I suggest to you it is also, I think, undermining the autonomy to decide on what kind of education is going to be given, how many are going to be forced on the universities to make them financially viable. What classes are they going to have in order to be financially viable?

It seems to me that the major decision has to be made and it has to be made politically. I do not think the report on the post-secondary education can make these things. I think, essentially, the Minister has to make the decisions.

Where does 25 per cent come from? Where does the Minister decide on a point like that?

I would have said 10 years ago, maybe 15 years ago, the Minister would have said, "But you are going to deprive people of education after they have reached the age of 18, or after they have ended their high school career". But that is not true today.

We have provided a spectrum. The colleges of applied arts and technology are able to provide a very wide spectrum. It seems to me that somebody has to make the decision.

Now, for example, I just question, are the same number able, you might say, to succeed or to have a valuable educational or intellectual experience in university as they can do so at a college of applied arts and technology?

I do not care what you want to use. If you want to use SACU results, if you want to use tests, intelligence tests. Does that sort them out? 25 per cent?

If you look at the employment market, that is where the young people are going. I would not regard this as the first priority, as the Minister knows, but if you are going to look at that, is there, you might say, appropriate employment for 25 per cent as they leave the universities as compared to the colleges of applied arts and technology?

In other words, does the economic system in Canada and in Ontario expect the universities to provide the university education for 25 per cent of the population to go into their business organizations? 25 per cent that go on to the colleges of applied arts and technology, or is it, rather, 15 per cent and 35 or 40 per cent in the colleges of applied arts and technology? I do not know.

I say to the Minister that somebody has to make this kind of decision, and it is not being made. In fact, one might even go on—and I am going to speak with a great deal of, I hope, kindness and delicacy on this point—because I think it has some merit. Our problem is, I think, that we are not sure exactly what the Minister does decide about the universities in Ontario.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I act on the advice of my committee; they are very good people.

Mr. Pitman: I know. That is the very point. The committee, of course, is chaired by Dr. Wright.

Hon. Mr. Davis: A very able man.

Mr. Pitman: Dr. Wright is one of the most able men. He has made a great contribution to university education in Ontario.

Hon. Mr. Davis: He is here; he is listening.

Mr. Pitman: I am very pleased to know that because I am going to have some more things to say. I am so glad that Dr. Wright is here, because I say this in all honesty, Mr. Chairman, someone—was it Lord Acton said, "Power corrupts, and absence of power corrupts absolutely", and I say of the Minister he is corrupting Dr. Wright.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The member must have got that information from a spy in the department.

Mr. Pitman: I question whether any man should be given the responsibility, the heavy onerous responsibility, of being the chairman of the committee of university affairs with all that that entails over extended years, at the same time being asked to write a constitution for the college of arts, which of course becomes in a sense an influence on post-secondary education across this province, at least in terms of the structure of university governments or post-secondary institutional governments. And at the same time, the Minister loads on the chairmanship—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh, no, let us not impose too much on Professor Wright's physical well-being. He finished the report on the college of arts.

Mr. Pitman: Indeed he did.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well before he undertook this other task. I would not want the members to think we are overworking him that much.

Mr. Pitman: Well, you have imposed upon him again by making him the chairman of the committee—

Hon. Mr. Davis: We did indeed.

Mr. Pitman: You placed him in a rather embarrassing position of examining his own work.

Hon. Mr. Davis: But he is not embarrassed at all.

Mr. Pitman: At the same time, I suggest to the Minister, there are political decisions which Dr. Wright should not be expected to make—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Quite right, and we will make them.

Mr. Pitman: The Minister has to decide what the plan is. The committee for university affairs is dealing with individual universities and rightly so. The Minister is going to stand up and say, "You wouldn't want to go away from formula financing back to that old nasty political system of handing out money to the universities on the basis of how they appear, who they appear with before the Minister." No, I would not.

Mr. MacDonald: It was known as the Frost dole.

Mr. Pitman: I do suggest to the Minister though that he has to set the goals of what we are trying to do at the post-secondary level. This government has to set the goals.

To try some cutting back and perhaps undermining what you have already done in many areas—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, who is doing that?

Mr. Pitman: I think there is a feeling in all universities across the province that there has been, let us say, less money available to universities over the last years than there was over the previous five or six years. I do not think that is an unfair statement.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I think it is. When the member is finished I will—

Mr. Pitman: Yes, I will be very pleased to—

Hon. Mr. Davis: I know you want to spend more, I know you think they should have more.

Mr. Pitman: You see, the Minister is making an off-hand judgment on what he thinks I am going to suggest. I am not necessarily suggesting that the universities should spend more.

I think what the Minister must decide is what should the universities do, and then we can decide whether they can spend more, or indeed spend less. It may very well be that it would be in the best interests of Ontario and the young people of Ontario that, as I say, the percentage of the 18-21 year olds should be 15 per cent in university, 45-50-60-80 per cent in the college of arts and technology.

I do not know, but it would seem to me that this is the kind of decision that is a political decision that has to be made by the Minister of Education and the Minister of University Affairs, and the Minister is not making this kind of decision.

He is simply opening the door to an open-end system without making decision, without deciding what these goals should be. I suggest to the Minister that this is not appropriate, I think, in the situation we find ourselves in Ontario today.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, just to comment, I hope very briefly. I think the government has had a stated goal or philosophy. If the member from Peterborough is listening very closely, the policy simply is this:

We have developed the post-secondary institutions, particularly the universities, on the basis of accepting all those students who wish and have the qualifications to attend. I think it is a very simple policy.

Mr. Pitman: But there is no such thing as qualifications; qualifications will not exist.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, with respect Mr. Chairman, the member from Peterborough really is perhaps a shade ahead of many of his academic colleagues. I do not know where he got the impression that qualifications of some kind—

Mr. Pitman: Oh, of some kind—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Right . . . will not exist and I would think that with respect, once again, you will be getting probably in percentage increases roughly the same numbers. Whether or not you will get different mixes over the period of years, whether there will be any alteration when we move to an ungraded situation at the secondary level, I do not know but that it will be that substantial. We have been without the Grade 13 examinations now for two years and I think, as we understand it, the rate of failure at the universities has not altered very significantly.

The percentage increase beyond that which we projected has been somewhat higher, but not necessarily related to Grade 13 and also related to economic factors and the level of competence being determined by the business and industrial community. Mr. Chairman, for me to say today what the objectives should be of the total university community staying out of context, and all the rest of it, but what the objectives should be say by 1985, is a very difficult task. With great respect to Dr. Wright and his colleagues, I think they will come in with some helpful recommendations. But with great respect to them again, I am not sure that they can look that well into a crystal ball and make these determinations.

If somebody had been standing here 20 years ago and had said that by 1970 we will have 20 per cent of the age group 18-23 or whatever age group we are using, in universities in this province—100,000 students—I would think, Mr. Chairman, that there would be many people who would have doubted this prognostication. In fact, I think they would have said he was all wet.

Mr. Nixon: There might have been some who would have thought it a bit conservative.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well 20 years ago, it certainly would have been a conservative statement from here.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Brown: It would have been good to have somebody say it.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, well the point is Mr. Chairman: We had enunciated an objective as of 70-71 of 100,000 students. It represents 20 per cent. You know, I do not know that anyone in our society today can say that by 1980, it should be, shall we say, 30 per cent or 35 per cent of the age group. I think these things, to a degree, are determined by the needs of society and what happens with the total educational picture. And while I recognize the desirability, it would be tremendous if I could put down in black and white here tonight for the member from Peterborough just how I see things developing over the next 15 or 20 years in a way that would be totally acceptable to all of us. I just do not have this capacity and I do not know that there are many people who do. If you look into the other fields of post-secondary education, there are even some members here—I do not think they really meant it—who were somewhat dubious about just how successful the community college programme would be in a relatively short period of time.

Mr. MacDonald: You were dubious enough that you did not get them started until graduates were pouring out of the four year stream.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh well, Mr. Chairman, that is not quite accurate either but we will not go back into that debate. But the point is that I think they have been singularly successful. Not just in terms and numbers. This is no—you know—single basis to judge anything; but in terms of numbers, quality of programme and the relevance of the programmes to our existing society. Certainly the commission will have some of the answers. The department itself is working on answers. The advisory committee does, and to relate this to formula financing, with respect, Mr. Chairman, is not right either. You know, we are all having to tighten our belts and any interpretation by the universities that the fact that there are only 50 million dollars in addition to last years' amount to distribute for the increased enrollment and the viable functioning of our institutions of higher learning, our universities in this province, any thought that this indicates any—shall we say, change in approach or philosophy is just not factually correct.

We want to see the universities to continue to develop the quality of their programme—this is still our policy. And this may be a problem for us. I am not denying that, economically. To admit those students who have the qualifications and who wish to attend, may be very tough, looking ahead three or four years. All you have to do is project the increase in numbers and the increase in dollars at the present figures and add to that whatever escalation there could conceivably be over the next five years and you come up with some very staggering figures. But this is the present situation. We have asked the universities, or the committee has, for their own five year projections of growth and needs. These have been coming in now for two years, or at least we started this two years ago. But, I just have to say to the hon. member for Peterborough that I do not think anybody in any jurisdiction today can identify as clearly as we would all like the needs of society in the 1980's or 1985 to make pre-determinations today that make sense by the mid 70's even. I think the main point today, Mr. Chairman, is to accept the great need for flexibility and at the same time, accept the very real need to maintain the quality and the integrity of our post-secondary institutions. I think this is absolutely essential and I think it can be done. It will not be easy; I cannot be any more helpful. I do not have a crystal ball that will give you some of the answers that we would all like.

Mr. Brown: You only have to worry about the next two years.

Hon. Mr. Davis: John, you are a wishful thinker.

Mr. Nixon: The point the Minister was referring to on university qualifications: I was quite interested that the member for Peterborough responded that there are no such things and this is the way it appears. I know the Minister says that perhaps that is an extreme statement, that we still have ratings from the high schools, and yet already there is every indication that universities are in turn, rating the high schools so that there are value judgments.

Hon. Mr. Davis: They are using Grade 12.

Mr. Nixon: That is correct, but the fact that there is no external exam—and frankly I am not arguing for a return to it—but the fact that there is no external exam means that the university admission officers are rating the high schools as to the usefulness of the recommendation they give based on Grade 12. They are working Grade 13 to the individual student. Now this is precisely what happened on at least one previous occasion when we moved to a position where we were abolishing the external exams. I think this is fine. We support the abolition of external examination. But, I am concerned with what has replaced it. I believe that most school boards and principals and staffs are very conscientious in giving what they consider their best possible assessment of the ability of the individual student. More and more, this is not based on their ability to pass examinations or come up to a certain degree of achievement, but simply on the subject assessment of the individual's ability which is arrived at over a number of years by a number of teachers. But this, in a way, this subject of assessment, is not in the best interests of all students. I can remember the Minister assuring the House when he was talking about the abolition of Grade 13 departmental examinations that he, for one, was going to provide funds to assist in a programme that was going to cut through this difficulty that we saw emerging and assist the universities in getting some sort of uniform entrance approach.

I do not know what has been done on that programme further, but I believe more and more that the centralization of qualifications has been done away with and the individual student has to depend on making a personal impression, first on his teachers over the past three or four years and then hopefully making a personal impression during interview with an admissions officer. I regret to some extent the ability that a bright student might have to make his mark academically without having to rely on the force of his personality to impress either his teachers over a year or two, or perhaps the admissions committee of any individual university.

There was a time when I felt that everybody who graduated from our secondary system should by right have a place in the universities, I regret, personally regret, that there is a stratification, a class stratification, even if that class is associated with ability that funnels certain groups in the community colleges which have been successful in the way the Minister has described it, and others are channelled into post-secondary education at the university level, I have always felt that the achieving of a degree—a first degree at least—does not associate itself with a recognition of outstanding intellectual or academic ability. I am sure the Minister has among his acquaintances those people who have—maybe not too far away, as he looks over here—achieved a bachelor standing without any really outstanding intellectual ability. There are other graduations of academic achievement, which the Minister himself has achieved when we see the number of doctorates penned after his name, that are recognizable and can differentiate these levels of achievement.

I often regret that a person who simply graduates from the secondary system without any great academic honour is hard-pressed to go on to a university experience where, in fact, he might achieve better than his teachers are prepared to predict. Perhaps even the system that has been established in the last two years is apt to reject him when, in fact, this rejection is unfair.

Number one, I would like the Minister to comment more fully on the business of university entrance requirements which I do not think are as well understood or as specific as they should be.

Now the second thing has to do with the general expansion of the university system. In the days when I had the responsibility to be the critic of this department, I read all of the reports, most of which are now sitting on the desk of the Minister's advisors, and combing through them very carefully to see where the committees of presidents and others had some phrases that were perhaps detrimental to and critical of the Minister's policy. We were able to find many of them.

Realizing that there is some embarrassment to the Minister, these days have changed. We do not hear outbursts from the presidents now saying that the Minister has cut us off, say, at Queens without adequate support for our growing student population. Perhaps the formula of financing method is chiefly responsible for this. I believe that it is.

On the other hand, perhaps the presidents of the universities have learnt to be much more political—with the small 'p'—than they were even in the days when their entrance before the Minister, and before the former Prime Minister, had to be accompanied by a lot of panoply to put forward their claim to further financing. But what is the immediate expansion plan of the university system?

We moved to 14 supported universities with a rush. I presume that there is no further university expansion in the plan at the present time? Yet it is interesting that some, like Trent, have been able to — if I may be forgiven for mentioning that university particularly — maintain their position as a very small institution indeed. There are many bigger high schools, figured by population.

Mr. Nixon: What are you at — 1,600?

Mr. Pitman: Look at the Minister's report.

Mr. Nixon: I believe 1,600 is what it says. There are many high schools that are at least that big. While we look forward to keeping some of the institutions small, with the advantages that that renders, surely there is a figure, that is perhaps a bit bigger than that, which is associated with some optimum use of the basic commitment of finances for a campus and all that it involves.

I would like to know not what the long range goals of the system are to be—the minister has said he cannot predict them and he has a committee with very competent people staffing it which will give us all some indication of what the future will be. But I would like to know just what does he intend the growth of the university system to be in the next two or three years? If there is going to be the kind of continuous middle-of-the-road expansion that we have had this year and in the most recent years.

The third thing I want to raise is the place of the colleges of education on the university campus. The Minister, in ringing tones, has attempted to associate these colleges and the teachers' colleges with a university situation. While his speeches have been quite successful I think, in fact, that he has failed to achieve this association, at least to the extent that many would wish.

I have heard it said that the salaries paid to those people working in the institutions directly under the control of the Minister, such as the Ontario Institute and to some extent at the colleges of education, are at a level which makes it difficult for them to be incorporated into the regular universities situation. To put it bluntly, I understand that he is paying salary schedules which are significantly higher than those available at the university level, except in the very top situations. This is one of the problems.

I hope that some effort can be made to make the colleges of education and the teachers' colleges more closely integrated with the campus and with the university atmosphere. I do not think this has been achieved. I think there should be more stress on what has generally been accepted as policy of the government supported on all sides. The training of teachers and the certification of teachers should more and more be a function of universities and less and less under the control of the Minister and his advisers.

The fourth thing I want to refer to is the student award programme. I see that the figure listed in the estimates is now close to $40 million. I presume this involves the payments for post-graduate fellowships which have been a substantial part of the awards for some time. I recall those days when the students were marching on Queens Park; I hope the Minister recalls the tremendous influence that well-informed students had at that time on not forcing, but at least achieving, a change, a progressive change, in the policy of the Minister and the administration on student awards.

We have come a long way. I think many of the complaints now are based on a lack of understanding. I do not think there are many members here who have not had constituents come to them and say, "Look at the unfairness in these particular awards" only to find, on careful investigation, that the facts were not well understood by those who were doing most of the complaining. But still there is that problem associated with the fact that people are prepared to put forward information that is either misleading or basically wrong—lies—to achieve some public assistance for young people who really, under the present programme, do not warrant it.

I believe in the long run we are going to achieve that situation where students who achieve entrance to post-secondary education are going to have a good deal more assistance than they have now. I believe that it should be a part of the provision of education without personal cost—some people call it free education and in one respect it is—that this should be the goal of the student award programme.

I have heard the Minister talk about how closely we have achieved that in the past and that still he reflects the Prime Minister's comment—something about the moral fibre in the student depends upon his requirement to meet some of these costs himself. Well, of course, the student will always have to meet some of the costs, particularly his living costs, when it come to providing for post-secondary education.

I am interested that the government of Canada is still working in conjunction with the government of Ontario in providing that part of the assistance which is on a loan basis. I wish that the money would be made available in the form of a grant so that we could approach more closely than we have in the past, at least the payment of tuition for all students concerned; and a programme of special assistance for those people who cannot approach meeting the cost for living away from home, or those costs associated with university and post-secondary education.

I think there are many fewer complaints on the student award programme. I believe there is a misunderstanding on the part of many people who are still under the misapprehension that the decision is made by the student awards officer, rather than at the university. I think this change in policy was a good one; that the universities themselves and the awards made there are the responsibility of the university and should not be reflected back to any particular office here at Queen's Park or an adjunct to the Minister's staff. I think our goal should be for the provision of free education, if you want to call it that, at least the payment of tuition; and a further programme of assistance for those who cannot meet the cost of living away from home which could be established in a situation somewhat similar to that which we are using now.

There is always the problem of those citizens, all of them taxpayers, who take advantage of the system. There are cases where, I suppose, there has been definite misrepresentation leading to fairly healthy support for students which, if the truth were known, was unwarranted under the Minister's programme; not under the programme that we would have in mind on this side where we believe that tuition should be paid as a matter of right, and not simply as a matter of a decision by a student awards officer at the university or in the Minister's staff.

Well, those are the four things I wanted to raise at this time. I do not know whether they are in the form of questions that the Minister can respond to, but I would like to hear his views.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, I will try to answer very briefly. I am not sure that I remember the questions—three of them I have, the fourth may come to me. With respect once again briefly, Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Nixon: Entrance qualifications.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes. The question of entrance to the universities. While I recognize that the elimination of the Grade 13 exams did put a greater onus on the universities to a degree to make certain determinations, I still feel very strongly about this—and I think this view is shared now by large numbers in the profession. If a student has been in the school system for four or five years—and most have—and this applies to a very large percentage of them—then the principal and senior staff members are in a position to make a subjective and objective assessment as to whether that student can benefit from a university experience.

I think this is a very basic principle. There are still testing procedures; the students in Grade 13 are still undergoing testing procedures.

They have the SACU tests which the universities are using. Who knows, Mr. Chairman, perhaps the universities themselves will adopt more sophisticated entrance techniques or admission requirements themselves. We debated this in the education committee—the member for Peterborough and I think the member for Scarborough West—

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Just call me the socialist.

Mr. MacDonald: The young man from the west.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —were both suggesting—I think I am right in this—that the entrance requirements to teachers' colleges—the set percentage and so on at the teachers' colleges themselves—should become more sophisticated from the standpoint that marks should not be the only criteria for admission.

I recall these discussions. They went on at some length, and I think this is something that is evolving in the universities. I recognize their difficulties in this area, but you know this is part of their responsibility.

Surely they have the expertise and the intelligence to come to grips with this situation, and I think they are doing it. I do not believe they will get the quota systems unless economic circumstances so dictate, and so far they have not.

Now, related to the projections of where we are going over the next number of years, how detailed do you want these figures, Mr. Chairman?

Mr. Nixon: I suppose since I might be able to help with that—we are voting $365 million—the Minister cannot predict what kind of reception he is going to get by Treasury Board, but is this going to grow at the rate of 25 per cent a year for the foreseeable future?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, there will be, we estimate, by 1975 a doubling probably. We will come very close to 200,000.

Mr. Nixon: So it will be 25 per cent.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Right, but it will not be on a percentage basis as high an increase, or as rapid an increase as that which we have had in the past.

Just to give the hon. member some idea of figures. Take the first year undergraduate degree programme; full time freshmen intake for 1970-71—estimated total, 29,561. We are estimating for 71-72—31,980, closer to 32,000; 72-73—34,000; 73-74—36,000; 74-75—some 39,000, close to 40,000 students.

These are the estimated projections of intake into the first year undergraduate programme.

Now the total full-time undergraduates—and I want to emphasize this, Mr. Chairman—these are estimates based on material received from the universities, our own projections. So far they have been relatively accurate to date. I will not predict they will stay as accurate. We were within about one per cent this year, which is not bad, not necessarily of each institution, but in total terms.

Once again, just using totals, not breaking it down in institutions, we are saying, Mr. Chairman, that we will have—taking the total graduate programme just to give a little difference—13,579 in 70-71; and it goes up to 19,000 we estimate by 74-75.

If the hon. member is interested in the part-time enrolments, we are estimating 15,000 to some 20,000. These are fairly detailed projections—

Mr. Nixon: If I might, Mr. Chairman. The Minister says that the growth of the system, the post-secondary system, is such that it is going to double by 1975. What will happen to the costs in that period?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, you know you have to build into this certain escalation features—

Mr. Nixon: Will the cost double, would you predict?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I would think that if numbers double the cost will double, yes. I would think actually, based on past experience, it would more than double.

Mr. Nixon: Well, if I may, what about the colleges of education? Are you satisfied with their association with the universities? Are you satisfied with the association of the colleges of education with the universities?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, no we are not completely satisfied, but I think we are fairly well along the road. The situation here in Toronto, the agreement I think is a relatively good agreement. The same way at MacArthur and at Althouse College.

There is, I think, some variation with respect to the institute in salaries. But I think, if you were to discuss it with the people involved, you will find that they will make something of a case for the length of time, the type of programme being somewhat different from universities, you know.

I am not going to debate their cause here tonight, I assure you, but they will make this point.

But to solve all these problems we are determined that although it will take a year or two to do this, the colleges and eventually the teachers' colleges and the institute will all come under the total formula financing basis. This will then create equity so no one can debate it.

I cannot predict the situation with respect to the teachers' colleges yet. We have the two now formally integrated with the universities. We are moving ahead with three or four others. Certainly our experience to date indicates that it is going very well, but it is premature to say that it is by any means settled. There are only the two so far.

Mr. Nixon: If I might just continue this a bit. I think that a comparison of the cost is only one way in which I have been struck by the lack of integration. I think that there is an attitude in the colleges of education that still separates them from the general academic atmosphere of a university, and I regret this, having attended the College of Education, which was even at that time supposed to be a part of the University of Toronto.

I can assure you that we did not sense that we were attending a graduate school of the university, and I do not believe that it has changed since that time. I do not believe that there is any closer association with the university and I regret this, since I would support the Minister's often stated contention that teacher training should very well be closely integrated with the university situation, and not be set apart as some kind of a trade school. We lose something very important in this, and I just throw that out as my own view.

I am looking at the budget here and I understand that the government of Canada pays half the cost of post secondary education, that is including grade 13. I may be reading this incorrectly, but under education I see that federal transfer is about 24 million.

Is that all we get in the province? I do not find it under university affairs anywhere. What is the transfer for university affairs?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, just to correct one thing. Just thinking back to what I said, and I may have created a little confusion. I have a number of figures here—the doubling is by 1980—

Mr. Nixon: 1980?

Hon. Mr. Davis: By 1980. The doubling in costs will probably be there by 1975 as to our total investment now.

Mr. Nixon: It will quadruple by 1980 in all probability.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am not going to look that far ahead tonight.

Mr. Nixon: All right.

Hon. Mr. Davis: With respect to the fiscal transfer. The federal government, I do not want to be technical, is not really paying. They are giving a fiscal transfer to the province of 50 per cent of the full secondary operating costs—nothing to do with capital.

The transfer does not show in the estimates. I would guess that for 1968-1969 it is in the neighbourhood of around 200 and some million dollars.

Mr. Nixon: I have found it. It is $365 million or $366 million for university affairs; I thought they would be alphabetical.

Hon. Mr. Davis: But the fiscal transfer, when you put them all together probably from Ottawa, will be something in excess of 200, I would think.

Mr. Nixon: Why does not that show here?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, the estimates do not show here. The transfer that is received is part of the fiscal transfer from the federal government and has never shown in the estimates.

Mr. Nixon: Well, the Budget this year very properly sets out clearly the part of the estimates and the Budget of the province is paid out of our provincial revenues. What part comes from a fiscal transfer from the federal level and the transfer from the federal sources for university affairs is really shown as nil in the Treasurer's Budget.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, I guess there are two programmes really. There are those that the federal government is involved in, say with respect to manpower that may show this way but with respect to the moneys to be received under the post secondary agreement, there are in terms of fiscal transfer at income tax points and, as I say, our rough figure is around $185-$200 million dollars.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for York South.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Chairman, in February of 1967, the federal Minister of Industry, Mr. Bud Drury, announced the provision of grants to encourage the establishment and development of industrial research in the institutes in some five different educational institutions across the province. Three of them are in Ontario—McMaster, Waterloo and Windsor.

I am a little intrigued as to exactly what the Minister's feeling is with regard to this kind of development. I do not know whether it is significant or not, but no further provision of moneys has been made by the federal government and the reason I am raising the question, is that I think it is time that we aired—I will do it briefly tonight in this House—the misgivings that have risen in the minds of many people with regards to the validity of this whole approach.

I recognize that if there is going to be an industrial research institute established in the university, this is the decision of the university, particularly if the federal government is going to be providing the money to "prime the pump" and get it going. But, it seems to me, there is an obligation on the Minister to indicate in this area, as in so many others, some guidelines.

In the universities themselves, there is a growing body of opinion that is unhappy with regard to this kind of development. The usual tendency had been to look at the United States and to think that contract research with industry done in the university has been highly successful over there. If the Minister is not aware of it, because I think it is a development of recent months, the two major instances of research institutes in the United States are now in the process of separating themselves from the universities with which they had been associated.

In Cornell, for example, the famous Cornell Labs, involving some 2,000-3,000 people with a $30 million turnover, has been sold for some $25 million. There are two reasons for the sale. One has been the growing protest among students and staff with regards to their involvement in defence research, but the second one has been the growing feeling that this really does not fit into a university, that it is some serious encroachment on the major objectives of the university—teaching and pure research.

It happened only because the Attorney-General of the state has halted things to look into some legal aspects of it, otherwise this separation would have been completed by now. A second and even more widely known research institute, at Stanford, is also in the process of splitting itself off from the university and has been sold.

It has grown to some 65 million dollars in income. It too, is separating itself from the university.

There is a second, and rather equally impressive argument for these changes. The Carnegie Foundation For The Advancement of Learning has done a study entitled "The flight from teaching" in which it is reported that in these universities, some of the faculty members have come to regard their students:

As impediments in the headlong search for more and better grants, fatter fees, higher salaries, higher ranks.

I want to put briefly to the Minister, a number of the areas in which concern has arisen, not just in the United States where they have had more experience, but in Canada where we are in what might be described as more of a pioneering stage in this kind of involvement.

The first question: What market are these research institutes in our universities going to fill? The usual answer, in fact their purpose is to meet local markets, and therefore if you analyze it, you find that what these universities are going to be doing is the application of technology already available.

That is so far removed from pure research, and therefore from what is normally considered to be the appropriate function of university, that I repeat, the doubts are being created.

Can this kind of an institute ever be self supporting? The grants in the first instance given by the federal government were of a pump-priming nature. They were hoping that they would get the ball rolling, and that the institute in Windsor or Waterloo or McMaster might be able to establish working relationships with existing industry or potential industry in the community and get a growing proportion of their income from industry.

Experience in the United States indicates this simply does not happen. For example, Stanford started out that way, but gradually found its proportion of moneys from contracts from local industries dwindling until it represented only 20 per cent of its annual income. The other 80 per cent was coming from government contracts. There is a built-in inclination to forget about the industry because there is a selling job, you have to go out and seek the contracts whereas the government contracts seem to come more readily.

So, I repeat, it seems to me that their experience has proven that they are not likely to be self-supporting unless the government provides a growing proportion of the finances.

On what basis will the contract work be performed? If it is going to be paid fully by the clients, then what proportion of it should go to the university by way of overhead, because university facilities are being used?

Will the universities be required to hire extra staff? If they do not, then one wonders whether or not they do not have too much staff to begin with. If they do, then how exactly do you apportion this kind of a cost? Is it appropriate that research of an applied nature should be brought into the university milieu, rather than being done in the industrial labs where it is closer to the industry itself, for the kind of spinoff for economic development of the university staff.

Finally, there is the method of remuneration of the university staff. Quite frankly, here I think, those who are not involved particularly, are voicing most of the objections. They refer to it rather ungraciously as "professional moonlighting", and that, in effect, is what university staff members are doing, using these public facilities, financed by 85 per cent of public funds, for consulting work. If all the resulting revenue comes back to the men themselves involved, as is the case in some universities, if most of it does not go back to the university itself, then you have not got a fair apportioning of the money that is coming in.

It is interesting that in France, where this kind of a procedure has been regularized, they restrict outside consultation to a half a day a week for research work of this nature. The staff member involved can only retain a rather small proportion of any income that can come from it—the rest of it must go to the university itself.

It would be absurd to allow a university staff member to personally retain fees charged by the institute for the work done from private sources on time already adequately paid for by the public, and it would compound this absurdity if government funds were used to create and maintain an institute through which the university staff members could pursue this type of activity.

I have only raised five or six of many questions in areas of concern. There is the question of who is going to have control of patents. There is a whole area of persons engaged in graduate work, and doing theses and research work for that purpose. Presumably, in the traditional fashion, it becomes public information, available to everybody. But what is being done, in this instance, on a confidential basis, is presumably available only to the company for which they are working. That, perhaps, illustrates most sharply the conflict between industrial research work and the normal work of a university.

I raise this with the Minister and I leave the elaboration of it at that point. But I want to ask the Minister if he, himself, personally, or if the government, has any views with regard to this? Even if one operates on the initial assumption that it is a decision of a university as to whether or not it is going to have an institute, are the Minister's views firmly enough consolidated that he feels that they should be advanced to encourage, or discourage, this kind of development throughout the province of Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, my views are not firm on this matter at all. We have already started a preliminary study of this and I shall, more than likely, be communicating with the committee on university affairs, to look at this in a general way. I think—

Mr. MacDonald: Who is doing the study, Dr. Wright?

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, not at this point. I actually asked my Deputy Minister to start dealing with this because I think the hon. member raised this on one of my colleague's estimates, if my memory is correct.

Mr. MacDonald: I did; I first raised it in the estimates of The Department of Trade and Development.

Hon. Mr. Davis: We have been in communication with two or three sources. I will be sending the hon. member a copy of the MacDonald Report, not one that he has prepared, but prepared for the federal government relevant to this, which he might find interesting reading. It is interesting that in the years 1965 to 1968, inclusive, the amount of federal contribution, or involvement, averaged about $3 million a year, and I think it is a matter that the universities themselves are considering. You know, they are accused from time to time of being a little bit out in left field and did not look at the practical situations—

Mr. T. Reid (Scarborough East): Right field.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Right field or left field, it is some field, and I think that some of them, at least, look upon this as a practical area to develop and one that is really, to all intents, self supporting.

The member for York South has raised a very valid point that has occurred at several universities where these, shall we say, contract research developments have become almost totally dependent upon government resource in a way that would not be in keeping with what we are doing under the formula basis, and that source can dry up overnight. I would think that the universities themselves should be very careful before they become dependent, to any degree, upon this type of financial support for any long term projections.

Another example of this research, which does not relate to the research institutes, necessarily, but one might ask—and perhaps the University of Toronto is considering this in their total study—should the Connaught laboratories be part of a university function these days? I do not know. I think it is something that might be assessed, and I think there are other situations.

There are many American universities that have very large, shall we say, commercial operations attached to the institution. Some of them are making fairly good returns, too. That is the other side of it. Mr. Chairman, we are interested in this. It has come to our attention fairly recently and I expect we shall be pursuing it further and as we get information I will relate it to the members of the House.

Mr. MacDonald: May I make just a brief comment and leave the matter, Mr. Chairman. I appreciate the Minister looking into this because I think we should look into the industrial research institutes per se, as financed by the federal government by initial grants before they develop any further. If we have misgivings about it, now is the time to change our minds and not wait until we have ourselves dug in.

But there is a broader principle involved, not just in relationship to the three institutes initiated by the federal government grants, and that is the whole question of consulting companies which develop among a group of staff members. They are tied in with the university, and yet I do not know to what extent the university gets anything of the benefits or whether it is just straight “moon-lighting” and an augmenting of the adequate incomes that they are already getting from the universities.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): It is very prevalent.

Mr. MacDonald: I know it is very prevalent, and I repeat, in France, they have laid down regulations. You cannot be involved in consulting and thereby, in effect, be drawing time off from university activity more than a half a day a week, and I think it is ten or 15 per cent, at the most, which can go to the consultant involved and the other 85 or 90 per cent of revenues must go to the university. Because they are operating with the facilities that have been paid for by the public the revenues go to the university. So, I am not raising the question in terms of the three particular industrial research institutes, though I think that programme should be looked at at this initial stage before we go any further, but in the whole broader proliferation of consulting groups in universities.

If they are prostituting the basic purpose of a university or if they are unduly perverting the original purpose, then I think there is a responsibility for some guidance from this Minister. On this occasion I hope that he will be the “fearless Bill” rather than the “bland Bill” as referred to in the Globe and Mail.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Is there a difference, really?

Mr. Bullbrook: If I may, Mr. Chairman, is the Minister going to reply to this point?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I have already.

Mr. Bullbrook: Oh, you have already. What are you going to do about it?

Mr. MacDonald: Study it.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Peterborough has been trying to get the floor previous to the hon. member.

Mr. Pitman: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if I can carry on a little bit from the point we left off previously. The Minister suggested he had no crystal ball in which to discover what these plans are, but I suggest to him that what we have in place of plans, are projections.

Hon. Mr. Davis: These are plans to 1975 but you are talking about 1985.

Mr. Pitman: No, no! The Minister has picked numbers out of a hat, 25 per cent. He has represented at least some concept of a plan—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, I meant to raise this. I have been very careful not to lay down any projections or predictions that we will necessarily reach relative to any 25 per cent. I did predict, four years ago, that we would hope to be between 18 and 20 per cent by 1970-1971, and we have come very close to this. I do not know where this 25—

Mr. Pitman: I think you will find it in last year's Minister's statement on the estimates.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, I do not think so. What I have said, and there is no question about it, and I do not know what the division is nor necessarily, the accurate totals, I am just saying that there will be, in my view, an increasing percent of students graduating from high school who will go into some form of post-secondary experience, and we can project, not only project, I would think the figures for the next two or three years would probably maintain relative to the individual institutions, the enrolments that we see coming. You know, it is not a question—

Mr. Pitman: What will the percentage be by 1975?

Hon. Mr. Davis: As a percentage of the age groups?

Mr. Pitman: Yes, 18 to 21.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Five years is a guess, Mr. Chairman, it is a guess of about 23 or 24 per cent.

Mr. Pitman: Well, we are playing with one per cent.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, no we are not. But I am not making this as any prediction, and that—it may not be the end of it. You know, we have discussed this in the House before. It is quoted to me, in our non-Americanized approach, just what figures have always been used south of the border. I have had this related to me by members opposite for the last five years, how there are 28 per cent or 30 per cent, or sometimes I have heard of higher percentages of the student population in the universities of the United States.

Mr. Pitman: All I want to bring to the attention of the Minister is that we have tradition in this country and I think that the Minister has to relate the percentage to the tradition. That is, the American tradition is not, I think, relevant to the kind of universities he is creating, or has endeavoured to create in the past.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, I think one must draw a distinction between the kinds of universities and the total number. If the hon. member from Peterborough is saying to me that we have to be careful not to create institutions of forty or fifty thousand students, I would agree with him completely. If he is saying, because of our traditions, we should limit the intake of students in our universities, limit those who have the ability and the ambition to attend because of our traditions, and there were jurisdictions where our traditions come from where they did this very thing, I would say with respect, Mr. Chairman, I do not buy it.

Mr. Pitman. I do not buy it either!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Okay.

Mr. Pitman: —but we do not have any knowledge of what we are—

Hon. Mr. Davis: We are in the process of establishing our own traditions.

Mr. Pitman: —and if we have a policy where we do not know whether the young people we are bringing into the university are really going to benefit effectively by it, or whether some other form of post-secondary education might be the place that those young people would, (a) receive the most effective educational experience, and (b) be able to secure some kind of a job.

Hon. Mr. Davis: This is what is in the process of happening.

Mr. Pitman: Yes, I suggest to you it is going to happen and if you do not do it, what I see happening in the new council of the Universities of Ontario, which is, the expansion of the committees of presidents. I see only one reason for that expansion and that expansion is essentially to provide a research arm in order to virtually find out what is going on and do the planning themselves if the Minister will not provide the planning.

Hon. Mr. Davis: We are providing the planning. Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Pitman: I hope by next year we will perhaps get a clearer picture.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I do not want to interrupt, but I realize just how desirable it would be to have all these things set down. I am just saying I think it would be a great mistake for us to try and determine in the year 1970, the exact situation in the year 1985. Guidelines, helpful suggestions, studies, all the rest of it are useful, but as I said, if anybody had tried to lay down the objectives, the type of institution and numbers 15 years ago, I think one can accurately say they would perhaps not be too close to the mark.

Mr. Pitman: In all sincerity I say to the Minister that this is the kind of projection that is going to be necessary. For example, I just quote from this again, the committee of presidents, on page 9 in regard to graduate education.

Mr. Sopha: Is that the Bible?

Mr. Pitman: It is the latest thing that has been produced in this area.

In the absence of reliable projections of future manpower needs—

Hon. Mr. Davis: That report is not necessarily all right, incidentally.

Mr. Pitman: I just suggest to the Minister that this is a very real problem.

I would like to come back to this problem of formula financing. The Minister, I think, does not accept that formula financing can produce some things that I feel will give flexibility. The Minister himself, in another speech, did indicate that this was under continuous consideration.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Always.

Mr. Pitman: Well, the formula needs to be thought out a bit more. I was wondering how long we are moving along towards this end. I think in essence the formula reflects the past essentially in how it relates to larger universities, the multi-universities, where the unit value of each student is more realistic, you might say, than it is in many of the smaller universities.

I am speaking of Laurentian, I am speaking of Brock and various others—York University, Glendon, Carleton, which I think is a 1.4 base unit. I think in many cases these universities are finding it extremely difficult, in fact to quote from the "bible" again, the statement is made by these gentlemen:

There is growing doubt whether the present formula weights do in fact reflect costs accurately. Recent analysis have raised the question whether institutions predominantly devoted to undergraduate arts and sciences can, with the present formula weights, become viable at any size.

Then it goes on to point out that more study is needed to determine this.

I just point out to the Minister that we desperately need some degree of flexibility. I do not know what the answer is; maybe it is a continuing use of particular grants, supplementary grants to arts and sciences institutions, maybe some flexibility built into the formula base. Perhaps it is to raise the base unit to 1.5 or whatever it is to make the thing financially viable for smaller institutions.

But I suggest to the Minister that some of the people in universities are concerned that the formula financing might very well be making it very difficult to produce the kind of quality of education which the Minister indicated was his intention at the time when 14 universities were created in this province.

As I say, I am one of those who believe that this province can support 14 good top-quality universities. But I think it is desperately important that we look at individual situations, as well as find a fair and equitable way of dividing whatever money the public of Ontario, represented by the Minister, decide must go to university education.

I would like to ask particularly what is going on in relation to Glendon College. I notice they requested an emergent grant. I think they made a very good case in the document they provided for the committee on university affairs.

They pointed out that they were very much in the same situation as other emerging institutions, such as Erindale, Scarborough, Algoma, such as Brock and Trent. I think as well as that, they suggested that the Minister might very well be looking at the problems which they face, particularly in attempts to be a bilingual university, attempting to insure that a large number of their students would be able to be fluently French-speaking.

I think this is a particular cost to that university, particularly in view of the fact they want to send their students away for one year to a French-speaking university. I think they have peculiar problems with relation to the size of the institution; the fact they cannot enlarge it to the viable size which the presidents suggest is considerable if the formula is going to work; the fact that they are trying interdepartmental work.

They are doing a great deal of experimental work in the English department. They are doing a lot of work in small classes. In other words, they have special needs.

I am wondering if the Minister could indicate what he is intending to do in this situation, where you have a college within a university where you might say the college itself is emergent rather than the total university.

Also I would like to know whether he is making special efforts to get some money from the federal government. I think they are intending to pass out a little bit of money on this bilingual agreement that the Minister has been fairly proud of.

Once again I ask for a flexibility in formula financing. As well as that, I suggest that—and I ask him—how his capital formula financing is coming along. We have interim formula financing at the present time. There has been a great deal of concern on the part of university officials that this is not enough. I think they set 130 square feet per student, which has been suggested as being inadequate.

I was very interested, for example, in Harry Crowe's views on this particular area. Perhaps I might just read a very small section of his comment on what he called the square foot scholar and the two-formula system in which he said:

Superficially the interim capital formula seems to be the same as the other formula. Here students are distributed among five categories, again reflecting the fact that different kinds of students have different space needs.

For each category, a weight is assigned a narrower spread, a weight of one to a weight of four. On this basis, space entitlement and hence grants to construct buildings is determined.

But here the similarity between the two formulae ends. The weights and space formula correspond only to the relative needs and not real needs of students in each category. An arts and science student has a weight of one, a PhD in arts a weight of two, an MA student in geography a weight of three, a PhD in science a weight of four.

But—and it is a big but—the space assigned to the average student across the system is set at 130 net assignable square feet. So, as the percentage of students shifts from low weight into high weight of categories as projected, the value of weights declines and each year each student is assigned less space than the year before.

There you have the feelings of at least one university official who is especially concerned about that problem.

Mr. Sopha: And whose views about our young people are very disturbing, indeed. He seems to have a hatred of youth.

Mr. Pitman: Well, I am not going to get into an argument with the member for Sudbury about Mr. Crowe's views on youth.

Mr. Sopha: What a queer pair.

Mr. Lewis: Who is a queer pair?

Mr. Pitman: But I do want to turn for a moment to the whole question of teachers' colleges. I am wondering if the Minister would like to make any comments in this context as to where we stand in relation to teachers' colleges now that we have dragged him through this whole business in the committee dealing with education estimates.

I am wondering if he has any further views on this matter, whether anything has gone farther ahead at Windsor, particularly in view of the fact at that time he said discussions were still being carried on.

I was wondering, with relation to Hamilton for example, where the teachers' college is already on the campus, is anything to be done in that particular setting? Perhaps the Minister would like to comment on one or two of those areas, as well as on the formula.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, just to deal with the formula very briefly, there is a sub-committee of the university affairs advisory committee dealing with formula on a continuing basis.

As I stated in my own introductory remarks, we recognize the formula itself must adapt to any changing situations. I think the matter brought to the attention of myself and the members of the House relates to the problems of the emergent universities. When you look at the ones he listed, and if you add one or two others to it, I think you would—

Mr. Pitman: In relation to the formula.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Right. I think you would relate it to the feeling that exists with the emergent institutions, that they need some further consideration because of their nature.

Mr. Chairman, this matter has been canvassed very thoroughly by the committee. They have meetings with this group of universities, rather extensive meetings, and certainly from my experience with the committee they are quite prepared, if there is any relevant information, any change that should be taken into account, the committee is always prepared to take a look at it.

But I think, Mr. Chairman, in fairness to the total university community, any changes must relate to the total needs and must be valid.

Just to deal very briefly with Glendon, once again, I do not think one can construe this as an emergent institution. It relates to a particular programme that is being offered at Glendon which, you know, is one that—

Mr. Pitman: How is it different to Erindale?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, Mr. Chairman, there is a very real difference. Erindale is still in the process of both physical as well as student growth. It is developing really as almost a new university. It is called a college because it is in affiliation with the University of Toronto, but there is no similarity at this point really between Erindale, Scarborough or Glendon.

Glendon has been in operation as a college of York University almost, I guess, from its beginning. As a matter of fact this was York University. So you cannot really put Glendon in the same category as Erindale and Scarborough.

Mr. Pitman: Well, Erindale is part of the University of Toronto.

Hon. Mr. Davis: That is right, but it is still separated physically, and to many extents, administratively; and the cost factors there are different from development here at the main campus.

All I am saying is that there is a special need for Glendon that relates not to the fact that it is an emergent institution. In my view, it relates to the type of programme. The committee has its problems in dealing with this, because every university has particular situations and particular programmes which it feels it needs special assistance to maintain.

Now whether or not the suggestions, or the announced proposals from the federal government—these are related to bilingual programmes exclusively—would provide some opportunity for the committee on university affairs to take a look at this as it relates to Glendon, I do not know. Certainly, I am sure the Glendon people will be bringing this to the attention of the committee in the very near future. Perhaps this may be an avenue that can be explored, but I think, really in fairness, it is the position of Glendon College.

Now dealing with the teachers' colleges, Mr. Chairman, I really have not anything to add. We finished the estimates of The Department of Education, if memory serves me correctly, about this hour a week ago tonight. We have had a few other problems to deal with in the interim so I cannot report any further progress in the past six days.

Mr. Pitman: I was hoping that possibly the Minister would have considered the idea of having the full dialogue we talked about last week, so that right across the province we could talk about teacher education with the teachers' problems being involved, the universities being involved, and the Ontario Teachers' Federation being involved; so that we could provide some kind of guidelines as to what kind of teacher education is going on within the universities. I do not think simply putting it in universities is going to solve the problem of teacher education in Ontario.

The Minister, I know, feels that this can go on within each university and that in a similar situation the problems can be resolved. I think it would be an advantage to have the entire business aired across the province involving, in essence, the teachers who are in the field, and who know what is wrong with teacher education. The leader of the Opposition made some pretty salient points about the Ontario College of Education. I can remember that my year in that institution, to put it bluntly, was not one of the most intellectually stimulating years I have ever survived.

Mr. Nixon: But you are not suggesting another committee on that?

Mr. Pitman: I am suggesting that what we need is a full discussion.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I do not know whether the member for Sudbury would agree with me or not, but I can recall my articling years not being the most intellectually stimulating. Now, you may have found it different.

Mr. Sopha: I did not find it different. I did the south side of Richmond Street.

Mr. Pitman: I submit to the Minister that this has a viability at this point in time when teacher education is the important matter, I think. Universities are going to be dealing with it in the next ten years, and it should receive full open debate and consideration.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Scarborough East.

Mr. T. Reid: Mr. Chairman, in the few minutes remaining for this department I would like to touch upon a number of issues.

One is to bring home a point in the student awards programme which to me should have been changed a long time ago. I will not be redundant in terms of the remarks I made almost a year and a half ago on the student awards programme. I do not see that the Minister has responded at all to any of those lengthy comments I made. Basically the system remains as it was a year ago.

The point I want to raise with the Minister is in regard to a specific case and I would like to quote some correspondence fairly briefly. This is with regard to a student, Robert Kienzle, in Ontario, whose file number is 68-94259984751524. That is his social security number also. Anyhow, Mr. Kienzle received a grant, an award, from the Minister's department in 1968-69. Then he was written to by Mr. D. S. Bethune, the director of student awards, on August 6, 1969, and Mr. Bethune made these comments in his letter:

Since you failed to obtain a certificate of eligibility last September and did not indicate that you had not received it during your academic year, 1968-69, you are not eligible for the loan portion. Your eligibility for the grant portion of your award was contingent upon the negotiation of your certificate of eligibility.

Therefore, you are not eligible for the grant portion of $55. This amount of $55 must be repaid to the Treasurer of Ontario.

Yours sincerely,
(for) D. S. Bethune, director of student awards.

Edward R. Good, MPP for Waterloo North wrote to Mr. Bethune, noting, in essence, that it seemed rather silly that Mr. Kienzle had been notified that the $55 award portion must be repaid because he failed to obtain a certificate of eligibility in September, 1968.

The letter back to Mr. Good from Mr. Bethune, signed by him this time, was dated September 19, 1969, and here is the incredible statement:

A student's eligibility for the grant portion of an Ontario student award is contingent upon his negotiation of the certificate of eligibility for the Canadian student loan portion of the award.

As the student in this case chose not to make use of the loan portion of his award, he is not entitled to the grant portion and must repay it in full to The Treasury Department.

I just say to the Minister that I think it silly, I think it is stupid. I think it is everything that is wrong to say that a student must go into debt before he gets the provincial grant part of his award. I fail to understand it. Surely a student—

Hon. Mr. Davis: I will try to explain it to you.

Mr. T. Reid: Let me just put my case this way. Surely the student can simply say: "I want an award. I understand that the grant portion will be reduced because of the Minister's formula on how much must be a grant portion and how much must be award portion, but I, student so and so, do not want to go in debt, so keep that loan portion, I do not want it."

Why does a student have to go into debt before he can get the provincial grant portion of his student award?

Hon. Mr. Davis: We have been into this matter before and I will not take too long to explain it once again.

The provisions of the federal loan scheme are laid down by the federal government. Our scheme, which relates to it, says very specifically that the need assessment determines the amount of money. If a student does not have the need, if he is going to take the grant only and then when he gets the grant says, "I do not need the loan" then the need assessment has not been valid, either from wrong information or something else that has been made available to the student award officer.

With great respect, Mr. Chairman, there are certain inadequacies in the student award scheme, we know this, but this, in my humble opinion, Mr. Chairman, really is not one of them. What is more illogical than if a student makes a request for public support from the taxpayers of this province and says my need is x hundred dollars, picks up one or two hundred or fifty dollars of outright grant and then says: "I do not really need the loan, let us forget about it" and then wanders away.

Mr. Chairman, I am not supporting loans, I am not saying these are the best and all the rest of it. But surely, if we are going to have equity, and if we are going to distribute the moneys available to all the students who have a need, what is illogical about this? I mean I just cannot see—

Mr. T. Reid: There are people in this province, Mr. Chairman, who believe because of their family background, because of the way they are brought up, that they ought not to go into debt. I find nothing inequitable about two people applying to the Minister's department with the same need, everything the same.

Hon. Mr. Davis: He has not had the same need.

Mr. T. Reid: He put it down.

Hon. Mr. Davis: He is getting money some other way.

Mr. T. Reid: Let me finish.

Hon. Mr. Davis: All right, but I—

Mr. T. Reid: I find nothing inequitable with two identical students and two identical circumstances in the same state of need, as judged by the Minister and all the regulations about family background—

Hon. Mr. Davis: I do not judge it—the student awards officer does.

Mr. T. Reid: And the federal government, too, but the Minister makes up the regulations in conjunction with the federal government—the joint agreement. My point is simply that I find nothing inequitable about the fact that one student says, I will lower my standard of living—I will do without lunch, and so forth, I will do with fewer clothes, and so on, but I do not want to go into debt.

I see absolutely no reason why a student must be forced to go into debt in order to get the provincial grant part of the student award system. The Minister says it is an agreement with the federal government, and it is wrong. I agree with him, I think the federal government has been lax in the whole area of student awards. I agree with him. I am speaking from the provincial perspective, in the field of education. In this field, as everyone knows, the federal government knows very little. I just leave that, I wanted to make that one point—we agree to disagree.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, Mr. Chairman, one other little note, it is not really relevant. I will not use names, but the leader of the Opposition had some very constructive and some kind observations about the plan. Others raised the question of whether students were taking advantage of it. There was a student at York University who recently received a small inheritance and as a result of this inheritance he repaid entirely the award and the loan. He also—

Mr. T. Reid: Take about ten more cases—

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, no. I am just saying this on behalf of the student. I think it is very encouraging that a student, who had been given an award, received some money elsewhere, and as a result of this repaid the moneys to the province, those funds that had been provided to him before this inheritance came along. I thought it was very interesting and rather encouraging that there are students who will do this.

Mr. T. Reid: I will just continue with another point on—

Mr. Sopha: On student awards?

Mr. T. Reid: I will yield the floor. Go ahead.

Mr. Sopha: I will just be very brief. I think this system is demonstrated to be terribly inadequate. Now, I speak from my personal experience and I do not know everything that has been said, but I am certain that a system which I, incidentally, find offensive, in putting that long number on our young people to start with. But of course, I am a part of a small minority that lives in resistance to the age of the computer and the labelling by numbers in the style of 1984 that is already here.

All right. I am sure the system, as it is administered, did not take into account this year the long strike at INCO. A great many students had the advantage in previous years of working during the summer at the International Nickel Company and making quite substantial sums of money over the summer. They were prevented from doing that because we—

Hon. Mr. Davis: But it did take that into account.

Mr. Sopha: Oh no! I have a couple of cases with Mr. Bethune right now, and if you see him, if you happen to see him, would you tell him that he owes me a couple of letters right now. Maybe he has not got the mail, but if you see him would you tell him that there is a couple—there is a couple by the name of Grenon—I may not be here tomorrow—down at the University of Windsor who are awaiting—I wish I had brought my letters—a loan, and a warrant of a mere $200 was given.

And yet the young fellow was unable to work at INCO because we did not know that that company would keep the works shut up for 126 days when they knew all the while that they were going to increase the price of nickel by 25 per cent and might have paid an adequate wage.

I have lost the attention of the Minister, but I am telling him what is fact, and I have written about a number of these young people who might have put away $800 or $1,000 over the summer, but were precluded from doing so.

Now, here is another inadequacy I am unable to understand. When they bring the slip of paper—which is about that size—with them, that has the social security number on it that takes up about half the page, in addition to wearing out their typewriters in reproducing it when we write, it never tells the basis upon which the award is made. You look in the two squares—squares one and two. You see the loan portion and the award portion and the young fellow had visible signs of distress on his face. He is utterly unable to understand.

Take the case of the Trinidadian girl who came here. Informed that she was getting . . . I think it was the handsome sum of—how much was that—$1,500, somewhere in that neighbourhood. Then a month later she gets a notice under an appropriate social security number which took up half the page, telling her that the amount was $1,000—$500 less. No explanation at all. She had both of them when she came into the office. Both of them had the correct social security number on them. One was $1,500; the other was $1,000. Now, she is a visitor to the country. She is a young lady studying in our country and will take the benefits of the training she obtains here back to her people in Trinidad.

Certainly, the system is inadequate. I ran into the member for Sarnia (Mr. Bullbrook) one day and he is so distressed about it that he is going up to examine the files himself. He has more energy and initiative than I have, but he is on his way down to University Avenue. Wherever they are, they are not at the mailing address. They are some place else. The mail goes someplace else. They are located someplace else, and the mail does not get to them, but he is on his way down there to look at the very files. I am sorry I have not the time. If I were an adequate ombudsman I would go down and look. I will some day. Because this fall, we certainly had a surfeit of them in Sudbury coming in and expressing their grave anxiety about the future.

Finally, the last point deserves to be emphasized and that is that students from northern Ontario must perforce remove themselves several hundred miles from their homes and set up domestic quarters whether they are single or married in the centres where the universities and schools are located. They have special problems of cost that attend them because they cannot get the training in northern Ontario. There are no institutions in northern Ontario to give it to them. All the sophisticated schools are attached to universities in southern Ontario and once again they are the subject of discrimination.

Now, if that system, inadequate as it is, was improved, it would recognize this special problem of young people from northern Ontario coming down here, and the special costs that are involved. If a young fellow goes from Sudbury to the University of Waterloo, well, that is 250—how far to Waterloo from here—it is over 300 miles. He goes to the University of Windsor, that is 500 or 600 miles from his home. The shortest distance he can go if he comes from Sudbury, which is one of the near northern centres, is 250 miles. That is the closest. Heaven only knows the special problems of those who come from Sault Ste. Marie, Port Arthur, Timmins, Kapuskasing, Hearst and centres located like that. You do not need to prove to me, Mr. Chairman, when the Minister says the system is inadequate; he does not have to convince me. Those were his own words. I know it is. I know it is inadequate from even a cursory investigation.

I would think it is incumbent upon that department to make a greater study. I am satisfied they do not make an adequate enough study. They have a formula: How much does the old man make; what is the family income; and down comes the portcullis and then the assistance is denied. That is no good because it overlooks the human consideration. It overlooks the special circumstances of the home; it overlooks the sociological economic implication and just about everything else that has to do with human beings. Now, the Minister is administering that system by a computer; he is married to the computer and I suspect that computerized technology has infected his bureaucracy, in that department. I really suspect that. That is the way he wants to run the universities now; to put the whole of the student body and the faculty into a computer. He wants to run it like IBM or the Bell Telephone run theirs.

A funny thing is that there is help on the horizon, because the way I see it from the barber's chair in Sudbury on a Saturday morning, the one body that is not going to put up with that kind of approach is the student body. They all change things to suit their own needs and their own feelings and it appears that probably they are getting a lot of training in that. That is precisely how the universities are going to be transformed, and I must confess, and I do it unashamedly, that I have a good deal of sympathy with them, a good deal of sympathy in their goals in changing the aims and purposes of higher education in this province.

That is a hot subject in itself, but boy, oh boy, after ten years a member of the assembly gets sick and tired of having to be a go-between in regard to things that could be corrected if a little more thought was exercised in the first place. With a good deal of heart, we would be relieved of a good deal of hard work and be able to devote ourselves to more productive things such as the framing of legislation, its study and analysis.

But finally, if you see Mr. Bethune, would you please ask him to write. And if he cannot write in regard to those, would he telephone? And if my line is busy, would he send me a telegram in regard to the outstanding letters that he has?

Mr. T. Reid: Mr. Chairman, I would like to return briefly to the question of the formula financing, since that is about all we have. I would like to start with the operating side of formula financing. I would like to quote briefly from the report of the committee of presidents of the universities of Ontario for this year. It says:

Under the formula, each category of student had been assigned a weight ranging from one for the first year undergraduate arts and science to six for advanced Ph.D work.

It goes on and I find this the most intriguing remark since the committee of presidents has been in operation since 1962. The report says:

In the absence of detailed cost studies, the weights under the formula were based on the best information available concerning the cost of educating the various categories of students. The first year undergraduate arts and science was taken as a base to assign the weight of one. And the cost of educating other categories of students was related to the base.

The report goes on to say:

It was intended from the beginning that the weight should be reviewed when more accurate costs data were available.

It was also realized that the weights would have to be reviewed periodically because relative costs would not necessarily remain constant. Then the report goes on, Mr. Chairman:

Ideally a comprehensive review of formula weights should have been undertaken before any changes were made. (This is with regard to the weight changes last year, the current year.) But in view of the urgent need to provide additional funds for medical education, the government set up a committee comprising of representatives—

Mr. Chairman, the point here is related to the point I made in my opening remarks, when I quoted from the report of the presidential committee in Glendon College. That report stated:

As Ontario universities have evolved costing systems of great sophistication, which the committee could use as a guide, it was necessary for it to work out some approach to this analysis.

The purpose of quoting that documentation, Mr. Chairman, is simply this; the weights which were assigned originally for operating formula financing for the universities were based simply on the way the situation was adjusted by some subjective criteria.

The fact of the matter is that seven years after the committee of presidents was established, five years since The Department of University Affairs was established and four years since the advisory committee on university affairs was established, there is still no systematic cost analysis of the universities in this province on which to base a realistic set of weights for formula financing.

I call into evidence the presidents' only forte where they repeatedly point out that there has not yet been developed either in their own body—the committee of presidents—or the Minister's department, or to this advisory committee on university affairs, a realistic cost analysis of university financing in this province. I call that utterly irresponsible on the part of the Minister and his department. I would think that by now, that information would have been in so at least when we change the weights on the formula financing, we would know what we are doing with the public's money. I was wondering Mr. Chairman, if the Minister might comment on the weights and the criteria used to change those weights.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, I think, if memory serves me correctly once again, it was indicated when the formula was introduced. I would refer the hon. member to the first sentence of the "bible" that he is quoting from, which the member for Sudbury—

Mr. T. Reid: It is not a Bible.

Hon. Mr. Davis: The member for Sudbury is suggesting that we really should not pay much attention to it.

Mr. Lewis: Hear! Hear! It really is a thin and inconsequential piece of paper.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I just would remind the member for Scarborough West that his own colleague was using it.

Mr. Lewis: He has to use whatever is available.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh, I see, all right.

Mr. Sopha: I really believe that body should be disbanded.

Mr. Lewis: You should send those guys off to university to study.

Mr. Sopha: I really think that body should be disbanded.

Mr. Lewis: You are right about that.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I will just read the first sentence because it has been referred to; that would be fair:

The operating grants formula introduced in the fall of 1967 has worked so well, that it would be difficult to contemplate a return to the previous practice whereby the government grants to universities were based on the detailed scrutiny of their budgets.

It is from the same section that the hon. member is referring. When the formula was introduced, Mr. Chairman, I think there was an indication that it should be available for roughly a three-year period of time, at which time it should be reviewed.

The universities themselves, I think I can recall, were involved with the AUCC in some studies of this subject that perhaps would go beyond the confines of this province. But I think, Mr. Chairman, that these studies perhaps will not provide the answers, if in fact they are finalized.

We are into the third year, and the committee will more than likely have to undertake some of these studies related to any change in weights. This was understood and they will do it. We were hopeful that the AUCC, in conjunction with the committee and others, might provide some of the information on a more general basis but apparently they may not be able to. We would be doing it on our own.

Mr. T. Reid: That is helpful. But the point is a simple one. The weights, when they were established, reflected—as the member for Peterborough pointed out—the way things were as of a certain number of years ago. I simply say with the knowledge of a couple of institutions, not just York, but others, that I have tried to do some cost analysis on, that there is a need for a systematic analysis of costs of our universities.

I think that if this were done—and perhaps it should be done by independent universities and perhaps an independent Minister's department—we would find a lot of very interesting facts about the relative weights to be assigned to different categories of students. I would like to get into the real questioning of the Minister on the capital of formula financing and at what state it is at. The Bud Fisher and Harry Crowe article of May 16, 1969, makes it quite clear—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh, I am sorry, I did not know you were going to read it again.

Mr. T. Reid: No—I was here before that. But the point is that the average student is given 130 net assignable square feet. Now the problem is, as I raised with the weights for the operating grants, that this is almost an arbitrary figure. It was arrived at in some way, but it is having tremendous implications for a number of universities. I am just trying to keep my questioning brief, Mr. Chairman. For example, if the Minister knows, at Brock they built a certain type of building to start with. If the Minister uses that formula for the dating of new capital funds to Brock University, you end up with a silly effect. The problem is basically that you cannot assign 130 net assignable square feet per student in an institution that has a very low quantity of buildings, because the quantity of building that it does have might be unique and specific in some sense, and therefore it just does not apply.

I was wondering if the Minister could just comment on what the rational bases of that 130 figure is, and perhaps how it was arrived at and whether or not he has devised some way of re-evaluating that basic unit for the capital grants?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, I think it was explained when the capital or the interim capital formula was announced last March, that we developed after some very careful study and consultation certain guidelines for the interim capital formula. The one point the hon. member selects is the 130 square feet per student. This figure is not final by any means. It is subject to final consideration when the formula itself is determined.

But I must point out and I do not want to introduce anything else into this, but there were studies made and consultation with studies that have been done in Indiana and Australia and Illinois and state of California. This was the average figure per square foot per student. We are not saying that this in itself is final by any means. But it is a guideline and we will have equity with all the various institutions.

This has to be one of the basic ingredients in the formula, that no matter what square footage it is we come up with, it is acceptable to everybody. The point is that we treat everybody the same way, that every university is getting its fair share of capital support.

And in the interim, whether we use 130, 150 or 120, with the total dollars available, I think that in fairness there is an equitable distribution of the available capital funds; and that is what we are attempting to achieve.

The space utilization study is not only well under way, it is in the process of finalization, and I would hope, Mr. Chairman, before we meet again to discuss the estimates, we will have a capital grants formula that will make sense. Once again, not perfection, because there are many intangibles, many areas that I pointed out in my introductory remarks that will have to be assessed on an individual basis, but in the total sense we think it can be done, and hopefully before we discuss these estimates again.

Mr. T. Reid: Mr. Chairman, a final question to the Minister. You know, I think that the part-time university student is getting a very bad deal from the federal government and from the provincial government. I think that this is an area of education which is just as important as full-time undergraduate work.

I was wondering if the Minister could state why the part-time student is not receiving his fair share of student award money, and why an institution such as Atkinson College, for example, which is concerned with part-time degree study, is not receiving fair and equitable treatment on a prorated basis for the students in it?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, we have taken this up with the federal authorities and we have suggested that from our standpoint we would be prepared to go into assisting part-time students. As far as the reaction at the present moment from the federal government—I should not speak for them—but I do not think they are accepting this, at this point, although there are certain discussions going on relative to the total field of student awards in the next three or four weeks with the council of Ministers and others, and perhaps out of that we will manage something.

Mr. T. Reid: I would like you to convey to any federal people we meet that the official Opposition in this Legislature's reports in that regard.

Mr. B. Newman: Mr. Chairman, I wanted to bring up one topic with the Minister, and that is concerning the fee structure in the universities. Is the Minister considering having a two-fee structure, one for residents of the province and one for non-residents similar to the fee-structure in some of the jurisdictions to the south of us?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, we, of course, do not contemplate fee structures. These are determined by the universities, and certainly the universities have received no indication from us that they should consider, shall we say, two-fee structures, one for out-of-province students, and one from in-province students.

This is a practice in many states of the union, but I do not think we would really want to set up a larger fee structure, say, for students coming from Manitoba or Saskatchewan, or some other Canadian province, although they do this in the States.

If you are a resident, say, in Michigan and you want to go to the University of California, while free tuition is theoretically in effect in the State of California, you will pay out-of-state fees which are rather substantial. This is a policy I think with a lot of state universities.

I do not think it would solve many problems by asking students coming into Ontario from other provinces in particular to pay something over and above what they would pay if they were living in Ontario.

Mr. B. Newman: May I suggest to the Minister that he approach the authorities in the state of Michigan and ask for reciprocal treatment for students from the province of Ontario attending their universities so that our students do not pay any more than do their students when they come and attend Ontario universities?

It is a very important thing because our students pay three times the tuition fees at some of the universities in the state of Michigan than does the resident of the state of Michigan. It is not fair if they charge ours three times the tuition fee while their students in return pay the same fee that the resident Ontario student does.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Chairman, by way of curiosity before the estimate carries, has the Minister any specifics on what is inaccurate in the Windsor University report prepared by the three graduate students?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, when I say inaccurate, I have some information on that. I do not have it available with me. I would be delighted to show it to the hon. member and let him have a look at it and assess it himself. I would be quite prepared to make this available.

Mr. Lewis: Was it in the figures that the inaccuracy was purported to be, or was it in the argument about the colonization of ideas and such?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, I believe it was in the figures basically; I believe so, and I will get that for the hon. member.

Mr. Lewis: Fine. I would appreciate it. Thank you.

Mr. Sopha: May I ask the Minister before you close, if there is any comparable sum to the $500,000, when he wears his other hat, that he has that he can spend in his own discretion? Is there any comparable sum in this department? Surely there must be few people in North America that have a discretion to spend $500,000?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, it is not as large.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Around $52,000.

Mr. Sopha: I like to know that because I always tell after dinner audiences about the travails of the professor who went to England to study geography and the hard-hearted attitude of this government in refusing him a mere $1,000 to support his wife and three children while he was studying geography to come back to teach at Laurentian and my inability to tap that $500,000 that you have to spend—do not shake your head—he never did get the $1,000.

Hon. Mr. Davis: But, Mr. Chairman, I do not have $500,000 in this department at all. There is $52,000.

Mr. Sopha: On page 46—you have $500,000.

Hon. Mr. Davis: In The Department of Education.

Mr. Sopha: —less $700. Now, if you want to make it an even $500,000, I will advance you the $700.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, Mr. Chairman, with great respect, we are not really on that estimate.

Mr. Sopha: I know—I just asked how much you had in this department.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, in this department.

Mr. Sopha: Had you given the professor $1,000, you tell me you would have had $51,000 left?

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, that is not quite right because—

Mr. Sopha: Well, that is what you said.

Hon. Mr. Davis: There are certain set sums that are paid every year, the SACU gets—$13,000; CEA—$9,000; so that there really is not that total amount at the Minister's discretion.

Mr. Sopha: How much have you got? I really want to know because when I tell these Kiwanis Clubs I want to know the exact amount. How much have you got to spend in your own discretion?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Approximately $30,500.

Mr. Sopha: $30,000?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Right.

Mr. Sopha: So if my mathematics—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Sorry—$29,500.

Mr. Sopha: All right. Wearing both hats, you have $529,500 to spend in your own discretion.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Not really.

Mr. Sopha: There is not another person in North America, not one.

Votes 2501 to 2503, inclusive, agreed to.

Mr. Chairman: This completes the estimates of The Department of University Affairs.

For the information of the committee it would appear that there are now 65 hours and nine minutes expired out of the total available time.

Mr. Singer: How many hours are available, how many more?

Mr. Chairman: Just under ten hours.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence moves that the committee of supply rise and report that it has come to certain resolutions and ask for leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of supply begs to report that it has come to certain resolutions and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence moves the adjournment of the House.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, it is understood that tomorrow we are going to be dealing with legislation?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence (Minister of Mines): Yes, legislation.

Mr. Nixon: Well, you are not going to proceed with anything on that? My colleague is concerned about the landlord and tenant bill; we presume that that is not going to be called?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: We could do it with the unanimous consent of the House. No, it is not the intention to call The Landlord and Tenant Act.

Mr. Singer: I do not trust you any more. When you are writing jokes, please say so.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 10.35 o'clock, p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1969

The House met at 2.00 o'clock, p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: Our visitors today in both galleries are students from the Queen Alexandra Public School of Toronto. In the west gallery, I understand that there are to be guests of the field staff from The Department of Social and Family Services.

Statements by the Ministry. The hon. Minister of Revenue.

Hon. J. H. White (Minister of Revenue): Mr. Speaker, during the recent debate on my estimates I informed the House that we were planning to introduce certain changes affecting tax on meals served to more than one customer.

With the introduction of The Retail Sales Tax Act in 1961, Ontario adopted the method recommended by most other jurisdictions on this continent, wherein the taxable status of a meal was determined by the total on each check. This procedure caused relatively few difficulties while the exemption remained at $1.50 per meal and the tax rate at five per cent. When the rate was increased to ten per cent and the exemption was raised to $2.50 the need for separate checks became apparent and this resulted in embarrassment to the customers and more work for the vendors.

To eliminate these troublesome aspects, we are going to break with tradition and introduce a completely new and flexible concept with the object that only those meals exceeding a value of $2.50 will be taxed, which is the intention of the legislation. To accomplish this, each complete meal must be identified separately on the bill in a manner acceptable to the department. Three acceptable methods are illustrated in vendor information service bulletin No. 69-3, which will be in the hands of all vendors in a few days. Copies of this bulletin will be distributed to members of this House on Friday, November 28.

At the same time, we have relaxed the requirements applicable to caterers so that no tax will be collected on individual meals sold for $2.50 or less, and individual meal checks will no longer be required.

The effective date of these changes will be December 1, 1969.

I should like to express the government's appreciation to those vendors throughout the province and to the Canadian Restaurant Association, Ontario region, whose co-operation and suggestions were most helpful to us in developing these improvements.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): That is what you call the Burr Amendment.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Hon. W. G. Davis (Minister of Education): Mr. Speaker, I have a very short statement to make. The government has received an interim report from the special committee to which I referred during the estimates of the department, and I am pleased to announce that, effective January 1, 1970, the present minimum pension for those persons on long-term and disability pensions—A, B, C, and CB pensions—will be increased from the present figure of $1,200 per annum to $2,100 per annum.

At the same time, Mr. Chairman, we are raising the minimum pension paid to the dependents of deceased teachers from the present figure of $600 to $1,050 per annum. This will assist the 286 widows presently receiving less than $1,050 a year.

These new minimums, Mr. Speaker, will be integrated with the amounts which the pensioners are receiving from the Canada Pension Plan. The total annual cost of providing the increase in minimum will be estimated at about $1,569,000, and this cost will be met in its entirety by the Ontario government. The additional sums needed for these payments will be made each month to the teachers' superannuation fund which in turn will adjust the monthly pension cheques. The increase in pension will be reflected in the cheque which the pensioners will receive at the end of January, 1970.

The government has instructed the special committee to continue its deliberations regarding the other requests made by the Ontario Teachers' Federation, which I mentioned at the time of the committee hearings.

Mr. Speaker: Oral questions.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Prime Minister related to the statement just given to the House by the Minister of Education. Will this policy decision, which in fact concerns pensions which are not related to contributions, be a model for the improvement of the pensions situation in other areas of government and public service and for the workmen's compensation board?

Hon. J. P. Robarts (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, you realize, of course, that the workmen's compensation board pensions are under constant review by the board and have been increased on a somewhat different basis because the fund out of which they are paid is built up by industry itself. But I think we are all aware of the fact that those pensions are under constant review.

The government has some real concern about our old pensioners, if I may put it that way. Perhaps there are some from the civil service who are being adversely affected by the recent inflationary spiral. We are presently examining all situations with a view to correcting inequities where they exist and to being somewhat more realistic, in terms of today's cost, concerning pensions that may have matured some considerable number of years ago.

So my answer to the question is "yes."

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I have another question of the Premier. Can he assure the House that the energy board has received no instructions from the Ministry, or a Minister, calling for a decision on its enquiry into the relative merits of the takeover of Union Gas by Consumers' Gas, and calling for their report by specific date?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: I can assure the member that we have not issued any instructions, nor has any Minister, to the energy board as to when it might complete its public hearings in this matter.

I would point out that one of the solicitors has put the matter into the courts by asking for a writ of prohibition against the board. I believe that application is to be heard by the Chief Justice tomorrow morning. What the result of that will be, of course, we have no idea.

There are several interests, perhaps conflicting interests, in this whole matter. There are some shareholders of Union Gas who might think that this is a pretty good deal. I believe the offer expires on December 15.

What the result will be if the energy board hearing goes beyond that date is a little hard to project, so there are interests both ways.

There will be interests that might be adversely affected if the hearing were held too quickly and there are interests that will be adversely affected if the hearing stretches out too long. This is just one of the difficulties that arise out of a matter of this kind, but certainly it is not the intention of the government to interfere with the functioning of the energy board in the discharge of its duties.

On the other hand we do recognize that there are conflicting interests involved.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary question. Is the Premier aware that the chairman of the energy board said almost what the Premier has said in different words when he said, "We are damned if we do and we are damned if we do not," when talking about a postponement?

I will not wait for an answer to that, but here is a second question which is also supplementary: Does the Prime Minister feel that since the enactment of this legislation made this hearing mandatory after the offer was made, the good offices of the government might be brought into play to attempt to extend the period in which the offer is valid so that the full public hearing can be held as is required by the statute and as is expected by the community?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Mr. Speaker, on the first of those two supplementary questions: I discussed this with the chairman of the energy board but I did not issue an instruction to him. I wanted to inform myself completely as possible as to what the situation was; I was not aware that he had made this comment about "damned if we do or damned if we do not," but it is the situation.

As far as using the good offices of the government in extending the offer is concerned, I do not know that we have any good offices to exercise. This is a transaction in the commercial world and I suppose, really, those who made the offer are going to be bound by the legalities of the offer as it was made, and I would point out that the offer was made before we passed the legislation.

Mr. Nixon: That is what I pointed out to the Premier as well. That is why he has got the responsibility.

Hon. Mr. Robarts: That is what we face as a government. But certainly we are aware of the interests involved and anything we can do to ensure that all interests are properly served will be done.

Mr. Nixon: A further supplementary question, with your permission, Mr. Speaker. Would the Premier agree that the priority, as far as our responsibility is concerned, is to see that a full enquiry is held without the limitations of time, which seem to be imposed on it by the fact that this is a deal in the business community over which the Premier indicates he has no control?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Mr. Speaker, I can only say that this Legislature, having passed that legislation, must have as our interest the interests of those we are protecting with that legislation. This is obvious.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the hon. Minister of Social and Family Services.

As a result of the hearings that he and the Premier have conducted with representatives of the Indian community, has he forwarded to the government of Canada any particular view on the white paper brought down by Mr. Chretien, which in fact initiated these hearings?

Hon. J. Yaremko (Minister of Social and Family Services): Mr. Speaker, about a month or so ago I attended a conference in Victoria, B.C., of the welfare Ministers of Canada, and during one of the sessions Mr. Chretien was present and I gave to him a summary of the discussions which had taken place at Queen's Park here, indicating to him two main things:

1. That I had gained from the Indians assembled a very clear picture that the concept of proposals as he had stated in his white paper were unacceptable to the Indians at large. They were unacceptable either based on an assessment and a conclusion as to the merits, or unacceptable because of not having been able to grasp what was being put forward without additional detail.

2. And the other aspect that I put forward to him was the immediate necessity for devising a format which would bring together the federal government and the Indians primarily, and then bring the provinces into the picture as the third interested party.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. As a result of these discussions with the Indians, has the Minister opened up any new policy areas or attitudes for his own department in what has been a growing provincial responsibility in relation to the Indian community?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Both prior to the white paper and subsequent to the white paper, we have gone ahead with what I call an action programme. That is, we are dealing with projects being placed before us by Indian bands and Indian communities from across the province; specific projects mostly related to small economic development projects. We are using the funds which are in the Indian community development fund to go ahead with meeting these requests. The short-term needs will not wait to be attended to. We are proceeding with them in the light that the long-term policies may take a considerable period of time.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York South.

Mr. MacDonald: A question of the Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs. In view of the announcement over the weekend by PSI, that they were holding a meeting shortly to decide on the disposition of the $14 million in reserves which they have from medical premium accounts down through the years, is the Minister in a position to indicate what report he has had from his letters to all these non-profit companies; secondly, whether or not he is laying guidelines down that will have to be followed or whether PSI is going to dispose of these reserves as it sees fit?

Hon. H. L. Rowntree (Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the meetings have been held with various organizations, including the officials of PSI. The PSI organization, I believe, is having a meeting of its membership today, and it will be a day or so after today before I make a statement on behalf of the department.

Mr. MacDonald: Is the Minister in a position to report to the House now, or will that be a part of his report, as to the extent of the reserves (a) of non-profit organizations and, (b) of profit organizations?

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: I will not be in a position to report on the profit organizations but I will be in a position to deal largely with the non-profit organizations.

Mr. MacDonald: We can await the Minister's report on the non-profit organizations. Would the Minister explain to me the rationale for intervening and dictating to non-profit organizations as to how they are going to distribute their reserves, and yet saying to the profit organizations, "You can just absorb yours and the public will have to kiss them good-bye", so to speak.

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: Among the profit organizations, each organization stands for exactly what it was organized for; it stands on the charter which incorporated the organization. There are some organizations which were incorporated by doctors; there are some organizations which were incorporated by subscriber groups; there are some organizations which were incorporated and are operating in the health and accident field as co-operatives, as the member knows.

Then, also, there are those organizations which operate as a straight business for a profit incentive. Some of those organizations with a profit incentive have other areas of endeavour and will continue in business in other fields, or in fields which are not interfered with by the OHSIP legislation.

The law, frankly, contained in The Corporations Act, is quite clear, providing for the incorporation of these bodies and also providing for the dissolution of these bodies. The members are the predominant factors in each of these situations; the actual owners. In many cases, the ownership is in the hands of the subscribing group. In the case of PSI, it is in the hands of the medical profession. I do not think I will proceed any further with any comments on that today, in view of the meeting that I believe is being held today. But I will have some comments to make shortly about the PSI operation, which I think will be of interest to the House.

The department's interest in this whole field, from the supervisory point of view, had to do with the payments of all creditors of every kind, whether they are trade creditors or whether they are subscriber creditors, before any steps toward dissolution, under any statute or resolution of shareholders, takes place at all. The operational debts of the body must be taken care of. This was the warning signal which the superintendent of insurance sent out to each of them, and at that time put them on notice that the department was interested and wanted to be assured of the various steps which would be taken in the event that they discontinued from further active business endeavours.

Mr. MacDonald: A final supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the fact that the Minister himself stated during his estimates that these reserves were built up under the direction of the superintendent of insurance for the protection of the subscribers, by what logic does one say to the insurance companies that that portion of their reserves which was built up to protect medical insurance, which is now being disbanded, should not be returned? Why should they be able to absorb it into their structure for the rest of the insurance that they are carrying?

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: Mr. Speaker, this matter is one of the items which will be dealt with when I make my statement on this subject.

Mr. MacDonald: That will be illuminating.

I am afraid that in the complete absence of the Ministers I want, I have no further questions.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wellington South.

Mr. H. Worton (Wellington South): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Transport. Would the Minister comment on the statement made by his deputy that the trucks have been allowed to overload and so reduce the life of the 401 from 20 years to six years, and why has this not been stopped?

Hon. I. Haskett (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I have not seen the statement by my deputy. It was probably made to the ATA convention yesterday.

Mr. MacDonald: Right, in the morning Globe and Mail.

Hon. Mr. Haskett: I will look into it and give him an answer.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sarnia.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): I have a question of the Minister of Social and Family Services. Having regard to the rather general response made to the leader of the Opposition by the Prime Minister last week, could the Minister enlighten the House as to any specific intentions by his department to relieve the iniquitous and unacceptable situation resulting from the Mumford decision and, particularly, would he entertain the possibility of taking The Child Welfare Act out of the exemption relative to The Summary Convictions Act so that there at least would be a certain term for appeal in these matters?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, it so happens that right now, at this very moment, I am reviewing all of the court proceedings throughout, the whole of the proceedings. The director, the deputy and the solicitor in the department are, at this moment, today, working on this to advise me and see what steps should be taken.

Mr. Bullbrook: Thank you. Is there any possibility that the children's aid societies of the province could be relieved of their concern by reason of the fact that amendments might be available before this session comes to an end?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: That is under consideration.

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary?

Mrs. M. Renwick (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, this Ottawa case, was this a test case? Was it a test case, the supreme court case?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: I do not know what the hon. member means by a test case. A test case usually is considered to be one where parties more or less agree to a trial in order to have a matter determined. That is not my understanding. This was an application by the mother which was taken through all the courts to the Supreme Court of Canada to get a final decision.

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary? If not, the hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. J. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Justice. If the Minister of Justice, as he stated yesterday, believes that we would be naive to think that there was no organized crime in the city of Toronto or Hamilton, would he think that we were equally naive if we believed that there was no syndicated crime in Toronto or Hamilton?

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I think there is crime of organized nature—syndicated, if that means a different thing. Yes, I think perhaps there is that type of crime always at least seeking to get into our province.

I add to that answer what I said before; that our intelligence services are aware of the criminal organizations and are continuously investigating and continuously seeking to prevent crimes happening and to bring criminals to ground if crimes are committed.

Mr. J. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, by way of a supplementary question, if I may, to the Minister of Justice: Could he give us an indication of any case which has been before the criminal courts of this province in the last few months that would be indicative of the fact that the police are dealing with syndicated crime?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Speaker, I would think that perhaps if the hon. member wants specific cases I will look at our records and give him some instances, but not at the moment.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York Centre.

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Premier. Has the Premier any statement yet with regard to discussions he has held with Ottawa on assistance to the railways or representations to the railways for providing commuter service in the Toronto area on the same sort of basis as in Montreal so that no provincial subsidy is involved?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Mr. Speaker, I personally have had no conversations with Ottawa on this matter, but I have checked over the records of when this was raised previously. I found that really I did not have much information about it. I have gone over a good deal of material that has been examined, including the records of discussions with the federal government and the railways on previous occasions, and I am afraid that I come up with the feeling that there is not much virtue in pursuing this matter.

If there is a subsidy there—and I suppose there is such a possibility—it is buried somewhere in the deficits of the railways themselves, and I cannot come away from my examination of the matter with any feeling of optimism that there would be any virtue in pursuing this on behalf of a commuter service in this area.

Mr. Deacon: A supplementary question. Does the Premier recall that in May he undertook to follow the matter up with Ottawa to see whether the same sort of service could be provided at no cost to Ontario taxpayers?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Mr. Speaker, I have just answered that question. I checked Hansard as to what I said and I indicated that I did not have much information about this matter and I would inform myself. I have so done, and I am telling the member I do not think there is much purpose in pursuing the matter further with any idea that some similar arrangement might be worked out in this area.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): A question of the Minister of Public Works, Mr. Speaker. Is the Minister aware that buildings 552 and 554 Yonge Street, which were purchased by his department through the good offices of a former employee of his department for $280,000 without appraisal, had been purchased by the owner at the time for only $100,000 some four years and a fraction ago? Will the Minister take steps to ensure that in future all buildings are appraised and a control put on to prevent this rapid markup in the price of buildings being purchased by the government?

Hon. J. R. Simonett (Minister of Public Works): The answer to the first question is no. To the second part, all buildings are appraised before they are purchased by The Department of Public Works.

Mr. Shulman: A supplementary then, Mr. Speaker. What was this building appraised at before the purchase?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Mr. Speaker, I would not have that information with me, but I can get it for the hon. member.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): It is buried because he paid an inflated price.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Question to the Provincial Treasurer, Mr. Speaker. Will the Treasurer advise why The Department of Highways is not included in the programming for central purchasing? Why, if the central purchasing programme is going to save us $15 million or $20 million, or something like that, is The Department of Highways not included in that?

Hon. C. S. MacNaughton (Provincial Treasurer): Mr. Speaker, did the hon. member ask why it is not included in that?

Mr. Sargent: Yes.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I would have to say, Mr. Speaker, if it is not included it is not excluded.

Mr. Sargent: The Minister of Highways does not know anything about it.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I think perhaps he does.

Mr. Sargent: Well, what is the Treasurer's answer.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I have given my answer. There is no reason that I am aware of why they should be excluded.

Mr. Sargent: The Treasurer had better have a talk with the Minister of Highways.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I will.

Mr. Shulman: This is a supplementary to this question. Why does The Department of Public Works exclude itself from The Department of Public Works central purchasing?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that question be asked of the Minister of Public Works.

Mr. Shulman: He left. He ran out as soon as he heard it.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Riverdale.

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Go ahead, I just want to answer one from yesterday.

Mr. J. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs. Does he consider it to be in the public interest that Kaufman and Broad of Los Angeles should acquire any portion of the inventory or other assets of Revenue Properties Limited, and engage in the real estate development business in and about the area of Metropolitan Toronto?

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: I do not think that question can be answered in the House in any brief fashion at all. There are a number of factors involved in that situation, including the possibility of finding any buyer who would be strong enough, or have the funds in this current and present money market, who is interested in participating or assisting in part or all of this type of venture.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Prime Minister.

Hon. Mr. Robarts: I just wanted to say, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. member for High Park asked me about the Whitby hospital. On investigation, I find that on Sunday last there was a creamed turkey preparation served to some of the patients and about 25 per cent of them had some stomach distress as a result. They have all completely recovered as of now and there is an investigation going on to see just how this occurred and what the food poisoning was. It was a relatively minor form of result, if I may put it that way, and my information is that there is no one still suffering from the effects of it.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton South): Perhaps the cook is underpaid.

Mr. Shulman: As a supplementary, Mr. Speaker, is it correct that there were approximately 100 patients involved and was one or more sent to hospital?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: I believe, Mr. Speaker, there were in excess of 100 involved and about a quarter of the total number of patients who were served this food were affected. I believe there were between 700 and 800 people served, and about a quarter of those were affected in some way. One patient was taken to hospital but that patient is now back and is in comparatively good health.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey South.

Mr. E. A. Winkler (Grey South): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Social and Family Services consistent with one I had asked some time ago. I understand that the Company of Young Canadians—

Mr. Speaker: The question, please.

Mr. Winkler: I want to ask the Minister if he has had any consultation or request for co-operation from the Company of Young Canadians regarding the seven announced programmes in the province of Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, I have no direct knowledge of any such communication. We have received, since the member's last question, a letter from a member of the company eliciting certain information from the department.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. J. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Justice. Would the Minister correct the misconception which is abroad that the advisory bureau referred to in the amending bill related to The Landlords and Tenants Act and referred to in the report of the Ontario Law Reform Commission is separate and distinct from the rental review boards which were recommended by the law reform commission and which were specifically rejected by the government in the bill which was introduced yesterday?

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, it would be my opinion that question is not urgent. It will be debated when second reading is called.

Mr. C. G. Pilkey (Oshawa): Who is the Speaker?

Mr. J. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, if I may speak to the point of order raised by the member for Downsview, it is a matter of some urgency because the misconception is abroad, both in the Globe and Mail this morning and in the Telegram published today.

Mr. Singer: No, Mr. Speaker, on the point of order, clearly the statute speaks for itself and it will come up for second reading. If we are going to destroy our question period by attempting to conduct second reading debates in the question period, we destroy the whole question period, Mr. Speaker.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, I feel the question is of some importance.

Mr. Speaker: Three different points of order have been raised, I have listened to them, and in any event the time for the question period has now elapsed.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, on a further point of order, the ruling of the Speaker has been that a question should be completed and answered. The elapsing of the question period will not allow that, sir.

Mr. Speaker: The time has elapsed, there was a point of order, I had not allowed nor disallowed the question. The question period has elapsed.

Introduction of bills.

THE REGIONAL MUNICIPALITY OF NIAGARA ACT, 1968-1969

Hon. W. D. McKeough (Minister of Municipal Affairs) moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend The Regional Municipality of Niagara Act, 1968-1969.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mr. G. Bukator (Niagara Falls): Mr. Speaker, I would just like to make a brief comment on the amendment.

Mr. Speaker: If the hon. member would just wait a moment until we go through the routine. Now, perhaps the hon. Minister would give us his statement.

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Mr. Speaker, there are some ten amendments. I think they are self-explanatory. They are all in the nature of housekeeping which we probably could have lived without until the next session, but because we are making such splendid progress at this session, the House leader urged me to bring this bill in at this time.

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

THE HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENT ACT

Hon. G. E. Comme (Minister of Highways) moves second reading of Bill 229, An Act to amend The Highway Improvement Act.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill stand referred to third reading?

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I would like to recommend that the bill be considered by the committee of the whole.

Agreed to.

THE HIGHWAY TRAFFIC ACT

Hon. I. Haskett (Minister of Transport) moves second reading of Bill 233, An Act to amend The Highway Traffic Act.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I believe this is the amendment which brings the breathalyzer into use in the applications he is responsible for other than those referred to in the Criminal Code. I would like to hear the Minister's remarks as to how he believes this will be used, and the emphasis on the availability of the equipment when it comes into force, supposedly, on December 1, at the same time as the federal legislation will come into force. I do not particularly want to ask a question about it this time, because it would not be in order, but I believe that the matter is of sufficient concern that the Minister might make a further statement at this time.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Mr. Speaker, I am glad to see that the province of Ontario at long last is going along with this very intelligent idea—I guess it really has no choice—of taking action against people who have consumed too much liquor and are driving their car. You may recall, sir, that over a long period of years, I have been putting forward that position, as have other members of this House.

I think a word should be said at this stage commending the late Dr. Ward Smith, who was the head of the crime laboratory, and who really fathered this scheme in The Attorney General's Department, published many learned articles and gave very many excellent lectures in support of this scheme which has now become a part of the law of Canada.

Notwithstanding the source from which it emanated, Mr. Speaker, there was great difficulty over the years in convincing a series of Attorneys General and a series of Ministers of Transport that the scheme had substantial validity. At this point, and bearing in mind some of the comments we get from the other side of the House about what happens in Ottawa, I would like to commend the federal government for bringing forward this intelligent amendment to the Criminal Code, and commend the province of Ontario, which really had no other choice but to bring forth complementary legislation.

But, certainly, Mr. Speaker, I did not want to let this opportunity slip by without mentioning the very substantial contribution that the late Dr. Ward Smith made to this very important field of public safety.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak to this bill before the hon. Minister comments? If not, the hon. Minister.

Hon. Mr. Haskett: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the commendatory words of the member for Downsview. They are quite in line with what he has said on previous occasions. We have looked forward, all of us, I think, to the enactment by the federal government of the changes in the drinking and driving sections of the Criminal Code. I think the point raised by the hon. leader of the Opposition with respect to the enforcement are matters which fall entirely within the jurisdiction of my colleague, the Minister of Justice. What we are doing with this Act is simply amending our Act to agree with the changes that have been made in the code with respect to the renumbering of sections, with respect to the elimination of the offence of driving while intoxicated, and providing the same mandatory provisions of suspension with respect to refusing to take the breathalyzer test and having more than .08.

Both the hon. leader of the Opposition and the member for Downsview spoke in this very vein a year, or a year and a half ago. I think that we all rejoice in the action that has been taken by the federal government. At that time, the federal enactment appeared to be going through at an impairment level of .1 and I think the hon. leader of the Opposition hoped, as many of the rest of us did, that it would be reduced to .08. That is where it stands and we look forward to the beneficial effects of the federal correction of the code and of our agreeing with it.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill stand referred to third reading?

Some hon. members: Yes.

THE INCOME TAX ACT, 1961-1962

Hon. J. H. White (Minister of Revenue) moves second reading of Bill 223, An Act to amend The Income Tax Act, 1961-1962.

Mr. Nixon: Just a word on second reading. As I understand it, this is just a standard re-enactment of our position in the income tax deal that is brought forward every year so that our rights to what used to be called an abatement will return to the province. I wonder if the Minister might make it clear, however, why this has to be re-enacted from time to time? What opportunities are available in the federal-provincial tax collection agreement for amendment to the level of the income taxes levied for this province, which, under the present agreement, are collected federally, for return, whether abatement or otherwise, to Ontario?

Hon. Mr. White: Mr. Speaker, I will be glad to do that.

Mr. Speaker: I wonder, perhaps, if there are any other members who wish to speak to this bill; perhaps they could do so before the Minister replies. Are there, in fact, other members wishing to speak to the bill? If not, the hon. Minister may proceed.

Hon. Mr. White: Mr. Speaker, we must have statutory authority to enter into the contractual arrangement with the federal government, whereby they collect our 28 points of personal income tax. That, it happens, is the same amount as their abatement. We are not confined to that amount and, as you know, other provinces have higher amounts.

Twice a year we have the opportunity of adjusting these amounts or confirming that they shall remain the same. I think I am correct in saying that we have that opportunity by October 15 each year for the period commencing January 1; and by May 15 for the period beginning July 1. If the government, as a matter of policy, decided to increase the tax or decrease it, that opportunity would be available at those two times of the year.

The reason, I think, that the statute has not been worded to provide that rate in perpetuity is because we do, in fact, wish to have the opportunity of reviewing this particular tax level at regular intervals. We are prepared to bring that policy, in the form of a bill, before the Legislature at least once a year.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill stand referred to third reading?

Some hon. members: Yes.

Agreed to.

THE TEACHING PROFESSION ACT,

Hon. W. G. Davis (Minister of Education) moves second reading of Bill 224, An Act to amend The Teaching Profession Act.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill stand referred to third reading?

Mr. Nixon: What does the Minister have to say?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, unless there is some point, I think these next four or five Acts really can go right to third reading. There is nothing other than routine or administrative details in them.

Mr. Speaker: Agreed to?

Mr. W. G. Pitman (Peterborough): I would like to ask a question on this particular one, The Teaching Profession Act. It is just really a question on procedure, or you might say, on mechanics. Is it possible to—

Mr. Speaker: I must point out to the hon. member that the question is put, the bill has been carried. The motion has been carried.

Mr. Pitman: These are going right to third reading without any committee?

Mr. J. Renwick (Riverdale): Unless the members decide—

Mr. Speaker: I think probably, and I am informed that it may be a good idea since the bill has been concurred in as going to third reading that we may permit a question at this time.

Mr. Pitman: It is really only a question, Mr. Speaker. As the Minister is well aware, there has been a great deal of discussion over the future of the teaching profession in terms of a single teaching organization. As the Minister well knows this is one of the recommendations that is dealt with at some length in the Hall-Dennis report. Really, what I want to find out is whether there is anything in the mind of the Minister as to how this is going to come about or, if it should come about, is it entirely in the hands of the Ontario Teachers' Federation? Is it entirely in the hands of the various affiliates of the Ontario Teachers' Federation? This bill, essentially, is a reorganizational bill of that particular organization.

I wonder if the Minister could indicate on the occasion of this amendment just what the direction of the government is in bringing about what, at least, some educational experts feel would be a relatively useful tendency, in view of the fact that the K to 13 is the direction in which certainly the Minister's educational policies seem to be going at the present time.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, the position of the government at the moment is simply to leave this for discussions within the profession itself. I know they have been giving this matter some genuine consideration but they do face rather immediate problems with respect to their structure. This is why these minor amendments are being made. But at the present moment, we are looking to the profession itself to make these determinations. The government itself is not becoming involved.

THE ONTARIO SCHOOL TRUSTEE COUNCIL ACT

Hon. Mr. Davis moves second reading of Bill 225, an Act to amend The Ontario School Trustee Council Act.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill stand referred to third reading?

Agreed to.

THE TRADE SCHOOLS REGULATION ACT

Hon. Mr. Davis moves second reading of Bill 226, An Act to amend The Trade Schools Regulation Act.

Mr. Pitman: Mr. Speaker, I see here something of a problem and I wonder if the Minister would indicate what the problem is. Is it that he has been having difficulty with trade schools in relation to the forfeiture of the securities?

Hon. Mr. Davis: If I may explain very briefly, Mr. Speaker, we have run into some situations where with the amount of bond that has been deposited and the terminology in the Act, some students have paid fees in advance. If the trade school closed down and ceased offering the course, there was not sufficient money there to compensate these students for the fees paid in advance. This will give us the opportunity to see that this sort of thing does not happen.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill stand referred to third reading?

Agreed to.

THE TEACHERS' SUPERANNUATION ACT

Hon. Mr. Davis moves second reading of Bill 227, An Act to amend The Teachers' Superannuation Act.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill stand referred to third reading?

Agreed to.

THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION ACT

Hon. Mr. Davis moves second reading of Bill 228, An Act to amend The Department of Education Act.

Mr. Nixon: Mr Speaker, since I think we would agree that this bill might go right forward to third reading, I would make a comment or two, instead of asking a question, particularly about the change in provision that permits a landed immigrant to be granted a certificate without declaring his intention to become a Canadian citizen. This is in a sense a bit of the argument we had in the estimates of The Department of University Affairs yesterday when some concern was expressed that our schools, or at least our universities, were being de-Canadianized. I do not think there is the same threat by any means associated with our elementary and secondary schools. As a matter of fact the Minister in his policy—in his administration—has gone far afield searching for qualified teachers, particularly during those periods when shortages of competent teachers were acute.

I just wonder what has prompted this particular change and whether or not it might have been left in the statute in view of the problems that seem to be arising in other levels of the education system, over which we in this Legislature have some concern and control?

Mr. Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak to the bill before the Minister replies?

Mr. Pitman: One or two words on this, Mr. Speaker. I am interested as well in the point the hon. leader of the Opposition brought up and the concern which he expresses over what seems to be a change of direction. I am concerned as well and interested in the subsection 2, providing for the appointment of recreation committees for territories without municipal organization. Once again I would like to pick the mind of the Minister as to whether this is a direction The Department of Education is taking toward the—you might say—extension of its power and jurisdiction over recreation in the province, looking upon recreation in its widest sense—that it is essentially educational. Perhaps this is a direction toward providing what one might call a social purpose for an entire community by making a school the centre of the total resources in a community and providing recreation within that jurisdiction. I just wonder if this is the first step toward a totally new direction or whether this is just a cleaning up and filling in of holes which perhaps exist here?

I would say on the amendment to section 5 that I certainly would agree with that. I think it is about time that we recognize the services which have been given to us by the people the Minister has appointed to his council of regents for the colleges of applied arts and technology. They have put in many, many hours.

I wonder if this is going to be retroactive in view of the fact that they have been working now for three years. Is it retroactive to the time of the setting up of that council? Because many of them have given many, many hours. Many of them have left the council and the Minister has given us very good reasons why they have left, but I would hope these people would not be deprived of what really is a very token payment for the kind of services which they provided to the Minister of Education.

At the same time, I would hope that he would broaden that body to include others—a wider community—and that there would be an opportunity to bring in people from the faculty associations and from the student organizations of the colleges of applied arts and technology in such a way that this body would really represent them. It would be a more effective body in governing the colleges of applied arts and technology across the province.

I think that is really all I wanted to say on that bill, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak to the bill? If not, the hon. Minister.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, just to reply to them in reverse order with respect to the last point, is to a degree making it clear that we can in fact make these payments. I think in the first year we were, in fact, making them. This was raised by the people in the auditor's department, so we are making this change.

With respect to the matter of appointment of recreation committees, this does not point out a direction that perhaps the hon. member is suggesting that this sort of programme might take. It really is to meet an existing situation in those territories without municipal organization.

With respect to the first matter raised by the leader of the Opposition: As it spells out in the Act, this provides uniformity with the requirements under The Canadian Citizenship Act, which is no longer a declaration of intent. As he will notice, this is still confined to a temporary or interim teaching certificate.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill stand referred to third reading?

Agreed to.

THE ONTARIO MUNICIPAL BOARD ACT

Hon. W. D. McKeough (Minister of Municipal Affairs) moves second reading of Bill 231, An Act to amend The Ontario Municipal Board Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Waterloo North.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): Mr. Speaker, I have just one question. What happens if two members of the municipal board have to make a decision and they do not agree on it?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: The point is that they will not sit any longer as two. They will either sit singly or as three.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak to this bill?

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill stand referred to third reading?

Agreed to.

THE MUNICIPAL FRANCHISES ACT

Hon. Mr. McKeough moves second reading of Bill 232, An Act to amend The Municipal Franchises Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Nixon: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just a comment or two on this bill. The Minister was good enough to provide me with some information following first reading, but I was interested that these franchises have apparently been renewed and extended for many years without the authority of this Legislature. I do not know whether there would be any legal problem connected with this under these circumstances and I do not believe this bill gives retroactive authority in any way. Is there a possibility that there might be, in fact, some legal actions taken in view of decisions and extensions made by the energy board which apparently were not authorized?

Mr. Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak to the bill before the Minister replies? The hon. member for Waterloo North.

Mr. Good: Mr. Speaker, I have just one question. In giving the energy board authority to renew, does it also give authority over the terms of the franchise that is extended or renewed?

Mr. Speaker: Do any other members wish to speak? If not, the hon. Minister.

Hon. Mr. McKeough: I think the leader of the Opposition perhaps has misconstrued a little bit what I told him the other day. Where there has been a renewal, and there have been many renewals, they have been agreed to or confirmed by the Ontario Energy Board. But there has been an agreement. There has had to be an agreement before there could be a confirmation by the energy board. This bill allows the energy board to get into the act, if I can put it that way, where there is not an agreement between the municipality and the utility. I think there is one situation in the province where there has not been an agreement until now, and where gas has been supplied in the absence of an agreement.

I think that in answer to the second question from the member for Waterloo North, the answer would be "yes."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill stand referred to third reading?

Agreed to.

THIRD READINGS

The following bills were given third reading upon motions:

Bill 125, An Act to amend The Regulations Act.

Bill 192, An Act to amend The Public Service Superannuation Act.

Clerk of the House: The third order; resuming the adjourned debate on the amendment to the motion that Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair and that the House resolve into the committee on ways and means.

ON THE BUDGET

Mr. Speaker: In the absence of any list of speakers, the hon. member for High Park.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): Mr. Speaker, I thank you for the opportunity to be able to speak again in this House.

I would like to for once pass out some compliments. It is, unfortunately, the duty of Opposition to criticize members of this House all too often. We have so very many reasons to criticize, particularly when we look across the floor, but there are some meritorious members in the other parties who have not received very many plaudits from this side of the House.

I have never done this before, but perhaps you will forgive me if I do praise one or two—in fact a few—of the members on the other side of the House who have done a good job and I think, for once, should get some credit.

There are three members of the Cabinet I would like to mention and two members of the Conservative back bench. I have had a little difficulty with the Liberals, but there is one who, I believe, should get some praise.

I would like to mention the member for Cochrane North, the Minister of Lands and Forests (Mr. Brunelle). He is a modest, unassuming man who does a remarkably good job in the House. He is always kind and cooperative. In my few contacts with him—I have not had that many opportunities, not having too many lands and forests in my riding but I have had problems—and in the few problems that have come up, any time that I have gone to him he has been unfailingly polite and kind.

In contrast with some of his colleagues, he has never hesitated to supply the information which is necessary for the proper functioning of a member of this House. He has gone out of his way to give me information which I am sure other Ministers would have considered impossible to hand to the Opposition.

For example, the thing that comes to mind is transportation maps. It had been brought to my attention by a government employee that there was a tremendous duplication in the method of communication of government departments, and that a transportation and a communication map had been made by this particular Minister. He unhesitatingly handed it to me and took the trouble to have his associates explain the meaning of the map, and the fact was that there was not a true duplication, and that if he had not done this we, in the Opposition, might have risen in the House here and wasted a great deal of time arguing about something which really was not of any importance. I think he deserves some credit.

The other Minister, who also is not here at the moment—I am sorry he is not—is the Minister of Education (Mr. Davis). The Minister of Education, by the very nature of his appointment, is the subject of a great deal of criticism. I want to say that in my two years in this House, this member, the member for Peel North, has gone out of his way also to be helpful to me in every possible way. He has been of tremendous assistance, and the reason I have not had to press him in the House and ask questions is that invariably my queries which are sent to his office are answered promptly and helpfully. I want to give a tip of my hat to that Minister also.

Finally, one Minister with whom I disagree quite often and who makes many mistakes, but I think who deserves a word of commendation, is the Minister of Mines (Mr. A. F. Lawrence). He is a refreshing change from his predecessors in his position. There are many things we think he should do that he has not done as yet, but he has begun to move and he has made progress and I think he deserves a word of credit.

There are two Conservative back benchers that I would like to mention briefly because I think they are outstanding. Of course, it is easy to be outstanding in that group—but they are outstanding, I think they would be outstanding in any group. They are the member for Armourdale (Mr. Carton) and for Quinte (Mr. Potter). I have the pleasure of sitting on committees headed by those two members and it has been a pleasure to work with both of them.

The member for Armourdale is a quiet man; he works steadily and conscientiously and he—in the committee where I am working with him at the moment—has worked very carefully to bring in a report which I am sure will be signed unanimously, and will receive the approval of all the members of the House and will be of benefit to every citizen of this province. I think that he should get a word of commendation from the Opposition benches.

As to the member for Quinte, of course everyone knows his value. It is a great pity, it is a sin, that he was not made the Minister of Health. He would have taken so much of the health problems out of the political realm because this is a man whom everyone recognizes is working for the betterment of the people of the province. We, on this side of the House, are conscious of his efforts. We regret he does not have more responsibility.

I would like to say a word about the member for Sarnia (Mr. Bullbrook) because I have been most impressed by his work in this House. I am sorry he is not here to hear my compliment. We have quarrels from time to time—as I say, looking at the Liberal group, it is easy to stand out—but he has done a remarkable job. He would even stand out in our group.

I am not going to praise the members of my own party because there are so many of them who do a good job. It would take the rest of the day, sir, but I did feel on this one occasion that perhaps I might take a few minutes to praise those members from the other parties who are outstanding in their work. There are a few of them, and those are the few who I hope will be here after the next election. We intend to look after the rest of them. The member for Scarborough West is deciding whether or not those seats are safe.

Mr. J. Renwick (Riverdale): Did the member miss anyone?

Mr. Shulman: I did not miss anybody.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): He covered every conceivable member of the Opposition.

Mr. Shulman: Now that we have covered every conceivable member of the other parties who deserve praise, sir, I would like to turn to one of the members of the other parties who deserves very little praise. Unfortunately, it is the Minister of Health (Mr. Wells). There is so much wrong in that department that perhaps I might spend the bulk of my three quarters of an hour discussing that.

Before I do I would just like to say one word about the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Simonett). The Minister of Public Works is worth about one word. We have heard a great deal from the Minister of Public Works in recent weeks. Unfortunately, it is all wrong and contradictory, but the ultimate was today. I asked about a building on Yonge Street which his department had purchased a few months ago for $280,000, and he said, "All buildings are appraised before they are purchased by my department".

We could understand this Minister a little better if he did not contradict himself so often. I looked back on page 7446 of Hansard and I see that on the day that I originally asked him about the purchase of that building he said "the building was not appraised".

This is really basically the problem with that Minister. He says one thing one day and another thing another day and you do not really know what he is doing or what he means. The department is in disarray, I think the Globe and Mail cartoon this morning summed it up so very well: The department is taking a free ride behind the Premier (Mr. Robarts) and if that Premier was not there to lug the three Ministers along who were mentioned in the cartoon, the whole government would fall apart from the sheer weight of those three men. Surely the Minister of Public Works is the heaviest of the three that were mentioned in the cartoon this morning.

He is an embarrassment—not just to the Conservative members—he is an embarrassment to everyone in this House. When we go out in the hustings to discuss government, we would like to think that the government represents all of us, even though they are Conservatives.

We do not expect them to do a good job, but they should do a reasonable job, and when they fumble and bumble and make mistakes after mistakes, we are not that pleased. We know they are going down anyway but we do not want you to go down in an avalanche, we would like you to gently slide into the sea and not collapse as you are doing.

I say to the House leader, and I hope he will pass it on to the Prime Minister, your Minister of Public Works is an embarrassment, not just to yourselves, but to ourselves. We thank you for writing it down. And for the good of all of us, send him to manage London House—that will be a good place for him. He could be your ambassador there in England and he would be following in the steps of George Drew and those other great Conservatives. Over there it would not matter if he made the odd bumble. We would not be aware and I am sure the English would not mind. I am sorry is there an interjection?

Mr. E. A. Dunlop (York-Forest Hill): Through his high commissioner!

Mr. Shulman: Well all right, make him the high commissioner.

Mr. Dunlop: That does not lie within the past, and this is typical of your statements. You pick up anything, you talk about people being inaccurate and you are just as inaccurate as you can possibly be very frequently.

Mr. Shulman: I thank the member for—

Mr. Dunlop: York-Forest Hill, make it right!

Mr. Shulman: I was making a suggestion, and I would not want to pinpoint the government down and force them to make this man high commissioner. They might be embarrassed.

Find a job for him. Perhaps he could go and mediate in Biafra or in the southern States. He cannot do any worse than our present Prime Minister is doing there. But in his present job he is going to bring us all into disrepute.

Anyway, let us leave that matter for a moment. I would like to turn to The Department of Health. The Department of Health's estimates are coming up tomorrow, so I am not going into the broader aspects of the department which we will have a chance to discuss in the next few days. But I would like to mention two or three incidents which show the peculiar things that happen as a result of the unbelievable incompetence in that department.

We had suffered for some years with a long procession of Ministers of Health who did very little, if anything, for health in this province, starting with the hon. MacKinnon Phillips. That honourable line is continued down, and finally this past year we have not had a medical doctor in charge, and we felt that any change had to be for the better.

It was a great shock to us to find a change for the worst, almost an unbelievable shock. But we now have a Minister of Health (Mr. Wells) who is outstanding in the long series; outstanding for his incompetence.

I would like to tell you one incident which typifies the situation in that department.

Last July 8, one of the technicians at the CBC—it was a hot day and he was feeling in a larky mood—walked outside of the CBC building. There is a huge tower there which stretches into the sky, and he bet it would be a great lark to climb the tower.

He vaulted over the fence and climbed to the top of the tower where he had a great view of Toronto. He looked all about him, and then he started to climb down. As he was climbing down he saw people climbing up toward him—firemen—policemen and safety inspectors—and when he reached the bottom, they grabbed him and said: "Oh, we are so glad you did not jump".

He said, "I was not going to jump. I went up to get a look at the view", and the other added, "Oh yeah, that is what they all say". They bundled him off to 999 Queen Street, and I quote from what he wrote himself.

The man's name is Sean McCutcheon and he has worked for the CBC for some time. I have spoken to him. He is a very reliable young man and I quote from what he wrote about the Ontario Hospital at 999 Queen Street.

The duty psychiatrist was already filling out my commitment form when he saw me. The interview lasted three minutes. He asked me my name, age, address and two questions of psychiatric content—"why did you climb the tower?" I answered, "For fun." "Did you hear any voices telling you to climb the tower?" he asked. "No." "Take him up to ward 5B."

Jingling his enormous collection of keys, the warden led me in through an eternal series of locked doors into the heart of 999 Queen. My ward was a long dank corridor, metal doors, barred windows. My bed a wooden bench in the corridor. They were a little short of bed space. My toilet consisted of four smelly bowls and was doorless.

It was too late for food and a shower. The therapy offered was the entire removal of my clothes and the substitution of pyjamas, the mark of the outcasts. I refused that therapy and asked to see a psychiatrist. I was told there was none available. At 6 a.m. the following morning, a warden shook me awake, told me to urinate in the urine sample bottle.

A kid on the ward whom I made friends with wanted to wear his clothes. Inmates are divided into four varying degrees of freedom. The lowest grade is confined to the ward and kept in pyjamas. He asked the warden and the warden refused. He asked the nurse and the nurse refused. He started to pull at the door behind which his clothes were locked, and the warden grabbed him and forced him to sit down. In desperation he stripped off his clothes and ran around naked.

The therapy moved up a degree and he was now grabbed by two wardens while the nurse came and give him a shot. He spent the rest of the day as a zombie, shuffling up and down the ward, his pupils enormously dilated, his face blank, wearing his pyjamas.

I walked into the cafeteria and saw a group of three inmates engaging in a conversation. Their heads are turning and they are smiling and I can hear the buzz of conversation. When I come closer, however, I realize they were talking utter gibberish. They are playing at being normal because their own world has been shattered. They veil the hollow wreckage in meaningless, unacceptable behaviour.

The normal, the sane inmates instinctively play this game of survival in this lunatic asylum—be respectful and submissive to the psychiatrist; assume the symptoms he expects of you; and then gradually let yourself be cured. It is the only way to get out.

I was sitting at the end of the corridor watching the inmates shuffle up and down, constantly coming toward me. About ten per cent of the inmates have their heads shaved to facilitate the administration of shock treatment.

The warden got some inmates to collect the bed sheets, soiled during the night. They laugh when a bundle is dropped, and joke about giving the fumbling inmate the big headache. I feel sick and scared.

I go to a group of therapy sessions. The psychiatrist does not say a word. The inmates talk to each other. They say, "Mary did not go to occupational therapy." "Peter slept in yesterday."

One of the inmates who is quiet stands up and says, "Listen, you have got to let me go home to New York. That is my home, that is where I belong. That is where my family is. This place is no good for me. I am crying more than I used to and I am just trying to talk to myself. This place is driving me mad."

The psychiatrist answers, "Shut up, George, you said the same thing last week." George leaves the room in tears.

I find myself on the verge of hysteria and suddenly realize that if I have to stay here much longer, I will become mentally ill myself.

I complain bitterly and manage to get myself transferred to the Clarke Institute by threatening to call Morton Shulman.

There I was further probed. The probing went as follows; subtract seven from 100 and keep on subtracting. I subtract all the way back to zero. Recite this list of numbers backward. I am a graduate engineer, I scored perfectly. I said happily to the psychiatrist, "Does that prove that I am sane, doctor?" He replied, "No, it proves you are obsessed with details."

So I sit there for two days. No psychiatrists were available on the weekend. I played shuffleboard, bridge and things to keep my spirits up. Everything I say goes into the daily report. This is all part of the therapy. My visitors are turned away. There is a pop festival outside our block but the windows are sealed.

Finally, on Monday, I trade an intimate account of my upbringing and sexual activity for a declaration that I am sane and I am let out.

Two weeks later I get a bill from the Clarke Institute for $208. I phoned the Clarke.

Well, he was a little upset at getting his bill for $208 because he did not really think that he had requested the therapy. So he phoned the Clarke Institute to complain.

They said, "Well, do you not have insurance?" "No, I do not have insurance. Why don't you send the bill to the police. They brought me here?" "Well, you were responsible because you were in here. Why don't you apply for welfare and get the welfare to pay for it?" "I am not on welfare. I work, why should I apply for welfare?"

"Well, you will have to pay that $208".

So he says, "Send the bill to the chief of police". The next thing that happened—I have a letter here dated September 12, 1969, from the Apex Collection Agency—the Clarke Institute turned his bill for $208 over to the collection agency. It says here:

Mr. Sean McCutcheon,
165 Robert Street,
Re: Clarke Institute of Psychiatry.
Balance demanded $208.

It now appears to us—I know you can correct us—that to collect the above amount it is necessary to enter this claim in a court of competent jurisdiction and to proceed. We hesitate to recommend such action to our client, the Clarke Institute, but you have left us with almost no alternative.

We must advise you that unless your intentions are known by us within five days, our client is to take the action indicated. Urgent. Act today.

Yours truly,
Apex Collection Agency.

At this point, Mr. McCutcheon phoned the Minister of Health. He could not get through to him and spoke to one of his employers, and they said, "As far as we can see, you owe them $208. You should pay it".

So he came to me and we phoned Mr. Borthwick of the Clarke Institute. Mr. Borthwick at first said, "There must be a mistake, let me look into it and we will call you back". Mr. Borthwick called back and said, "There is nothing I can do. We really do not seem to be able to cope with this type of problem because the Clarke does not get that many patients on remand”.

Really, it was McCutcheon's own fault because he asked to be moved from 999 to the Clarke. If he had stayed at 999 he would have got the bill from them instead of the Clarke. The Clarke did not feel responsible and as far as they were concerned it was out of their hands. They had given it to a collection agency and he had to pay, or suffer the consequences, which means go to jail.

So here we have this dumb situation, and it is a dumb situation—I am sorry the Minister of Health is not here; I think even he would understand how dumb it is—where a perfectly healthy, sane human being, as a result of a prank, ends up in the hands of the police who ship him off to a mental institution. He is kept there over a week until a psychiatrist finally sees him and tells him he is perfectly sane.

They then let him go and now they are dunning him for $208 for the mistake they made and nowhere in government apparently is anyone willing to listen and undo this wrong, and he is going to have to go to court. I am going to go to court with him and I am going to get up in front of that judge and say, “They are all insane down at Queen's Park, and they are the ones that should be dunned for this. In fact, they are the ones that should be getting the mental examination.”

This is the type of thing that happens in this department. It is so badly run, it rivals The Department of Public Works. Hard to say, but it does.

Let me give you another more serious example. This first one had certain ludicrous aspects. This was about a young man. He has a good sense of humour and even as he went through this most unpleasant experience he realized that it was not all bad. It showed up the ridiculous bureaucracy of the government; it showed up the insane way in which we are governed; it showed up the insanity which follows along, one insanity upon another insanity in that insane asylum.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson (Victoria-Haliburton): Is that a medical opinion?

Mr. Shulman: That is a medical opinion. He came out of there laughing. He said, “Good lord, is this how we are managed? Is this the way Canada is run? Is this the way Ontario is run?” That, stupid as it was, had humour to it. But there are more serious things that happen in The Department of Health and I would like to tell you of a very serious incident which we—when I say “we”, I mean myself and other members of the House not in my party—spent a great deal of time trying to unravel with absolutely no success this past year.

In the Ontario Hospital out in Mimico—the Lakeshore Psychiatric Hospital—a very serious situation developed in the spring of this year in the housekeeping branch. It was so serious that as a result of it a petition was taken up by the branch, by the people working in the cleaning department. It was signed by 11 or 12 of these people and they took the petition to Dr. Gunn, the manager of the Lakeshore Psychiatric Hospital—actually he is the superintendent. I will read the petition, I think that is the simplest thing. Let me say that this is coming up in this House only after months of effort of trying to get it straightened out through the Minister of Health and through other members of the government.

It is dated March 20, 1969:

Dear Sir:

We, the undersigned, would like to make a complaint in regard to the conduct of Mr. X.

And this is a senior member of the staff at the department; I am not going to mention his name.

We are in the employ of the Lakeshore Psychiatric Hospital, 3131 Lakeshore Blvd. West, Toronto, Ontario, under the supervision of Mr. X.

On several occasions he came to the hospital in his off hours intoxicated and approached us with immoral proposals. As we are morally opposed to his proposals we refused. When we refused he threatened us with dismissal. When this tactic failed he actually dismissed one of us.

We respectfully request an investigation be made into this matter and appropriate measures be taken.

They went to the superintendent in good faith. One of the women who signed the petition, a Mrs. Reading, had been dismissed, and the reason which had been given by the man who dismissed her was that she had lost a key. It seemed very odd after she had worked there for close to a year, but it was not just her complaint. This was signed by four women on the cleaning staff and seven men, also on the cleaning staff, who had been witnesses of this very matter.

The petition was taken in to the superintendent by Mr. Frank Shleback, who was a cleaner who had had no problems and who had worked there steadily. The result of this petition was not that Mrs. Reading was reinstated; it was not that the complaints which the cleaners had made were rectified. The result was that Mr. Shleback was fired. I think it was three weeks after taking in the petition they called him in and said: "We decided your work is no longer satisfactory. You are fired."

Mr. Speaker, I am not on the closest relationship with the Minister of Health, or his predecessor who was still in office at that time. I went to a member of the Conservative Party who I know is a good man and I laid the facts in front of him and he was as upset as I was. He interviewed several of these people and confirmed the facts, and then he went with these facts to the Minister of Health and said—this is the former Minister of Health—and said: "You must do something. This is awful."

The Minister of Health said: "I do not like being pushed, but I will interview them," and he interviewed three of the people. It was a very brief interview; he went through the motions; and at the end of the interview he said: "I am not going to interfere in local matters. The superintendent out there is in charge," and that was the end of it.

Despite all our efforts Mrs. Reading was not rehired. I was unable to get anywhere to have Shleback put back, and the people who worked there—the other cleaners, and the other employees in the hospital—have learned a lesson: Do not complain, because nobody can help you. The Opposition cannot help you, the government members cannot help you, and if you do finally force your way to the Minister he will not help you. And what is this doing to morale?

I have spoken often of the morale in this department—how low it is, how bad it is—and this is the reason. You just do not behave the way employers should behave toward employees. This is not a matter of politics.

I went to the Minister of Health through one of your members and I said: "Please, I do not want to bring this up in the House but a mistake has been made. Please rectify it. Give this woman her job back. If you do not want to put her in there put her somewhere else. Shleback was fired unfairly; I do not want to bring this up publicly. Clean it up," and they laughed at me, and that is why this government is going down, because every one of the people in that hospital is terrified. They will not complain any more. You have succeeded in that. You have frightened them, but I will tell you what happened two weeks ago.

Two weeks ago the employees at another Ontario Hospital, the one at 999 Queen Street, held a meeting. They held it in the Lansdowne Hall and there must have been 100 people at that meeting. They asked me to come down, and they said: "What can we do?" I told them that there is nothing they can do because no one will listen, and the employees of every Ontario Hospital throughout this province are aware of this. You are digging your own graves, because a lot of those people voted Conservative but they never will again. They will only have the superintendents' vote.

Mr. Lewis: They will not even have that. Not from all of them.

Mr. Shulman: You will have a few of the superintendents, a few of the brass, a few of the people who are anxious for their positions, but you are deliberately alienating the mass of people. Why do you do it? I just do not understand. Here was a non-political situation. You had nothing to lose. You were not even going to give me any votes. It is not in my riding. You had nothing to lose. You could have rectified this; you could have made the people out there feel secure and happy instead of which you slapped them in the face and said "go away." You have frightened them, but you have frightened them so much that when they go to vote they are going to vote against you.

Mr. Lewis: That is true. You have done it right across the province in every urban area.

Mr. Shulman: Let me tell you of another hospital. I am going to tell you now of one of my patients and I have her permission to bring this matter up here. She came to me not as a politician. She came to me as a doctor, because she had injured her foot working in an Ontario Hospital.

The background is this: We have a law in this province that says equal pay for equal work. Men and women are both supposed to receive the same amount of pay if they do the same work. This was not the situation in the Ontario Hospitals up until a short time ago, and a number of the female employees complained very bitterly. As a result of their complaints, which they brought to me, I took it to the Minister of Labour (Mr. Bales) and

I give the Minister of Labour credit: He contacted the hospitals involved and the word went down:

You cannot continue like that. You have got to give equal pay for equal work.

Well, all very well. Suddenly they start getting equal pay for equal work. So what do they do? In order to keep the budget at the same amount, they reduce the number of workers. On one particular shift, where there used to be six women acting as cleaners, they said:

All right, if we have to give you equal pay we will give you equal pay, but we are going to change it. From now on, instead of there being six women looking after these two floors, there are going to be three women and one man.

So, that way they kept the financial expenditure the same way.

Well, what happens? This woman had an accident, she hurt her foot at work. The doctor comes up, the psychiatrist who was on duty, and he said:

Well, it does not look like much. I would not worry about it. Keep on working.

After work—she was a patient of mine; she came to see me. I sent her for an x-ray, and I told her she could not work, she would have to go off on compensation. Well, what did the doctor on duty say to her? He said:

So many of you go on compensation. You complain too often. You cannot continue like this.

He called the supervisor up and the supervisor said, and I quote:

I am short staffed. You should not go on compensation. Can you not manage? We are short staffed because you complained about the equal pay and we do not have enough people. If you go off on compensation the other people who are left are going to have to do your work. They are short staffed now. How can they do your work too?

Well, all right. The woman could not work. She had to go off. She was sick. And what was the outcome? There was no one put in to replace her. Instead of the six girls they originally had to do the work; instead of having the one man and three girls, they now had one man and two girls to do the work of six people before. They were run off their feet. What does this do to their morale?

There are two reactions to this. The first reason—you must all share responsibility for that—is The Department of Health has not been given the priority in your thinking that it should have; you are pouring money into places which really should not have it. You are putting it into building highways. You are putting it into doing things which are very meritorious if we could afford it, great; but surely they should come further down that priority list?

The health of our people should come first; the care of the people in our hospitals should come first. The people in our hospitals are not going to get proper care if the hospitals are not properly staffed. Your Ontario Hospitals are not properly staffed and the reason they are not properly staffed is that you are not paying enough money. You are not hiring enough people. The people you do hire you are short-changing. And this, basically, is the problem. It is a serious problem. There is so much waste.

I have some statistics which were prepared here by the United States Department of Health, Education and Welfare; strangely enough, they did this study here in Ontario. I suppose you do not know about that. I was quite intrigued to read it. They did the study in Canada to see where the money is going.

They discovered that the administrative expenses of hospital insurance in Ontario is two-thirds higher than it is for the rest of Canada. Two-thirds higher—what a waste. This brings in the second reason, which is if this department is properly run—and this must go back to the Minister and the Deputy Minister, but primarily the Minister because he sets the policy—if this department was properly run, you would be able to divert your funds to the proper places. We would not have the waste.

We would not have every employee, and I say every employee advisedly, of every Ontario Hospital feeling he is being short-changed and overworked. I direct this to the Provincial Secretary (Mr. Welch). You are an intelligent man; you are aware of the problem; why does this happen? Why is this department not put in the hands of a competent, kind man? Why is this department so neglected financially? You could do so much, apolitically, if you would be willing to do so. There is something very wrong at the top of that department.

I think in one of my very first speeches in this House, a year ago, I got up and I was shocked by what had happened to Janet Gurman, who ran a nursing home. I said, "There is something evil in that department," and I received a lot of abuse for those words. But my feelings have not changed.

There is something so very wrong in that department and when there is something wrong in this department, we can suffer with it. When there is something wrong in The Public Works Department, we can laugh at it. It costs money but it does not break anyone, it does not hurt people's health. But when there is something serious wrong in the top of The Department of Health, we all suffer. The health of our province suffers; the morale of thousands of people who work in your Ontario hospitals suffer. I am going to have a great deal to say at the beginning of the Health estimates. I will not go off on that subject. But you have neglected this so shamefully, and I feel it. I feel it as a doctor, as a human being, and as a member of this House and I am not speaking now as a New Democrat. I am speaking as a colleague of yours. Something is wrong there; do something about it. You are one of the few men in this House who can.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Pretty lonely, eh?

Mr. Shulman: The department, from top to bottom, is in such bad shape. I am glad there is one here to hear it. There is only one Cabinet Minister in the House—no, there are two—but I am glad that the two who are here happen to be the two who have any intelligence of any consequence.

Mr. MacDonald: The member has the quality here but no quantity.

Hon. J. H. White (Minister of Revenue): Would the member be good enough to name the Cabinet Ministers for the record?

Mr. Shulman: Yes, I have no hesitation in mentioning that the Minister of Revenue is here also. I think the two Ministers who are here are aware, just as aware as we are, of how rotten things are in the Cabinet and how important it is you make changes.

Why can you not speak to the Prime Minister? He is not here enough; he does not know what is happening. He does not know the mess that your colleagues are producing in so many fields, but basically and importantly, in the field of health. Go back to him. If you do not want to do it in the Cabinet meeting—you know him well, Mr. Minister of Revenue, you can speak to him privately. You know as well as I do how wrong this is. Your backbenchers know it and we feel, I say this in all honesty—we feel that the only way to get improvement in The Department of Health is to turf out all of you and we are doing our darndest to do it.

But it is all so unnecessary. We should not be arguing over health in this province. Let me tell you, you have other Ministers here—and I come back to the Minister of Lands and Forests—who, when we get up and make a suggestion—and many of you are the same, as you have shown today—do not have a closed mind. The member for Sandwich-Riverside (Mr. Burr) got up and made a suggestion to you earlier this month. You realized it was a sensible suggestion and you put it into law. This is common sense.

We should be able to co-operate in this House on things that are not of a political basis, and health should be one of them. We should be able to get up and make suggestions to you and your colleagues just as you do. You should say, "That is sensible, it is reasonable, I will consider it. If it is practicable we will bring it in. And that is what you do. That is what the Minister of Lands and Forests does. That is what the Minister of Education does. We saw that today, he showed it. But the majority of your colleagues have closed minds.

They say if a suggestion comes from the Liberal Party, if the suggestion comes from the NDP, it must be wrong. They even have closed minds about your backbenchers. Some of them, believe it or not, and the Minister of Health is one example, will not even listen to your backbenchers' suggestions. I come back to this mess at Lakeshore Psychiatric—one of your leading backbenchers went to him and he would not listen.

All right, there is my appeal to the only two Cabinet Ministers with IQ over 100. Perhaps we will get some results; I have my doubts. You know, I know you two mean well, but my fear is that you do not carry the weight in the Cabinet that you should. Not that individually you do not carry your weight, but you are outnumbered by the dunces.

Mr. MacDonald: Sadly outnumbered.

Mr. Shulman: That is what the problem is.

Mr. G. Ben (Humber): They will be carrying more weight, the member just made their heads bigger.

Mr. Shulman: Well, I wish they would carry more weight. We might have better government in this province.

I would like to tell you, to carry on with the situation in The Health Department, there are health units across the province and so many of them are in a mess. Again, the problem comes because at the top your direction is weak or non-existent. The Minister involved is obviously unaware of the problems in his department. I do not know what he is doing, if anything, but let me give you an example from the Leeds, Grenville and Lanark area. This is a good Conservative area of the province, you get a lot of your votes there, and this is what you should take such care to protect. You should look after the health of the province everywhere but surely, from a political point of view as well as from a health point of view, you should not allow stupid situations to develop. Let me read you a letter I received from Seeleys Bay.

Mr. MacDonald: They have got them in the bag, that is why they push them around.

Mr. Shulman: That is the stupid thing. You have to vote against them before you can get proper care.

Hon. Mr. White: If you vote against us, you need the care.

Mr. MacDonald: They are doing it down in Middlesex.

Hon. Mr. White: Anyone who does not vote Tory in this province requires treatment.

Mr. Shulman: That is intriguing, the interjection from our intelligent member. Perhaps I will have to modify my earlier comments.

Let me quote a letter, I would just like to read this into the record. It is from a doctor in Seeleys Bay:

We have a unique situation surely unparalleled in Ontario. In the Leeds, Grenville and Lanark health unit area, the medical officer of health or director's wife is also the nursing home inspector. The director is also the provincial chairman of the nursing home advisory board.

You can well imagine the futility of any complaint when it has to be first laid with the wife, then with the husband, and again with the husband as chairman of the advisory board. A most interesting sequence.

It is just so stupid. The Minister recognizes it is stupid. This sort of thing should not develop. It could only happen in The Department of Health in this province, I am sure it could not happen anywhere else in Canada. Yet this got into the local press in Seeleys Bay and had a great deal of controversy and the people could not even see anything wrong with it. It took unbelievable pressure from the Opposition to have this obvious situation corrected.

Halton is another weak area. I have an editorial here from the Daily Journal-Record in Oakville. The heading is "Our sick health unit", that is what they call it. And it starts off:

How long will the municipalities in Halton sit quietly on the sidelines watching the county health unit wallow around in a state of disarray.

I will not read the whole editorial, it is fairly lengthy, and there is no use in going into the details. It is mistake after mistake made in Halton.

Here is another one, this is from January, 1969, another article about the Halton health unit: "Halton refuses Ontario grants for birth control." It is immoral, apparently, to the man in charge there, he does not want it. What about the people who have to go to the health unit who cannot afford private care? There are people like that in Halton. These are mistakes after mistakes.

But the pièce de résistance, surely is seen when we look at The Department of Health, the prison hospital up at Penetanguishene, and I have had the honour—and I use the word advisedly—of being thrown out of that hospital twice. Once it happened when I went up wishing to look through the hospital. That was under the orders of the Minister of Health, the predecessor of the present Minister. But this is what really upsets me, Mr. Speaker, I know the Conservatives are not too interested in health in this province but I have come in here to make an effort, I am trying not to be political, I have done my best to make reasonable suggestions. There are exactly two members of the Conservative Party left in this House; I demand a quorum be called.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park has drawn to my attention the fact there is an absence of a quorum in the House. I therefore direct the division bell to be rung for a period of four minutes.

I would ask the Clerk to confirm to the Chair that there is in fact a quorum present.

Clerk of the House: There is a quorum.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park may now continue in view of the fact that a quorum is present.

Mr. Shulman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I had better speak quickly while I still have a few Conservatives to listen.

I was discussing—for the benefit of those who who have just arrived—the problems in the Cabinet, specifically the problem at this point of the Minister of Health. I had the pleasure a few weeks ago of listening to a speech by the Deputy Minister of Health. I do not think it was meant to be made public.

It was given to a group of doctors at the academy of medicine but as a member of the academy I went to listen. I was amazed at the sensible things he said, which are in such contrast to the practice carried out by this department. These things which I am going to say are all quotations. Ah, I am glad the Premier is here, I wish he had heard my earlier comments. The Deputy Minister of Health said:

In Ontario, one of the problems is, our emphasis is on ill health rather than health; we have comparative neglect of preventive services.

That is what the Deputy Minister of Health said a few weeks ago.

Well, I think back to our Health estimates last year when so many of us, the member for Parkdale (Mr. Trotter), the member for Beaches-Woodbine (Mr. Brown), myself and the member for Humber, got up and said this very same thing to the Minister of Health. He denied it, said it was not true, said we are doing a great job here in Ontario.

His own deputy knew this was untrue. The sensible approach to public health should be prevention, not treatment of the ill after they are all, but trying to prevent them from becoming ill, and the Deputy Minister recognizes this is not being done in this province. So, if the Deputy Minister himself recognizes this and he is unable to bring about changes, how can we, over here, hope to do anything. You must replace this Minister, He is not doing his job.

The second thing the Deputy Minister of Health said to the doctors of Ontario is this and I quote:

Health research should be supported in much more generous terms than it is at the present time.

Once again, we have a health committee in this House and the health committee has been hearing people from public health and people from the VD clinic. Two weeks ago we had Dr. Kyle, from the VD clinic, and she said we were not getting the support we need, we are not getting the money we need, we are not getting the drugs we need.

What happened? The Minister of Health got up in the House and denied it. He says Dr. Kyle is not co-operative. His own deputy puts the lie to what he says and we cannot get anywhere with this man. He does not listen to his deputy, he does not listen to the civil servants who work for him, he does not listen to the people like Dr. Kyle, who are dedicated. He certainly does not listen to the Opposition. We are not going to have any improvement in the health of this province until this man is replaced.

What else did he say? And this the Prime Minister might find of some interest. I am quoting:

The problem in The Department of Health is that we have adopted the add-on principle. Everything new is just added on instead of replacing the old which would lead to a more effective system.

As we develop our arrangements, these should be set up on the basis of planned systems otherwise our problems will become more acute.

That almost sounds like socialism, does it not?

Anyway, this is from the Deputy Minister of Health—and he is so right. You cannot continue this way when someone gets up outside—as happened at Warrendale—and points out all the mistakes that you are making in the treatment of mentally ill children, you add something on. When someone gets up here in the House and complains of the treatment of the retarded, you add something on. Your whole system is wrong. You have to set up a whole new system. The deputy knows this. Every doctor in this province knows this. Everybody knows this except the Minister of Health. The man must go.

What else did the deputy say? I quote him:

We must avoid crisis planning. It is amazing how much crisis planning is applied to our development leading to neglect of other areas in health. We have just such an example in the last few weeks—

He was referring to OHSIP:

—when most of our resources suddenly had to be put in one area and we had to strip the other areas of health.

That from your Deputy Minister of Health. He knew. He knows. Everybody knows. You go from crisis to crisis because the department is so badly managed.

Mr. S. Apps (Kingston and the Islands): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. member a question?

Mr. Shulman: Certainly.

Mr. Apps: The new Minister of Health has been in office for what? Two months?

Mr. MacDonald: Too long.

Mr. Apps: Do you not think he should be given the opportunity to try and do his job? I do not think two months is long enough to come to the opinions that you have apparently come to in that space of time. Give him a chance.

Hon. J. P. Robarts (Prime Minister): The speech is months old.

Mr. Shulman: This speech has not been written. I am speaking extemporaneously for the benefit of the Prime Minister.

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Well, you made all those comments about the previous Minister.

Mr. Shulman: That is the amazing thing. Let me say this—

Hon. Mr. Robarts: So it is kind of duplicated. It is losing its validity.

Mr. Shulman: Just let me say this, Mr. Prime Minister, through the Speaker to you. We were sick with the previous Minister. We looked forward to a change being made. We were disappointed when the new Minister was appointed. We knew you had more capable men you could have appointed. We had hoped the member for Quinte or the member for Armourdale or the Minister without Portfolio (Mr. A. B. R. Lawrence), might have received it.

We were mildly disappointed. We would have welcomed the Minister without Portfolio (Mr. Guindon), who is a man of good heart, and I know this. We were mildly disappointed when the member received his appointment, but we were still hopeful and we approached him. When I say we, many of us, approached him, hopefully, saying: "Please, these were mistakes in the past, will you improve them?" What was his answer? "No." He turned us down flat.

The very first day he was appointed I went up to him to congratulate him and hoping for the best. I was hoping we would have a good relationship because I do not want to be criticizing The Department of Health. I want to criticize your Department of Financial and Commercial Affairs, your Treasurer (Mr. MacNaughton), and the stupid, basic things that the stupid basic people do. I do not want to be arguing about health on which we should be co-operating.

I went up to your new Minister of Health—and I direct this to the member for Kingston and the Islands—and I said "I want to co-operate with you. I hope we will get along well. It is part of my duty to try and improve the standards of health in the province." I wrote him a letter that first day congratulating him and saying, "one of my duties is to go into these hospitals and try and improve care. Will you remove the restrictions that were put in by your predecessor?" He refused. What a beginning.

What he should have done is said: "Of course, come in. If you see something wrong, let me know. Of course I want to improve standards of health care. We have nothing to hide."

That is what he should have said. That is what the hon. member for Quinte would have said. If he had done that, I would not be giving this speech and you would not be hearing the criticisms from the Liberal Party of this Minister. We would have co-operated together. We still would have gone to the institutions. I would not be paying people to send the information on those institutions.

What a terrible thing this is that I have to do. I am not proud of it. I am not happy about it. It is a bad way to get information, the wrong way, and everybody knows it. But what a shame that we are forced to do that.

If the Minister had said: "All right, let us co-operate together. Go, and if you see something wrong, do not go to the newspapers, come to me, let us see if we can work together."

Members of this House have done that, members of your Cabinet have done it. There are men in this Cabinet I have never criticized because they are truly working for the benefit of this province. But they are so few.

The Minister of Health did not do that. He said: "No, you cannot go in; no, the other members cannot go in; no, we are not interested in your help or your suggestions." This is how the trial began and I direct this to the member in reply to his question.

We want to work with you in the field of health. You do not allow us to, you will not let us.

Mr. J. L. Brown (Beaches-Woodbine): They do not allow their own members to.

Mr. Shulman: All right, that answers the question. Let us come back to Penetang.

Mr. Brown: Not even good Tories.

Mr. Shulman: Penetang is the jewel, the worst, the outstanding part of this department and they are frightened up there. They will not let you in to see. I understand the good reason why they will not let you because there are things happening in there that cannot bear the light of day.

Let me tell you of my two experiences there. The first time I was not allowed in, when I wanted to see the institutions, this was on the orders of the previous Minister of Health.

The second time I went back, and this was under the aegis of the new Minister of Health, I did not even want to see the institution. I went up to see one person, a perfectly sane man who had been committed there in error. His wife had come to me and asked my help.

I went up to see him. I wanted to see what he was really like. Was he really mentally ill? Did he have a real grievance? And they said: "You may not see him". What have they got to hide? All right, they did not want me to see the institution, could they not have taken me to the visiting room and let me see him there? But they would not allow me within the door.

What about that insane man they would not let me see? I sent a message in—when they would not let me see him—through a guard. I said, tell Mr. X I am going to the newspapers with his story and I will have him out of here next week because I think he is being held here improperly.

What did they do? The day after or two days after that, they released him. The psychiatrist came in and said: "You can go". He was not mentally ill.

What are you trying to hide? I know what the Minister of Revenue would have done if he had been the Minister. He would have said: "See him. Give me your opinion". Would you not? Would you not have done that? You know you would, of course you would. That is the sensible idea.

But when you try and cover things up, you do stupid things like something that happened last year. Two members of this House went down to the Smiths Falls Hospital. We went through the hospital conducted by a supervisor. We said: "How can we help you? What improvements do you need?" And the supervisor said: "The most important thing you could improve is the clothing. When we put the clothes on the children when they arrive, it is fine. But after one washing, it shrivels up to half size and cannot be used".

So, I came back here and I displayed these in the House to the Minister of Health and I asked for an investigation to see why the Dominion Textile Company was giving them this shoddy clothing. We got an investigation all right. He called in the provincial police to investigate at Smiths Falls to find out who it was who had given us the clothing so charges could be laid.

What a terrible way to run a department. Surely the sensible attitude should have been not to investigate to find out who had told us but to investigate what was wrong and to correct it. I just do not understand this attitude. I do not understand a Minister of Health who can be so obsessed with secrecy—and both of them have been—that the care of the people who come under their control becomes secondary to their appearance. They have to appear important. They cannot appear to have made any mistakes. If the time comes, and I think the time will come that one of us on this side of the House—and I extend this to everyone on this side of the House—is the Minister of Health, I hope that that Minister will be sufficiently humble and sufficiently cognizant of the responsibilities of his job, that he will say, the day he takes office—and if it is me, I hope you will remind me over there—"We have no secrets, come and see whatever you want. Come and see any papers you want, come and see any correspondence there is. If you have suggestions, bring them to us and we will try and carry them out." That is the way Health should be administered in this province.

Let me say a few more words about Penetang. I have a series of letters here from people who have left Penetang and they are frightening letters. The things that they say have happened there frighten me. I do not know whether they are true because I have not been able to get in. Some of them I have been able to confirm by speaking to guards and speaking to officials there. Enough of them are true that I am frightened.

One case I know because it has been confirmed. A 16-year-old boy who was transferred from the Guelph Training School to Penetang, was put under the care of two prisoners. They have a system up there where prisoners act as teachers. Two older prisoners who had been transferred from Kingston were put in charge of this boy and they forced him to indulge in homosexual relations.

This was confirmed by the senior member of the staff who informed me these two men—as soon as this was discovered—were transferred back to Kingston. Well, why did this happen? I mean, you can find homosexuality in any institution. I am not blaming the staff for this, in any way. I am blaming the system. It happened because you are so short staffed, it happened because you are so short of funds that there is not enough staff to do the jobs up there and you have to take inmates to do it.

Imagine! Taking inmates in the Penetang hospital for the criminally insane, putting them in charge of a 16-year-old boy so that this type of thing can happen. It frightens me, it should not happen.

Mr. Brown: That is insane.

Mr. Shulman: The member is right. That is insane. This is carrying insanity into the administration. I have a letter here that was written to me by a man who was sent there in error. This is the man I mentioned earlier who was found perfectly sane. He was let out and was so upset afterwards he wrote me a letter telling me what happened to him in there. I just want to quote a little of it to you, because it frightens me. This was written not by a mentally ill man; this is written by a man who has been cleared and who has been released.

Let me tell you. He was sent there by a judge for a mental examination. After he became terribly dejected as a result of hearing some bad news about his family, he said: "I am going to commit suicide." His wife became worried, called the police and he was then sent to Penetang for this mental examination. They mentally examined him and released him. This is what he wrote me about Penetang. I quote:

The new prisoner is shaved and showered and then placed stripped in a stripped cell. A stripped cell has only a cemented toilet and a cement-block bed. A naked man has lost all of his dignity in one shot and has the added torture of no bed, no sheets, with a light shining all day and night on him. The prisoner goes through hell. During the period the new prisoner is here, he is subject to constant scrutiny not only from the guards but from the other prisoners also.

Not knowing the routine, the prisoner will automatically ask the guards for anything he might desire. One of the first things a prisoner will ask for is toilet paper. Now this is something one takes for granted on the outside, but not here. When he first asks, he will be told: "Yes, right away," and then he waits. After quite a period, he again will ask and again will be told: "in a few minutes." If the prisoner is stupid enough to go on asking, there are more stupid answers coming to him than you could record. It does not matter what he asks for, the game is played. In this fashion, he learns his first lesson—do not ask a guard for anything.

Lack of sleep is something that a healthy person can tolerate for quite a while but most prisoners here are not healthy. The night lights are unnecessarily bright so that unless a person is used to sleeping with a light on, he is doomed to only sleeping when thoroughly exhausted. No consideration is shown for age, physical handicap or health here. Everyone is treated the same way.

I interject: Just imagine, suppose one of us through some unfortunate circumstances were thrown in there. Suppose we had been a little depressed before we had gone in there, can you imagine what those surroundings might do to your mind? Can you imagine how many people are actually pushed over the brink as a result of that and who really do become mentally ill as a result of that?

How many people are examined after some time in there and as a result of that examination are then certified? I have letters here from people who have been in there for years and I am convinced that some of them have whatever mental illness they have as a result of their confinement there. I am convinced of it. It is a frightening, Kafkaesque situation. I quote further:

The humiliating duties that the prisoners are forced to perform so that the guard number can be kept down because the prisoners are not paid, are frightening. If they refuse to scrub floors or any other job, then they are locked up and often are struck. There is no out for the prisoner because if he complains to one of the doctors that he was struck, he is told that could not have happened. The guards would not do that and that he is hallucinating and this is the problem.

This is the problem. Who is going to believe a man in an insane asylum? Nobody.

I will tell you what I did as a result of this. I have a pile of letters from people in mental institutions who have written me stories, frightening stories of brutality and let me stress now, these are not stories of brutality by the guards. The guards, by and large, are a good group; the orderlies, by and large, are a good group. This is inter-patient—patient-to-patient brutality—and it occurs because you are so short of staff and because the attendants cannot properly supervise.

I will tell you what I did as a result of this. I could not prove it, there is no use getting up here and reading letters from people who are mentally ill because we will have the Minister of Correctional Services (Mr. Grossman) say, "Oh, they are crazy, what is the use of listening to them." So, I had a healthy man from the CBC go into one of these institutions last month. He did not go in on a false certificate, let me say at this point, he went down as a voluntary patient and said that he was depressed.

He took a number of pictures for me, pictures which I will be showing you in the health estimates, of conditions in one of those mental institutions. He came back and he said to me, "It is frightening. No one is going to get well in there." And this frightens me.

Let me say this is the second person I have tried to get into an institution: The first person who went down as a depressive was rejected. They gave him some sleeping pills and told him to go home and this frightened me a little bit too. When you start giving depressed people sleeping pills and tell them to go home, that they will feel better tomorrow—this is not too good therapy. But this is what is happening and the reason it is happening is because this department is being neglected.

You have got to put a man in there who cares, a Minister who cares. You have got to give him the money to upgrade the status and the staff and the salaries and the number of staff in these hospitals. Otherwise you are going to continue to have these horrors brought out. Let me read another excerpt; this is still from Penetang. I quote:

All of the prisoners are mixed together on B ward. Certified violent types walk the corridor with persons on warrants of remand who may be quiet family men who, through indiscreet remarks or acts, are here for 30 or 60 days to be observed and evaluated. If the person on remand gets into a mix-up with another type, he is treated the same even though he might not have wanted anything to do with the violent person. He has no recourse here and there is no fair treatment, you must just accept the lumps and try to like them.

I would like to give you an example of how this mixing can cause such bad things to happen. Last week, in the Ontario Hospital at 999 Queen Street there was a very serious disturbance in ward 4A. This serious disturbance occurred because two violent people from Penetang were transferred from Penetang and put on an open ward at Queen Street. The superintendent knew it was a mistake, he said so publicly, he has been quoted in the press. I got up here in the House and asked the Minister of Health about it. He did not know anything about the disturbance.

These two violent men suddenly went berserk one night and began beating people up. They then ran away. One of them came back the next day and let himself in with his own key. This rather frightened the staff and this rather frightened the patients. Where did he get a key? Nobody knows.

The other one is now back in custody and has been transferred back to Penetang. But this type of mistake occurs and it occurs time and time again because you are short staffed. When this eruption occurred on that ward, there was no staff present. The three men on duty were busy in different areas, there was no one to control. As a result of this there was an emergency meeting the next morning at the Ontario Hospital—what they called a crisis meeting of all the staff.

There was a resolution at that meeting that this situation in the Ontario Hospital was because of the lack of staff. They could not guarantee the safety of either the staff or the patients. It comes back again to the Minister of Health, he is not doing his job. He is not presenting the problem to the Cabinet, he has had a chance, and he has failed.

Well, there is a great deal more material here from Penetang. I do not wish to belabour it, I will not go any further into it, but perhaps I should just complete my remarks on The Department of Health by quoting from a magazine called Emotionally Disturbed Children. It is put out by the Ontario Association for Emotionally Disturbed Children and I have here the issue of this past summer, 1969. This is a regular magazine; it comes out at regular intervals and it comments on the problems of the emotionally disturbed in this province. I think what sums it all up is their view and they are not politically motivated. On page 23 it reads:

Goose egg of the month to Ontario's Minister of Health.

And that sums it all up, because that is what he has given them and that is what he has given the people of this province as far as health goes: Nothing. And I appeal to the government, and I tried as best I can. I have tried to be fair here, and I have tried not to bring personalities or politics into this, because this should not be a political matter. The health of the people of this province should be something every member of this House should be able to work together on.

I appeal to the government again, one last time, and I shall not make this appeal ever again, but this is his last chance. We want to work with them. We want to improve the standards of health care in this province. It is not possible to do that unless they cooperate with us; let us help them; listen to our suggestions; open the institutions so we can see them, so we can make suggestions. And we do not want to cause political turmoil or go to the newspapers or get up here in the House. We will come to the government with our suggestions. We will give them an opportunity to carry them out, but they must try. And the first thing the government must do is put a competent man in as the Minister of Health. They must give him the funds to attempt to upgrade that department, and they must show some effort to cooperate.

If the government will do that, we will cooperate with them and I am sure I speak for the members to my right also; I am sure they will do the same thing. Because the next election should not be fought on what is happening in our mental institutions, or the treatment of the ill in this province. It should be fought on the basic important things which differentiate our parties, and this should not be one of them. I do not want to go into this next election and say the Conservatives are the party that do not care about the ill in this province.

So I am bringing one last appeal to the government, and next year I am going to speak very harshly if they have not heeded. If the government comes halfway with us, we will go more than halfway with them. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Humber.

Mr. G. Ben (Humber): First of all, Mr. Speaker, in starting, perhaps I should just repeat the words that the member for High Park ended with. If you come halfway with us, we will go halfway with you. That way you will be getting one-and-a-half so you are getting the better part of the deal.

Mr. Speaker, before I sat down yesterday or the day before, I was on the subject of housing and I was trying to establish that the lack of adequate housing is causing a lot of the ills in this province and as with the others, there were some conclusions that I wanted to draw to the attention of this House in trying to solve the problems of housing. This is not an all-inclusive list but these are just some of the points that I think we ought to dwell on.

One of the things I do believe I mentioned is that we should not, in a period of housing crisis, be demolishing existing dwellings, especially dwellings that are in first-class condition as were the dwellings in the High Park area; as a matter of fact the area where the member for High Park, who just sat down, comes from, where Cadillac Construction put up a whole series of high-rise units. The best housing in the west end undoubtedly was sacrificed to put up those high-rise units. There are other and better places to put up these units and I suggested the railroad yards.

I also said that people occupying these large houses—older citizens with their children already grown up and gone—should be encouraged to rent out excess space. At the present time, this is made impossible by the very restrictive zoning. I am not for one minute suggesting that zoning which protects the character of an area ought to be done away with. I am saying that in a period of crisis, the laws could be suspended temporarily to a fixed degree to enable these senior citizens to take in roomers or even boarders or a combination of both to a fixed maximum.

This would have two effects. It would have the first effect of relieving some of the chronic housing shortage that is with us. Secondly, it would give these people a source of income to supplement the old-age benefits which they are drawing at the present time.

A third point I discussed was that some municipalities, especially the city of Toronto, have bylaws that encourage people to demolish homes rather than to repair them because the bylaw is too stringent. I talked about the minimum standards of the housing bylaw which is so stringent that it would require you to paint aluminum siding, if you in fact had aluminum siding on your dwelling, because the bylaws says that "all metal and wood surfaces must be covered with a preservative."

I also mentioned poverty and the effects of poverty. And also I was just getting to the point about giving grants to people who buy homes when the hour ended. I want to say that we should give strong consideration to giving outright grants to people to enable them to buy homes. In the first instance, this may sound like a giveaway programme. Maybe it is and maybe it is not; it all depends on how you look at it. But I would draw to your attention that under our subsidization programme, we are leasing to needy people apartments anywhere from $50 up per month—$32; I stand corrected. In essence, it is costing us anywhere from $170 down per month to subsidize these people. Well, if we are talking about $32 a month, perhaps that is not the best example. Let us take as an example people who could readily pay about $125 a month and require an apartment which would cost $200. They are receiving a subsidization of $75 a month or $900 a year. At the present time, they will be paying this almost in perpetuity as long as they need accommodation. If, however, we permitted them to buy a dwelling which would supply the same number of bedroom spaces and then forgive them $75 a month off the principal, even for the first five or ten years, it would reduce the balance of their principal to the point where from then on they could carry it themselves.

It would have two effects. After ten years these people would no longer be a charge on the consolidated revenue of the province of Ontario. They could then pay for their own accommodation. Secondly, it would enable them to establish a sort of a capital fund for their own children so that when they grew up their own children would not have to go into subsidized accommodation or live off the consolidated revenue of this province. In essence, what we would be doing is cutting off this perpetual reliance of some segment of our community on the resources of the community, for their accommodation.

In many quarters it would be hard to take that somebody is being given a gift, so to speak, of $900 a year, which over ten years can amount to $9,000. But let me point this out, Mr. Speaker. This government in the space of one year, gave away, by way of forgiveness loans, over $10 million of the moneys of the people of the province of Ontario under its Equalization of Industrial Opportunity Programme.

Now, surely, if you can give a forgivable loan of $500,000 to a firm like Allied Chemical, which grosses in the neighbourhood of over $3 billion per year, perhaps it will not be so sinful as it appears to give a forgiveness loan of $9,000 payable over ten years, or $900 a year. Consideration ought to be given to this. I think it would create an absolutely new environment for many of the children of parents who are not in the best financial circumstances. And as I said, providing these head-start programmes for pupils is not enough if you do not also do something to change the environment. This, I suggest, would also change the environment.

When we come to the subsidization talk, every year since I have been in this House, and before that while I was still on city council, I advocated permitting welfare recipients to supplement their income by casual employment, and I stated the reasons then.

I am gratified to read and to hear and to see in the news media that many other people in all segments of the community are advocating this procedure. Essentially it has a tendency to make those people who are receiving benefits self-subsistent.

I do hope that the government is going to give heed to this. Also, they should give heed to the need for more child day care centres and nursery centres.

Mr. Speaker, the big fear these days, especially in the United States, is not of losing the war in Vietnam or of a new war with Russia or China. It is not fear of the big bomb or chemical or bacteriological warfare, Mr. Speaker, it is a fear of walking the streets of the city at night. It is a fear of crime in the street.

This, in the United States of America, is the immediate danger. I say this Mr. Speaker, unless this government, unless we, take action to eliminate poverty; unless we take action to give everybody equal opportunity to enjoy the fruits of our economy; unless we supply our citizens with adequate accommodation at reasonable cost; unless we start paying our citizens a decent living wage for their labours and ensure that all of them will have the privilege of holding a job, we too are going to find ourselves in the same position as a lot of these Americans in these large cities—afraid to walk our streets at night, and nowadays, even during the day.

We have to start thinking in a "cradle to the grave" context. I am not suggesting that we ought to have a system of social services which will look after our citizens from the cradle to the grave, although I am not saying that that would be a bad thing.

I am saying that everybody ought to be given an opportunity to live today and face tomorrow with absolute dignity. This, unfortunately, we are not doing.

I think, Mr. Speaker, that a lot of our problem with drugs in our youthful society arises out of some of the things I have mentioned—poverty, lack of dignity, lack of adequate housing, previous lack of child day-care nursery centres, the having been thrown into the streets for their education rather than to pre-kindergarten schools.

All those things have given rise to the Yorkvilles and the Haight-Asburys of today. I am disturbed, Mr. Speaker, by the trend today to avoid tackling the causes of all these things, and the over-emphasis on so-called cures; the general tendency to try to legalize marijuana because so many people are using it, where people are getting up and trying to lead the public to believe that there is nothing harmful in the use of marijuana.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to read some excerpts from some reports that have been written on this topic in other jurisdictions. Here is part of a statement relative to marijuana prepared by the committee on mental health of the Massachusetts Medical Society, approved by the council, in the October 9, 1969, issue of Listen magazine:

Marijuana is a dangerous drug and as such is a public health concern. The fact that no physical dependence develops does not render it innocuous. Dose response curves indicate it ranks higher in potency than a barbiturate, and markedly higher than alcohol as a psycho-active agent.

Among the dangers are acute intoxication, psychological dependence, personality deterioration, and especially in predisposed individuals, psychosis.

Then the LaGuardia report in 1944, which has been counted as one of the few pro-cannabis reports, clearly states the following in a limited number of cases. Again I quote:

There were alterations in behaviour, giving rise to anti-social expression. This was shown by unconventional acts not permitted in public—anxiety reactions, opposition and antagonism and eroticism. Effects such as these would be considered conducive to acts of violence.

Then proof against marijuana took on a further dimension to the already existing marijuana laws in the world. The World Health Organization placed marijuana with heroin, and brought forward a single convention treaty signed by 74 nations of the United Nations, including Canada and the United States.

It was presented in 1961, setting as its goal the elimination of the use of cannabis all over the world by education and legal means over 25 years including the countries where it was once legal. This pact was ratified by the U.S. Senate May 8, 1967.

Then, getting back to our own country, Bert Hoskin, director of the Narcotic Addiction Foundation of British Columbia, announced the California statistics on the progression rate of marijuana to heroin were now one out of four from the previous one out of eight. These are figures for February 1968.

In 1967, Dr. David Smith of Haight-Asbury, one of the many users, warned that many users were also using "speed" to bring them up in their lethargy induced by "pot". He said he found speed-freaks were using "pot" three times more than other drug users.

A social worker who took "pot" at night had to take "speed" the next day so that she could make it to work. She finally had to go in for treatment to stay away from the "in" crowd.

Then our own Dr. Lionel Solursh of Toronto, chairman of the Canadian Medical Association committee on drugs, warned of the spread of hepatitis, mononucleosis and syphilis during certain stages by the passing on of a referreted "pot" party.

VD is now out of control in many cities of the world, thanks to the permissiveness regarding drugs, promiscuity, illicit relations and, of course, the disease is increasing in tolerance to our miracle drugs.

People say that marijuana is not harmful, but everyone has heard of the suicides, murders and fatal accidents caused by marijuana. The World Health Organization also reports: "Chronic exposure produces brain lesions". In India, a study on mental patients found 600 of 1,500 had been using cannabis. A Brazilian government study in 1961 and 1964 found that the cannabis addict is soon a useless and harmful member of society. His anti-social behaviour is a common phenomenon. There were cases of addicts beating up their parents and attacking their brothers and sisters. In Egypt in 1960, the government issued this report on cannabis:

The prepared product of the cannabis sativa plant, while having very little use for medical use, is capable of profoundly disturbing the brain cells and inducing acts of violence—even murder. That it is, in fact, a fairly vicious and dangerous thing of no value whatever to humanity and deserving of nothing but the contempt of civilized people.

The above is reported by researchers, masters of Houston who know the use of cannabis still accounts for a high percentage of Arab absenteeism and a high percentage of mental illness in Egypt. The most recent high-level judgment in the U.S. was the Boston marijuana case in 1967 with the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of that state, J. Joseph Touro, presiding. After deliberating for three months with a mountain of testimony from both sides, he returned the judgement that:

It is by opinion, based on the evidence presented at this hearing, that marijuana is a harmful and dangerous drug.

Here is one of the lengthy paragraphs in his lengthy speech:

The lessons of history and the experiences of other nations teach us that such artificial alteration of the normal brain function by the use of drugs has been harmful both to the individual and to the society in which he lives. The evidence clearly indicated where the subculture has developed who has tolerated the use of cannabis—the harmful results have become clearly manifest. It is of great significance that the vast majority of nations have outlawed its use.

Mr. Speaker, I have other quotes here but all they do is say the same thing. If a person is not convinced by these authorities, the authorities that I have quoted, then I do not think he wants to be convinced and I do not think I am going to be gaining anything by continuing.

Mr. Speaker, we are too much of a permissive society. I say again, unless we heed the problems that are presenting themselves to us, unless the government does something to change the social structure, we too in this province—which boasts that it is the place to stand—are going to find that we can stand all right, as long as it is not out in the street because it is not going to be safe to do so. I just hope that somebody over there pays attention to this.

Now, Mr. Speaker I had not intended to speak more, to tell you the truth, but I had a very unsatisfactory experience yesterday in the other place, that is, the Highways committee. I had waited there patiently most of the day for a chance to speak. There was the question of who got the Chairman's eye down there.

We spoke in rotation and had to notify the Chairman that we intended to speak and he wrote the member's name down. The result was it was not until ten minutes to six that my turn came to speak. There were some others who were trying to get on all afternoon, too.

At any rate, I asked a question of the Minister (Mr. Gomme) pertaining to a report he had promised to bring down back in 1967. The members that I see in the House at the present time on the government benches—except for the hon. member for Grey South (Mr. Winkler)—will recall that it had to do with the highways department of Metro Toronto and an interim report was brought down by the then Minister of Highways in 1967 before we rose for the summer and that House did not return.

I asked the Highways Minister when he would bring down the final report. He indicated he had the report with him and because it was 17 pages long, he thought it best that we adjourn and return at 8:00 o'clock and punctually, almost at 8:00 o'clock, the Minister started to read his report without any interruption or interjection by anyone at the meeting.

When I rose to ask questions on this report, I was ruled out of order by the Chairman on the ground that the report touched something that was not covered by the current estimates.

When it was pointed out to him that he had not ruled the Minister out of order he stated he had been waiting for somebody, for the members to rule him out of order. The very sad and sickening aspect of it was he was supported by five NDP members in stifling continuation of an investigation of the affairs of the Metro roads department and I was not permitted to ask questions touching on that report.

Now, Mr. Speaker, we all know what month this is, but for the purposes of record, it is November. We are dealing with the estimates for the province of Ontario deciding whether we are or are not going to approve the spendings of the departments of this province when we know that most of the moneys have already been spent. I said yesterday that it was rather like a man asking his wife whether his father-in-law's shotgun had been loaded. It was a little late to be asking that question and the same thing applies to these estimates.

We are having an academic argument. We are completing a formality. But I had always considered, Mr. Speaker, that the purpose of going into these estimates was to question the conduct of the Minister for the previous fiscal year and the previous fiscal years for which we had records. This had been the course of conduct from time immemorial, as long as they had a Parliamentary system in Westminster and in Canada.

This was always the system up to last year and all of a sudden it was ruled that you could not discuss anything that was not in the estimates. Now what kind of a position does that put the members into? We have a question period but the rules say that you can only ask questions of the Ministers before the orders of the day if the questions are on matters of current public importance. I can just see myself trying to ask a question before the orders of the day on a report that the Minister of Highways brought down in 1967 and the Speaker rightfully saying to me: "That is hardly a matter of current public importance."

If we cannot discuss the matter during the estimates and we cannot ask questions on these things before the orders of the day, when can we ask about them? Somebody may say, well, how about the public accounts committee? The public accounts committee is just looking over the expenditures for the previous fiscal year, so there again, I would be ruled out of order. In essence, Mr. Speaker, we in the Opposition have been completely gagged when it comes to trying to make a thorough investigation of the affairs of this government, especially matters that are only coming to light two or three years after they took place.

In other words, the principle has been established that a government—if it can keep a bushel on the light of facts for two years—is safe from further scrutiny. That, Mr. Speaker, is not a democratic way of running any kind of government.

Mr. Speaker, two years ago I found myself speaking on a Budget Debate when the scandals involving the administration of Metropolitan Toronto department of roads and traffic came to light. I recall that the hon. member for Hamilton East (Mr. Gisborn) was on his feet, and I was sitting in the House when the then leader of the Liberal Party said to me: "You are going on as soon as Reg Gisborn sits down."

Mr. H. Worton (Wellington South): He is still sitting there.

Mr. Ben: He is still sitting there. That was rather a shock, as I had not expected to be going on in the debate for five days—if my memory serves me correctly—and I was called rather unexpectedly in this Budget Debate. The result was I had to make a rather unpolished address, but fortunately, I was able to polish it up over a weekend that intervened. The same thing has happened again to me. Yesterday we were informed that we were going to be just going back to the order paper to discuss bills. Then all of a sudden, the government changed its mind and we are back on the Budget Debate and I have to scurry around to try to speak extemporaneously on the statement that the Minister of Highways—

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): They are pretty poor managers. You have to be ready for anything.

Mr. Ben: Well, I think you are being overly kind to them when you call them pretty poor managers, because there is an implication that they are managers, even though they are poor. I would question if they are managers at all.

An hon. member: You have to be ready for anything.

Hon. R. S. Welch (Provincial Secretary): This debate is on the order paper.

Mr. Ben: I am quite cognizant of that.

Mr. Gisborn: Even the water in the Highways committee is getting warm.

Mr. Ben: I have to read parts of this report to you, Mr. Speaker. It is a statement by the Minister on Metro roads contracts, and it is undated, so I do not know how long he has had it. But he starts off by saying:

In the spring of 1964, the member for Humber raised a number of queries regarding Metropolitan Toronto road contracts in this House and requested some answers regarding certain aspects of the administration of these contracts and The Department of Highways' contribution to the contracts. Since that time we have had our engineering audit office review the contracts in question in some detail and I am now prepared to report to this House on these questions and statements, and as there are five contracts to be dealt with here I will deal with each one separately.

The first contract in question was No. R-1-64, Gardiner Expressway, the contract for which was held by Harrison Construction Ontario Limited. The hon. member raised some questions regarding the completion date of the contract, the strikes which were encountered during the prosecution of the contract, and the effects these strikes had on this contract.

At the time, Mr. Speaker, I complained that the completion date, without the authority of the Metro council ahead of time, had been extended from October to July of the following year, a period of 9½ months. I complained that the penalty clauses contained in the contracts had not been enforced, and I complained that there was over-payment to the contractors. And, in fact, there were strikes, so that I did ask questions concerning them. I mention this, because although the Minister makes this sentence, and I repeat it:

The hon. member raised some questions regarding the completion date of the contract, the strikes which were encountered during the prosecution of the contract, and the effect these strikes had on the contract.

The Minister does not answer the questions. He goes on:

The carpenters' strike in June 1965, halted the erection of form work and the pouring of concrete. This contractor made a special settlement with the carpenters' union and the carpenters returned to work after approximately ten days. On August 23, the rod men, cement finishers and hoisting engineers struck, thereby cancelling any benefits derived by the settlement with the carpenters. It is almost impossible to state a definite period of overall delay to the contract occasioned by the strikes. We cannot determine if certain other trades did carry on during the strikes.

Now, I ask this simple, blunt question. Why cannot the Minister of Highways find out, or why could he not find out in 1967, for what period the rod men, the cement men, or the finishers, the hoisting engineers, were on strike?

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): There is no Cabinet Minister here. Is the member for Kingston and the Islands (Mr. Apps) House leader?

Mr. Ben: Were they on strike, in fact, for 9½ months?

Mr. B. Newman: Is the member for Kingston and the Islands House leader?

Mr. Ben: I guess he is. How can a Minister have the gall to say that they paid 50 per cent of this contract including the delays, and then he cannot tell this House what effect a strike had in delaying the completion of this contract? Talk about consummate gall, or stupid ignorance. It is one or the other or both.

He goes on:

The bulk of this contract was for construction of an elevated structural roadway and the key to this operation was the construction of form work which involved carpenters. This being the case, the contractor could likely operate only a very short time after the carpenters struck. It must be appreciated that strikes by any trade would ultimately affect all other trades in progress in the general contract. It is impossible to determine precisely the period of delay caused by the aforementioned strikes in June and August, but we feel that there is no doubt that the contract was seriously affected by the strike.

Good grief. The Minister writes that they went back to work ten days after they struck. He then goes on to say that most of the work involved the carpenters, who were on the job and were doing their work, and then replies that there is a justification for a delay of 9½ months. He later admits that they do not know how seriously affected this project was by the strike, and yet they paid a 50 per cent cost of this construction. It is incomprehensible how the Minister can talk out of both sides of his mouth and through his nostrils all at the same time.

Then he goes on:

The hon. member then posed the question as to why Metro council was not notified or advised, and an extension of the contract completion date from October 1, 1965 to July 15, 1966, was necessary, and why they were not asked to authorize the same. He further asked: Was this not a change in terms of the original contract.

And he goes on:

In answer to that, Mr. Chairman, I may say that the contract does not specify that council approval is necessary. The completion date in the original contract is tentative in that an extension may be granted by the commissioner of roads, if unforeseen circumstances warrant.

What unadulterated rot. Here the Minister is displaying through his Deputy Ministers or his Deputy Ministers are displaying through him ignorance to the nth degree.

The contract, Mr. Speaker, may not specify that Metro council approval is necessary, but everybody knows that a corporation acts through its council and that it is a contract between council and the contractor and not between the commissioner of roads and the contractor. The only one that can amend the contract, Mr. Speaker, is one of the parties with the concurrence of the other party, so that the commissioner of roads had no right to change the terms of a contract without concurrence of one of the contracting parties, in this particular instance Metro council. And for him to suggest that the road commissioner can by-pass council is really something to behold.

He then goes on with a number of things I have discussed. Tenders: he does not answer them; he has waffled; he makes use of rhetoric; he wriggles this way; he wriggles that way. Good grief, if the Argos could have zig zagged half the way he zig zags in his report, they would have wiped the Ottawa Rough Riders about a hundred to nil.

He goes on:

The department was aware that extra work-order payments were included in payments of today's figures quoted by Metro. Provision is made in Metropolitan Toronto roads contracts as in Department of Highway contracts, to pay for unseen items of work and these are considered as part of the contract, which would have been included in the original, had they been foreseen.

That, Mr. Speaker, if not deliberately misleading, is an absolute unmitigated lie, because the contracts do not provide for that. The contract provides for payment of additional work and, in fact, the contract stipulates, as I read in this House in 1967, that the contractor must inform himself of all the circumstances and as to any unforeseen items and is responsible for them. It is not as the hon. Minister included in this report; the contract does not specify anything of unforeseen circumstances. In every instance, the contractor must satisfy himself.

So that is not so. He is wrong again but these things are minor, but here is a real humdinger route. There was the question of pre-payment of the holdback before the date specified in the contract. Getting back to the report, it reads as follows:

The hon. member felt that this was a premature payment and raised the question as to whether this premature payment cost Metro an average of 6 per cent interest or roughly $45,000. In reply, I would say that this is not the case. The debentures issued in November, 1965, were at the rate of 5¼ per cent, while those issued in November, 1966, were at 6½ per cent, both for periods of 20 years. Theoretically, then, there will be a saving of ¼ on $750,000 over 20 years.

What a deliberately misleading statement. Again, Mr. Speaker, if I was not unparliamentary, I would say it is a lie, because the debentures with this particular contract were issued long before that November 1965, date. In fact, under the condition set out by the municipal board you have to be able to finance your work before you can start on it. In other words you have to assure the municipal board that you have the money to pay for it. So in fact, the total cost of this project had already been debentured in November, 1965.

He does not say if the debentures were not issued in November, 1965. He says theoretically, are you trying to lead the people to the conclusion that if they had not been issued in November, 1965, but had been issued in November, 1966, they would have been paying three-quarter per cent more! If they had not been issued in 1965, that would have been true; but they were issued in 1965, and a contract issued including that money, and it did cost Metro corporation $45,000 of which which this province paid half.

He goes on to a lot of other nonsense here. One of the next parts I will read again here, relates to the questions regarding recent holdbacks.

I wish to state that although there was a specific outline of procedures relative to releasing holdback in the general conditions of the contract, there were also clauses in the contract that either the commissioner of roads or the Metropolitan council had these powers to abrogate certain terms of the contract for cause.

You see how neat he is. I had complained that it was the Metro commissioner of roads who was arbitrarily, without the concurrence of council, changing the terms in the contract. He did, and I said that this was wrong. He tried to smooth it over here by saying that there is a clause in the contract giving the commissioner of roads and the Metropolitan council powers to abrogate certain terms. That is true, but my complaint was that because it is true, just one of them, namely, the commissioner of roads, alone did not have that power. And he did exercise that power, and this was wrong.

Going on again:

A complaint I made with reference to this contract was that the invoices which I had gone over indicated that a charge was made to the Metropolitan corporation for considerably more concrete than in fact the corporation had been charged for having laid. In other words, the corporation was asked to pay for a larger supply of concrete than they were charged for having laid.

What does he say?

The original design of the concrete deck as indicated in the contract drawings called for a seven-inch-thick deck, and this design was changed during the contract by the consulting engineer with the approval of Metro roads commissioner.

What an unmitigated, deliberate attempt to bamboozle and deceive the people here. What happened is this, Mr. Speaker.

After I raised in this House the point that I had found in the progress reports about Metro council being charged for some 2,000 cubic yards of concrete for which they were not charging the people laying—in other words, they bought 2,000 more yards of concrete than were laid—I asked, or demanded, an investigation. They found that, in fact, instead of laying only a seven-inch deck, the contractor had laid a 7½-inch deck. What had occurred was the supplier of the concrete had charged the contractor for the additional 2,000 cubic yards of concrete, and the contractor said, “No, according to our calculations a seven-inch deck will not take that much so you are trying to bill us for 2,000 cubic yards more.” It was after I revealed this that he made an investigation, Mr. Speaker, and he found out that they had, in fact, laid 7½ inches of concrete, or so they say; and in some cases they laid 8¾ inches of concrete.

When he says that this design was changed in the contract by the consulting engineer,

Mr. Speaker, it was, but after I revealed the skulduggery and when the only way they could justify it was that, it was ipso facto. In other words, there was no change in the contract by the consulting engineers in the road bed from 7½ inches to 8¾ inches until after the concrete had been laid and there was discovered 2,000 cubic yards of concrete unaccounted for. They did it so they could pay the man. Then they try to say that they do not pay him here for it.

After I discovered this, I still complained that they should not have paid Boyd because the dead-load, which is a construction phrase used on highway construction, was increased by that extra half-inch or extra 1¼ inches to the detriment of the highway over a long period of time. What did he say in the report? Listen to this:

I would advise the House that all materials used in the construction of the bridge, including concrete reinforcing the structural steel, contributed to what is technically known as dead-load. In point of fact—

This is what gets you. It gets you right here, if you have got a heart. You have a heart, Mr. Speaker, I know, I heard it tick.

—the design of the structure exceeded the requirements of the anticipated loading and the design engineers assure me that the utility of the structure is not decreased by the additional concrete poured.

You know what he is saying? He is saying, "You are right, Mr. Ben. The dead-load has been increased but you know what, it does not affect the passage of cars on the road." He is absolutely right. It is just that the bridge is not going to last as long as it would have had it not had to carry an additional 2,000 cubic yards of concrete.

Obviously certificate No. 19 referred to by the hon. member did indicate that more concrete was supplied than placed, but this was a clerical error and was corrected in later certificates.

No, it was not. There was no clerical error. This is the thing that I caught. When it says that the figures were corrected, it means covered up.

Then we go on through this. Some of the stuff, really. I think we ought to call this "Good Grief," and see if we can book the Royal Alex for it; we may get money for turning it into a play.

All the bare facts that are at hand are coming out now, Mr. Speaker.

The next question is about the overrun and payment of quantities for items No. 38 and No. 39, which called for the removal of existing asphalt and concrete pavement and existing concrete base.

In answer to the hon. member's specific questions, I may say that the overall quantities were paid for at the unit price tendered to a total of $13,749.09.

The specifications do, in fact, state that the estimated quantities may fluctuate and may be increased or decreased, and furthermore the specifications may indicate the provisions of a dump site for the material waste which is the contractor's responsibility, and would, in fact, be included in his contract price.

In this particular instance, the contractor tried to charge, and did charge, an extra for producing the dump site. I showed that the contract showed that he must supply the dump site and he must evacuate the material.

Then it says:

In beating these two particular items, the contractor should dissipate the cost of hauling and providing dump sites for the material removed in these operations.

He admits it. But the contractor charged Metro roads for it. And you know what? This magnanimous government, with lots of money to spend for contractors who take a kickback to supply the coffers with election funds, was able to get this money. But you try to get money for Medicare, hospitals or day care centres—not on your life. They have not even got the decency to supply dump sites where we can put these poor wretches after they have passed away from lack of nourishment from this government.

There were a few other things in this 17-page report but some of them are real dillies.

In one instance, it reads as follows:

The department is unaware of what specific requirements Metro council has in respect of the authority of their commissioner, but the contract, under clause 30 of the general conditions gives the commissioner authority to extend the date of completion for certain or stipulate a reason.

First of all, it is an admission that this department is unaware of requirements that Metro council has with respect to the authority of their commissioner. We think that that is some admission. Good grief, all they have to do is phone the Metro council clerk and say, "Send us your bylaw." No, I guess they are afraid of spending a dime. So they admit that they do not know under what conditions the commissioner of roads, who approves all these contracts, operates. To go on:

There were a number of circumstances which caused delay to the contract and the commissioner exercises his authority of extending the completion date because of the circumstances. His decision is based to a great extent on his opinion, and at his discretion extra payments beyond the bid price for items 41, 42 and 79 were made because the work was extended beyond the original completion date, and due to inflationary pressures, the contractor's costs were increased during this period.

And get this:

Since the commissioner had already accepted the responsibility for late completion of the contract, he further decided that extra costs in generally completing this particular item shall also be absorbed by the Metropolitan roads department.

Please try to understand this, Mr. Speaker. First of all, have you heard of any contract, except the old cost-plus contracts we had during the war, which permits you to change the contract unilaterally because of inflationary forces? What contract is based on those principles?

A contract is a firm agreement and the contractor has to take that into consideration. He has got to decide, especially if he knows that labour contracts are terminating, what his labourers are going to ask and by how much it is going to increase the price of his work. He has to build that into his contract. No contract provides that inflationary clause and you are not going to get more out of the Metropolitan corporation because of inflation caused through delay.

How has this Minister got the gall to accept the statement that the commissioner had already accepted the responsibility for the late completion of the contract? They had no right to accept responsibility for anything because it was not the Metro corporation's fault. The Metro corporation was an innocent bystander. If there was any fault, it was the employer's in not settling with his employees soon enough. Even so, how could he possibly bind the Metro corporation to pay when it was not the Metro corporation's fault? This is how they are trying to cover up their own inadequacies.

I should really point out, Mr. Speaker that they have tightened up everything since that time.

There are a few other items all touching on this, Mr. Speaker. There are little things, in going through this whole contract. I think I pointed out that it is nothing but a mish-mash of misinformation, false innuendoes and attempts to cover up their own inadequacies.

All I am doing is honouring this Minister, by even taking the trouble to answer such a salacious report. I do not think I should exercise myself any more than I already have by saying that the Globe and Mail ought to amend that little cartoon they had today which had the Prime Minister (Mr. Robarts) of this province in his GO train pulling into oblivion three of his Ministers; I believe they were the Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs (Mr. Rowntree), the Minister of Social and Family Services (Mr. Yaremko) and the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Simonett). I think the Globe and Mail should have spent a little bit on ink and made that wagon a little wider and broader so they could have included the current Minister of Highways. Let them all ride wherever the Prime Minister is going to take them.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Downhill.

Mr. Ben: Because Lord knows, we do not want them here.

Mr. Nixon: He is driving, is he?

Hon. Mr. Welch moves the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, tomorrow we will consider the estimates of The Department of Health.

Hon. Mr. Welch moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 5.10 o'clock, p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1969

The House met at 2.00 o'clock, p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: We welcome this afternoon as guests in the east gallery, students from Tecumseh Senior Public School, Scarborough; Kane Senior Public School, Toronto; Earl Beatty Public School, Toronto; and in the west gallery, from the Loretto Abbey, Toronto, and the Adjuvant training course, The Department of Social and Family Services.

Statements by the Ministry.

Hon. J. H. White (Minister of Revenue): Mr. Speaker, today I should like to inform the House of another important change we are making to the requirements of The Retail Sales Tax Act. I refer to the tax on take-out meals.

As you know, in the Budget brought down on March 4 of this year, the government acted on the recommendation of the Smith committee and the select committee of this Legislature that take-out meals should be taxed in the same manner as meals eaten in a restaurant.

Our experience since then has proven that the administration of this aspect of the tax is cumbersome and inequitable. To meet the government's objective of exempting meals costing $2.50 or less poses serious problems to the take-out food industry, which is expanding rapidly in this province and which depends very heavily upon speedy service and a high volume of low-priced sales. It also proved to be a nuisance to the customers.

For that reason, we intend to remove this tax from take-out meals and revert to the situation which prevailed prior to the last Budget.

This change will become effective December 1, 1969.

Mr. Speaker: Oral questions.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Premier: Is he aware that an affidavit has been filed with the judge hearing the application for the writ of prohibition concerning the hearing for the energy board in the matter of Consumers' Gas and Union Gas? The affidavit has been filed in the name of Michael N. McCrank, and it refers to the pressures on the board, making it difficult for them to grant an adjournment, and the quote from the affidavit is as follows:

The board's hands are tied because the Cabinet has set a deadline of December 1 for the board to conclude the hearing and have its report in the hands of the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council.

Is the Premier aware the affidavit puts those words as having come from the secretary of the energy board?

Hon. J. P. Roberts (Prime Minister): No, Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of this affidavit and I do not know who Mr. McCrank is.

All I can say is that as the leader of the government I discussed this matter with the chairman of the energy board. We looked over the timetables, of course, and the dates when the offer expired, and it became quite obvious to me that there would be some difficulty, but as I said yesterday, we did not set any timetables because we fully recognized they might be impossible to keep.

On the other hand, as I pointed out yesterday, there is a conflict of interest. Some people are interested in the hearing going quickly and others perhaps are equally interested in it being delayed to the point where it may be completely aborted. Now those are the two interests involved. Who this man is, or where he got his information, I do not know, but as far as I am concerned I simply repeat that we have given the energy board no deadlines.

Mr. Nixon: As a supplementary question: under the circumstances would the government consider making any move to oppose the content of this affidavit, or simply leave it up to the discretion of the judge?

Hon. Mr. Roberts: Mr. Speaker, I will leave it to the discretion of the judge. We cannot intervene at this stage. I believe the application was heard this morning, was it not?

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker: through my own personal contacts with the board, I learned that there was a deadline of December 2 rather than the first. Would the Prime Minister officially inform the board that there is no deadline so imposed by the government?

Hon. Mr. Roberts: I think there might be some confusion on this point of view. There were some dates worked out as to the time upon which certain things would have to occur if the matter was to be dealt with prior to the expiry of the takeover bid. Perhaps somebody has interpreted those as deadlines set down by the government. I can assure members that is not so. And I will speak to Mr. Crozier as soon as this oral question period is over; but there is no reason for me to do so because he sat in my office and we discussed this in the terms I am telling members—probably on Wednesday of this week, or Tuesday.

Mr. Speaker: Is that the end of the supplementaries on this?

I wonder if the House would allow me to enquire of the Minister of Tourism and Information if he has a statement, because if he has I would like to revert to that. I will take the time out of the question period so that questions may be asked about the statement by the members waiting.

Has the hon. Minister a statement?

Hon. J. A. C. Auld (Minister of Tourism and Information): I have, Mr. Speaker. Inasmuch as I am the Minister charged with the overall responsibility for the Ontario Science Center, I wanted to make a statement about the safety precautions at the center in light of the recent allegations of the hon. member for High Park (Mr. Shulman).

Mr. Speaker, I enquired at the center and I am quite satisfied, completely satisfied, that every possible precaution has been taken and is being taken to safeguard the public and the staff of the center.

For the most part, the center's staff is completely puzzled about the charges of dangerous explosions from volatile liquids. Only two areas exist where volatile liquids are stored. One of these is a room specifically set aside for this purpose. This room cannot be reached from inside the buildings themselves. It is accessible only through an exterior door, which is so designed that the door itself would be blown out if an explosion were to occur within the room. Liquids stored here, are, namely, paints, thinners and cleaning solvents.

The other area is the paint shop in the valley building. This is not a public area and in fact it is separated from the exhibit halls by two concrete walls. Inspections have shown that only those materials needed for ongoing production are kept within the paint shop.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, the three buildings themselves are of poured concrete or pre-formed concrete construction. All exhibits within were treated during their manufacture with fire-resistant paint on the recommendation of the North York Fire Department. They say that a long-established liaison exists with the two district fire chiefs of the borough of North York and these officials make regular visits to the center. On several occasions, the district chiefs have brought along groups of fire-fighters to familiarize themselves with the center's layout.

The center has also been visited by inspectors of the safety branch of The Department of Labour, the Industrial Accident Prevention Association, the office of the Ontario fire marshal and Metropolitan Toronto police.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): And the North York Fire Department.

Hon. Mr. Auld: Which I mentioned a moment ago and which I will mention further in another moment.

None of these visits have resulted in any unfavourable reports which have been brought to the attention of the officials of the center. North York fire officials have made recommendations which have been followed to the letter.

Mr. Speaker, since the center opened to the public at the end of September, there have been no fires on the premises. During the construction of the three buildings there was one small fire in an area where fresh paint was being applied. No damage resulted except for the fact that the area had to be repainted.

Since the opening, as I mentioned previously, there have been about 40 false alarms; most of these have been turned in by children, although several are believed to have occurred through carelessness of the cleaning staff.

I believe that it was suggested that the center is short of fire extinguishers. However, again we can give no credence to this. Prior to the opening, most of the water extinguishers were removed and replaced by CO<sub>2</sub>—carbon dioxide—extinguishers. As well, of course, there are stand pipes and hoses throughout the complex.

When a fire alarm is turned in, the location of the tripped alarm is registered on two annunciator panels, one in the tower building and one in the valley building, and also in the North York Fire Department. The alarm sets off an interior chime. If in fact the fire should break out, this chime would automatically increase in tempo. A fire would also result in the automatic closing of doors in the large service corridor. The public would be able to leave the building by a total of 52 exits. Warnings to evacuate are given over a public-address system heard throughout the complex. Staff at the center have also been trained in evacuation procedures.

Mr. Speaker, I thought it was necessary to give the members of this House and the public at large some measure of reassurance about the fire safety precautions at the Ontario Science Center because of the news media reports of the allegations of the hon. member for High Park. What I am happy to say is apparently nobody has been taking these charges seriously. They have resulted in one query at the center from a school teacher who was planning to bring a group of students.

This group went through yesterday morning, and I trust, Mr. Speaker, that the children enjoyed their visit as much as the hon. member for High Park and his family enjoyed theirs.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. leader of the Opposition might now continue with his questions. I have added an additional five minutes, which was the time taken by the statement.

Mr. Nixon: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a question for the Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs. Must the decision by the board of Physicians Services Incorporated to use their reserve fund as a research fund for medicine and perhaps anti-pollution measures be approved by the Minister? If so, what would the procedure be for this approval to take place?

Hon. H. L. Rowntree (Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs): As I said in the House yesterday, the rules for the authority, the basis, for creating an association such as PSI is found in The Corporations Act. Similarly, in that Corporations Act, I found the provisions for dissolution. On dissolution, the members or the equivalent term, shareholders, would be entitled to a refund. The Act also provides for the use of such funds and the disposal of them for charitable or educational purposes.

In the case of PSI I think that one must make reference to the actual charter when it was incorporated. The terms in the charter of PSI are very broad and they encompass such inherent objectives as educational research, assistance to education, and matters of that sort; including, among other related objectives, the usual legal provisions for the amalgamation of the operation with some other organizations of a similar type, if that seems desirable at the time.

The proposed distribution towards research in the areas of science or medicine or pollution would appear to be a highly desirable solution to this matter.

I have not seen the actual resolution, but I was informed late yesterday by Dr. Miller of PSI that in addition to the formalities of the discussion, there was a motion and resolution to the effect that the doctors did not, as members of PSI, intend, nor desire, to have any of their funds or assets on a winding-up basis distributed to themselves. That clears up that situation, I think, in a very forthright and clear manner.

The proceedings went on to deal with proposals for the use of the fund. Quite frankly, I think that I should inform the House that Dr. Miller told me that it was the view of the executive and of the house of delegates of the PSI, which is the way it is organized, that the question of dissolution should not be considered. They felt that there might be, in the future an opportunity for PSI to participate in some fashion in a public scheme related to this general area of health care. Having that in mind, among other things, they voted specifically against any winding up.

The third step, as I recall this conversation, went on to deal with the proposal for the use of the funds that would remain in the hands of the organization after the current claims had been cleaned up and their trade accounts cleaned up. That amount, I think, would be estimated at $14.8 million in PSI. I think that is the figure referred to in the press as being the $15 million figure.

The use of this money—the third item which he reported to me late yesterday—was a proposal which appears in the press today about the use of the money, in the public interest—for the public generally, by way of research in the fields of medicine, health and pollution.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, and I may have missed the answer; I just could not hear it that well.

Does the decision by PSI, if in fact it is ratified by their members, require the approval of the Minister or anyone in the corporations branch?

Secondly, would the Minister apply pressure to those in control of the other reserve funds which are presently under consideration, that those funds might be added to this fund which would become a significant, public contribution to a matter of urgent importance.

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: To be specific in answer to the question about government approval, if the PSI continues as I have outlined and as I understand it from Dr. Miller, then it would be a continuation of the present corporate structure; probably with different representation on its board of directors. It would be a continuing entity a legal entity consistent with the objects set out in its charter, and consistent with the provisions of The Corporations Act; and would require no further approval from either the corporations branch or the government.

I might say then with respect to the broader aspects of this matter that it would be my hope that other organizations in somewhat similar positions to PSI, which are discontinuing their operation—that is the non-profit organization—that rather than attempt a distribution of any kind, I think the public interest and the interest of this province would be best served if those funds were to be applied in a some similar direction as PSI has.

I think I should also inform the hon. leader of the Opposition and the members of this House that it is a general intimation at the moment from the large preponderance of such organizations that such will be the case. Some of the organizations have not met yet to determine their final positions, and I look forward to hearing from them.

But it would appear at the moment that the majority of them will take such an approach as we are discussing here today. The only difference might be that some of the organizations or associations might have a more local colour to them; that is, be more localized in their nature and not being of a province-wide nature, might attempt the project within the confines of their scope of their operation—say within their county or within the area of their operations.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a further supplementary.

What would the total fund be—I do not know whether the Minister knows that yet—beyond PSI?

Second, if, in fact, the other groups have this same use of their funds in mind, it looks like the beginning of one of the first significant semi-private foundations in this province or in this country that would have a direct—

Mr. Speaker: I assume the hon. member is making another question—

Mr. Nixon: I would ask the Minister, Mr. Speaker, if I may, would he consider the development of a policy which would integrate these funds, rather than distribute them over 10 or 12 smaller funds—not that the PSI is small by any means, but rather than having them distributed on a county basis or anything like that, so that their approach to this problem would be integrated and be, for that reason, much more significant.

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: I think there is some merit in what the hon. leader of the Opposition says. Firstly I should say, I cannot and I would not attempt at this moment to guess what the amount would be in total in the other organizations, but individually they would be substantially less of course than the amount of PSI.

The question of a consolidation, I think, is a matter which we would give our attention to, once the matter becomes more finitus, if I might put it that way. I must underscore the point, however, that there is a localized area aspect that is attached to the lives and the existence of some of these organizations, but it is a very important point that is raised.

Mr. Speaker: The member for York Centre was on his feet before the member for York South.

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, a supplementary. Is there some similarity in the ratio between the reserves of each of these non-profit companies and their annual premium income? Is there a fair, consistent ratio that the department has found between these reserves and their premium income?

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: Not necessarily. That is an item in which we should have to look at the statements and the charts of each of the operations to determine that. But I would have to say that I would not expect such a relationship to indicate it exists, because the premium rates might be set and maintained over a continuing period of time. Relative costs, shall we say, of the claims might be on a rising scale. The premiums would not have been automatically increased at the specific time of increase of the claim.

Mr. Deacon: As a further supplementary, would the Minister supply us with a report showing these reserves—and the premiums paid in the last two or three years—of all these companies, to see what there might be in the way of a similarity?

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: These statements are now all being gathered together and studied.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, a further supplementary question: Since the Minister quoted the superintendent of insurance in his letter to these non-profit companies on August 14 as saying, "I would ask that no payment of refunds from surplus be made without the prior written approval of the superintendent of insurance," does one now assume that they have been absolved of that obligation to have a prior written approval?

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: No, I would not say that. I think the officials of PSI have been most co-operative with the superintendent of insurance himself, and with his staff, as they have been with me. They have been most forthright in their position and I have no reason to expect that we in this Legislature and in the government will receive other than the utmost co-operation from the executive and the house of delegates.

Mr. MacDonald: Will the Minister please answer my question? Are they now absolved of the obligation of getting prior written approval before they disburse the refunds?

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: I would simply say this, that whatever remains to be complied with, they will comply with.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: The commencement of payments of their project is some months ahead.

Mr. MacDonald: The Minister changed the rules in the middle of the game.

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: Not at all.

Mr. MacDonald: The original rule was they must get written approval. Will the Minister answer, do they now have to get written approval before they disburse these funds?

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: I cannot say about that detail. But I know they were in to see the superintendent of insurance and disclosed to him the general intent, which was the subject of their meeting yesterday, and it remains following the meeting yesterday for them to formalize their position with the superintendent.

Mr. MacDonald: That was the rule in the letter that went out on August 4. If they are not now going to conform with it, how can the Minister argue that the rules are not being changed?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York South is now endeavouring to make this an argument or a debate in his own words and, therefore, I think—

Mr. MacDonald: I have not yet got an answer from the Minister.

Mr. Speaker: The Minister does not have to answer any question if he does not wish to. It is entirely up to the Minister, whether the member likes it or not.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, then the Minister should say, "No, I am not going to answer," instead of doubletalk.

Mr. Speaker: But the Minister has the right under the rules not to answer or to answer it in any way he sees fit.

Mr. MacDonald: My final supplementary question to the Minister is this:

Are we to assume that these bits and pieces of replies extracted from the Minister in the last few days are his report that he promised us on the basis of these letters from all of these companies? Or when are we going to get that?

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: That report is being prepared. We are doing it as quickly as we can. Many of these organizations are still in the process of paying out claims. We are trying to get the figure which will be an estimate.

I have instructed the staff again, after the question of the hon. member for York South yesterday to speed up their efforts to give me this information so that it may be presented in the House at the earliest possible moment.

The answer to the member's question is "no," my answers in the House do not constitute the report, which I will table.

Mr. MacDonald: The decisions will all be made by them before the Minister makes up his mind.

Mr. Speaker: The leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Nixon: I have a question for the Minister of Energy and Resources Management:

In view of the statement reportedly made by the chairman of the Water Resources Commission to the Lake Erie development council yesterday that the Lake Erie states are lagging behind Ontario in the fight against pollution, will the Minister consider convening a meeting of his opposite numbers from the American jurisdictions so that the responsibilities can be pinpointed; the level of pollution from American sources as well as Ontario sources can be outlined, and a programme correlated to abate the Great Lakes pollution?

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Minister of Energy and Resources Management): Yes, Mr. Speaker, it was our intention to have such a meeting following the completion of the report of the international joint commission, and particularly the hearings in respect to drilling in lakes, including Lake Erie.

This subject, as well as general problems of waste into these lakes, were all to be discussed and I expect that meeting will take place early in the new year.

Mr. Nixon: Has the Minister conferred with the Prime Minister on the advisability of—if you will forgive me—upgrading the meeting to some extent so that it would include the Premier and the governors of the states, so that on matters of policy, decisions of, perhaps, more far-reaching importance could be undertaken, and perhaps public attention centred on the problem?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, I have not conferred with the Prime Minister on that basis, but this is a good thought to be considered.

Mr. Nixon: Would not the Minister agree that this matter is equally as important as the low or high lake levels of a few years ago, on which matter the Premier did convene a conference of state governors?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Well, Mr. Speaker, I am, unfortunately handicapped because I did not see the statement to which the hon. leader of the Opposition refers, that was made by the chairman of OWRC.

It is pretty well a known fact that certain states bordering the Great Lakes are not keeping up with our efforts in fighting pollution. This is one of the reasons, of course, that we have the Great Lakes commission and the IJC.

However, if this is as serious as the hon. member indicates, if there is a dragging of feet, shall we say, by certain states, such a conference could be convened at the level indicated by the hon. leader of the Opposition. However, I must also mention at this time that we are in constant communication with the various states bordering the Great Lakes regarding standards, data and research, and things like that.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I do not think I should let this occasion go by without asking the Premier if he has any views on the possibility of himself taking part in such a conference, and issuing an invitation to the governors to participate.

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Mr. Speaker, I have views on almost everything; but as the hon. member no doubt knows, there is a constant flow of communication and co-operation back and forth. I have not gone into this matter to establish just how open those lines of communication are. I do know we convened such a conference here once before which resulted in recommendations going from the states to the federal government in Washington and from Ontario and Quebec to the government of Canada, and as a result of those efforts, certain action was taken by the international joint commission at the request of both the senior governments.

Whether the situation at this moment in time is such that this type of action is necessary, I really do not know. Since the days of that conference, there has been an almost constant exchange of information and meeting of personnel in the eight states involved and the provincial government, and unless there is some specific purpose to be served, unless there is some gap in the present degree of co-operation to be filled, then such a conference could be simply redundant. I am not close enough to the day-to-day operations, but I do know that in the last few years there has been an increasingly heavy volume of information and action back and forth between the jurisdictions involved.

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary to the question of the Prime Minister or the Minister of Energy and Resources Management?

Mr. C. Bukator (Niagara Falls): I have a supplementary question of the hon. Minister.

Mr. Speaker: Well, we are a little out of line, but I think the hon. member is entitled to ask it, because the leader of the Opposition went ahead.

Mr. Bukator: In view of the fact that both the federal and state governments of New York State, if they agree to a project, jointly pay 85 per cent, and the municipality only has to pay 15 per cent, did the hon. Minister know that there were 29 industries polluting the Niagara River on the American side between Buffalo River and the Horseshoe Falls and have we cleaned up our municipal sewage pollution problem?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Well, not entirely, Mr. Speaker, but the answer to both questions is yes.

Mr. Speaker: Is yours a supplementary question—the member for York South?

Mr. MacDonald: No.

Mr. Speaker: Has the leader of the Opposition completed?

Mr. MacDonald: My first question is of the Prime Minister: After a year of study, would the Prime Minister now release the reports of the four task forces on the implementation of bilingualism in the public service in Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: I realize there has been some delay in this regard, Mr. Speaker. I believe it has been justified and I hope it will not be very long before I will be dealing with this matter in the House.

Mr. MacDonald: Do I rightly conclude that the Prime Minister is going to deal with it himself, or that he is going to release the reports? I have difficulty getting a specific answer from Ministers today.

Hon. Mr. Robarts: I would simply say you are having difficulty getting a specific answer because I am not giving you one. It is obvious no decision is made as to whether those reports would be made public or not.

Mr. MacDonald: After a year we are still where we were.

To the Minister of Transport: In view of the imminent cessation of service by Nordic Air Services in the Niagara peninsula, particularly Fort Erie, is the government making any representations to the air transport board in Ottawa in this connection?

Hon. I. Haskett (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of the specific action being taken in the mentioned suspension of services by Nordic Air but The Department of Transport, on behalf of the government of Ontario is making representations in matters before the air committee of the Canadian Transport Commission.

Mr. MacDonald: I have a question of the Minister of Energy and Resources Management: Can the Minister indicate whether or not the situation in Lanark county has been resolved in which certain property owners have taken into their own hands the operation of a dam because the water supply going down to a two-bit Gananoque power company is going to lower lake water levels and destroy their whole property values? And if it has been resolved, how has it been resolved?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: I do not believe, Mr. Speaker, the matter in question to which the hon. member refers is in Lanark county.

Mr. MacDonald: Lyndhurst. I am sorry—Leeds.

Hon. Mr. Robarts: You do not know your geography.

Mr. MacDonald: I am sorry, it was a slip of the tongue.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, the matter has not, as yet, been resolved.

Mr. MacDonald: Well, Mr. Speaker, how can the hon. Minister for one moment justify the damage to $2 million worth of cottage property in favour of a water supply to a company that is so small, 600 kilowatt hours, it is only $9 an hour of power being turned out—how does he justify that?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, all I want to say is that there are at least two other departments involved in this. There have been negotiations going on for some months; a committee was formed some months ago to try and resolve this between the conservationists and the people in the area and the hydro company. It is my information that this matter, as a result of a lengthy meeting held at Queen's Park just within the last month, is moving to conclusion and the matter will be resolved. This also included the possibility that this hydro company will not use the water available but will buy power from some other source.

Mr. MacDonald: A question of the Attorney General: is the Attorney General in a position to indicate his response to the request of the Ontario Police Association that there should be a Royal commission investigation into the operation of the Brantford police department?

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Attorney General): There was an investigation, Mr. Speaker, into the operation of the Brantford police department.

Mr. MacDonald: I think there were certain cases before the courts. As of November 26 the hon. Minister has a letter from Sid Brown of the Ontario Police Association requesting that on behalf of all of the police associations, such a commission be established. My question is, has the hon. Minister reacted to that?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: No, Mr. Speaker. The answer is no.

Mr. MacDonald: I have a final, rather small question of the Minister.

Mr. M. Makarchuk (Brantford): By way of supplementary, Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Justice: would he indicate if the investigation into the Brantford police department has been concluded, and if so, what are the results?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: The investigation by the Ontario Police Commission which was requested by the Brantford town council has been completed and the report, some time ago, was given to the council.

Mr. Makarchuk: I think, Mr. Speaker, the Attorney General is wrong in this case.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member may ask a supplementary question.

Mr. Makarchuk: By way of supplementary question: the investigation that was requested of the director of public prosecutions by two policemen into the activities of the Brantford police department, not the investigation that was asked by the Brantford city council, this is what I am referring to.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: The Ontario Police Commission went into the whole matter. The question of the two policemen and their conduct, and it was an examination of the operation of the police force. I have the report and I have seen it. I have read it. It deals with the whole question of the morale, the operation of the force, personnel, the ability of the chief, other personnel, and it was completed some little time ago and was furnished to the Brantford council. I think it covered the whole field.

Mr. Makarchuk: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker: Certain matters were placed before the Attorney General following the report of the Ontario Police Commission, and the Attorney General indicated in his estimates that further investigations were being carried out by his department. Now, what I would like to know is whether these investigations have been concluded and if so, with what results?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I am not aware of anything further except possibly the matter raised by the hon. member for York South—that letter apparently dated November 26. This is the 27th; I have not seen it. It has probably reached my desk by now, but insofar as the other matter is concerned, as I stated, I think it was a very complete and thorough investigation of the whole operation of that police force. As I said, it covered its personnel, its morale, the way it was administered. Comment was made about the capabilities and qualities of the officers, including the chief. As far as I am aware, that was a very thorough investigation. If there is anything further beyond what the hon. member for York South has raised, I would be glad to look into it.

Mr. Makarchuk: A further supplementary question: The hon. Minister is again evading my question. The matter that I am relating to is the matter of the break-in in the public utilities office, and this matter was raised in the estimates and you specifically stated that this matter was being investigated by your director of public prosecution. Now could he indicate if this matter has come to a conclusion and with what results? This is what I am asking.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: The hon. member, Mr. Speaker, now makes himself clear, he is speaking about what apparently is charged as a criminal matter, not an investigation into a police force.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Correctional Services): The hon. member will never get his QC.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Anything that is charged or suspected as being a criminal offence is always investigated, of course, by our branch headed by the director of public prosecutions. I do not know standing here at this moment what stage that particular case is at—whether evidence has been found sufficient to lay a charge, conduct a prosecution. I do not know, but I can find out.

Mr. MacDonald: I have a question of the Minister of Tourism and Information. Would the Minister reconcile the apparent conflict between his earlier assertion that there were adequate fire extinguishers in the science center with that of his colleague, the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Simonett) a few days ago that there were not enough and an inspector's report said that 250 more were required?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, I can only say that the information that I have is based on the inspection of—I think it is—Deputy Chief Adair of the North York fire department.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, if I may. Why were the rugs, drapes and insulation not fireproof?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, I am not aware that there is any problem in this connection. There are very few drapes in the place, I can tell him that.

Mr. MacDonald: Some walls are all drapes.

Hon. Mr. Auld: There are wall-to-wall carpets. I assume that they are not fireproof—if, in fact, they are not fireproof—because it was not considered necessary by the fire people.

Mr. Shulman: As a further supplementary. Is the Minister aware that a report was sent to his colleague, saying they should be fireproof?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, I have said that we have had all the fire people available, who are experts in this field, inspecting the center. We have carried out all the recommendations they have made.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A question to the Prime Minister. This is really an Energy and Resources matter I guess, but on a matter of this importance I think the boss should state his position.

Mr. Speaker: The member will ask his question of the Minister to whom he wishes it directed.

Mr. Sargent: In view of the fact that I, along with many people of Ontario, am concerned about monopoly control, Mr. Prime Minister, that will come about by the Consumers' Gas takeover, I would like to ask the Prime Minister if Consumers' Gas will continue to enjoy the fixed assessment they have across Ontario in the plant facilities they have in different municipalities. Number two, will their transactions be restricted to gas distribution only and leave the sale and rental of equipment to retailers?

I mean, the monopoly is getting worse all the time but they control not only gas distribution, but the sale and rental of all the equipment. Will that be curtailed? Will the Ontario Energy Board, Mr. Prime Minister—these things may not be answered but they should be aware of the facts. We are concerned about the fact that the Ontario Energy Board should be doing the inspection on the pipeline.

Mr. J. W. Snow (Halton East): The member really read that letter.

Mr. Sargent: This clown up here—

Mr. Speaker: Is the hon. member asking a question? If he is, please do so. In my opinion his question so far is not a proper oral question for this period, but if he will conclude—

Mr. Sargent: Will the Ontario Energy Board be doing the pipeline inspections or will the Consumers' Gas be doing the pipeline inspections? I am concerned about where you get the right, Mr. Prime Minister, to spend public funds—

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Sargent: —to bail out the gas company in the Malton explosion. Where do you get the right to use public funds to bail them out in Malton?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order. This is a complete abuse of the oral question period—

Mr. Speaker: I cannot rule until I have heard the member's question—

Hon. Mr. Robarts: I heard enough to know that he is making a speech. He admits he is not asking a question.

Mr. Sargent: I am asking a question. You are pretty touchy, are you not? When you do not know the answer, you pull the old stuff that you do not know what is going on.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Sargent: You sure do not know what is going on—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Sargent: Is the Prime Minister aware, finally, that 90 per cent of the employees of the Ontario Energy Board are former employees of the gas company?

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion, this is not the type of question suitable for the oral question period and is—

Hon. Mr. Robarts: But he got his speech in just the same.

Mr. Speaker: —and is one which is not of the urgent type which is dealt at the present time.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order. My main concern is the complete lack of concern of the government on monopoly control in the gas field and no one—

Mr. Speaker: Order! That might be quite so, but there are other places and ways that the hon. member can use to find out the answer to the problem he has.

Mr. Sargent: Is there any question he can answer?

Mr. Speaker: If the hon. member has a question which he thinks will fall within the rules, I will be glad to hear it.

Mr. Sargent: I am going to ask him one question. Will the Prime Minister consider restricting the franchise of this new complex to the distribution of gas only and not the sale and rental of equipment?

Mr. MacDonald: That is a good question.

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Mr. Speaker, as I rise to answer this so-called question, I consider this whole exchange a complete abuse of the rules of the House. I would say this, there is no desire on the part of this government to restrict the questions or to restrict the giving of information. But after a great deal of pain and suffering we got together and made an agreement on rules which we thought would improve the question period. This type of thing is going to put us right back where we were before we changed the rules to try to bring some order out of this situation.

Mr. Sargent: Point of order!

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member will wait.

Mr. Sargent: Point of order.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Minister will complete what he has to say and then the hon. member may have the floor.

Mr. Sargent: It is too bad. I have four questions.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Mr. Speaker, if you could find the questions in the speech that was made—as usual, the member really does not know what is going on. Because this is a purchase of shares—

Mr. Sargent: I am not but a lot of people—

Hon. Mr. Robarts: It is a purchase of shares, it is not a takeover of equipment. We have passed legislation in this House to ensure the whole transaction is examined in the light of the public interest in front of the energy board. I do not know if the hon. member was here when that was done, probably not; but this Legislature took that action—brought in an amendment to the action—

Mr. Sargent: Were you here?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: The matter is presently before the energy board and it may be that this transaction will never take place at all, if it proves not to be in the public interest. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, all the questions are purely hypothetical.

Mr. Sargent: What are you doing in the public interest then?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Brantford.

Mr. Makarchuk: A question of the Attorney General and Minister of Justice. Does the Attorney General agree to the proposition that newspapermen must reveal their sources of information when asked in any court within his jurisdiction?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Only if they are not members of the Legislature.

Mr. K. C. Bolton (Middlesex South): How original the Minister is.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I do not quite get the purport of the question, Mr. Speaker. I do not think it is a rule of law that they must reveal their sources of information.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence (Minister of Mines): He is asking for the Minister's advice.

Mr. Makarchuk: I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, I did not catch the Attorney General's answer.

Am I correct in presuming that newspapermen must reveal their sources of information when asked to in a court of law within his jurisdiction. Is that correct?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member will have to make his question a little more definite because I do not know whether he means in a court of law. Does he mean as a witness in a case? I say there is no rule of law to require a newsman to reveal his source of information.

Mr. MacDonald: One was fined when he refused to reveal his sources.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: There are perhaps some exceptions but generally newspapers do not need to reveal their sources of information.

Mr. MacDonald: The late Blair Fraser was.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: But sometimes they do not have any information.

Mr. Speaker: It now passes to the leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Nixon: I have a question for the Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Is he aware that some hardships are being experienced by townships as a result of the equalization factors announced by his department some weeks ago. Is there any plan where these equalization factors are being used at the local level in place of reassessment to assist those townships which are experiencing special difficulties in the levies which will be based on equalization factors in the coming year?

Hon. W. D. McKeough (Minister of Municipal Affairs): I would have to say, Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of any hardships at the present time because those equalization factors will be used during 1970 rather than during 1969.

Mr. Nixon: Not in this tax bill?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Not in this tax bill. I think I said when I tabled the equalization factors that there were, for various reasons of which inflation is one, substantial drops in many of the equalization factors, nor were they consistent.

I indicated at that time that the Minister of Education was aware of this and he would take it into account in terms of the education grant regulations or legislation for the forthcoming year. That, of course, is the greatest use made of the factors. There can be some compensation for the drop in the factors built into the grant regulations for next year and I believe that the education department is in the process of working out the details of how this may be done.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker; would it be expected that it would require legislation for that assistance, or would it just be a part of the grant formula?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: I am not just sure to be very frank, Mr. Speaker. I think perhaps it could be done either way. It might be more desirable to do it by way of legislation than in the grant regulations, but I think you would have to ask the Minister of Education. I do not really think they will know until they work through what is a desirable end result and then conclude how it can be done.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Beaches-Woodbine has the floor unless the member for York South has a supplementary.

Mr. J. L. Brown (Beaches-Woodbine): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Prime Minister.

Is the government of Ontario, as an act of a civilized Legislature, going to express in any way its abhorrence of the massacres in Vietnam by some of the U.S. military units there, as revealed recently in Canadian and U.S. press?

Mr. Speaker: Of course, this is a matter of public importance, but certainly not of urgent public importance.

Mr. Brown: I think it is quite urgent, how could it not be urgent?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Huron-Bruce.

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): To the Minister of Agriculture and Food, Mr. Speaker: Has the department arranged a meeting with the University of Guelph in respect to the university's desire to drop the name OAC?

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): Mr. Speaker, we have sought to arrange such a meeting for some time. It was delayed because of the strike that was on up there and because the personnel in administration were doing some of the things that normally they would not have to do and so the meeting had been delayed.

We are, however, counting on having a meeting with them, but I have been reassured, Mr. Speaker, to some degree at least, that a recent announcement from the campus that the names of the Ontario Agricultural College, the Ontario Veterinary College, and the Macdonald Institute, will be continued in a series of designations of colleges that will be established on the campus in connection with the University of Guelph. The concern that was so well expressed in the standing committee on Agriculture at the time of our estimates, and has been expressed in various public forums since, and by individuals greatly interested in the value of continuing the relationship of the name the Ontario Agricultural College, may be reassured that it is my understanding that recommendation will be made to the senate, and from the senate to the board of governors, that those names be continued.

Mr. Speaker: The member for York South.

Mr. MacDonald: I have a question of the Minister of Health.

Does the Minister's survey, announced on November 12 or 13, to discover who and how many doctors are charging the extra 10 per cent, beyond the 90 per cent of the OMA schedule of fees, include an investigation of the savings that doctors have in administrative cost—the administrative savings in collections—and also the greater income they get by virtue of full payment for all so-called charity cases?

Hon. T. L. Wells (Minister of Health): Mr. Speaker, it includes looking into this matter. I would not say it is a definitive survey, but I think that the hon. member would find a lot of doctors would disagree with his last statement.

Mr. MacDonald: Do I assume correctly, by way of supplementary question, that you are looking not just at the number of doctors who are over-charging, but also what administrative savings they have through avoiding collection costs—and this other factor you are disputing.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Yes we are looking into that too, but basically we are interested in knowing what the pattern is in the province insofar as those doctors who are accepting 90 per cent, those doctors who are billing direct and charging 10 per cent, and those doctors who are billing the patients and asking the patient to pay direct.

We basically want to know that. It will include some looks at whether or not the doctors can actually save money billing OHSIP.

Mr. MacDonald: Good. Thank you.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, to the Minister of Health, what part will Ontario play in the assessment of the nutrition of the people of Canada that was announced by the federal Minister of Health?

Will this Minister undertake a survey that will go into the disadvantaged communities in Ontario as well as a general survey of the population that would include the Indians in the far north?

Mr. Speaker: That also does not come under the urgent category and in view of the fact that the Minister's estimates are up later today, I believe that is the proper place for such a question to be raised.

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Health: Is the Minister now ready to publicize the system that he said almost six weeks ago his department was working out for the disposal of DDT?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, the definitive statement will be ready shortly. In brief, it is this.

Firstly that we have told people, as my colleague the Minister of Energy and Resources Management has said, firstly hold on to it and whatever you do, do not put it down water, or down toilets or drains, or anything like this, or in any way that it can be disposed of in water.

We have then been carrying on with the waste management section of The Department of Energy and Resources Management, some sample programmes in communities, I think Kingston is one where it is being tried out this week, to see if the local authorities can carry out a programme of collecting the material, and then we are now looking into places to dispose of this material. The most obvious place to dispose of the material seems to be in abandoned mines and this is what they are doing out west.

We are presently looking in to see if there are any of these. I understand perhaps my colleague, the Minister of Mines, will be able to provide us with a few. As long as we can find some place to deposit the material so that it is below the water levels it will be safe.

The most effective way of disposing of it is in a high degree incinerator, but there are none of these available in this province for this use. I think there are some in the state of Michigan. We have been looking to see if we could use these, but we have not any word on this yet. Basically what we have been telling people and what our sample programmes suggest, is to hold on to it until it is announced in your community how the programme will be operated and where you can take DDT, or who will pick it up. However, do not pour it into any water. We are looking, with the waste management branch, into ways of then disposing of it after we get it all in. Basically, we are going to put it down, I think, in the ground somewhere, below the water levels.

Mr. Burr: Mr. Speaker, as a supplementary question, is the Minister not entertaining the suggestion then of the Minister of Energy and Resources Management, that you sell it to other countries?

Hon. Mr. Wells: No, we are not going to sell it to other countries. I do not think he ever suggested that.

Mr. D. Jackson (Timiskaming): Mr. Speaker, will the Minister of Health confer with the Minister of Mines, who, I am sure, can point out the dangers of disposing of it in old mine shafts, because the mines do fill up with water up above the water table?

Hon. Mr. Wells: As I indicated, Mr. Speaker, it would have to be a mine shaft that, by putting it in and filling it in, was below the water table. Obviously, if a mine shaft is filling up with water, it is not below the water table, although I am not an expert in this, but the idea is—

Mr. Jackson: It could never be below the water table.

Hon. Mr. Wells: It would be capped and filled in.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Makarchuk: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Speaker: I think the discussion of this has gone far enough now and that further questions may be asked later today in the estimates of the Minister.

Mr. G. Ben (Humber): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Energy and Resources Management. He may recall that earlier last year I brought his attention to the pollution of the Humber and the presence of dead fish. My question is this, Mr. Speaker:

I brought to the attention of the new head of the Ontario Water Resources Commission that I had observed a truck of a particular type dumping liquid waste into the storm system of both Etobicoke and the city of Toronto prior to the time that these dead fish came to light. I asked him to get me the names of this liquid cargo disposal outfit to check what had been responsible for the pollution.

Will the Minister please tell us what the result of this checking out has been?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, I do not recall the question referred to by the hon. member. There is no question that dumping of liquid waste in storm sewers is a problem.

However, if the hon. member will give me the names of the companies that are doing this, particularly in this instance, I will investigate it.

Mr. Ben: Mr. Speaker, perhaps my question was not clear. I had given to Mr. Don Collins the description of the tank truck which I had observed on two occasions dumping this black liquid.

I called him and asked him if his department could make this check and see what companies had this particular type of truck with the particular colour I described to see if we could trace the source of the cyanide that was poisoning the fish in the Humber River.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member made himself quite plain on the first question. It is the type of question the Minister could not be expected to answer at this time because the member had not brought it to his attention before. However, the Minister now has the floor either to answer it or take it as notice.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, the fact was that the chairman of OWRC is aware of this. I will follow it up with him.

Mr. Speaker: The member for High Park.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, I have a two-part question of the Minister of Tourism and Information in relation to his statement earlier today.

Is the Minister aware that a high proportion of the 52 exits in the science center that he mentioned had to be bolted shortly after opening day because they opened onto a 60-foot drop?

The second part, is the Minister aware that the fire marshal has issued instructions that no volatile liquids can be stored except when there is a so-called three-hour fire enclosure, which is not present in either of the places at the science center?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, I would be interested to know of this high proportion of the 52 exits. I can think of one which was bolted for a while until a ladder was put to an exit below it. If the hon. member would like to give me some specific detail on these things, I would be delighted to inquire. On the other hand, on just a generalization I am afraid I cannot help him.

However, I am informed, Mr. Speaker, that as far as volatile liquids are concerned, we are within all the fire and other safety regulations.

Mr. Shulman: I have a supplementary then.

Has the Minister seen the report which said that in excess of ten of the exits fronted on chasms?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, I have not seen that report, if in fact it exists.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Middlesex South has a supplementary?

Mr. Bolton: No, Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Transport.

Mr. Speaker: Well, then, the member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent: A question of the Minister of Health. I would ask the Minister if the report in the Globe and Mail this morning in regard to the conditions in mental institutions as outlined by the member for High Park yesterday are true? If they are, does he plan to have a crash programme to find out the answers? If not, should he not be hanging his head in shame sitting there—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member's question is one which can also be dealt with in the estimates.

Mr. Sargent: What action does the Minister plan to take?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member's question is one which I think can be much better dealt with later today in the estimates.

The member for Middlesex South has a question.

Mr. Bolton: A question of the Minister of Transport. Is the Minister aware that a six per cent general increase in commodity freight rates on highway traffic between Canada and the United States through Ontario is scheduled for mid-February?

Hon. Mr. Haskett: Mr. Speaker, I did not hear all the question. Would the member please repeat?

Mr. Bolton: Is the Minister aware that a six per cent general increase in commodity freight rates on highway traffic between Canada and the United States through Ontario is scheduled for mid-February?

Hon. Mr. Haskett: Mr. Speaker, I am aware that highway freight rates are due to be increased. In Ontario, we do not have rate setting, we have rate filing. If the carriers file their increased rates, I do not think there is any objection forthcoming to the practice, providing the shippers will meet the increased rates.

Mr. Bolton: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

Is the Minister aware that the Niagara frontier tariff bureau increased their rates from one to ten per cent in May of this year?

Hon. Mr. Haskett: I understood there was an increase.

Mr. Speaker: The extended time for the oral question period has now expired.

Petitions.

Presenting reports.

Hon. R. S. Welch (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present to the House the report of the Ontario stockyards board for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1969.

Clerk of the House: Mr. Yakabuski, from the standing highways and transport committee, reports the following resolution:

RESOLVED:

That, supply in the following amounts and to defray the expenses of The Department of Highways be granted to Her Majesty for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1970:

The Department of Highways
 Departmental administration, general expenditure, $11,370,000;
 Road maintenance, general expenditure, $134,741,000;

Road construction, general expenditure, $333,703,000;

GO-Transit, general expenditure, $3,479,000.

Resolution concurred in.

Mr. Speaker: Presenting reports.

Motions.

Mr. Demers moves that the standing legal and municipal committee be authorized to sit concurrently with the House for the remainder of this week.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: Motions.

Introduction of bills.

THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY ACT

Hon. Mr. Robarts moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend The Legislative Assembly Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL ACT

Hon. Mr. Robarts moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend The Executive Council Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Mr. Speaker in support of the introduction of these bills, perhaps I could read the explanatory notes.

The Legislative Assembly Amendment Act increases the indemnity of members of this House from $8,000 to $12,000 per annum. It increases allowance for expenses from $3,000 and $4,000 to $6,000 per annum. The amount of advance that is authorized against these sums is increased from $650 per month to $1,000 per month.

The indemnity of the Speaker is increased from $3,000 to $5,000; the indemnity of the leader of the Opposition is increased from $12,000 to $15,000; the leader of the party having a recognized membership of 12 or more members of this Assembly will receive an indemnity of $4,000 per annum.

The sessional indemnity of the chairman of the committees of the whole House is increased from $2,000 to $4,000; and a sessional indemnity of $2,000 is to be paid to the deputy chairman. The chairman of each standing committee will receive a sessional indemnity of $1,000.

The new section provides for an annual indemnity for the chief government Whip of $2,000, for each of not more than two deputy government Whip of $1,000, and for the Opposition Whip and the Whip of each party having 12 or more members in the Assembly of $1,000; and the members' mileage allowance is increased to provide this allowance from 15 trips to 30 trips per annum.

The Executive Council Act amendments increases the annual salary of the Prime Minister from $16,000 to $20,000; of each other Minister of the Crown having charge of a department from $12,000 to $15,000, and of Ministers without Portfolio from $2,500 to $5,000.

I would like to take a moment or two to outline to the House some of the supporting philosophy connected with the two bills. Before I start I would like to say that essentially my personal feelings—and I suppose you share them in some degree—are that of all the things I have had to do in this Legislature over a period of time I think, probably, this is one of the most distasteful, namely, bringing forward legislation which, in effect, increases our own salaries, and my own salary.

I suspect it is distasteful to all of us to be placed in a position in which we must vote to approve legislation which will increase our remuneration as members. I think it would be desirable if we were not faced with such a responsibility.

Unhappily there is no other method by which we can adjust the indemnities other than to bring forward appropriate legislation and express our approval or disapproval by our votes.

You will recall that during the consideration of the estimates of The Department of the Prime Minister on November 14, the member for Grey-Bruce initiated some discussion about the level of remuneration received by the members of the Legislature of Ontario. At that time I indicated to the House that consideration was being given to the revision of the members' salaries. Indeed, I agreed categorically with the thesis which was put forward that revisions are both merited and overdue.

Contained in these bills is a schedule of revisions which the government believes will more adequately recognize the responsibilities and work load of the members of the Legislature and the expenses which they must necessarily incur in the conduct of the business of the people of Ontario.

I would point out that the revisions which are proposed in these bills, although they may appear quite simple, reflect a great deal of deliberation and study by myself and others in the government and consultation with the leader of Opposition and the leader of the New Democratic Party. It is my understanding that both are in general agreement with the contents of these bills, but I shall leave it to them to deal with this aspect as they see fit at the appropriate time.

In our research to determine the level of remuneration which members of this House should receive, the government also commissioned an independent study of this matter. The competent firm of management consultants which undertook an evaluation of the salary levels of the senior Ontario public service studied also the unique area of remuneration of members. While these bills represent a modification of the recommendations, I would assure the hon. members that the suggestions which that firm of independent management consultants proposed, and the research which supported them, were most valuable in drafting this legislation.

In undertaking the current review of members' compensation, we sought to develop a consistent approach which could be applied not only to current conditions, but which will enable more efficient adjustments to be made to meet future requirements.

We also sought to eliminate several questionable elements in the present system of remuneration, and to recognize the work loads and responsibilities of members who accept special duties connected with the operation of the Legislature.

As you are aware, Mr. Speaker, the whole area of compensation of elected public servants is highly unstructured. When one studies the subject of remuneration, regardless of the level of government to which it applies, there is no clear basis in most jurisdictions in the western world to deal with this problem. In most cases, compensation has been developed on an ad hoc basis, in response to pressures of one kind or another over the years. However, there are a few consistent criteria which have guided legislative bodies. By referring to them, I can illustrate that the search for an adequate system of compensation to serve the democratic process has been going on for many years. It is neither a modern problem, nor one unique in Canada.

For example, one of the earlier select committee on members' salaries was conducted by the Parliament at Westminster in 1831. In its report, the select committee noted that it was "frequently observed . . . that offices in a free country should not be put beyond the reach of men of moderate fortunes."

This principle—that public office should be attainable for every citizen—is fundamental to our democratic system. It is the crux of every investigation into members' remuneration, and a basic element of the various systems which have been developed to deal with compensation of elected people.

Another expression of this principle was put forward by David Lloyd George, as Chancellor of the Exchequer, in the British House of Commons in 1911, when he said:

The only principle of payment in the public service is that you should make an allowance to a man to enable him to maintain himself comfortably and honourably, but not luxuriously, during the time he is rendering service to the state.

The remuneration of Ministers and members of the British Parliament was the subject of a further review by an independent committee in 1964, the committee adopted the principle that:

Payment should be such as not only to enable the man with no external means to become a member of the House without financial embarrassment, but to allow him to discharge the proper expenses of conscientious and efficient membership and to live at a level consistent with the dignity of the service.

He should not be forced to sacrifices which impair the quality of his service and lower the reputation and prestige of Parliament itself.

That report concluded by saying:

Our recommendations should . . . reduce the danger that men and women of the highest ability will be turned away by lack of means to adopt it, and they may contribute to the strengthening of our democratic institutions of government.

I have stated on many occasions that I did not, and I am sure most of us here, or none of us here, enter public life with the idea that we would make a fortune. Indeed, I stood for public office with the knowledge that if successful I would probably earn a good deal less than if I had continued to practise law. I know I express the feelings of all members when I say that there is an enormous satisfaction in serving the people of Ontario to which a dollar valuation cannot be—nor should be—attached.

At the same time, these principles to which I have referred must apply, and have been applied in the philosophy of the revisions made in 1965 and in these two bills that I introduced today. We must ensure that any resident may stand for public office and that, once elected, may receive adequate compensation to conduct the business of the people of Ontario without financial penalty to himself and his family. Only if we can achieve this can we be certain that we are attracting to public office the best and most qualified men and women.

I believe it is a fair statement, and one with which anyone who examined the problem objectively would agree, that compensation for members of the Legislature of Ontario has not kept pace with increasing responsibilities, work load and cost of living. The increase in the length of the session, to the point where members are here between eight and ten months of the year, and the further involvement in select committees which has grown greater and greater in recent years, and the whole factor of constituency work between sessions, which is increasing very rapidly as well, have turned what was not long ago a part-time job into what is now virtually a full-time occupation. Certainly no member could effectively handle full-time work in private life and adequately discharge his public responsibilities as a member of this Legislature.

This is especially so for those who are in the so-called white collar and managerial groups where part-time work is just simply impossible.

With this heavier work load have come parallel increases in the costs of meals, accommodation and already onerous travel costs for members. I remember when we used to have passes on the railways that meant something, but they do not mean much any more. These costs are especially acute for members who represent constituencies located a considerable distance from the seat of government at Queen's Park and, indeed, just travelling around some of these constituencies alone is a very large task indeed.

Our present system of indemnities was begun under circumstances far different from those with which we deal today. The original concept of the payment of an indemnity was to compensate or indemnify a member for expenses incurred while attending a short session, and we all remember those days.

When I first came in the House we would meet perhaps at the end of January and finish always on the Thursday before Good Friday. It was automatic. I think the first session I spent in this House was something like seven weeks long, as compared with the fact that this particular session has been going on for over a year.

In any event, that indemnity was not intended as a salary. The same principle, that is, of indemnifying a member who must come to the seat of government to transact the province's business on behalf of those who elect him, still applies. But clearly, this needs to be updated and brought into closer conformity with current conditions.

The study undertaken for us, to which I have previously referred, also dealt with the level of payment for the members of the executive council. The report stated that, "In all our work in executive compensation in both the public and private sector, we have seen no positions which place any greater demand on an individual than those of a senior, elected public servant of the province of Ontario."

The report went on to say that the "Technological explosion, the growth of the population, the increasing complexity of provincial and federal relationships on the one hand and provincial-municipal relationships on the other, plus the ever-increasing demands of the public for central services, have resulted in a job expansion with no real point of comparison with the possible exception of the federal area."

The report added that, "In addition to meeting the demands of offices of comparable scale to federal Ministers, members of the Ontario Cabinet have considerably higher demands on their time by constituents," mainly, I suppose, because we are closer to them.

In discussing these matters, I would express the view that, for the foreseeable future, men and women in elected public positions are unlikely to receive compensation directly comparable to their levels of responsibility. Nor, I am confident, would they expect to receive the same level of compensation as that being paid for comparable responsibilities in the private sector.

However, it must be recognized to all that the steady escalation of the cost of living in the four years since amendments were made has eroded the capacity of members to maintain a reasonable standard of living. One of the methods which we considered to help overcome this situation was to relate the compensation for members and Ministers to the salary scale of senior Deputy Ministers which, in turn, is related to the pay of the civil service as a whole. However, as we considered this suggestion and the method by which it might be carried out, we rejected it as unworkable.

I should like to mention another element contained in our existing system of indemnities and expense allowances, which is common with the federal government and other provinces, and which we also considered at length. This is the tax-free element of the general expense allowance. I have always considered it to be a questionable practice to have legislators, who must decree that taxes be levied by others, be in some measure partially exempt from taxation. We gave detailed consideration to the possibility of eliminating the general expense allowance and allowing members to be reimbursed for expenses incurred in the course of his duties as a member of the Legislature. However, close examination of the complications of devising such a system led us reluctantly to retain the present structure.

I believe that the level of compensation which is contained in these two bills will more adequately reflect the responsibilities and work load of members of the Ontario Legislature, and bring the level of payment more closely in line with that of the members of the federal Parliament and the Quebec National Assembly.

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

Clerk of the House: The 23rd order, House in committee of supply; Mr. R. D. Rowe, chairman.

ESTIMATES, THE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

Mr. Chairman: Estimates of The Department of Health; Mr. Minister.

Hon. T. L. Wells (Minister of Health): Mr. Chairman, presenting for the first time to this House the estimates of The Department of Health, I would like to begin by saying a word about my predecessor in this portfolio, the hon. member for Ontario riding.

As the members of this House know, this gentleman led this department for over 10 years and as one who has now come into the department, I can see the definite signs of his leadership in this department. From the time he took over, back in 1958 to the present time, phenomenal growth has occurred; many new programmes have been instituted, and much has been done in improving the quality of the health of the people of this province, I think that it cannot go without being mentioned in this House, that this House and the people of Ontario owe a great debt of gratitude to the hon. member for Ontario riding for the leadership that he gave to this department.

I also think it should not go without notice that five or six weeks ago, the Canadian Mental Health Association held a meeting and paid tribute to him for the outstanding leadership that he gave in the field of mental health in this province.

Mr. Chairman, in presenting the estimates of this department I would like to review to the House a few of the highlights, some of the things that have happened in the past year and some of the things that we are planning to undertake. I would like to begin by paying tribute to the staff of the department. In the short time that I have been in the department, I have found them to be very competent and of great expertise in many of the various areas that our department covers.

I would like to also pay tribute to the many people not immediately on our staff; but the many people on the Ontario Council of Health, its various committees, the executives of the health organizations in this province and all those in the field of health who have been working with us as a team over these past years to bring about the great advances that we have had in the health field in this province.

The first area I would like to review today, Mr. Chairman, is the Ontario Council of Health. I am pleased to report that this council continues to make substantial progress. As hon. members will remember, the council has been given statutory authority as the senior advisory body of health in The Department of Health Act, 1968-1969.

There is in the annual report of this department an outline of the council's activities, including details of organization and membership. I believe that through the mechanism of the council and its various committees that we have been able to bring together a broad and, indeed, a unique spectrum of interest and experience. We have received from this council a series of major reports and recommendations on a variety of matters of priority interest in the planning and development of health service arrangements in this province.

These reports cover such subjects as health manpower, education of the health disciplines, regional organization of health services, physical resources, health research, health statistics and health library services. I do appreciate, Mr. Chairman, that these reports have not as yet been made available to the House. The reason for that is that these reports are interrelated, both in subject matter and recommendations. If we had presented them in a piecemeal fashion, as and when they were submitted to us, there could have been misunderstanding and confusion.

However, we have now received a sufficient number of these reports which, taken together, add up to a significant and comprehensible total effort, worthy of presentation to the hon. members and in due course for distribution to other jurisdictions.

With this end in view, an overall report on the council's activities is now being prepared. This document will collate the major features and recommendations from the various reports which have been accepted by the council so far and will have as appendices the various individual reports. After the council has reviewed and approved this material at the council's next meeting in January, I will make the reports available to hon. members of this House and the public shortly thereafter.

I may say, Mr. Chairman, that the Ontario Council of Health, during its comparatively short existence, has occasioned much interest, not only in other provinces but in federal circles as well. We have also had expressions of interest and requests for information about the council's work from the United Kingdom and from our friends south of the border.

I am sure that when hon. members have had the opportunity of reviewing the quality and the scope of the efforts of the Ontario Council of Health, they will agree that this council is a most important and worthwhile advisory body to this government. It is providing an effective mechanism for the development, in Ontario, of comprehensive health services of highest quality on a planned and orderly basis.

Mr. Chairman, as the hon. members realize the Ministers of Health from the various provinces met in Ottawa just this week on Tuesday and Wednesday with the federal Minister of Health and Welfare. The primary subject on the agenda of this meeting was a report to our conference of ministers from the committee set up by our conference on the cost of health services in Canada.

This report is in three volumes, and I think that we made available to the both Oppositions, copies of this report on Friday. We got them down as quickly as we could. It is in three volumes with volume 1 being a summary of the work of the various task forces, with a consolidation of important recommendations. The province of Ontario established a committee to review health care costs in this province some months ago and we were prominently represented on the federal committee and its various task forces. The work of the provincial committee has been complementary to the national effort and therefore, Mr. Chairman, we were in a position to analyze the various recommendations proposed in the consolidated document before the Ottawa meeting.

Most of the first day of our meeting at the Ottawa conference was taken up with a review of health care costs and it was decided that the primary committee, with its steering committee, should continue to function and report back to the Conference of Ministers. This decision was taken because it was appreciated that there was a substantial amount of unfinished business, particularly as related to implementation in areas in which there was a combined provincial and federal interest.

In addition, the Ontario committee, with its various task forces, has been requested to report to me as soon as possible, putting forward recommendations and proposed methods to implement the recommendations. These recommendations will take into account the proposals of the federal committee and other features which our provincial group consider pertinent to this particular province. It might be of interest to the members, Mr. Chairman, to know that the provincial task forces are reviewing costs as related to hospitals and other health facilities, medical services, mental health, public health, dental care and drugs and biologicals. If other task forces are required, they will be set up to complete an analysis of the total spectrum.

I can assure the hon. members that aggressive action will be taken so that the people of this province will have available to them Health services which are of the highest quality and also which are effective and economic.

Next, Mr. Chairman, I would like to deal with The Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Research Foundation, an agency coming under our department.

On an ever-widening front in this province, and throughout the rest of North America, public concern about the rising incidence of drug abuse is becoming increasingly vocal. It takes only a few well-illustrated newspaper or television reports to divert public attention to a new crisis, a new aspect of illicit drugs.

We hear the urgent pleas of parents whose children are on "speed" to help them, to tell them what to do, to set up centres where they can be given emergency treatment or helped over the long term; we hear a growing segment of society demanding research into marijuana; we hear of the great need to relieve our courts and jails of the chronic drunkenness offenders, and to make such people medical and not police responsibilities.

There can be no mistake that these are urgent problems that we need to do something about. On the one hand we can be motivated solely by public crisis or panic reactions; on the other we can look at the whole social pattern of drug and alcohol, its use and abuse and try to devise solutions that are of infinitely more value, and have some chance of being permanent.

It is with this permanence, perspective and stability in mind that we have given the addiction research foundation of Ontario such a broad mandate in dealing with drug dependence and Mr. Chairman, this includes alcohol from the point of view of research, education and public information, and assisting in the development of treatment programmes.

To minimize the spread of human dependence on alcohol and drugs and to determine how best to treat the existing victims of this major health problem, the staff members of the foundation must deploy themselves across this province to stimulate action by agencies within each specific community. At this time the foundation is represented in more than 25 municipalities in this province.

In some communities the staff is necessarily large and the functions and resources are as diversified as are the needs of that community. In other towns one staff person must wear many hats, he must be counsellor to teachers, parents, physicians; he must be the liaison person with youth groups, with media, with the local hospital and the other available health and social services.

Let me describe briefly the deployment of foundation units, bearing in mind that no two regional centres are exactly the same, that some have more research function than others, while some are more service and community-oriented.

The Lake Erie region which operates out of London has a community and professional education programme, and out-patient clinic, provides support to halfway houses, provides supporting staff in a mental hospital in Goderich and has set up a crisis intervention centre for care of amphetamine, "speed" abusers in the city in conjunction with Victoria Hospital.

The Lake St. Clair region, headquartered in Windsor, has an active clinical consultative service in that city, as well as community development workers in Chatham and Sarnia. It also provides support to halfway houses.

In the Niagara Counties region, there are clinical and consultative services in Welland, Port Colborne, St. Catharines and Niagara Falls, and there is a counselling service in Dunnville.

In the Midwestern Ontario region there are three distinct, but related programmes. The centre in Kitchener-Waterloo offers a programme of specialized services including information, consultation, counselling and referral assistance. The segment of the programme originating in Brantford covers Brant and Norfolk counties and the third programme in Guelph, is run independently by the Wellington-Dufferin-Guelph public health unit with initial support of a grant-in-aid from the foundation.

The Northern programmes division operates an out-patient clinic and a psychiatric in-patient unit in Sudbury, consultative services in Orillia, Sault Ste. Marie, North Bay, South Porcupine, Kapuskasing, Kirkland Lake, Fort William and a detoxication hostel for overnight accommodation, primarily used by Indian people in Kenora. There is also financial aid and staff support for a special hospital ward and a drop-in centre in Port Arthur, as well as a halfway house in Fort William. In all of these units the primary focus is on development of community resources, professional training and preventive education.

In eastern Ontario, with headquarters in Ottawa, there is an out-patient and consultation service within that city, a clinical research and teaching unit at Queen's University, financial and staff support for an addiction studies department at the Peterborough civic hospital. There is also financial and staff support for an independent halfway house in Ottawa, a drop-in centre in Cornwall, and there are community-based consultation services and some direct services in Brockville, Cornwall, Pembroke and Kingston.

In metropolitan Hamilton the multi-disciplinary staff maintains an out-patient clinic, assists in teaching rounds in the community hospital, organizes weekly seminars and case conferences for local professionals; has an annual programme of fellowships, and facilitates an in-patient unit for alcoholics at the Metropolitan Hamilton Psychiatric Hospital, and shortly, in conjunction with Chedoke Hospital, a 25-bed in-patient unit will be opened.

In Metropolitan Toronto, the foundation staff maintain out-patient clinics in central, and east, and soon in North Toronto, a half-way house and a detoxication centre, a demonstration centre for employed alcoholics referred by their employers, a rehabilitative farm for alcoholics near Elora, a speaker's bureau, and a youth counselling service. It has recently instituted a 24-hour information service which was designed primarily to tell parents, professionals, or even the young people themselves, what to do in cases of drug emergency, to make referral to the most appropriate hospital or health centre if necessary to advise on helping facilities of an acute or long-term nature available in the city.

There are also community programmes in Oakville, Mississauga, Whitby, Oshawa, and Newmarket. In downtown Toronto the foundation with the co-operation of the YMCA has just established a consultation centre for both youth and adults where the emphasis will be on information about drugs.

As part of its central services, the foundation has also reinstated its narcotic addiction unit to test the validity of methadone in treatment of heroin addicts and it is now developing a crisis intervention centre for emergency and long-term care of "speed" and multi-drug users. This unit will eventually include residential and other back-up facilities for rehabilitation.

All of these regional services, Mr. Chairman, receive support from the foundation's central educational division which develops literature, films and television material for public use; and for use in school systems and professional training; and from the research division which in the 20-year operation of the foundation has become one of the leading research centres in the world dealing with alcohol and drugs.

To correlate more effectively such activities and to bring professionals of the various disciplines closer together, the foundation will shortly be moving into its new headquarters, which house a research block, administrative and professional offices, as well as a 100-bed hospital. Significantly, this clinical institute will be used as a teaching hospital in co-operation with the University of Toronto.

This, then, is the actual physical makeup of the foundation, featuring different priorities in the different communities. But there are, Mr. Chairman, some common elements and needs throughout the province about "public crisis," or about reports of bizarre incidents related to drug abuse, we obviously cannot afford to neglect these. But we must see them as symptoms of an underlying disorder within society.

The foundation has studied very intensively this disorder, this social pattern. It has been trying to tell us that we cannot isolate marijuana use among youth, the "speed" user, the chronic alcoholic, the drunk driver, or the adult abuser of drugs, such as tranquilizers and sedatives. The way society generally uses drugs, they say, not only endorses this use but very actively encourages it through advertising and other means of suggestion, and bears a very direct relationship on the way the so-called subcultures use drugs.

In a series of high school studies done by the foundation in London and Toronto in 1968, which are being up-dated at this time, at least 16 per cent of students were shown to have experimented with drugs such as marijuana, solvents, amphetamines and LSD. More than ten per cent of grade 9 students in the study had experimented with marijuana and this was, in fact, the highest level of experimentation within the schools.

We were also shown that the way parents in a household regard drugs—even the socially-accepted ones such as tobacco and alcohol—have a direct relationship on the prevalence of drug use among their children. These studies also showed us that regardless of the incidence of other drug use among the student groups, alcohol and tobacco were still by far the most popular and the most used drugs of all. Of all students in the London survey, for example, 68 per cent reported having used alcohol, 46 per cent reported having used tobacco.

Another major factor to consider—one which is underlined in a report on prescription drug use which will be released soon by the foundation—is that in one sample year, at least 1.37 million prescriptions for mood-modifying drugs—these are the amphetamines, barbiturates and tranquilizers—were issued to 1.35 million people over the age of 15. This means that in this study, on an average, therefore, this is one prescription for a mood-modifying drug for every person over the age of 15.

Only with such scientifically-valid background, one free of rumour, speculation, educated wild guesses, or panic reactions, can we make true assessments of the scope of the drug problem and determine the best means of dealing with it.

Relating this to the matter of amphetamines, for example, the foundation's role must be to determine the best means of treating emergency cases, to devise the means of providing long-term rehabilitation to get people who are dependent on such drugs off them. For several months the foundation has been running a crisis intervention centre for the amphetamine and multi-drug user in London.

A similar one, with a co-ordinating function related to other social and health services in the city, is now being developed for the city of Toronto. On the basis of the foundation's experience in such units, a professionally- viable approach to "speed" can be developed. The intention is not, and will not be, that other agencies will be relieved of their responsibility in this matter of service. Service must become the responsibility of the hospitals and other health and social agencies that already exist in every community.

The foundation's role will be to assist such units, to provide information, support personnel and the community stimulus to get something effective done. For example, in Toronto there are hospital beds and facilities for "speed" users that are not being used for that purpose. Space for emergency care, therefore, is not the primary need in this case, but development of the skills and knowledge about rehabilitation and long-term care might well be more important than any bed count.

In more direct educational activities, the foundation is now involved in production of fact sheets which are distributed widely to professional groups and the public at large. The fact sheets—one has already been done on marijuana, solvents, LSD, amphetamines and alcohol—describe the drugs themselves, their effects, dosage, what is known about them. Already one million of these have been distributed.

Material from these sheets has formed the basis for a strong newspaper advertising campaign, which I am sure many members have already seen and which has started to show up all across this province. So far we have seen ads on the $1 cigarette, which of course refers to marijuana; "The Fun-Filled Disaster Kit," which is an ad on glue and solvents; "Some Trips Are More Dangerous," which is about LSD; and "What You Don't Know Can Hurt You," referring to amphetamines. A television campaign relating to alcohol and drugs is now also being developed.

Throughout this spectrum of educational activities, the foundation has found that youth will not respond favourably to preaching, scare tactics or hounding, but it does have considerable regard for the facts and findings of science. Essential, therefore, to all of these educational aids developed by the foundation is their scientific responsibility.

During the recent marijuana dialogue, stimulated by the drug inquiry hearing there has been an evident lack of this kind of responsibility. To give the commission benefit of their experience, foundation personnel have held meetings with the federally-appointed group and have prepared a detailed memorandum assisting the commission, the federal commission, in developing its hearings, and are now developing an extensive brief which will be presented to the federal commission in the near future.

To date, the foundation has conducted animal experimentation, laboratory work; has developed in book form an important assessment of the scientific literature from around the world. An expanded version of this is now being written and is nearing completion, of a psychological and physical assessment of more than 250 marijuana users in Toronto.

But let us not think that on the basis of such studies alone, one will be able to make a simple decision about the legal status of marijuana. There is no rational way of deciding how much harm from a particular substance or practice society is prepared to put up with. This can only be decided on the basis of general contemporary values, rather than the scientific reasoning alone.

The foundation at present is very clear in stressing that at the present time it cannot support legalization of marijuana, but it is equally clear in opposing the present criminalization of vast numbers of experimental or curious users of the drug. It strongly urges moving legislation governing marijuana out of The Narcotics Control Act and into the jurisdiction of The Food and Drug Act.

It is this kind of judgment, one balancing the scientific and the social values, that an organization such as the Addiction Research Foundation is particularly qualified to make. For reasons such as these the foundation was asked by Kiwanis International to assist in the continent-wide operation, drug alert programme, and it subsequently committed itself to a considerable amount of participation.

Meetings have already been held with Ontario representatives of Kiwanis to discuss what kinds of programmes and projects the local clubs across this province could best operate in their own communities, and to define what kind of guidance the foundation could offer by way of resources and personnel. This is an excellent example, Mr. Chairman, of how citizens can themselves participate in programmes devised by their own community leaders.

The foundation has also held discussions with representatives of the recently formed committee on drug abuse (CODA) and has offered advisory services to this group.

It is in this role as community catalyst, as resource body, as scientific conscience that the addiction foundation provides one of its great services to this province.

Mr. Chairman, hon. members on another subject will recall the statements made by the Prime Minister in March, 1969, that The Department of Energy and Resources Management was to be the principal vehicle for the government's programme on environmental management and pollution abatement.

The former air pollution control of this Department of Health is now the air management branch of The Department of Energy and Resources Management, and the staff formerly dealing with waste management in this department is now the waste management branch of The Department of Energy and Resources Management.

This has resulted in a reduction in complement of 233 persons within The Department of Health. As a result, the printed estimates no longer present expenditures forecasts in the two departments as they relate to these programmes. The Minister of Energy and Resources Management, I believe, provided the leaders of the Opposition parties with two sheets of figures which show the changes in the estimates for both departments.

Briefly an amount of $3,258,900 is being transferred from the estimates of The Department of Health to the estimates of The Department of Energy and Resources Management.

In consequence, the revised estimates for the public health programme and the environmental health services are as follows: And rather than reading them I will send copies over to the member.

The revised estimates for The Department of Health to be voted now total, therefore, Mr. Chairman, $394,450,100. The statutory vote remains at $22,000.

Mr. Chairman, in talking about the public health branch of the department, I would like to mention a few words about maternal and child health, and particularly infant and perinatal deaths.

It is gratifying to be able to report that considerable progress has been made in the reduction of infant mortality. Over the past 30 years, the infant mortality rate in Ontario, which is a well known indicator of the quality of health care for our infant population, has been reduced from 55 in 1937 to 19 in 1967.

This improvement has been brought about by a number of factors. Prominent among them are the general improvement in the care of both mothers and infants, including safer milk and water supplies; the control of communicable diseases by immunization; and the reduction in other communicable diseases such as tuberculosis.

However, the greatest reduction of deaths in the first year of life has been in the one- to 12-month period. While this has been accomplished by some reduction in deaths of infants very early in their lives, at present 66 per cent of deaths of infants in the first year occur in the first week of their life.

These deaths of newborns are often described as the hard core of infant mortality; the deaths that are most difficult to prevent because the causes are more complex.

These first-week deaths, together with infants who are still-born are, I understand, now referred to as perinatal deaths, that is, those which occur before or just following the mother's confinement.

In Ontario in 1967 there were 3,000 such deaths, with a rate of 23 per 100,000 total births, but while this rate was below the national average of 24, two provinces had lower rates than ours. Moreover, within the province there are variations in rates which give us cause for concern.

While the provincial rate of 23 is commendable, rates in smaller jurisdictions within the province, both rural and urban, ranged all the way from 17 to 31. It seems fairly obvious that a major problem in maternal and child health exists here, and that there is a real need to examine more thoroughly the field of perinatal deaths.

As is well known, the birth rate continues to fall in Ontario, in other parts of Canada and, indeed, in other industrialized societies. Surely this makes it even more important that babies who are born, not only survive, but receive care which will provide the best conditions for their normal development to productive adulthood.

Among the main causes of death in the first week of life are immaturity, affecting babies who are born weighing less than five and a half pounds and are not quite ready for existence in the outside world. Congenital malformations are among the major causes of which we are learning much, but many questions have yet to be answered on how congenital malformations can be prevented.

The third major condition, and perhaps the leading one in this age period, is a group of conditions of the lungs resulting in deaths from respiratory failure. However, it has been emphasized to me, Mr. Chairman, by my advisors that the most important single cause of death, as I said earlier, in this period, often associated with the other causes, is immaturity. The very small baby has not the resources to survive without highly specialized medical and nursing care in specialized facilities.

If we consider again the 3,000 perinatal deaths which occurred in 1967, and look at deaths in adults from that year, it is not until the 10-year age group of adults between 45 and 54 is reached, that we find a greater number of deaths. In that group there were 4,400 deaths, and that is the only place in that grouping where the number exceeds those in the perinatal death group.

We are investing significantly in the study and treatment of heart disease and cancer which are the leading causes of death in the 45 to 54 age group, and no one would deny these important investments.

How often, however, do we hear of campaigns to provide resources to study the cause of immaturity and so prevent these infant deaths. The saving of infant lives is as important to this province and, indeed, to the nation, as any health problem we have to face.

For these reasons, the department intends to extend its activities in the study of perinatal deaths, begun a number of years ago with the study in university hospitals in Ontario, which was reported in 1967 and widely distributed since then. This new undertaking will study such deaths occurring in all hospitals in this province.

The emphasis will be on factors in the mother, or in the care of the mother, which were revealed by the former study to be closely related to successful or tragic outcome of her pregnancy.

In the planning of this province-wide programme, every effort will be made to use information on documents and reports already required of physicians and hospitals so as not to increase the burden of reporting already carried out by these groups.

An advisory group of clinical authorities, statisticians and administrators will assist the department in the planning, so that the most pertinent information will be sought and processed as efficiently as possible. This plan to gather such information and to do this study has the endorsement of the council of the Ontario Medical Association.

This information will hopefully reveal aspects of medical and nursing care, as well as aspects of the mother's care of herself which may influence her health and the survival of her baby. These include such things as how early the mother seeks the advice of her physician; her nutrition; the number of other children she has borne; her resources, both financially and physically which have been shown to influence the outcome of her pregnancy.

This kind of information will give us a more sound basis on which to plan regionally to bring the highest level of care to mothers who are at the greatest risk of complications of pregnancy.

Included in this is the transport of mothers or infants already born to facilities where they can get the necessary care. Perhaps many of us are not aware that there are 200 hospitals in Ontario which provide care for mothers and newborn infants at delivery. A significant number of these hospitals have relatively few maternity and newborn patients during the year and, therefore, cannot possibly have the resources either in professional personnel or equipment to cope with all the types of complications which may arise.

Many of us are aware, I am sure, of modern hospital facilities for intensive care patients who have suffered coronary heart attacks. Maternal and newborn intensive care facilities are operating or being developed as well for the intensive care of mothers and newborns. They are located most often in hospitals in health science centres, where families and highly trained personnel are likely to be available.

I understand that remarkable progress has been made in recent years in the care of both mother and infant during this precarious experience of birth. This has resulted not only in lives saved, but in the reduction of the hazards of births so that such babies have a much better opportunity to develop into normal productive individuals. This programme, has, therefore, a very definite preventative purpose—to save mothers' and infants' lives and to help reduce the causes of long-term disabilities, such as mental retardation and cerebral palsy, which have often been associated with the survival of immature or very small babies, for whom today's high standards of care were not available.

I am sure that the people of this province are as prepared to invest in the salvage of new lives as they have been in investing in the salvage of adults with serious heart disease who have fewer, perhaps, productive years to look forward to.

I would like to say a word on the subject of family planning because I believe it is closely related to what I have been talking about. With the long-awaited amendments to the Criminal Code, whereby family planning services and advice are no longer illegal activities, we look forward to an extension of family planning services in this province. This, too, has its preventative aspects, enabling parents to plan their families in relationship to their resources to care for their children; not merely their financial resources but their human resources.

My department is providing financial support for this development through local health services grants and is actively urging the setting up of these facilities, the family planning services, across this province. A home environment of warmth and acceptance, which will foster not only physical health, but normal mental and emotional growth as well, is our aspiration for all children. I am sure that these two programmes will go a long way towards their achievement.

Mr. Chairman, the incidence of venereal disease as a public health problem is of continuing concern. The number of cases that are reported each year does not reflect in any way the actual extent of the occurrence of syphilis and gonorrhoea, but rather represents directly the amount of effort that is directed to obtaining notification. The fact that most cases of venereal disease are not reported to the venereal disease control section of my department is of serious concern. It is a matter of record that the number of positive smears for gonorrhoea and positive blood tests for syphilis performed each year in the provincial public health laboratories far exceeds the number of reported cases for either of these diseases, and it is a valid measure of the significance of the problem of under-reporting.

The operation of an effective venereal disease control programme is dependent upon several factors. The first of these is an awareness, a high index of suspicion, that a venereal disease may be present in an individual, often in an inapparent form, and that appropriate laboratory examinations are the only way in which a diagnosis of the condition will be made.

It is noted that of all cases of syphilis reported in Ontario in 1968, only 123, or 15.5 per cent were in the infectious stage; and 595, or 74.6 per cent in the latent stage. This latter group constituted a majority of reported cases, and were in a stage which presented no symptoms or signs of disease, being diagnosed by routine serological examination. They were not detected, therefore, during the infective stage when the identification and examination of contacts is of the utmost importance.

The public health aspect of a venereal disease control programme is directed to a location and examination of all contacts of each case of a venereal disease as soon as possible after exposure has occurred, so that effective treatment measures can be instituted to minimize further spread of infection. The names of the relevant contacts can be obtained only by careful and often repeated interviewing of the case, either by the personal physician or by an appropriate member of the staff of the local health agency.

The Venereal Disease Protection Act provides for notification of all cases of venereal disease to the provincial Department of Health rather than to the local medical officer of health. There are several reasons supporting the principle of central reporting. The maintenance of a case registry by a central agency is of value in providing a standard method of disease classification, of recording the treatment that has been used in each case, and of providing a reference file for physicians to obtain information about an individual's past history of venereal disease.

In addition, it provides the mechanism to follow contacts who may reside in municipalities other than that in which the case occurred. It is of prime importance that absolute confidence concerning persons suffering from venereal disease be maintained, and it is considered that central notification is the most effective way of ensuring it. It should be appreciated that central reporting does not in any way interfere or prevent the development of a good professional relationship between the practising physician and the medical officer of health in conducting an effective venereal disease control programme in their own area. The confidence of the case of venereal disease remains with the personal physician, and he has the responsibility for the release of any information concerning the case of venereal disease under his care, and according to his best judgment.

The interviewing of each case of venereal disease, depending on the stage of infection, to obtain the names of relevant contacts is essential in the control of the spread of this disease. In certain circumstances it is recognized that personal physicians will prefer to accept this responsibility and to examine and treat, if necessary, those so named. In most situations, however, he does not have the time nor the facilities to carry out this important function, and would prefer to make use of the services of skilled personnel of the local health departments.

It has been shown that repeated interviewing is necessary to obtain the confidence and co-operation of the case in obtaining the names of the contacts in sufficient detail so that they can be located and brought in for examination and treatment.

An important reason for the failure to control the spread of venereal disease within this province is that interviewing either has not been done, or has not been successful in obtaining the names of contacts involved. This is supported by the fact that the number of reported contacts per case, for the province of Ontario, is less than one, on the average, and control measures cannot hope to be effective until this situation improves considerably. In areas where careful and intensive interviewing techniques have been practised the average number of contacts per case is four.

If the same ratio of contacts to cases applies in Ontario, and there is no reason to suspect otherwise, there are a large number of people who may be suffering from venereal disease and have not had the benefit of a laboratory examination to determine whether or not they are infected, who consequently remain untreated, and continue as a source of the spread of infection.

Recognizing that the control of VD has been ineffective in the areas mentioned previously—namely, notification by physicians, and interviewing by either physicians or local health agencies, and appreciating, Mr. Chairman, that questions have been raised on treatment and other aspects—I have authorized, as I told the House a few weeks ago, the establishment of a task force with terms of reference as follows:

To examine all aspects of venereal disease control and make recommendations concerning: (a) Diagnosis and treatment, including provision of free drug therapy. (b) Reporting procedures, including report forms. (c) Epidemiological procedures, both central and local. (d) The provision of clinic services. (e) Educational programmes, both professional and lay.

The task force will also have the authority to invite special resource personnel to provide information in related fields such as laboratories—public, private and hospital—clinics, legal aspects, law enforcement, sociological factors, education—both elementary and secondary—and it will also have the benefit of working with the Ontario Hospital Services Commission and the Ontario Health Services Insurance Plan.

The task force on venereal disease is comprised of individuals with expert knowledge and experience in various aspects of venereal disease. They represent those groups with particular interests and involvement in treatment and control programmes. The task force is made up of the following people: Dr. Frank Addlery, general practitioner, Scarborough; Miss Ella Beardmore, director of public health nursing, Scarborough; Dr. Harry Brown, general practitioner, Sarnia; Dr. Anne Kyle, clinic director, Toronto; Dr. W. T. R. Linton, dermatologist, Toronto; Dr. G. W. O. Moss, associate medical officer of health, city of Toronto; Dr. W. E. Page, medical officer of health, Brantford; Dr. Carol Voaden, general practitioner, Toronto. And the chairman of the committee is Dr. J. Stewart Bell, chief of the epidemiology service in The Department of Health.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): Mr. Chairman, if the Minister looks about him he will see how interested his backbenchers are in his speech. There is only one present.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I have instructed the task force to place before me recommendations as soon as possible for an aggressive and complete venereal disease programme for this province.

Mr. Chairman, man's health is directly influenced by his environment—the air he breathes, the water he drinks and the food he eats. All have influence on his state of well-being. The quality of man's environment has been affected by increasing changes in technology, the introducing of new chemicals and the trend to urbanization. While the evidence that these environmental changes are associated with changes in the disease picture in man is not conclusive, there is concern among health people about them. The environmental health services branch in our department brings together a group of specialists who serve to keep watch on the environment and the possible effects of these on the health of the public of Ontario.

In recent months there has been much discussion about the significance of pesticides in our environment. Because of the concern about contamination of our environment, an Order-in-Council was passed last May banning immediately from use in agriculture, aldrin, dieldrin and heptachlor, and prohibiting all other use after January 1, 1970. One exception was made to this in that these substances could be used by a person holding a licence to do termite extermination while engaged in this work.

In September of this year, another Order-in-Council was approved providing for a prohibition on the use of DDT after January 1, 1970. There were three exemptions to this ban. The Order-in-Council made provision for DDT to be available under permit for bat control, tarnished plant bug control in apple production, and cutworm control in tobacco.

It should be stated that to date there is no concrete evidence that DDT is posing a threat to the health of the people of Ontario. However, there is concern about it as an environmental pollutant which has affected certain groups of our wildlife and fish. It is hoped that as suitable alternatives become available for DDT in the case of the three exemptions, the latter will also be withdrawn. As the hon. members know, aldrin, dieldrin, heptachlor and DDT are members of the chlorinated hydrocarbon group of insecticides.

I might also say here, Mr. Chairman, that our action in banning DDT in this province came about directly as the result of our pesticides advisory board. This board carried on hearings at the instigation of my predecessor and they have made a very thorough report which is presently in the process of being printed and will be made available shortly to all the hon. members. It was on the basis of this report and the expertise of our pesticides advisory board and those they consulted with, that we took the action we did last September.

As a result of an incident or incidents involving the death of ducks at Ward's Island, Toronto, this past summer, in which the insecticide diazinon was suspect, a one-man commission has been appointed to look into this matter.

Dr. Martin E. Edwards of the Royal Military College, Kingston, is the commissioner.

Hearings will be starting shortly and Dr. Edwards will be reporting his findings and recommendations to me on this matter.

During the past summer, the pesticides advisory board has been used extensively as an advisory body to the department. The board was asked to look into the use of aldrin, dieldrin and, later, DDT. And it was, as I said, as a result of their investigations and recommendations that we took the action we did.

The department is not complacent about the use of pesticides in Ontario. It is the intention to have a systematic investigation of all the persistent pesticides now being used. Action taken by the department will depend largely on the findings of these investigations and the recommendations accompanying the report.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to conclude my remarks by saying something about the whole matter of mental health.

Ontario has long been recognized as a leader in mental health services. Having met with our people and seen them at work, I can understand why. Since I became Minister of Health, I have had an opportunity to visit several of our mental hospitals and training centres for the retarded. I say, Mr. Chairman, I intend to visit all these facilities within the space of the next several months.

Mr. Shulman: I am glad somebody can get in.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Talking with our staff in the hospitals and in the central offices, I am becoming more familiar with this very large and important programme.

We are very fortunate to have such an advanced programme, and a staff of dedicated people who are trying very hard to provide the best possible care, treatment and training for our mentally ill and retarded. And I say this very sincerely, Mr. Chairman, having met most of these people, they deserve every support and encouragement we in this House can give them.

Mr. M. Makurchuk (Brantford): Try it with the dollars and cents!

Hon. Mr. Wells: Even with these advantages, we must do more to raise the level of care that is provided for those who are mentally sick and disabled. Considerable work needs to be done in our older hospitals to turn them into more modern treatment centres.

We do need more staff, particularly the more highly trained and skilled professional people, to achieve a level of care that will provide the best results in the shortest period of time. We do not have enough beds to care for all of the retarded who would benefit from placement in a residential training centre.

The resident population of some of our facilities for the retarded, particularly the two largest at Smiths Falls and Orillia, should be reduced so that more space would be available for training activities. We also need more staff in our facilities for the retarded to help these children to reach their maximum potential.

Closer working relationships are being developed with public health and other agencies, but more could be done, needs to be done, and will be done, to prevent mental disorders.

For too long our attention has been focused on the provision of beds. Many years ago when a safe and comfortable haven was all that could be offered to these unfortunate people, this was appropriate. With the knowledge and skill now available to us, there are increasing opportunities for prevention; diagnostic and treatment services can now be provided without the necessity of the individual leaving his home or community, often without leaving his job.

With fewer people having to enter hospital to obtain the treatment they require, and the length of hospital stay becoming shorter and shorter, rehabilitation takes on a new meaning for those who require extended care.

I can assure the Legislature that as Minister of Health I propose to give particular attention to the further development of the programmes in this province for the mentally ill, the retarded and for emotionally disturbed children, and I would like to mention some of the highlights of the progress that we have made in the last few years.

The reorganization of the central offices in 1966 has greatly strengthened the overall administration of the programme, and added new resources for giving leadership and guidance to those in the field who are endeavouring to meet the changing needs and priorities for services. This reorganization programme has been extended out into the provincial hospitals and facilities for the retarded where a new organizational pattern has been established which makes provision for a functional grouping of activities and services into departments.

It is our intention to place a university-qualified and experienced hospital administrator in charge of the overall administration and management of all our facilities, and to place the responsibility for all clinical services in the hands of a senior psychiatrist or physician as the medical director, or director of treatment and training.

During the past two years, 11 administrators have been appointed, and the remaining appointments will be made as quickly as well-qualified administrators can be recruited to the programme.

We have also designed and introduced a new cost accounting system in all of the provincial facilities. The new accounting system reinforced the new departmental organization, and provides a basis for comparison of cost data within our facilities, and with other hospitals or similar operations.

We are now in a position to develop indices and standards of performance which will help use to raise the standards of care throughout the system, and lead to improved efficiency and increased effectiveness in the delivery of mental health services.

In keeping with these changes, a number of new senior positions have been established within the various departments of the hospitals and hospital schools which are being filled by staff with the required training and experience. At the same time, an extensive programme of in-service training has been undertaken with special courses being arranged where indicated to assist the staff in upgrading their skills.

Now let me talk for a minute about the children's programme. This province was the first to formulate an overall programme to co-ordinate the services for children and adolescents suffering from mental and emotional disorders. A new administrative branch has been established within the mental health division to be responsible for the further development, planning and administration of the government programme for children.

Headed by a child psychiatrist with many years of experience in the clinical and academic fields, with a professional staff of programme co-ordinator and inspectors, this branch will also provide technical advice and guidance to all agencies serving emotionally disturbed children and adolescents.

The children's services branch will co-ordinate the services provided by all agencies and special units for children and adolescents coming under the jurisdiction of The Department of Health, and maintain close liaison with the other departments and programmes provided by the government for these children.

Regional centres are under development at eight locations in this province, as indicated in the White Paper, and special units with programmes and staffing particularly designed for the needs of children and adolescents have been established in six regional psychiatric hospitals.

Nine agencies operating under a local board, which provide special services for emotionally disturbed children, have been brought under the jurisdiction of this new department so that they can be identified with the government programme and receive financial assistance in maintaining their services.

Closer liaison has been developed with public health nurses, school authorities and children's aid societies in the identification and treatment of children in need of assistance. Increasing emphasis is being placed on treatment of the child in his own home and community wherever possible, using residential units only where there is specific reason to remove the child from his natural environment, and for as short an interval as possible.

I am pleased to be able to tell the House that Dr. Naomi I. Rae-Grant has been appointed director of our new children's services branch, and also Mr. Douglas Finlay has been appointed co-ordinator of this programme.

As I said, this branch was established within our mental health division to provide leadership and direction in the further development of the provincial programme for children suffering from mental and emotional disorders.

Dr. Rae-Grant and her staff will be responsible for the planning, development and co-ordination of all special facilities and programmes for emotionally disturbed children and adolescents.

Prior to her appointment as director of the children's services branch, Dr. Rae-Grant held a number of senior clinical and consulting appointments in Baltimore, Maryland, and was a member of the teaching faculty of the University of Maryland, Johns Hopkins University, and Coppin College.

Dr. Rae-Grant has also contributed generously to the literature in the field of child psychiatry, and has been particularly interested in the development of community programmes which emphasize the prevention of emotional disorders among children and adolescents.

Dr. Douglas Finlay is returning to this province, his native province, to co-ordinate the programme in this division. A University of Toronto graduate, he studied social work at the University of British Columbia. Mr. Finlay is well known and respected in his field by reason of his extensive experience in the development and operation of programmes on behalf of emotionally disturbed children, both in Canada and the United States.

In 1961, he was sent to Thailand by the United Nations as an advisor in child and family welfare. Prior to this present appointment to our department, he was director of a residential treatment centre for emotionally disturbed children in British Columbia.

Over the past few years a new organizational pattern has been introduced in our facilities for the retarded to divide the larger hospital schools into smaller units, each to specialize in the training of children and adults according to the degree of their disability.

The progressive activity units provide a total training programme of purposeful activities directed toward increasing the child's ability to care for himself, and to the development of social skills. These units are designed for those who are unable to participate in more structured programmes because of the degree and complexity of their handicap.

The educational units provide a complementary and stimulating residential training programme for progressive emotional and social growth for the educable retarded. The adult training and rehabilitation units are designed to provide training programmes geared to different levels of retardation which will assist in the rehabilitation of the retardates who are able to return to the community, or do productive work in the sheltered setting of the institution.

In addition to these three activity units, a hospital unit is maintained to provide out-patient and inpatient diagnostic and assessment services, as well as medical care and nursing services for the institution.

An entirely new training course has been developed to teach the particular knowledge and skills required by the mental retardation counsellors identified with each of the units. The educational programmes, under the direction and supervision of The Department of Education, have been expanded, and special classes are provided for those with particular disabilities, such as impaired vision, or hearing.

Additional beds have been provided for the severely disabled and the multiple-handicapped child, and an extensive programme has been developed in collaboration with the public health agencies throughout the province to give assistance to the management and training of the retarded in the community, and to assess the degree of urgency when there is a need for residential placement.

In summary, Mr. Chairman, these are but a few of the highlights of the changes which have been introduced, and the advances which have been made in our mental health programme during the past few years.

We must do more to bring to the mentally ill and the retarded the advantages of the most effective methods of prevention, diagnosis, treatment and rehabilitation which are available, and to provide a standard of care that is comparable to that which we consider essential in the care and treatment of other forms of illness and disability.

And to these ends, we are working.

Mr. Chairman, the other major sections of our votes deal with the Ontario health services insurance department, and the Ontario hospital services commission. Rather than talk about those at this time, I will reserve my prerogative to talk about these two major aspects of our department's programmes when these votes are arrived at.

Mr. G. Ben (Humber): Before getting into estimates that are before the House, I think I should say a few words about the Minister's predecessor as Minister of Health.

I do not know how we can characterize the previous incumbent except to say that in defense of the Hall-Winegard-McKinney Report he was prepared to utter the most incredible absurdities about fluoride poisoning ever heard in this House.

The member for Ontario will be remembered as a man who could see nothing in Dunnville but blue sky; nothing at Port Maitland but innocence; nothing in the CBC but the most appalling wrong.

Well, the next few days will prove him wrong in that as the CBC is gloriously vindicated by the Canadian Radio Television Commission for its relentless pursuit of the truth in the fluoride pollution. So will the people who made the Dunnville report.

What, I wonder, will he say then, as his critics throw in his face all the outrageous statements he made in this House about a professional colleague from Detroit—Dr. Waldbott—about Canada's prime information media, the CBC.

The member for Ontario has done a complete about-face that is total and complete in the matter of the Respirin inhalation hospital at 429 Walmer Road, Toronto. Here again, guided by a stuffy kind of mal-professionalism, he was ready to run Respirin, quite unjustly perhaps, into the ground.

Now his metamorphosis is so complete that he has associated himself with that company, and this would seem to be an opportune time to congratulate him for having seen the light. I understand that the company may shortly be going public and perhaps the member for High Park and I could buy shares and we will finally get our opportunity to question the hon. member for Ontario after all.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: We may be allowed to inspect the premises.

Mr. Ben: That is right, we might be able to get into the premises.

His successor cannot make these same professional gaffs since he is not possessed of a medical degree. He has to be content with service on a periphery of the profession.

In the current, fashionable terminology, I suppose I might refer to him as a para-Minister, the night orderly who was called in to do the jobs the doctor could not stomach. And what a night it was for the Robarts government, faced with what they called Machiavelian fraud, yet greed enough to envy the Maritimes their equalization payments.

This richest of all the provinces was torn between aloofness and the sensation of jaws dripping with greed for the $176 million that was passing Ontario by. And so we got this incredible compromise, Medicare, that is neither fish nor fowl nor good red herring. If I may be permitted or forgiven for a mixed metaphor, we are paying Cadillac prices for Volkswagen services.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): You voted for it.

Mr. Ben: Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Gisborn: You are never going to—

Mr. Ben: I intend to resist an overwhelming desire—

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): We will never convince you because you are not interested in the facts.

Mr. Ben: To be partisan in the matter of Medicare, which is obviously the one topic that is on the minds of all of us today even though we may have prepared detailed material on all the other aspects of this portfolio, as indeed I and my colleagues have. In fact, the circumstances that the health estimates have come so late in the session has given us the opportunity to pin the new Minister down in a way that might not have been possible had this debate come up immediately he assumed his portfolio.

However, his assumption of office was so flamboyant, so characteristically an advertising man's approach to the job, that he made the mistake of committing himself to policies and making promises I am sure he has already lived to regret. It was important—really of note—that he made no mention in his main speech to this problem nor the statements he made to the Conservatives and others down at the King Edward Hotel.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I told you I would speak later on it.

Mr. Ben: He always says later on in the fullness of time. The Minister returns from Ottawa to face this House, fully aware of how the costs of health care have risen. The report which the federal-provincial conference considered shows a steady rise of more than ten per cent annually in health care costs, and of 14 per cent annually in hospital service costs.

The report states that the cost of health services has risen so rapidly in Canada in recent years that three alternatives are now imminent. The standards of health care now available can be reduced. This is obviously an unacceptable recommendation. The people have come to expect a certain level of service and they are not going to forget it.

The second alternative is that taxes, premiums or deterrent fees can be raised even higher than they are at present. And the third possibility proposed in the report is that ways must be found to restrain the growth of cost increases through better operation of the health service structure now in existence. Serious consideration must be given to a future major revamping of the entire system.

Hon. Mr. Wells: We have already done that.

Mr. Ben: The report notes also that the overall quality of Canada's health system is among the highest in the world through a combination of individual dedication, public desire and government action. I am glad that we have this progress report to mull over during the coming months. It is a vast project.

The three-volume report covers nearly 1,000 printed pages and covers areas of health services never before surveyed in Canada. As the federal Minister of Health, Mr. Munro, has pointed out, this document will now require important decisions by governments and by the health professions, and we can expect that the next occasion on which the Minister brings his estimates before this House will find us all fully versed in the complexities of this task force report.

For the record, it might be useful to bear in mind the seven areas of inquiry, each with its own task force. These were: four areas of hospital service—namely utilization, operational efficiency, salaries and wages, beds and facilities—and three areas of health service—namely, methods of delivery of medical care, price of medical care and the cost of public health services. The members of the seven task forces were, of course, leaders in the health professions chosen from universities, hospitals, professional associations and government.

The recommendations of this report are submitted under 16 headings, which I will note now for the record, and then as we come to the appropriate points in these estimates, we can correlate our observations to some degree with what is in the report. The headings are: co-ordinated government planning; regionalization; utilization; planning hospital facilities; teaching facilities; operational efficiency; financial incentives and analysis; manpower utilization; patient care classification; standards of patient care; ambulatory services; home care; health care administration; fee schedules; mass screenings, education.

I appreciate the Minister was unable to release this report before the conclusion of the Health Minister's conference but I do think that, once the restriction on its distribution was lifted with the conclusion of that conference, he could have made a special effort last night to make sure that copies were in our possession overnight in order that we might better correlate our comments for this debate with those under the headings I have enumerated. I would however, like to mention one fact about this report.

Hon. Mr. Wells: We sent them to you today.

Mr. Ben: You did indeed send it to me today. I trust that you did, otherwise I would not have it in my hand. Now the most startling thing about this report is, how many—

Mr. Shulman: He did not send me one.

Mr. Ben:—findings or recommendations in this report are merely repetition of matters that the Opposition has continuously brought before this House and asked the Minister either to implement or adopt. Item after item, I have found myself simply reading what either I or some other member of this House had tried to convince the Minister or his successor was required by way of implementation.

We kept on trying to convince this government that utilization of active treatment beds was often costly and unnecessary and that less sophisticated surroundings and less costly surroundings would, in many cases, be just as adequate. And it was not heeded. We tried to point out that hospital administrators did not have enough power to implement a lot of the recommendations because they were ruled by the medical profession in the hospitals; that was not heeded.

We pointed out that doctors too often did not take into account the economic consequences of their decisions and they left patients in active treatment beds when, in fact, all the patient had to do was have a rest in a rest-home or a nursing home or in a convalescent hospital. Again, this government refused to take action to enforce an edict which would leave active treatment beds for active treatment patients.

We suggested that there should be a system whereby convalescent hospitals and chronic hospitals be constructed in relation to active treatment hospitals and that was disregarded. Another topic that we mentioned here quite frequently was the overuse of drugs. I recall using the phrase that one of the problems we face today apart from water pollution, air pollution, and noise pollution was drug pollution, and that we are polluting ourselves with drugs, almost indiscriminately. This is another recommendation that was drawn up.

Medical fee schedules should be drawn up against the backlog of more information which is now available; that was something that the leader of the Opposition brought to the attention of this House.

Some of the nursing services are misused, both through maintaining the staff constantly at peak load levels, and through using graduate nurses for tasks not requiring their education and skills. This is something that was brought to the attention of this Minister's predecessor.

We kept asking why graduate nurses, registered nurses, should have to empty bed-pans or make beds. This is one of the points that this commission dwells on. It talks about savings that can be made by group purchase of many items from drugs to linen; items should be standardized. Again, this was brought to the attention of this House.

As a matter of fact, I recall the member for Grey-Bruce arguing that you ought to have central purchasing. This particular report states that one group of hospitals was found to be using 16 types of bed sheets. I am just mentioning these because I have the letter "K" marked beside all of these items indicating that this was already known to this government and was brought to its attention by the members of the Opposition parties.

New health centres, insurance plans, the loads on doctors and the like, all these things. I would venture to say that 75 per cent, at least, of the recommendations that I have read in the short time that has been available to me since this report was placed in our hands, are recommendations that we brought to the attention of this government. We asked this government to implement them and we asked them unsuccessfully.

The attitude of this government is that as it comes from the Opposition party as a suggestion or a recommendation though sensible, should not be implemented, it might prove embarrassing to you. I think that you ought to consider the welfare of the people of the province and not your own particular political welfare.

Mr. Chairman, Ontario is now a partner in Canada's federal Medicare scheme, and I feel the Liberals can take credit for forcing the hand of the Robarts government in this regard. Intent on protecting private interest and privilege, Ontario was content to waive its right to share in the national Medicare fund, which was accumulated from its two per cent social development tax which we all pay as Canadians, if we pay taxes at all.

Finally, however, even the Conservatives realized that Ontario could not forego the moneys which were the rights of Ontarians to share. People realized that they were paying for a medical coverage twice over—through private contributions to insurance companies or co-operatives, like Physician's Services Incorporated, Associated Medical Services or the Ontario Medical Services Insurance Plan—and again through social development tax.

Ontario, therefore, put together a Medicare scheme which Ottawa agreed to accept as qualifying for federal funds. We supported that scheme in principle, because Liberals are in favour of the principle of Medicare. So let us have an end to purposeful distortions of the reason for that action.

However, we reserved the right, and subsequently exercised that right in the committee stage of the debate, to point up the shortcomings of the government scheme. Then we produced our own and better proposal. All three parties now have a Medicare scheme. The government's, of course, is operational. When we come to office in 1971, we will substitute our fairer scheme, the most equitable of the three.

Please note, that we do not say our scheme is the best. Simply that it is the fairest. We are more modest than the NDP, because we are responsible. We know what government is capable of doing, what it is possible to accomplish without punching Ontario to utter bankruptcy. We also know that possibilities are open to the people of Ontario if only we can stop the cream being syphoned off to the London establishment.

Mr. J. Renwick (Riverdale): You have a myopic view of how government works in a democracy.

Mr. Ben: I often think that Ontario borrows money from Germany only so that in the end individuals can get rich at the expense of the common people and salt it all away in Switzerland in numbered accounts, which cannot be traced. How else can this Tory government explain to the people its reluctance to abandon the insurance company of London?

Medicare can no longer be regarded as the gateway to socialism. As the task force report demonstrates beyond a shadow of doubt, prudent people who believe in free enterprise and have saved all their lives can no longer afford the costs of medical care in the absence of such a scheme. Medicare is simple social justice, and since all three parties have adopted a Medicare proposal, there are no longer any political overtones in the principle of such coverage.

There are, however, important differences in the fairness of the three schemes. OHSIP is a premium scheme, very regressive. People have to pay whether they can afford to or not, or go begging for partial or total relief. There is no dignity in it.

The costs of the OHSIP scheme are inflated because it caters to the interests of the private insurance companies whose administration costs are not controlled. It is possible to run a Medicare scheme very cheaply if existing governmental machinery is used. We propose to use the facilities that are already there—the federal taxation offices with their giant computers, and the employers' payroll machinery—to do the job of collecting the money required for Medicare coverage, rather than have the present expensive duplication of facilities through the insurance companies. In our plan, cheques in payment of doctor fees would come from one source. We are not interested in subsidizing the entry of insurance companies into your home for the purpose of talking you into further coverage or other classes of protection. Let them build their own mailing lists—and at their own expense.

Of the NDP proposal, I would say only this. Liberals believe in fairness and equity, and "progressivity" in the sense that this has in the field of taxation. But there is obviously an optimum curve between what the country can afford to do, and the legitimate demands of the disadvantaged.

There would come a point in any scheme of "super progressivity" where the incentive to help oneself, either individually or corporately, would diminish to the point where the wheels would begin to slow down. Liberals and socialists are in fundamental disagreement as to the location of this curve on the scale of social values, and that is the reason for the difference between the NDP and the Liberal Medicare plans.

The Liberal plan would not shake society to its roots, whereas the NDP plan is built on the formula that society must be radicalized. It cannot be denied that other incentives would be necessary to maintain productivity and effort if the "disincentive" effective of the NDP plan, coupled with other socialistic proposals, were given full weight in the ongoing Ontario climate of activity and enterprise.

It only needs the flight of capital, perhaps on the level now being experienced in Quebec, to make nonsense of a Medicare plan laid out on lines of "super progressivity". The Liberal plan was deliberately designed to strike the balance between the two factors of reasonable incentive and social justice, and we feel that we have succeeded very well in achieving this.

A comparison of the Liberal plan and the OHSIP plan will make this clear—and I would ask you to list them while I give the particular figures that distinguish the two plans.

I will take it firstly in relationship to a family man with two children, that would be the caption for one set of figures; a married couple would be the caption for the second, and a single person for the third. Under the first, a family man with two children, one of three examples refers to a family man with a gross income of $12,000, a taxable income of $9,300. His contribution to the cost of Medicare under our proposed method and the present method is as follows: the proposed method—OHSIP premiums—nil; present method, $177.

The one per cent health insurance premium under the proposed method would be $93—there is nothing of that sort under the present method, and the federal social development tax, under the proposed method, $120, would give a $213 total of premium costs or total costs of Medicare to a family man with two children having a gross income of $12,000, against the present method cost of $297—a saving of $84.

The second set of figures deals with a family man with two children having a gross income of $7,500—taxable income of $4,800. And here the figures are as follows: again there would be no OHSIP premium—the present premium for this man is $177. Under the proposed method, the one per cent health insurance premium would be $48, the federal social development tax $96, for a total cost of $144, as against the present method's cost of $273. A family man with two children, therefore, with a gross income of $7,500, would be saving $129 on Medicare costs.

The third example is a family man with two children, having a gross income of $5,200, a taxable income of $2,500. His contributions to the cost of Medicare would be as follows: The OHSIP premium—again nil; the one per cent health insurance premium—$25, and the federal social development tax—$50 for a total of $75. The total present method cost is $227.

I should point out that the figures I have been giving for the federal social development tax are the same under the proposed method as they are under the present method. At any rate the contribution to cost of Medicare for a family man with two children having a gross income of $5,200 under the proposed method of the Liberal Party is $75, as against the present contribution of $227; again a remarkable saving.

Insofar as the married couple is concerned, taking the same incomes, the first set of figures deal with married couples with a gross income of $12,000—taxable income, $9,900. Again, under the proposed method there would be no OHSIP premiums. There is no provision for OHSIP premiums under our scheme whatsoever.

The present method costs $141.60, to which is added a federal social development tax of $120, so that the cost of the present method is $261.60.

Under the Liberal proposed method there would be a payment of a one per cent health insurance premium of $99 and a federal social development tax of $120, so that the proposed method cost would be $219 against $261.60.

For a man with a gross income of $7,500, and a taxable income of $5,400 under the proposed scheme, the total contribution to the cost of Medicare would be $162, which consists of a one per cent health insurance premium of $54, and federal social development tax of $108, as against the present method cost of $249.60, made up of OHSIP premiums of $141.60 and federal social development tax of $108.00.

For the man with a gross income of $5,200, and a taxable income of $3,100, the present method costs him $203, made up of $141.60 premium and $62.00 federal social development tax, whereas the proposed method would cost him $93, a saving of $110, the proposed method cost being made up of $31 as the health insurance premium and $62.00 for the federal social development tax—fantastic savings right down the line.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, would the hon. member be able to send over a copy of these figures?

Mr. Ben: Surely.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Not right away.

Mr. Ben: Oh thank you. Then the final figures, Mr. Chairman, deal with the single person—again, same incomes.

The person having a gross income of $12,000 and a taxable income of $10,900. Under the present method his contribution of cost to Medicare is $190.80. Under our proposed method his cost would be $229 which would consist of the one per cent health insurance premium of $109 and the federal social development tax of $120. The present method costs him $190.80, as I have pointed out, so the cost would be greater there.

A person whose gross income is only $7,500 and taxable income of $6,400, would be paying $184 into the proposed method as against $190.80 under the present method. Under the present method, cost is made up of $70.80 premium, and $120 federal social development tax. Under the proposed method $64 would come from the health insurance premium and $120 from the social development tax.

A person having a gross income of $5,200, and a taxable income of $4,100, his contribution to cost of Medicare under the present method is $152.80, of which $70.80 is premium and $82 federal social development tax, as against the proposed contribution of $123 made up of $41 health insurance premium and $82 federal social development tax.

Now there, Mr. Chairman, is what we call equity. Unless and until the extra billing feature is eliminated from the government plan, Ontario residents will have to pay an extra $10 million a year to the doctors, often in the form of cash on the barrelhead for that invidious ten per cent. I had hoped that moments before I arose, the Minister would have eliminated this injustice, and since he has not I call upon him to make that declaration some time during these estimates.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Which injustice is that?

Mr. Ben: The ten per cent deterrent fee that you have imposed on the people of the province of Ontario for medical services.

Hon. Mr. Wells: You mean pay doctors 100 per cent; is that what you mean?

Mr. Ben: Liberals believe that doctors should get a fair fee, but that they should not get the rates unilaterally and without adequate consultation. We believe that the standing committee on health should have the power and the obligation to meet with officials of the Ontario Medical Association before any further changes are made in the fee schedule.

Obviously the schedule must be revised upward from time to time, and the integrity of the profession must be preserved, but the accountability of this Legislature is to the public and we have to examine all expenditures of public money to see that waste does not occur.

I think that must be said even in today's sensitive atmosphere so far as this Legislature is concerned. A professional is either qualified to serve in his field or he is not, and if he is qualified to serve he should be paid the rate for the job.

The Liberal plan will eliminate the present flat rate of $177 a year for a family. Our programme will be financed through a one per cent tax on personal income and .8 per cent tax based on a company's total payroll, plus the federal contribution of $176 million.

Deducting the company's payments from their total payrolls would eliminate the cost of expensive bookkeeping now involved by having each company making separate payments for each employee. The federal government put a ceiling of $120 on the two per cent social development tax they collect from all taxpayers to finance their contribution to the national Medicare scheme.

Provincial Liberals disagree with the federal government's position, and we point out that Mr. Benson's decision has limited the contributions of 150,000 Ontario taxpayers who normally would pay more than $120. With our proposal there would be no ceiling.

Federal Medicare was intended to provide the cheapest possible medical care insurance coverage for the people of Canada. Premier Robarts clearly broke with the spirit of the programme when he decided to leave premiums at their high level. Even in this day of inflation, $177 is far too much for a family.

A person with two children making $5,000 a year pays $177 of that for OHSIP, while his boss, who makes $25,000 a year, pays the same. The employee pays nearly a month's take-home pay. It costs the boss a week's salary. I feel this is an inequitable way of financing Medicare.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Correctional Services): I know, but Benson said he could live on $32 a week.

Mr. Ben: Well, unfortunately he carries so much weight around that he has got enough to sustain him, aside from the $32, but the people of this province have been left so skinny that they just cannot get on with the $32.

The present plan hits hardest at those least able to pay, the old, those on fixed incomes, pensioners, those with incomes just above arbitrary assistance margins, who often have heavy family responsibilities. A parital reduction in premiums cannot erase the inequity of the system.

Let me make this point clear regarding Medicare. The Liberal plan does not provide "free" Medicare. There is no such animal.

Our proposal is a workable and more equitable alternative to the present plan, and it is progressive to the point where a balance is achieved between social justice and individual incentives. It fits in well with the federal White Paper proposals which are likely to be implemented in the near future.

This is more than can be said for the NDP plan which, taken together with the Benson proposals, produces an impossible steep curve, the disincentive curve that we fear would change the whole climate of enterprise in Ontario.

Ours is just the fine balance, the art of the possible captured and set out for all to read.

The Liberal plan requires employers to continue to pay their share towards employee medical care as part of their union contract. We are not out to undercut any fringe benefits that may have been won the hard way through collective bargaining over the years.

Employer contributions would account for 56 per cent of the financing of our plan, and the remaining 44 per cent, excluding the federal contribution of course, would come from the personal income tax deductions which the employer would take off each pay cheque, roughly in 26 equal small amounts so that the government would have the use of the money, and the interest on that would help further lower the rate of tax to the figures we have quoted.

Liberals believe that the integration of the health care and hospitalization schemes should be the next step in a planned progression. As a matter of fact, we believe that the initials OHSC should stand, not for Ontario Hospital Services Commission, but Ontario Health Services Commission, and it should supply all the health services that are required by the people of Ontario under that one umbrella.

Frankly, we think that the NDP proposal bites off more than Ontario can chew in one mouthful. It is a matter of practical politics rather than principle that guides us here. We certainly have no objection in principle to hospitalization being integrated with health care, and it is difficult to see how anybody could have such an objection.

But politics is the art of the possible, and since we believe we have to present a responsible alternative, and a credible one, we do not advocate the impossible. The NDP know that they would have to backtrack from their proposals somewhat, or at least stretch it out in time, but we have no such fears. We know that Ontario can afford what Liberals propose.

This, then, is the difference between our plan and the NDP plan.

Mr. Makarchuk: Ours was good enough for the people in Middlesex South.

Mr. Ben: The question of credibility must always be raised, and I hope that this will happen in the union halls across Ontario where the pressure for the total package is said to have arisen. Let us take this one step at a time and let us do each step properly, fairly and equitably, and we will be worthy of greater respect from the people of Ontario than those who would irresponsibly reach for the moon. Let us leave that to NASA.

The strength of Liberal Medicare arises from it being closely tied to a rapidly growing tax base. This means that the increasing sums needed for health costs, so graphically detailed in the report made available today, would come from the dynamic ability of the province to continue to grow. It would no longer be necessary to maintain a surplus to control premiums as the present government is forced to do. We would eliminate that $18 million stabilization fund and put the money to work.

The Liberal plan is a 100 per cent plan in more ways than one. It will pay the doctors 100 per cent of an equitable fee schedule that was under constant surveillance and review. It would pay the people's medical bills without worry and take the fear out of suffering and remove the fear that financial worry aggravates. They would have 100 per cent peace of mind. And, of course, when we could do it, we would bring in chiropractic and drugs. We recognize the desirability of this step. We are, however, once more, being prudent and not leaping into this just for the plaudits or the publicity. That, we feel, is the height of irresponsibility. Liberals have a Medicare plan to be proud of, the best of the three, and the one most closely related to the reality of today's climate and economic situation. I wish I could say the same for the others. But, the government is pragmatic, and the NDP is dogmatic, and I say, heaven help the people of Ontario caught between these two extremes.

Mr. Chairman, before I yield to the hon. member for High Park I would just like to make a few short comments about this report.

I was impressed in reading this report, but I could not help noting that when the Minister was discussing environmental health, he did not make any effort to redirect back into his department the subject matter of air and water pollution. Because, as he says in this report, or as he said in his opening remarks, man's health is directly influenced by his environment; the air he breathes, the water he drinks and the food he eats all have influence on his state of wellbeing. Why then, I naturally ask, did this government remove from the control of this department the subject matter of pollution, air pollution?

Why are not air pollution, water pollution, sound pollution all under this particular department? Furthermore, he gave no credit at all to Pollution Probe. The experts on his pesticide control board would not have acted, particularly in view of the involvement of Cyanamid, that is the name of the company, and other industry people on the board, unless the youth of the University of Toronto had not shown selfish idealism, untrammelled by having a financial stake in the outcome. They will be the same with phosphates and detergents. Diazonon would not have been investigated without citizen action first. Do not take the departmental credit for the credit that is due to the people of Ontario. Please do not knock participatory democracy.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Learn all the facts first.

Mr. Ben: They showed you the facts. You would not even have opened the book if they had not brought it to you.

Hon. Mr. Wells: You are wrong.

Mr. Ben: That is not wrong, that is the absolute truth.

I will have other points to raise, and other comments to make with reference to this report as we go over it from item to item, but I just thought I would mention that one point as far as pesticide is concerned because I do not think that any assistance body deserves more credit than does Pollution Probe and the efforts it expended and the success it had in bringing to the attention of the people of Ontario how serious was the pollution problem from these insecticides such as aldrin, dieldrin and heptachlor that the Minister mentioned, and DDT. So I think I will leave my opening remarks on that note.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for High Park.

Mr. Shulman: Thank you Mr. Chairman. I rise to speak in this estimate with some diffidence as this, without doubt, is the most important estimate the House will consider this year or any other year and that is, of course, the health of our people.

Undoubtedly, the major issue in the mind of the people of this province is that of OHSIP, its failures, and its costs, but I am not going to speak at any length on that subject because I think that all three parties have made their position very, very clear.

The government has brought forth a plan which I am sure they realize now, has bitterly disappointed the people of this province—

Mr. MacDonald: Including the Tories.

Mr. Shulman: Including your own backbenchers. The Liberals have offered an alternative, and we have offered another alternative which, I believe in all humbleness, is the proper answer. I think that if the government does not repent and does not realize it has made a mistake and does not bring in the alternative which we have suggested, they will pay the penalty for it, come election day in 1971. But, we have all presented our plans, there is no use my sending figures across setting them out again, because they are all available to anyone who wishes them, they have been in the press and I will leave it at that. I am sure the people will decide which is the best one.

What I want to talk about today, tonight, are other shortcomings in this department which perhaps have not been as well publicized. Last night, there came to my home, the president of the Associated Nursing Homes of Ontario and he phoned and asked if he could come over and he said,

I want to see you in desperation. We, the Associated Nursing Homes of Ontario have been trying for two months to get an appointment with the present Minister of Health. We have not been able to get an appointment. Will you see us so you can present our problems to him across the floor since he will not see us in person?

Dr. Wong, and his associates came to my home last night, and they presented a great deal of material to me, a little of which I would like to tell you about now, and basically, the problem is a lack of communication.

I am sure the Minister is unaware, I hope he is unaware, because if he is aware, I cry for him. I hope he is unaware of what is happening lower in his department because it is so bad and it goes right across the province.

There is an article in today's Ottawa Citizen which was sent in to me, and this sums up so very well the nursing home problem which the executive of the associated nursing homes came to see me about last night. I would like to read just a couple of paragraphs from this article. It is datelined Carleton Place, and I think it is rather significant that so often when I have to rise in this House it is about the problems down in eastern Ontario because there is no one in this House to speak for those people and that is basically the problem.

Two years and $16,000 after its opening, Stone Haven nursing home here has been shut down. Despite repairs, improvements, modernization and praise from local doctors, who believed their patients at Stone Haven were receiving excellent care, by mid-month all patients had been sent elsewhere and the doors closed at the solid stone home.

In December, 1968 the health unit board met with the administrators and some of the executives of the nursing home in the Leeds, Grenville and Lanark area, to see if we could clarify the situation. Nine nursing homes were represented. Dr. John Long of Toronto, an executive director of the associated nursing homes incorporated in Ontario was at that meeting. Mr. Folkes was very vocal at that meeting.

I interject, Mr. Folkes is the owner of Stone Haven.

He protested at the manner in which inspectors made constant demands on the owner, some of them impossible to meet. In view of what has happened this month, I would just wonder if he is being set up as a scapegoat. Dr. W. J. Hanham, coroner of Lanark county, said, "I have been in the nursing home several times as a coroner. I have seen nothing to indicate the home was not being run in a pleasant, efficient manner."

Dr. Donald Ferguson, who had several patients in the home said, "My patients have been receiving excellent care. I would consider it one of the best nursing homes in the area."

Dr. Wayne Barry, house physician, has been in communication with Dr. Thoms, the local head of the health unit, on several occasions. Dr. Barry said the Stone Haven nursing home had an excellent staff who strove for patient comfort and happiness. He, too, considered the home well run and with a pleasant and homey atmosphere.

Well, what is the reason for this mystery? Why has that nursing home and others, a number of others, in the area, been shut down? Why is Carleton Place suddenly short of nursing homes? Let me tell you the background of this one particular case, because it so sums up the very, very bad way in which the department is run. I am glad to see the member for Lanark is now here in the House, because the people there went to him and tried to get action and they came to me only after they were unable to do so.

Hon. G. E. Gomme (Minister of Highways): Mr. Chairman, on a point of order—about that problem—the people did not come to me.

Mr. Ben: Why not?

Mr. MacDonald: That is a very significant admission.

Mr. Shulman: Well, in that case there is something very odd, because I have a letter here from the Minister in which he acknowledges their visit. Would he like me to send a copy to him?

Mr. MacDonald: Read the letter, let us get it on the record. Why does the Minister not hear the letter first?

Hon. Mr. Gomme: To correct this statement, the owner of the nursing home came to see me. That is not what the member inferred.

Mr. Shulman: That is exactly what I inferred.

Hon. Mr. Gomme: Oh no, it is not.

Mr. Shulman: And I will tell you something else, Mr. Chairman: 500 people have signed a petition about this matter and it is being forwarded down now, because they were not able to get action through the Minister. They could not even get to see the Minister of Health. Their member could not help them.

Mr. MacDonald: The Minister's conscience is speaking loudly at this point.

Mr. Shulman: All right, what is the background? Let me just tell you the horror of this story, the true horror of it, it is not just this one nursing home. There are many cases, it shows the horrible way this department is run.

I go back to July 14, 1969, Mr. Chairman, and I have a letter here addressed to the administrator of the Stone Haven nursing home, and it is signed to by "Matthew Dymond, Minister of Health". And I quote:

This is to advise you that the provisional nursing home licence No. 860 for Stone Haven Nursing Home expires on July 31, 1969. It is proposed not to renew the licence for the following reasons—

And let me interject there, Mr. Speaker, The Nursing Homes Act, which I have here, An Act to provide for the licensing and regulations of nursing homes, was set up very nicely; there are all sorts of steps that have to be taken in order to cancel a nursing home's licence, but they never do it, they never give the owner a chance for an appeal, they just do not renew the licence when it comes up. They evade the intention of their own Act and that is what they have done here, that is what they have done in other cases we have brought up here. I continue with my quotation:

. . . the licence for the following reasons:

1. An automatic fire alarm detection system has not been completely installed.
2. A certificate of electrical inspection from the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario certifying that all electrical installations and wiring in the nursing home conformed to the Ontario electrical code has not been submitted.
3. All hot-water radiators are not provided with protective coverings.
4. A call system is not provided from each bed.
5. Individual lighting has not been provided.
6. All windows have not been provided with draft deflectors.
7. Beds overlap unprotected windows and doors.
8. Sufficient sitting-room space has not been provided on the second floor.
9. Housekeeping is not maintained at an acceptable level.

Upon receipt of this notice, you have 15 days within which to request a hearing before the nursing homes advisory committee. You may make such representations as you desire respecting your licence at this hearing and you may be represented by counsel.

Yours very truly,
Matthew Dymond.

Well, the owner of the home was a little mystified to receive this letter.

Hon. Mr. Wells: The member just said he did not have any appeal proceeding.

Mr. Shulman: Well, if the Minister will be patient, we will see what the appeal proceeding amounted to.

The owner was a little amazed to receive this letter because he had been notified somewhat earlier, a little earlier, that he should make all these changes and all had been ordered and were in the process of being done. So he hired a lawyer and he appealed. He went to the nursing home advisory committee and he won his appeal. Subsequent to the appeal, he received a letter from one "Thomas L. Wells, Minister" and I will read that, too.

Hon. Mr. Gomme: What date is that?

Mr. Shulman: The date of that is September 3, 1969.

Hon. Mr. Gomme: He still had his licence?

Mr. Shulman: Yes, he still had his licence, and listen to what happened. He had done everything. Now, let me just read the letter:

Dear Mr. Folkes:

Re: Stone Haven Nursing Home.

This is to advise you that I have had an opportunity to review the report submitted by the nursing homes advisory committee of a hearing held August 7, 1969 respecting the matter of renewal or non-renewal of the provisional licence for the above-mentioned nursing home.

I concur with the recommendations of the committee that the provisional licence be temporarily extended and am setting November 1, 1969 for this purpose providing the following conditions are met:

1. Certificates of electrical inspection for all the electrical systems in the nursing home by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, be provided the physician in charge of the chronic care section of The Department of Health by October 1st.

2. That the fire alarm system and the call system be tested and found acceptable to the appropriate specialist on the staff of The Department of Health, Province of Ontario, by October 1st.

3. That the housekeeping systems in the nursing home be revised by the owner with particular changes to be effected in the matter of bed pan service and cleaning. It is assumed this will require plumbing changes for bed pan washing. This is to be completed by October 1st, 1969, to the satisfaction of the medical officer of health.

4. That employee time records be made available to the medical officer of health or his representatives at all reasonable times. Inspections will take place at the appropriate time to see whether or not the work has been completed.

Yours sincerely,
Thomas L. Wells

He did every one of those things. No. 1: "certificates of electrical inspections and you have to have that in by October 1"—he had it in September 27. No. 2: "the fire alarm system be checked and found acceptable"—done by Mr. D. Birdsill, Ontario fire department, at the end of September. "House-keeping systems be revised"—done, immediately. And, finally, "employees' time records be made available"—and that, of course, was done the very same day.

Mr. Folkes was delighted to have won his appeal and he wrote back to the "Hon. Thomas Wells" on September 26 as follows:

Dear Mr. Wells:

I am delighted that you have decided to temporarily extend the provisional licence of my nursing home.

In reply to your letter:

1. A certificate of electrical inspection is enclosed.

2. Fire alarm and the call bell system—both have been completed and tested by the field service representative for Edwards of Canada Manufacturer. To my knowledge, the inspector of the staff of The Department of Health has not as yet made his inspection; he may come at any time.

3. Housekeeping systems with particular changes to bed pan service and cleaning by part-time maintenance man—Mr. Kenneth Baird becomes a full-time maintenance cleaning employee as of October 1st, 1969, as requested by nursing home inspector, Mrs. Shirley Lipcoe. A utility sink has now been installed in the lower level of the home in the location she requested. Also a pressure hose to facilitate bed pan cleaning has been installed in the toilet room in our bed-patient area as requested.

4. Availability of employees' time records—Enclosed are copies of the time sheets, which have always been posted several weeks in advance. The medical officer of health's representatives see these sheets each time they are in the home. In addition to this, our medical officer of health has devised another set of time sheets to be forwarded monthly. A sample is enclosed here. The Department of Health has also devised an experimental set to be done monthly, also enclosed. This was seen to create an unnecessary amount of paper work. I have completed the request of the committee and will await the confirmation of the extension of my licences.

He did everything they asked, and what was the outcome? On October 31, he got another letter from the Minister. Let me read that one:

Dear Mr. Folkes:

On September 3, 1969, I advised you that the licence for Stone Haven Nursing Home was extended to November 1, providing certain conditions were met. These conditions have not been satisfied and therefore your licence will not be renewed. When you have met the requirements of the medical officer of health, you may wish to reapply for a nursing home licence. Consideration will then be given to your application. The onus for special care patients will be transferred from your home and the welfare authorities and next of kin of your patients will be notified that your home is unlicensed. I hope that you will assist in making the transfers as smooth as possible for the patients.

That was October 31. On November 1 he closed, the patients were moved out. The 30 people who were involved were all put out to work and they are short of nursing homes in Carleton Place.

Mr. Folkes wrote the Minister of Health, Mr. Wells, again on November 8, expressing his bewilderment. I have his letter, here, saying he had done everything that had been asked and asking for an appointment to try and find out what it was that they wanted. If there was something they wanted that they had not told him about, he would do it. He had done everything they asked and they still cancelled his licence; what could he do? Could he have an appointment? There was no answer to that letter.

Hon. Mr. Wells: The hon. Minister from Lanark (Mr. Gomme) has been working on this as long ago as about a week ago.

Mr. MacDonald: That is three weeks ago.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Yes.

Mr. Shulman: As the nursing home is now closed, the patients are all dispersed and the families are all unhappy; I have letters from the family. The people of Carleton Place are so fed up they are going to vote Liberal next time.

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): Good.

Mr. Shulman: They are. I hate to say it. It is not an area where, unfortunately, we are strong and in desperation they are going to Liberals. But imagine the human harm that has been done to all the people involved while Tom Wells is spending three weeks trying to arrange an appointment. He has not given a reason for the cancellation; he has not even answered the letters.

Mr. Gisborn: When they do not get another home, they will come with us.

Mr. Shulman: I have here a letter—well, I have a number of letters—but I have here a letter from Mrs. Evelyn McGregor, receptionist to Wells, on November 24. She was one of the persons who was familiar with the nursing home and he had written about Stone Haven Nursing Home. It is a long letter but I want to read one paragraph here:

Whenever I entered my mother's room (her mother was in the home) it was spotless. The patient was quite content, clean and dry. The atmosphere was that of one happy family. A staff member was always close by in the event I wished to enquire about my mother's diet, which proved well, and also her health condition and her attitude while I was not there. The other patients were neat and clean and most times occupied by their own doing and enjoyed a short chat. I feel that actions in this case were completely unnecessary. In closing, I feel that Stone Haven Nursing Home is an excellent nursing home and I recommend sincerely that it be re-opened and in full operation as soon as possible.

Of course, she has not as yet received a reply.

I have here the paper from Carleton Place. These are good, conservative, decent human beings; what do they think of all this? On the front page of The Canadian, which is the Carleton Place paper, for Wednesday, November 19, is an article in the centre of the page which reads, 'Mayor Seeks Toronto Help For Nursing Home!'

With the closing of the Stone Haven Nursing Home on Mills Street, Mayor J. A. Julian has appealed to Toronto for more consideration:

Mr. Thomas A. Wells,
Minister of Health,
Parliament Buildings, Queen's Park

Dear Sir:

In the past two years five nursing homes have been closed in Carleton Place and area. I would like to know what alternate facilities you are providing to take care of the persons requiring nursing care in our locality. It would appear to me, although not being an expert on nursing homes or their requirements which must be met by your department, that when we think of the average daily bed rate in hospital is $42, how can private enterprises who receive from The Department of Welfare the sum of $9.50 per day, be expected to meet the requirements as laid down by the Act pertaining to nursing homes when there is such great difference in moneys received. My main concern is for the welfare of our senior citizens residing in our area who may require nursing home care, that something be done to have available these very necessary beds.

This is the problem that our local physicians and hospitals are also faced with. Anything that your department or representatives of your department can do to assist us in this matter will be very greatly appreciated.

James A. Julian, Mayor.

James A. Julian, Mayor did not receive any more explanation than anyone else. It still is a mystery as to why that nursing home has been shut down. Just look what they have done to Mr. Folkes. They said come and do all these things, spend all these thousands of dollars He did it. They said "If you do that we will extend your licence;" he did it and then they cancelled the licence. What a terrible department. You should be ashamed to sit here with that smirk on your face.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I am ashamed of you.

Mr. Shulman: You are ashamed of me? Well, Mr. Chairman—

Hon. Mr. Wells: I will give you the whole story.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Chairman, it will be nice if you would give us the whole story. It would be nice if you told the people of Carleton Place—they would like to know, too—instead of just shutting the nursing home down with no reason given. Mr. Chairman, let me just remind you, I know that you are aware of who should be ashamed in this House. I know you to be a compassionate, kind man. And I know very well if you were the Minister what the situation would be.

Let me say this to you. We have gone through this once before, Mr. Chairman, with another nursing home and the government then made a number of claims of horrible things that were happening in that nursing home. They said we will prove it, we will lay charges against them. The charges were thrown out of court and when those charges were thrown out of court, they did not have the grace even then to apologize or to try and make up the damage they had done.

Yes, I am ashamed. I am ashamed to be a member of this House while you sit here in this House.

Hon. Mr. Wells: And I am ashamed while you are here.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Chairman, that sums up the difference between the two of us and I believe in justice for these people. I believe that you must do something; you must give an explanation. I do not believe in telling a man you must spend thousands of dollars and after he has done everything, you say, "You are out business!" That is what you do.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Your form of justice is very strange.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Gisbom: The Minister is pretty defenceless right now.

Mr. E. W. Sopha (Sudbury): I hope Hansard is picking up those comments.

Mr. Shulman: I would be glad to yield to the Minister if he wishes to make any comment on the case.

An hon. member: He is at a loss for words.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Chairman, I would like to turn now to another matter. In the preliminary remarks which were made by the Minister of Health, on the introduction of the estimates, he painted a beautiful picture in 35 pages. There is only one thing wrong with it. Like so much else in this department, on paper it looks great but in practice it just does not happen. I am not just going to tell you today, I am also going to show you.

This is the fourth department for which I have had the honour to lead off the estimates debate for my party. I feel, as the representative for this party, it is my responsibility—

Mr. J. W. Snow (Halton East): You will soon be the leader.

Mr. Shulman: I may soon be the House leader. It is my responsibility to do a careful examination of the various departmental estimates—

Mr. MacDonald: That melts your snow.

Mr. Shulman: —to make suggestions to improve the working of the department.

Let me say this, my views of politics and politicians are a little different, perhaps, from the Minister of Health's. I think that the critic in health should be making his suggestions not for political gain but primarily to assist the running of the department.

I am sure the member for Humber will agree with me on this. This should be our function. The things that we argue in public should be matters such as he brought up before OHSIP, the way premiums are raised. We should not have to do this type of thing in the House. What I have done now and what I am about to do is because we cannot get through to this department. In order to do a proper examination of the department—

Hon. Mr. Wells: That is not true. You cannot prove that.

Mr. Shulman: I am about to—

Mr. Snow: You have not proven anything yet.

Mr. Shulman: It is not proper. It is not possible for the member for Humber or myself or any of the other members in this House who are interested in health to do a proper job in any department if we cannot get the facts. The Minister of Health, the present Minister of Health, and his predecessor have issued instructions that members of this House may no longer visit their institutions except on pre-arranged conducted tours.

Hon. Mr. Wells: That is not true.

Mr. Shulman: That is true and I have it in writing from you and from your predecessor. I have been thrown out of three institutions and so has the member for Lakeshore. We can take anyone else with us and we still cannot get in. Everyone in this House is aware of why members are allowed to visit the mental institutions only on these pre-arranged, white-washed tours. It is because of the glaring inadequacies which were exposed when, together with the member for Lakeshore, I toured a number of the mental institutions discovering inadequacies, neglect, abuse, inter-patient violence, understaffing and low patient morale.

The department has two courses available; they could have tried to improve conditions or they could have tried to hide conditions. We know what course they took. In the other three departments which I have had the duty to criticize, although the Ministers have many inadequacies, at least the facts were available so that this House and the public were aware of the situations and could make recommendations to improve them.

The Department of Health has placed a medical curtain around its institutions. It is afraid to let the public see because it would recoil at the sight. The government's activities in this field have gone so far as to completely ban from showing anywhere in this province the documentary film, "Titicut Follies", which was made in a Massachusetts' mental institution and which indicates the hopeless conditions which prevail, many of them duplicated in this Minister's institutions.

The government has so little sense of responsibility that when one of the staff at the Smiths Falls Hospital for the Retarded supplied me with samples of the shoddy clothing given to the patients, instead of inquiring why the clothing was so bad, they called in the Ontario Provincial Police to try to find the name of the public-spirited staff member so that he could be fired.

I pledge to the people of Ontario, through you, Mr. Chairman, that after the next election one of the first areas that will receive our attention and our help will be that of The Department of Health. It needs it so very badly.

Because it is no longer possible to enter the institutions themselves, what I will say this afternoon is largely the result of information from patients and staff and liberal borrowings from material prepared by the President's Committee on Mental Retardation in Washington. This group, formed six years ago, has done outstanding work in the field of mental retardation. What a pity that this government has no such imagination.

To give you an idea of conditions in Ontario mental institutions, I had these pictures taken in the Ontario Hospital at 999 Queen Street last week by one of my informants. This is ward 4A of the Ontario Hospital at 999 Queen Street last Thursday. There are 55 men in this ward. This is not a ward for chronic patients; this is a ward for new patients who hope to get out fairly quickly. There are 11 beds in this room, if we can call them beds.

This is what the patient first sees; this is taken from one bed, there are at least four down this side also, and then beds at either end. Is it a prison? Is it a barrack? Is this where you would want to put a mentally ill person? What do you think would be the effect on someone who was mentally ill or perhaps a little mentally ill, going in and living in that?

Mr. Sopha: That is like the hospital Florence Nightingale started.

Mr. Shulman: It is indeed; it is exactly like the hospital Florence Nightingale started. But this is not a hospital for general, physically ill patients. This is a hospital for mentally ill patients. If you have an old building—and you have and you cannot do much about it—at least you could put in some amenities. Is there any reason you cannot put partitions in and put in patients, two or three or one in a room?

Do you have to stuff them in like sardines in these awful, 100-year-old beds with mattresses so thin you can feel the spring beneath? What dignity do those patients have? There are four toilets for 55 patients; no doors on those toilets. This is a picture of the toilets in that ward. They are lined up in a row, no doors. The doors were taken off years ago and they have never been replaced. This is the dignity we give these people who are supposedly mentally ill.

Everything in the hospital is so old, it could be sold actually in some of our rural areas in the antique sales. Try the Aberfoyle; I am sure it would pay well for the bathtub.

There are two bathtubs for 55 men. This bathtub is over 100 years old. It is on a piece of wood, the wood block under here is to hold it up. The base collapsed years ago and nothing has been done. What do those patients see when they look out the windows? They see only one thing from that ward and again, I stress, this is not a chronic ward, this is for new patients. This is what they see. I am sorry I did not have a chance to get this to the blow-up shop. It was just taken yesterday. This is what they see when they look out that window. What a sight, what a great help for the mentally ill.

And the Minister sits over there and says he is not ashamed. In fact, he says in here, he is proud of the great progress they have made and of the great progress his predecessor made in the ten years he was in there.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Did you real that whole statement?

Mr. Shulman: I read it and I listened to it and I was embarrassed for you and I was embarrassed for everyone else in this House.

Hon. Mr. Wells: You have got a closed mind.

Mr. Shulman: You have no mind, this is the problem. Go down and look. How can you go down and look at things like that and be tolerated in this House? How can you tolerate things like that?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Will you come down with me tonight?

Mr. Shulman: I will be glad to come with you tonight or any other night; at the time of your choice. I will be glad—

Mr. Makarchuk: Let us take the whole House.

Hon. Mr. Wells: All right. At 10.30 tonight, I will take you down.

Mr. Shulman: All right, at 10.30 tonight, I will be here and we will go down and I will show you those things.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Just you and I, no newspapers or anything.

Mr. Shulman: You have a date, Mr. Minister.

Mr. Ben: Will you promise to bring him back?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: One of my colleagues suggests it may not be safe for me to go there, but I will take the chance, Mr. Chairman.

Why have the facilities in this province in connection with retardation lagged so far behind those other areas in which advancement has been considerable? The facilities have been plagued by a triple problem—overcrowding, understaffing and underfinancing. To complicate matters further, the public, long accustomed to knowing little about mental retardation, often held inaccurate information. There was a mystique about the retarded involving feelings of hopelessness, repulsion and fear.

Gradually, a change in attitude has been occurring due to the efforts of private groups run by parents of the retarded. But despite their efforts, due to the little attention given them by the Conservative government, our provincial facilities for the retarded remain in their medieval state. The troubles far antedated the coming of this government; they are not to blame for the original facilities. Back in the mid-nineteenth century, there was a wave of optimism about the care of the mentally retarded.

The belief developed at that time that through educational efforts, the retarded could be helped and that most of them could be made self-sufficient citizens. When this concept, so noble in its beginnings, appeared to have failed, decision makers became committed to locating institutions away from the population centres of the province. This unfortunate decision seems to have been motivated, in part, by the conviction that mentally retarded persons were best cared for in a bucolic setting; in part by the fear that the retarded, being a scourge to society, should be removed as far from it as possible; and in part to satisfy demands to locate employment opportunities in under-developed areas in order to provide jobs and income for the surrounding communities.

For whatever reason or combination of reasons, most of the province's residential facilities for the retarded are located in out-of-the-way communities. Being so located has caused ever-increasing difficulty in obtaining qualified professional staff who frequently, like the rest of us, prefer to live in larger population centres. Similarly, the core of any institution, that is the ward or cottage personnel, have been increasingly difficult to recruit as the population has shifted from rural to metropolitan areas.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order, while the hon. member is catching his breath, I am sure the House would like to know that we have in the gallery a distinguished visitor, the hon. Sid Green, who is Minister of Health, Social Services and Northern Development from the province of Manitoba. He is in the east gallery. He came at the appropriate moment.

Mr. Shulman: I wish we had him here in Ontario.

Hon. Mr. Wells: He thinks we have some pretty good ideas.

Mr. Shulman: I would like to hear him say it. As a matter of fact, Mr. Chairman, I must say to the Minister, he has a great public relations department. If I was sitting in Manitoba or Alberta or anywhere else outside Ontario and read this book, I would think what a great province, what a great programme, what a great Minister. The truth is, what a great public relations department. He has a great public relations department; he puts out a beautiful book. It looks lovely on paper—there is only one thing wrong, it is all useless.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): And you need PR, my friend; more than any other member in this House, you need PR.

Mr. Shulman: There is so much in there that is trust. There is so much in there that is good feelings. We are going to do this, we are going to do that; I have great intentions, we are good people; we will improve; Ontario is the best. It is rather intriguing, Mr. Chairman; I am very glad that this interjection came up.

I am going to digress for a minute, if you will, it is rather interesting. The United States Department of Health, Education and Welfare sent some people up to Canada to do a survey. It is rather intriguing to compare Ontario with the rest of Canada because their survey showed, strangely enough, that the administration expenses of hospital insurance was two-thirds higher in Ontario than in all the rest of Canada. This so well sums up this department. It is 88 cents per capita in Ontario; 52 cents for the rest of Canada.

This so well sums up waste. And where do they waste it? They waste it on printing little books like this saying what a great job we are doing. They waste it in the Minister running around making great speeches on what a great job he is doing. They waste it on television advertisements, full page ads in the paper. But they do not hire the staff they need; they do not pay the living wages, and we find the money going in waste. I bet the Minister was not even aware of this study.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I was.

Mr. Shulman: Sure he was aware of this study. I would like to ask what has he done about it? Nothing.

Hon. Mr. Wells: We have got a whole task force on the health care department.

Mr. Shulman: The Minister has a task force for everything from VD to the morals of his department. The task forces go out and I do not know what they do. I presume they study and they send in the report; he does not receive it or he does not read it and nothing happens. We have had a series of task forces in this department for years.

Mr. Lewis: Look at the possibilities of a task force to analyze the Minister.

Mr. Shulman: It will keep them busy for years.

Mr. Chairman, this the problem. If, instead of sending out his task force to define problems which we already know about, to repeat studies which have been made time and time again, he could do a simple obvious thing. He has people coming in here, like Dr. Kyle who was running a VD clinic, but the Minister would not give her the drugs to cure VD.

Did he give her the drugs? No. He got up instead and he made a great speech of the great progress we are making in VD and if only reporting was done, we could cure it. Actually you could cure it if you would co-operate with your civil servants. You do not know what is going on in your own department. When someone tries to tell you, you get up in the House and say "She is not co-operative".

Hon. Mr. Wells: You are going to have a heart attack or something. Just calm down. Take a tranquilizer.

Mr. J. L. Brown (Beaches-Woodbine): That is just what you are about.

Mr. Shulman: It is quite true, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Sopha: Is there a doctor in the House?

Mr. Shulman: When we look at the estimates of this department, anyone who reads them needs a tranquilizer, Mr. Chairman. And this unfortunate giving of tranquilizers is the way that this Minister handles his problems. Instead of taking action, he passes out palliatives.

He passes out little yellow books saying everything is great. He does not do anything for the Ontario Hospital. The men are still sleeping in those God-awful beds; they are still packed in like sardines; they are still sitting in open toilets. They are not treated like human beings, and there are still riots in the wards there because they are not staffed properly. You still get violent patients from Penetang being sent to places like 999 Queen Street where they should not go. Because you are not doing your job, you are giving out tranquilizers. We expect better from the Minister of Health.

Mr. MacDonald: Somebody should get excited.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Do not get excited.

Mr. Lewis: You are the most cynical and impossible man. You really are.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Look at who is talking.

Mr. Shulman: You have had this before you for year after year. Mr. Chairman, I can understand the interjection from the various members because the attitude of this Minister and the way he handles his department is enough to make anyone's blood boil. This does not involve dollars and cents; this involves human beings—their lives and their health. And for the Minister to sit here and say "take a tranquilizer" is shameful.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I am thinking of your health.

Mr. Shulman: You should think of the health of the people of this province, since you are responsible for them. If you do something for their health, it will improve my state of well-being.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I would doubt that.

Mr. Shulman: We have other members in this Cabinet whom, I know, care. There were two or three in the House and there is one, I think, who is sitting besides you; to your right, let me make that very clear. It frightens us. It amazes us to have you come in with this attitude of "everything is okay. Take a tranquilizer." We want you to admit the problem.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order. There is nobody more concerned about people in this House than I and there is nothing in that report that says I said, "Everything is okay." I said there were lots of problems and I resent the implication that I have no feeling for these people. I certainly would not even be in politics or in this department, if I did not care about people. That is the only thing I care about—people.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Chairman, I am glad we had that interjection. I am going to read a note taken off the bulletin board in Ward 2A at the Ontario Hospital at 999 Queen Street—

Mr. A. Carruthers (Durham): His spies are working.

Mr. Shulman: —this morning at 9 o'clock. I quote:

Any patient suspected of not swallowing his medicine is to be left until last and the nurse is to devote her time individually to this patient—

And the next sentence is underlined—

He is to be subjected to the indignity of having his mouth checked with a flashlight and tongue depressor. Thank you.

The name of the supervisor is below it. And this is the attitude.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Why do you not apply for a job in that department?

Mr. Shulman: I am applying for that job. I am going to the people of Ontario when I apply for that job and I am going to continue to go around the province and apply for that job and when I sit over there and have that job I am going to clean up the mess that you have created.

Mr. MacDonald: He applied in Middlesex South and the voters accepted the application.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Chairman, I believe the Minister when he says he cares about people. I believe he is telling the truth. But what bothers me is that his care is not translated into action. He comes here and he gives us his little homilies that he cares about people as much as anyone else, but he does not do anything. We still have these horrible conditions and until he proves that the homilies he gives us are what he really means or that he intends to do something about it, we are going to look upon him with a very jaundiced eye. So let me return to the care of the retarded and the fact that the facilities are all set up in out of the way places and I will explain the reasons for that.

For whatever reasons or combination of reasons, most of the province's residential facilities for the retarded are located in out-of-the-way communities. Being so located has caused ever-increasing difficulty in obtaining qualified professional staff who frequently prefer to live in larger population centres. Similarly, the core of any institution, that is, the ward or cottage personnel, has been increasingly difficult to recruit as the population has shifted from rural to metropolitan areas.

To visit institutions, exemplary or otherwise, citizens in the past had to make a great effort, and then they often went only once. In part, this is so because of the distance involved for many, but also because they were repulsed by what they saw. Many legislators have appropriated large sums of money to support their public facilities, but have never visited a single institution for the retarded, either to see the need first hand, or to ascertain how the money was spent.

There are physicians who refer families to these residential facilities but who have never seen the facility, and do not know the professional personnel caring for the clients whom they refer.

This is an odd paradox since one cannot imagine a physician referring a patient to a hospital for an operation if he knew nothing about the place and the people involved and I confess right now that I was no different from any other doctor. I made this very same error. I was blind. I went to look at the general hospital where I referred patients but I did not go to the Ontario Hospitals and I do not really know why. Perhaps it was an aversion to this. Perhaps we all feel its aversion.

I know when I was allowed to visit the institutions for the retarded and—I always went with someone—I used to go with the member for Lakeshore and when he was busy, my assistant, Mrs. Hill, went with me—and our first visits there were frightening because of the revulsion—a revulsion tends to arise in spite of ourselves at some of the things there.

There is a disease called “clover” and I had never seen this disease before and the first time I saw a child with clover which was in Orillia, and he came tottering towards me and wanted to put his arms around me and I had to fight myself not to run. Therefore, I can understand why people do not want to go there and it is because of this that families desert these children and it is because of this that we, as members of this Legislature, have a duty to go to these places and see that the patients are being properly looked after because so many of them are deserted by families who just cannot bear the sight. I can understand this. The Minister as a first step—if he truly believes what he has said—should say to us: “I want your help. You on the other side of the House. Starting tomorrow, you may go into the institutions at any reasonable hour to look at them and see what can be done and advise us and help.”

We are not going to harm anyone by going in there. We are not going to embarrass you; we are going to help and I ask this across the floor. Let us go into your institutions. I will give you my personal pledge nothing I find there I will take to the press. I will bring it to you. Make that step and we will believe you mean what you say, but if you continue to keep the medical curtain down, we will not believe you. We do not believe you.

If the Minister will say that, it will save us a great deal of time today, but the Minister's silence speaks for itself.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I will speak when you are finished.

Mr. Shulman: All you have to do now is say, “Yes, you can go in. Yes, I accept your word; yes, let us co-operate.” But you do not say it.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I will make a statement at the end when my time comes.

Mr. Shulman: You just have to say one word and you will solve all of these problems, or many of them. You will have our help, you will not be fighting us in here, we can get down to the business of the province. We should be working together on this, not fighting each other.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I am not fighting, you are fighting.

Mr. Shulman: Because you will not understand the problem. Mr. Chairman, how can we manage with such a Minister. He does not understand we are trying to help him, we would like to help him, we would like to take this completely out of the realm of politics. We cannot do that while he puts the curtain up and says you cannot know what goes on in those institutions.

Hon. Mr. Wells: We have seen some of your kinds of help in other areas.

Mr. Shulman: You are unwilling to try. Well you may see, look at some of the other departments which co-operate. Look at The Department of Lands and Forests, the Minister is sitting here, he has co-operated with us and we have co-operated with him and you will find no member of the Opposition getting up and speaking to him in an acerbic way. It is because he is a sensible, intelligent man, and that is what we need in your job. I hope I have not embarrassed him over much.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Some people would say that is like blackmail.

Mr. Shulman: It is a reasonable offer to do something of benefit to the people of this province. It is not blackmail, it is an offer, an open-handed offer.

I will return now to the institutions for the retarded—the underfinancing of most public institutions is a tremendous problem. The 1966-67 per diem cost in this province—and I am sorry I do not have more recent figures—range from about $7.50 to $10; in contrast the Toronto zoo years ago spent an average of over $7.50 daily for their large animals. While capital construction outlay and total operating budgets of institutions involve vast sums of money, budget increases, especially increases in per capita expenditures, have often been so token, that very little help was given to the beleaguered institutional superintendent and his staff.

This underfinancing pertains to all aspects of residential care; it contributes, of course, to the understaffing. Salaries have often been at shockingly low levels. In many areas professional salaries have been so low as to attract no one of competence, and the non-professional salaries for attendant personnel have in several cases been below the U.S. national poverty level. Physical therapists are frequently lacking altogether. Speech therapists may consist only of untrained individuals. Occupational therapists may be totally unknown. While the children and adults may be kept clean—and let me stress they are not kept clean in all these institutions; I visited one where the stench could be smelled two doors away—while they may be kept clean they often have no programmes for daily living other than the meaningless blare of the television set, or the completely empty, fenced-in court. In so many places they are not even taken outside. I mentioned two institutions in Orillia which I visited—private institutions for the retarded—where they are literally not taken outside, there is no staff to do it. Can anyone doubt that such practices have interfered severely with effective programming?

Many institutions have been so hard put to attract capable medical personnel that they have relied heavily on foreign-trained physicians, some of whom were unable to secure regular licences, and hence are only able to work in a facility which would waive certain requirements, such as is possible in a provincially operated facility. Unable to go elsewhere, and being the only ones willing to accept the poor salaries, these men and women find themselves in virtual bondage, and the salary situation remains terrible; we saw that at Brockville, it was oh, so obvious.

On the basis of rough calculations which were supplied to us through the people that appeared in front of the health committee, it was estimated that about 30 per cent of all the budgeted positions in these facilities are now vacant.

The use of residents to perform work necessary to keep the institution running constitutes another problem which arises from underfinancing and which is sometimes referred to as "institutional peonage". Although it is highly desirable that residents be productively employed, continued and inappropriate retention of residents in work situations has often been the only way the daily work could get done. And of course, they immediately think of Whitby, where as an inducement they started paying them a few pennies an hour—from two to eight cents an hour—and then they cut that off; what a blow to someone who is mentally ill, who is earning the princely sum of a nickel an hour, to say, "Gee, we are over our budget, we are going to have to cut that out. Too bad about you, too bad; cannot do anything about it, we have to build an extra highway".

And this is where the priorities are so wrong. Some of the important services in the wards, infirmaries, maintenance, laundry and kitchen areas would collapse if it were not for reliance on resident help. In addition, absence of adequate community resources, workshops, group living facilities, community supervision, has meant that even if residents were to be released there is often no place for them to live and no job for them to have. To rehabilitate the retarded person who has lived the better part of his life in an institution is most difficult since he is ill-prepared to cope with the social requirements of the normal community.

Mr. Chairman, I am about to enter a different portion which is a fairly lengthy matter of my address, and I wonder if we could adjourn until 8 o'clock?

Mr. Chairman: Would three minutes get you into it?

Mr. Shulman: It would get me into the first long paragraph.

It being 6 o'clock, the House took recess.

ESTIMATES, THE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH (continued)

Mr. Chairman: I will recognize the hon. member as soon as the Minister arrives.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): If he arrives! He may be down cleaning up 999 in preparation for my visit.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member may proceed if he wishes. I leave it up to him if he wants to wait a few moments.

Mr. Shulman: Perhaps he should be here, but I am not sure he is of any value when he is here.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): It is taken down verbatim and the Minister will read it.

Mr. Shulman: But can he read, that is the question?

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member may proceed if he wishes.

Mr. Shulman: I am glad to proceed.

Just for the record, I wish to point out for Hansard the Minister of Health is not here in his own estimates. He is supposed to be here for the benefit of our advice, so he can improve the mess he is working in.

However, we will pretend he is here. The Minister of Revenue (Mr. White) is here and perhaps he will pass on some of the suggestions to him. The Minister of Revenue is going to be so busy lecturing the various—

Mr. Chairman: Order!

Mr. Nixon: The hon. member has four colleagues to listen to him. Surely that is enough.

Mr. Shulman: I would like, for a moment, to go back to this picture which was taken last week in the Ontario Hospital, Mr. Chairman. Because the man who took the picture waited until all of the patients had been removed in mid-morning to group therapy.

When he first came on duty at 8 o'clock in the morning, he tells me, he was shocked to see the four toilet seats filled and a lineup standing in front of them. Now, I would like to remind you, this is not a prison. These are not people who are there to be punished. They are, presumably, sick people who are there to be helped.

I well recall during the war, one of the first things that was done was to remove all privacy, in toilets and everywhere else, as a deliberate dehumanizing agent—

Mr. G. Ben (Humber): Oh, come on, the member is not old enough to know that. What is he talking about?

Mr. Shulman: But I want to stress again, this is supposed to be a hospital.

The mental stress on these mentally ill people, who are suddenly thrown into these 18th century type conditions—people who are basically used to normal privacy, are used to be able to go to the toilet without 20 men staring at them. They suddenly find, as so many of them do, that they develop constipation as well as mental stress as a result of this.

If they were normal, there would be a certain ludicrous aspect to it; but these were sick, mentally ill people, who are forced to undergo this humiliation.

And why? Why? To save the $10 it would cost to put on a door? To save the few hundred dollars it would cost to put in a sufficient number of toilets? For no reason whatsoever. It is just not simple humanity.

One of the orderlies on duty in the ward, in this particular ward, tells me, "I want you to come down at night"—and I am glad the Minister is taking me down there at night, because, he says, "people cannot sleep in these wards." The reason they cannot sleep is because there are 11 beds and when one man is disturbed—and when you have 11 mentally ill people it is not uncommon for one man to be disturbed in the night—he will toss and make noises, and disturb the others.

He said it is not like somewhere where people can rest. The only way they rest is under sedatives.

I am glad the Minister of Health has decided to return to his estimates. Welcome back!

It is literally torture. It is not physical torture, it is mental torture; and we really deserve better in this rich province, in this rich city.

Now that the Minister is back, I would like to go back to the matter I was discussing before. I would like to mention one thing.

I discussed the problem of the Stone Haven Nursing Home down in Carleton East and I want to make it very clear that it is just not my judgment which I gave today. The Associated Nursing Homes of Ontario have investigated this matter. They feel a serious mistake was made and this is one of the reasons why they have been trying so desperately and unsuccessfully, to get an appointment with the Minister.

Perhaps if the Minister would be kind enough to answer their requests, he might learn of what is happening.

Hon. T. L. Wells (Minister of Health): It was answered.

Mr. Shulman: When are you going to see them?

Hon. Mr. Wells: I have told them what they have known all along, that I will see them when the estimates are over, in late December or early in January.

Mr. Shulman: Well, they told me—and I would be curious to find out where the truth lies—that they had been trying for two months to get an appointment. Surely, for two months you have not been waiting till your estimates are over?

If that is the answer, I fear for everything that is happening in your department. Well, all right. Things move slowly in this department. Two months for an appointment.

Hon. Mr. Wells: They move fast.

Mr. Shulman: They will, they will; you are sliding fast.

I would like to go back to the homes for retarded. As you recall, Mr. Chairman, I had been discussing the staff shortage problems, as a result of which the patients have been put to work to do the various menial labours.

In addition to being short-staffed, many of the institutions are grossly overcrowded, being anywhere from 25 to 50 per cent above their rated bed capacity. Consequently, there are often large, bleak wards where physically handicapped individuals are confined to bed, provided with minimal care, but given little in the way of stimulation to make their lives the least bit meaningful. Many will end their days in these drab surroundings. There is still an additional factor: Increasingly, severely handicapped residents with multiple problems are being admitted because many such individuals who would have died a generation ago, are now saved as a result of the physical medical advances.

Smiths Falls is an outstanding example. When I was down there last summer with the member for Lakeshore (Mr. Lawlor), we were shocked at the wards—not with 11 beds, like this picture I have shown you, but some of them with 30 and 35 beds. Sometimes with 30 and 40 patients and two or three attendants, and nothing to do, and not going outside, and just sitting and looking at the television set in those wards that have television.

Many Canadians have the impression that poor residential facilities are something inevitable which must be endured along with the other evils of our times. But this is not true. One can visit several European countries, particularly in Scandinavia, to find imaginative and unusual programmes of care. All the visiting experts are impressed to find that many residential facilities are located close to population centres.

In Copenhagen there is a residential facility, the children's hospital at Vangede, which is in a suburban setting served by the city's rapid transit system. Many of these facilities have no more than 150 to 200 residents, and some are no larger than a large household. Staff-to-resident ratios are frequently one to one, one to one, Mr. Chairman, where here in Ontario there are places where it is 30 to one. And the care provided is exemplary. In addition, the physical surroundings are pleasant, abounding in bright colours. Fixtures and furnishings are attractively designed, and not the clumsy institutional furniture found in this country. Everything is meant to be attractive and to have appeal to those who must reside in such a facility.

Compare this with what we have here in the Ontario Hospitals. Compare this—we can come closer to home, go to Chicago. I went down to Chicago last year and I went through the Lambs. What a model that could be for Ontario. There is nowhere in Ontario, no institution in Ontario run by this government, that can come close to that. We lag behind everywhere.

The problems of our overcrowded institutions can be solved only by giving simultaneous attention to community resources. It has been pointed out on many occasions that the galaxy of services needed should include diagnostic centres, special education, day care, vocational training, sheltered workshops, residential schools group-living homes and so forth. I maintain that residential facilities will not be what we want them to be unless simultaneous efforts are made to rectify the situation in both the institution and the community.

As one major effort towards accomplishing the desired objectives, massive re-education is required. There is nothing to be gained by hiding the fact that our residential facilities are in a deplorable state; their buildings are crumbling, the staff is overworked, underpaid and often undertrained, and the programmes provide only minimal care and rehabilitation. We must develop a greater public education effort to bring to the attention of the citizens this blot on our province.

It should be our wish and intent to try to rehabilitate residents to the community, rather than to segregate them off somewhere where we do not have to see them. This re-orientation in thinking will require considerable effort, as public officials, administrators of institutions, professional workers, and the lay public all come to understand that the handicapped and the retarded do not need to be shoved aside but rather should be a part of the ongoing community process.

I would just like to return again to the Lambs near Chicago. There they have taken these people out and put them in jobs they can handle as waitresses and looking after animals and in pet shops; they manage and they manage well.

Group homes, nursing homes and respite centres which provide short-term residence in an effort to help families and to meet temporary needs should all be part of the services available in the community. Even severely retarded individuals with extensive physical handicaps can be handled in the community. At the Lambs they have children with IQs as low as 55 serving food, acting as general waitresses.

Great Britain some years ago pioneered with the idea that the physically handicapped, as well as the person with other handicapping conditions, can and should be maintained in the community. But to do this, the concept was developed that even the most severe form of handicapping condition requiring prolonged nursing care could be cared for in the community as part of a regular nursing unit; such services need not be separated, segregated or removed from society.

One might well ask the question, should not all such persons be maintained in the community? Why should they be removed? Should not society's aim be to try to help when mental retardation or physical handicap has occurred? One does not say to the parent of the child with leukaemia that the child should be put away, although everyone knows that the child will ultimately die. We understand the human tragedy which has occurred. Rather, all forces are mobilized to help and to sustain the child in the community even though he may need periodic hospitalization. Surely the same approach could be used for the mentally retarded in this province. We should not have places like Smiths Falls, places where children are deserted and no one visits.

In the easing of understaffing two United States programmes are worthy of note, and I hope the Minister will listen to this because we could do this here so very easily and without great expenditure.

The foster grandparent programme, under which the United States government pays retired citizens to engage in one-to-one work with retarded persons for a few hours a week, has been successful in helping to cope with the manpower problem. It meets the needs not only of the handicapped persons but also the elderly who are looking for a constructive role in our society, where they can be of help and assistance and not regarded as misfits, relegated to a shelf.

I have seen this in action and it is so impressive.

They take older people who cannot get jobs, who have been retired, who have nothing to do; and they pay them a very small amount of money. You have to pay very little to the people who are anxious to do this.

They assign to each one of these elderly persons one retarded child; and wonders occur. The elderly people get younger, they are doing something worthwhile; the retarded are drawn out, they make progress which does not occur in years and years in these institutions.

It is a great programme. We could do it here. It does not need a lot of money.

SWEAT: Student Work And Experienced Training programme in the United States, has been another successful device in attracting people, in this case the youth, to work on mental retardation. Under this federally supported programme, high school and college students are paid a stipend for working during the summer in a facility of service for the retarded. In many such programmes conducted across the country, the students have received didactic instructions along with the work experience. SWEAT has been one of those imaginative, as well as economical and apparently successful, projects attracting young people to careers in this field.

And this is what we need. We need young people to come into this field, for there is such a shortage of people coming up. The ones who get there are largely the ones who get there by mischance, because they have not been able to find something else. With an imaginative programme, we could change that. We have a small programme now so that some students are brought in to help out in the mental institutions in the summer, but it is not this type of programme. What they are doing is taking regular jobs, so that other persons can go on holiday. There is no programme like SWEAT; there is no programme like the foster grandparent programme in this province.

In Scandinavia, one is impressed by the number of young, eager, well-informed men and women one finds working with the retarded. It is such a different contrast from our hospitals.

A training programme in Denmark for primary workers in mental retardation is of great interest. The programme is divided in two; it is half theoretical and half practical. The students, many of whom are what we would call school drop-outs in this country, are recruited for such training from among the drop-outs. They are subsidized during training and afterwards provided with good situations at reasonable pay in which to work.

A similar programme has been in existence in England in one area for some years now.

What a great idea. What a way of preventing lives from being wasted among the drop-outs and what a great way to get help into our mental institutions and those for the retarded.

In addition, there is another side to this programme. Most of these young people will go on to be parents themselves and having learned something about the handicaps, as well as something about child development, they are more understanding of the handicapped. They are also in a better position to manage their own families. It is very interesting that these ingenious training and recruitment programmes have solved the personnel shortage in those countries.

The desirability of having large facilities of a thousand or more is still very controversial.

Many of our facilities in Ontario are of this size. The evidence is not convincing as to why large residential facilities need to be built.

The argument often runs that large facilities cost less to operate. I do not believe this. Currently, the present committee on mental retardation in the U.S. is in the process of having a study conducted concerning what is known about costs of large versus small facilities.

The preliminary evidence which has come in, and which I have seen, suggests that small facilities for 150 to 250 can be constructed and operated at no more than the cost now being utilized in the larger facilities and perhaps at less cost. It is even possible that the hospital concept of placing small groups of retarded persons into existing rented, leased or purchased homes and facilities, rather than newly constructed ones, will prove the most economical and the best alternative for many retarded needing residential care.

Existing facilities are often cheaper than new construction, and rentals and leases preserve the flexibility of locating and using facilities as needed—a flexibility that has drastically reduced the new purpose-built construction.

Cost analysis can be deceptive, however, if one is not comparing similar commodities. This study will shed a great deal of important light on the entire matter of cost accounting and as to what type of facility we should have.

An additional point to be made about the size of the institution certainly relates to one sense of human values. In today's world, where many of us are becoming numbers and IBM cards, we feel reluctance to bid farewell to the concept of a more individualistic approach to human services.

Increasingly people express preference for a return to small units and systems, whether in the university, a city, or residential facilities. These human values must not be permitted to be overshadowed by too much architectural efficiency and the engineering consideration of locating buildings at the point closest to the steam plant or the cheapest piece of land.

Surely we have seen the problems of regimentation so as to ever be on guard in all sectors lest we increase or even perpetuate this problem, particularly in this field where it is so very bad now.

Facilities close to where people live should be the watchword. At the same time we must attend to the condition of our existing facilities. We must improve the pay scale. We must reduce the number of patients in each residence. And we must restructure the mission of residential facilities in ways which will return residents to the community.

To conclude tonight, I would like to make four suggestions which would improve the situation tremendously and these are four recommendations for institutional reform:

1. A board of institutional visitors should be appointed by the government. This board would be responsible for reporting directly to the Minister. Appointments to this board would be made irrespective of political party affiliation, and these appointments should be contingent on both knowledge of the broad field of human welfare and demonstrated public service.

Members of this board of visitors would not be concurrently members of any particular institution staff or board of trustees. It would be their responsibility to bring to the attention of the Minister poor facilities or any problems in those institutions. They would go about constantly. It would be their duty; they would have no political axe to grind. They would come directly to him so he would know, because I am sure he does not know what is going on in many of the institutions. He cannot know, it is not physically possible.

2. Within each institution for the mentally retarded, each department—medical, psychological, educational, nursing—should have a board of advisors. This board of advisors, through periodic visits and consultation, would know the institution and its problems intimately, and thus be in a position to advise, and assist in the resolution of difficulties.

In effect, in essence, the advisory board would be organized for a direct consultation and assistance to the institutional staff. As this board would not be responsible for rating institutional personnel or recommending their salary increments or promotions, it is more likely that members of the board would become involved with the more pressing and severe problems of the institution without endangering the position of the staff that trusts them, and this is very important. Staff is afraid. They are afraid their promotion will get lost if they complain.

In this way it would be possible for problems currently secreted from the outside world to be given the exposure and ventilation within the department—and let me stress that—needed for satisfactory solutions to them.

Then let me stress again the way that they are getting the ventilation now is not the best. It is not good for me to have to send someone in to take pictures like that. It is not good for the morale of the staff; it is not good for the patients; it is not good for anyone. There should be a better way of doing it.

3. Can one any longer ignore the needed relationship between the institutions for the mentally retarded and the universities? In each area of the province, a university should be given responsibility and resources to provide comprehensive in-service training and consultation for all institutional employees, from the chief administrative officer to the rawest recruit. Let us upgrade it, and we can.

4. One institution for the mentally retarded in this province should be designated as a centre for the in-service training of all personnel to be employed for service in institutions and clinics for the mentally retarded. As a condition for employment as institutional superintendent, psychologist, teacher, nurse, or attendant, the candidate would have to spend a specified period of time at the training centre. His preparation programme would range from a few weeks to one year, depending upon his background and experiences, and the nature of the position he intends to assume. During this training programme the candidate would be involved in clinical experiences that relate directly to his future employment and would participate in seminars, talks, and other instructional experiences designed to prepare him for the sensitive and demanding activities of work with the mentally retarded.

At the end of the candidate's training programme the director of this facility, and his staff, would rate the candidate and recommend him, or not recommend him, for employment with the retarded. To the degree that this programme is workable with currently employed staff, every inducement and encouragement should be provided to permit them to complete this preparation.

Just contrast that with what is done now. Now there is such a tremendous staff shortage when someone is hired they go right into the institution and what they learn they learn on the spot, and it is catch as catch can, and this is bad for their morale, it is bad for their training. Their training is not good enough.

There is cause for shame in Ontario, Mr. Chairman. Countless human beings are suffering needlessly. Countless more families of these unfortunate victims of society's irresponsibility are in anguish, for they know, or suspect, the truth. Unwittingly, or unwillingly, they have been forced to institutionalize their loved ones into a life of degradation and horror. Surely we can do better in this province.

Thank you.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Well, Mr. Chairman, to deal with some of the points that were raised first from the hon. member for Humber's talk about the task force's report. He very kindly pointed out to us that many of these were suggestions which his party had put forward already. I recognize this. I think that many of the suggestions in there are things that a lot of people in this province, and a lot of people in our own party, and a lot of people in our department have suggested.

They are improvements in the delivery of health care. This task force report—the federal-provincial one—of course—is made up of the wisdom of people from Ontario, and from the other provinces, and these recommendations reflect the kind of things that they think should be done. And I think that is not any reason that we should agree or disagree with them. The point is that they have done a good service for all of us by tabulating them, and putting them in good form, and also making them known to everyone across Canada, so that the benefits and the knowledge of what we do in Ontario is now available in the other provinces.

Now insofar as what I tried to explain out here, what are we going to do with this? Which really is the important thing. When the task force report was presented to us at our meeting on Tuesday morning, it was presented merely for discussion. But, of course, because we had it a few weeks ahead we already had a chance to review it and we find that many of the things in it are things that we already have in the works, that our task forces had been considering. The real question is, not what are we going to do about them, but when are we going to implement them? And this is the task that we handed, as I said earlier, to our five task forces on health care cost.

They are now preparing a report that will be ready in January, showing how we can implement the parts of that task force report which apply. Of course, a lot of the things that are in that report are being done. The hon. member for Humber surely knows that there are experiments in central purchasing. We indeed are centrally purchasing all our drugs and various supplies in the department for our own institutions, the hospitals in Toronto are centrally purchasing various things.

There are not many registered nurses now used in the kind of menial task that this report suggests they should not be used in. Most of our hospitals got away from this a long time ago. We now have different levels of people.

Mr. M. Makarchuk (Brantford): That is a lot of nonsense, and you know it.

Hon. Mr. Wells: No, it is not a lot of nonsense.

Mr. Makarchuk: Oh, yes it is.

Hon. Mr. Wells: You may be able to take the isolated hospitals; but there are a lot of hospitals in this province.

Mr. J. Renwick (Riverdale): You will be involved in this later on.

Mr. Makarchuk: In the general hospitals, you may find the isolated hospital—

Hon. Mr. Wells: Oh no. We have got all kinds of registered nursing assistants, we have got various degrees of people who are doing various jobs; the task is being broken down. It is not nearly as bad as this task force said.

I want to make one other point, and this is a point in which I found some common ground with my friend from Manitoba, whom you introduced earlier. He pointed out, and I think I agreed with him, that we had to be careful when we considered a report such as this, on the cost of health services, and what appeared to be excessive cost. We had to be careful to find out whether they really were excessive at the present time, because we were very sure and I am sure, and I know many of the hon. members of this House are sure, that there had been many people, for instance, in the health field, whose salaries had been very low, and they needed to be brought up. This kind of thing has been going on in the past few years and this has caused quite a phenomenal increase, say, in the per diem cost in hospitals and so forth, the bringing up to a decent wage of many personnel who did not get this wage before.

Coupled with this there is the general problem of inflation that is present in all our economy; and this, of course, is having its effect on labour costs which are a big part of the whole—

Mr. J. Renwick: Oh, sure, and this government cannot do anything about it. We have heard that before. So skip that part of your remarks.

Hon. Mr. Wells: —delivery of health services. All I am saying is that we have to be careful in considering this as we look at it. What this task force is really looking at is spiralling health costs in the future, and ways that we can control without jeopardizing the delivery of health services, the quality of health services, so that we can make them more efficient. That is the kind of thing that we are going to do here, and that is what we are going to do with all these task forces.

I want to thank the hon. member for Humber for his comments and for presenting to us again, the Liberal position on OHSIP. We are happy to have his suggestions as to how this plan could be changed. I might tell him that his suggestions are not new. I have got a file, about so big, of people and groups in this province who have written to me suggesting ways that the medical services insurance plan could be changed. There really is not anything new in anything that you have said or the members of the third party have said. They are all—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. J. Renwick: There is a great deal that is new—

Hon. Mr. Wells: No, all I am saying is though, that it is not exclusive with you. Because you stir up—

Mr. J. Renwick: I am not saying it is exclusive with us, I am saying it is different from yours.

Hon. Mr. Wells: No, you see the member missed my point completely. I am merely trying to point out to him that just because they happened to say it yesterday it is not new, I have had it said to me by different people than the third party.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): What is the Minister doing about it?

Hon. Mr. Wells: All right, that is what I am telling you.

Mr. J. Renwick: It is neither new nor right.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Do not get so excited about it.

Mr. J. Renwick: I certainly will get excited, you are doing a disservice to the people of this province—

Hon. Mr. Wells: I have suggested, I have said many times in this House—and we have all these suggestions. We have had suggestions from the official Opposition and from the third party, we are happy—

Mr. J. Renwick: And we are not happy to have your solution to the problem.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I do not care what you are happy about.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I am just saying that we have these suggestions here.

Mr. Makarchuk: We proved that in Middlesex South, with water pollution. We came out and presented it—

Hon. Mr. Wells: We have these suggestions here and—

An hon. member: I would like to hear him.

Mr. D. A. Paterson (Essex South): Would you fellows listen for a while? We will get—

Hon. Mr. Wells: This is a momentous—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Order! Order!

Hon. A. F. Lawrence (Minister of Mines): What an arrogant minority!

Hon. Mr. Wells: This is a momentous programme, and whether you like it the way we have done it or not, it has been instituted in a certain way now and it needs—

Mr. J. Renwick: It is not momentous. It is 20 years behind the times.

Hon. Mr. Wells: —and it needs to settle itself in. As I have told this—

Mr. Makarchuk: What you do is, you—

Hon. Mr. Wells: —House many times, we are taking all the suggestions and are analysing them. And as I said, and the hon. member for Humber referred to it in his speech—

Mr. Makarchuk: Well, why do you not hire a baboon to analyse it?

Mr. Chairman: Will the hon. member for Brantford please wait until it is his turn to speak?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Well, you know, this is the first time I have seen the hon. member for Brantford so animated in all his time in this House, I guess—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. J. Renwick: He is disenchanted with you. So are people of the province.

Hon. Mr. Wells: What I have said, Mr. Chairman, is, as I have said many times—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Wells: —we are taking all these suggestions and they are being carefully studied.

Mr. J. Renwick: We are not prepared to wait. Let us go to the country tomorrow on the issues.

Mr. Chairman: Order!

Hon. Mr. Wells: As I said down in the Royal York last week—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Wells: When we are finished our assessment, we will have the best Medicare plan in Canada.

Mr. J. Renwick: We will fight you tomorrow on the hustings of this province—

Mr. Chairman: Order! Order!

Hon. Mr. Wells: Let us get back to the estimates.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Jim; do not take that nonsense from him, you tell him. You are doing very well tonight.

An hon. member: Mr. Chairman, is this a private fight?

Mr. Chairman: Sounds like it.

Mr. E. W. Sopha (Sudbury): Can anybody get in it?

Mr. D. Jackson (Timiskaming): The member for Ontario (Mr. Dymond) was an honest person. He got up and said, "We are not going to do it."

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I have said what we are going to do in this and I am sure we will have a chance to discuss it in more detail in the estimate.

Mr. Singer: You tell him, Jim.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, in regard to the comments of the hon. member for Humber about the banning of DDT and the pesticides advisory board. I just want to again reiterate that while we appreciate the work that Pollution Probe is doing and so forth, they were not the prime movers to encourage us or to cause us to take this action.

The action was taken because of this report of which I have a limited number of copies and will be happy to now make available to the leader of the Opposition and the leader of the ND Party.

Mr. Jackson: On a point of clarification, Mr. Chairman. How long have you had your report?

Hon. Mr. Wells: How long have I had this report? I have had this report since last week. And, although you may find it strange—

Mr. Jackson: On a further point of clarification, Mr. Chairman. How long had the report been commissioned?

Hon. Mr. Wells: The report was commissioned by my predecessor some time last spring.

Mr. MacDonald: You took action before you got a report?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Wells: The point is that as the pesticides—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: Just a minute. Will the Minister accept a question?

An hon. member: No, no!

Mr. Chairman: Order! Order! The usual procedure is for the two Opposition parties to have their lead-off speaker and for the Minister to reply. Then we have ample opportunity for debate.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I think I anticipate what the hon. member is going to say. I am going to explain it to him.

The pesticides advisory board is a group of responsible people who advise the government and myself on these matters. It includes scientists and people who are knowledgeable in this field. They were asked some time last spring or early summer to look into the whole matter of DDT in this province.

They carried out their study, they prepared their draft report and they came to me and said, "Look, this is what our study shows." They presented—

Mr. Jackson: It has been before you for four years at least.

Hon. Mr. Wells:—and they presented the report to me and showed me what they had done and what they recommended.

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): This is what the government is doing.

Mr. E. Dunlop (York-Forest Hill) Extend a courtesy to a fellow member.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I said that we will accept the recommendations that you have got. I think that this is such an important problem that we will take the recommendations and implement them right away. You do the editorial work now on the report, get it ready.

Mr. J. Renwick: You mean you are giving us a report after you have implemented all the recommendations?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Yes, that is a new—

Mr. J. Renwick: That is exactly the time we get most of the reports from the Tory government.

Hon. Mr. Wells: This is just a little bit — we are just about two steps ahead of you.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Anyway, the fact is, Mr. Chairman, that—

Mr. Chairman: Order! Order!

Hon. Mr. Wells: The fact is, Mr. Chairman, that we implemented and put into regulation form, the recommendations.

I felt the report was a valuable document and should be prepared in edited form for publication, which is now being done; it will be available to everyone.

Mr. Makarchuk: To remove the damning part about it.

Mr. Jackson: Maybe you would like to talk about it.

Mr. J. Renwick: It will probably get headlines in the Telegram.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Well you see, our friends over there—nothing would make them happy. If you do the right thing they object. If you do not do the right thing they object. So the only thing I say is, just do not worry about them.

Now, Mr. Chairman, dealing with remarks of the hon. member for High Park.

First he referred to the Associated Nursing Homes of Ontario. My office has had contact with Dr. Wong. I have explained to him that we would have a meeting with him as soon as it was possible. A meeting was set up and was cancelled. I cannot remember whether it was their group that had to cancel it or I had to cancel it, but it was set up and had to be cancelled for legitimate reasons. It was then explained to him that we would have a meeting some time as soon as these estimates were finished.

Somehow this group felt they had to have a meeting before these estimates, but I tried to impress upon them that the subject-matter which I felt they wished to discuss with us did not require being discussed with us before the estimates.

We also had a very informative meeting with members from the Metropolitan Toronto committee on welfare, who, I think, were echoing the same kind of feelings that the associated nursing homes wished to present to us. Of course, the hon. member knows that this really did not have to do with licensing of homes and so forth, but it concerns the per diem rate.

As I explained in the House two weeks ago, or a week ago, in answer to one of the member's questions, we are well aware of the position of the association of nursing homes. We know what their requests are, these were presented to us by the Metro commissioner of welfare. We are studying them in the light that they were studied in past years with the background consultants who did the job before, and the whole matter is under very active consideration for a decision in the very near future.

Mr. J. Renwick: Does the Minister think $9.50 a day required a lot of study?

Mr. Shulman: What about $4 a day?

Hon. Mr. Wells: So that all I can say is that I am sorry if Dr. Wong feels we could not see him soon enough, but we certainly have his interests at heart.

Now in regard to the Stonehaven Nursing Home, this has been a very difficult situation. In reviewing the file over the supper hour, I find that perhaps the problem area here has been a difference of opinion on what has been done, or what has not been done in the home between the medical officer of health and the owner of the home.

Mr. Shulman: The department has all the certificates.

Hon. Mr. Wells: The medical officer of health, according to my reports and the reports in our department, has not recommended to us that the licence be carried on.

Mr. Shulman: Of course. That is what the whole problem is. The medical officer of health down there is incompetent.

Hon. Mr. Wells: All right. So anyway, the point is that the medical officer of health has made this recommendation to us and our people have felt that, based on his recommendation, the licence should not be continued.

I realize there may be many facets to this whole problem and, as I say, my friend, the Minister of Highways (Mr. Gomme), has discussed it with me over the past few weeks. We are going to take steps to set up a meeting with Mr. Folkes and the various people and see if we cannot get to the bottom of this.

Mr. J. Renwick: Why would the Minister have to take all that long to set up a meeting?

Mr. MacDonald: You created confusion for all the families involved, and wrecked a business.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): You left that nursing home in tatters and your answer is that the medical officer of health said, "no."

Hon. Mr. Wells: I might say, Mr. Chairman, in answer to that question, the hon. member for Scarborough West used to get up in this House and tell us that we had to have standards for nursing homes and we brought in standards for nursing homes.

Mr. J. Renwick: We are talking about this instance.

Mr. Lewis: And you supposedly implemented standards—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Wells: And when somebody comes along, the medical officer of health in this case, and says that this fellow has not fulfilled some of those standards—

Mr. MacDonald: He fulfilled what was asked for.

Mr. Lewis: And when they meet your standards, you close them down.

Hon. Mr. Wells: We do not. The medical officer of health is part of the whole health scheme. You see it is the same old story; you want it both ways. You want to criticize us if we do not have standards; and when we have standards, then we implement them—

Interjections by many hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: You crack down on what? What is it in the medical officer's report that was not satisfactory? Give us one instance now. What did he say?

Hon. Mr. Wells: The medical officer of health says some of the things that were asked for were not done.

Mr. Lewis: Which things? Can the Minister name one?

Hon. Mr. Wells: We will get to that later in the estimates.

Mr. J. Renwick: We are not prepared to accept the bland generalities of the Minister of Health any longer.

Hon. Mr. Wells: What I am saying is—

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Correctional Services): Well that will kill him.

Mr. J. Renwick: It will kill him!

Hon. Mr. Wells: What I am saying is it is the same old story from the third party; they want things one way and they want them another.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Order!

Hon. Mr. Wells: Contrary to what the hon. member for Scarborough West and the hon. member for High Park think, I have very serious concern about people; and as Minister of Health in this province I do not want to be Minister of Health when some nursing home burns down because it has not fulfilled some of the fire regulations or something like that. I want to be sure.

Mr. Shulman: But it did fulfill them.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order!

I am very interested in hearing what the hon. Minister of Health has to say in reply to the statement made by the member for Humber and others; and I would ask you, sir, if you could not persuade the other members of the House to give him a bit of a hearing so that we can continue with the first vote.

Now I do not know whether it was discussions with His Honour, the Lieutenant-Governor, that have brought on this exuberance, but surely we can have an opportunity to hear what the hon. Minister has to say.

Mr. Lewis: I did not spend a minute with the Lieutenant-Governor.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The member insulted the Lieutenant-Governor by not attending?

Mr. Lewis: Could the Minister name a specific in the report of the medical officer of health which would appease the anxiety of the Opposition?

Mr. Nixon: We are not on the first vote.

Hon. Mr. Wells: When we get on the vote, I will be glad to answer.

Mr. Chairman: I might say the hon. members are being very discourteous.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I have explained to the hon. members that the hon. Minister of Highways and myself are going to arrange a meeting and get into this problem.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I thought I outlined our position very clearly in my opening statement on mental health. I think perhaps we can get into some of the details when the hon. member and I get into the vote on mental health. Certainly I have a very serious concern about mental health and about the people in this province.

Mr. Sopha: Well the Minister has said that about four times.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Well all right, they do not seem to believe it.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Wells: What I am saying is; the hon. member showed us some pictures taken at Queen Street. We are going down to visit it later on and the hon. member for Humber is welcome to come along with us.

I do want to point out, however, that as the hon. member knows—I answered a question a while ago—Queen Street is going to be rebuilt. We are going to call for tenders this summer, the summer of 1970, for Queen Street; it is going to be rebuilt.

Mr. Makarchuk: I do not believe it.

Hon. Mr. Wells: But it is. I am telling the House.

Mr. Shulman: But regardless, can the department not look after people decently now?

Mr. Lewis: That was said in 1964.

Hon. Mr. Wells: It is going to be rebuilt and tenders are going to be called. On so many of these things, as I say, this is an ongoing programme. These pictures here are perhaps some of the worst situations—

Mr. Shulman: That is the best ward, you will see tonight.

Hon. Mr. Wells: No, there are situations in this province that are equal to any to be found in this country.

Mr. J. Renwick: I do not care, neither does anyone else in this House—

Hon. Mr. Wells: If the hon. member for Riverdale, who did attend the Lieutenant-Governor's reception, will let me continue, I would like to move on—

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): The Minister was there too.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Yes, I left early though.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: It does not seem to have done him any harm, though.

Mr. Stokes: Maybe that is why the Minister was late.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I would like to say that I explained to the members of this House that when I came into this portfolio I wanted to review several of the various matters, and this I have been doing over the months, and one of them was visits to the institutions. I wanted to go around and see the institutions myself, which I have done in some cases. I wanted to see just exactly what went on.

One thing I was impressed with was that these institutions are anything but closed, that there are many, many people going in and out of the institutions all the time. There are women's auxiliaries, there are visitors, there are families of the patients; in fact, in some of them there were more people wandering up and down the halls who were not patients in the institutions or staff, than there were staff and patients.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Chairman, would the Minister permit a question? Can I go into one of the institutions without—

Hon. Mr. Wells: If the member will just sit down and listen, perhaps we can—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Order!

Hon. Mr. Wells: This impressed me, that there were many people visiting these institutions.

I was also impressed that we have a dedicated and hard working staff, who are trying; and their primary concern is to look after patients.

Mr. J. Renwick: It is the inadequacy of the government.

Hon. Mr. Wells: The concern of each one of us here is with patient care, and with the patient's privacy and his rights. However, I feel that it would be very helpful; and indeed I have talked to many members of this House, incidentally, who have had no problem going into any of the institutions.

Mr. Shulman: Like who? Name one.

Hon. Mr. Wells: There seems to be some kind of problem that has built up. I do not know what the problem has been—

Mr. Shulman: Name one!

Hon. Mr. Wells: Well there are many of the members on my side here.

Mr. Shulman: On the Minister's side, but nobody on this side.

Mr. J. Renwick: Has the Minister issued any instructions—

Hon. Mr. Wells: The member for Kingston and the Islands (Mr. Apps) tells me he goes in and out of the Kingston hospital with no problem at all.

And this is what I propose; I would propose that because so many people go in there is no reason why the members of this House should not go in. I think they should make suitable arrangements with the administrator—

Mr. Shulman: Then you do not see it as it is, you see it as they want you to see it.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Would the member listen to my statement?

Mr. J. Renwick: No.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I am suggesting that they make suitable arrangements with the administrator or the superintendent, if they can, so they will be able to show them the activities and the programmes that are being provided. And if we can help the members do this, we will. But I am not suggesting—you do not have to have any okay from my office to go into any of the institutions.

Mr. Shulman: We can go in unannounced?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Now I can also appreciate that the members may want to take advantage of an opportunity to visit some of our facilities when they happen to be in an area. Under such circumstances I would think that they should be able to do this; I would hope, however, they would be guided by the judgment of the superintendent or the administrator of the hospital; that they would ask, that they would visit him first before going into the institution. I think this is only fair and right, and that this should be done at reasonable hours.

I am going to suggest to our superintendents and our administrators, I am going to send them a copy of these remarks, and suggest that I am leaving the judgment of what are reasonable hours and whether or not arrangements can be worked out for a visit, up to them. There may be some particular reason, at that time, that they cannot arrange for visits. I would hope the members can live within the spirit of this so that all interests can be served.

Now as I said, we will make sure that all hospitals get copies of these remarks, and let us see how these suggestions work out.

Mr. MacDonald: I am not certain whether you have given them permission to go or not.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I have given them permission, provided they will work through the administrator if they happen to be there.

Mr. J. Renwick: Do we have to have permission? What are you talking about?

Hon. Mr. Wells: I am just suggesting—

Mr. J. Renwick: If we are prepared to go and leave flowers!

Hon. Mr. Wells: I have made my statement, I do not—

Mr. Shulman: Nobody knows what it means.

Mr. Chairman: Order!

Hon. Mr. Wells: Well, I have suggested—

Hon. Mr. Grossman: If you do not know what it means, what are you applauding for?

Hon. Mr. Wells: If you want to go up to a hospital, either make arrangements with the administrator ahead of time; or when you get there go and see the administrator or superintendent, and then go from there.

Mr. J. Renwick: We are prepared to go at reasonable hours.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Now the point is—

Mr. Shulman: Will we be allowed in if the superintendent is not there?

Mr. J. Renwick: Are we going by virtue of a privilege or is it our right?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Well listen, I am telling you now, sir, and we have checked all along, that there is no historical right or any right of members of this Legislature to visit any of the institutions. I am just saying, let us work together. You say let us work together; that is all I hear from you, let us work together and make this thing work.

Mr. Shulman: Will the Minister accept a question?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Sure.

Mr. Shulman: Just for clarification. It has been the custom of the member for Lakeshore and myself to visit these institutions on weekends. We normally find when we arrive that the superintendent is not there. Will you pass the word along that the acting superintendent, or whoever is in charge at the time we arrive there—and we always ask for whoever is in charge—will let us in if the titular superintendent is not?

Hon. Mr. Wells: This is a reasonable suggestion. This will be left to the superintendent. If he is not there, somebody will be in charge of that institution.

Mr. J. Renwick: You mean members of Parliament can make the trip and then be turned away? Nonsense!

Hon. Mr. Wells: The superintendent will be in charge of the institution. If he is not there he will tell the person—

Mr. J. Renwick: We do not buy the Tory version of our rights.

Mr. Lewis: We will try it tomorrow morning at nine.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: With the member for Lakeshore!

Hon. Mr. Wells: Let me just finish by saying that I appreciated the hon. member outlining some of the programmes that he had knowledge of in the United States. I think that it is useful for us to hear about some of these programmes because, certainly, they are good and we can learn from them. I think that we also have to realize that they are specific programmes, not a general situation in each of those jurisdictions. I just think that we should also realize that we do have, in this province, some special programmes that are probably the envy of many jurisdictions in the United States.

Mr. Shulman: Private.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Not private, I am talking about integrated, community programmes; and I of course would refer to the one in my own jurisdiction, Scarborough.

We have an integrated, community-based, mental health programme in Scarborough, using the facilities of the beds in the general hospital, the Scarborough General, and the psychiatric facilities. It is tied in with the halfway house, it is tied in with involvement of myriad community organizations so that the patient can come in, can be treated very quickly, can leave, can go out and be sure that he is going to have community involvement, community help and so forth. It is a model programme.

Mr. Ben: A point of order. I do find this extremely interesting, but here is a situation. If I start interjecting I am, in fact, breaking the rules, because this was supposed to be the opening statement, this discussion is coming under subsequent votes. Either we start going right now and we all take part or we do not.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I am answering a question.

Mr. Chairman: I think that there have been a lot of interjections during the Minister's replies to the opening speeches. The Minister is simply replying to the points raised, which is the usual procedure in every department, and we will call the votes as soon as he has finished.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, anyway, I merely point out that we do have some model facilities.

Mr. Lewis: Do you know any others?

Hon. Mr. Wells: I might tell you that we are going to, on a consulting basis. Dr. Appleton is going to help out part-time with our department to establish these in other areas across Metropolitan Toronto.

Mr. Lewis: I agree with the Scarborough programme, but can you name one other community mental health programme in Ontario beyond that one?

Hon. Mr. Wells: There has got to be a first.

Mr. Lewis: That is your model, is it?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Perhaps those you have outlined are only one—

Mr. Lewis: One community health programme in a province—

Mr. Shulman: We are not saying there is only one.

Hon. Mr. Wells: From this will come a development of more of these, I am sure, because this is an excellent programme.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: They say "name one." You do it, and then they say, "name two".

Hon. Mr. Wells: I think with that, Mr. Chairman, I will carry on with the votes.

Mr. R. T. Potter (Quinte): Mr. Chairman, before you start the votes, I wonder if I may have a few minutes to speak on the standing committee of health in this Legislature.

Mr. Chairman: I must say that it is, perhaps, a little unusual but if the House gives its consent—does the House agree?

Agreed.

Mr. Potter: In addition to dealing with matters specifically referred to in our committee, it is now meeting on a weekly basis for the purpose of hearing from those who are experienced and qualified in the various sections of the health field. At these meetings we have heard from general surgeons, from psychiatrists, nursing home operators, chiropractors, dentists, pharmacists, orthopedic surgeons, OHSC officials, and a director of a special treatment clinic.

Today, for the information of the members of the Legislature, I would like to table a report on these matters with the hope that the Minister and his staff will give serious consideration to the point that the committee wishes to make.

It is the conclusion of this committee, Mr. Chairman, that there is an urgent need for a review and revision of the health care of our province. It is our opinion that only a total health care programme would sufficiently satisfy our needs. We appreciate the tremendous cost of such a programme, and at the same time we recognize the needs with the realization that it can only be instituted in a gradual manner. We feel that the most immediate need is in the field of nursing homes, and in addition to badly needed changes in the regulations governing the operation of these homes, we feel that they must be covered under the Ontario hospital services programme.

The next area of urgency is in the development of an efficient rehabilitation programme; and here again, it is the opinion of this committee that consideration should be given to the establishment of a rehabilitation wing in each active treatment hospital in the province.

We feel that we must expand our out-patients facilities by licensing more and better qualified physiotherapists to operate independently of hospitals. It is understood that there is an abuse of this particular programme at the present time, stressing the need for more efficient supervision.

It should be obvious to the department that the department should further encourage the home care programme throughout the province, and despite the statements of OHSC officials to the contrary, it is our opinion that there is an urgent need for chronic-care facilities in the province, a point which was repeatedly made by those appearing before our committee.

Mr. Lewis: Take them apart there.

Mr. Potter: In further developing this programme, Mr. Chairman, the committee recognizes that a role does exist for chiropractors, that their duties and responsibilities should be clearly defined and that they should be included.

It is our further feeling that to complete the plan, consideration must be given to the inclusion of the cost of drugs and dental care. Your committee recognizes the ever-increasing need for more doctors and dentists and we urge the department to utilize all its resources to ensure an adequate supply and to devise means of providing their services to outlying areas of the province.

While the time of the committee was limited and we were unable to devote as much time as we would have liked to this subject, the committee wishes to stress that a further review of mental care in this province should be initiated, such a review to include, in addition to the mentally ill, the mentally retarded and the emotionally disturbed, an area which is becoming more serious every day.

The need for a review of procedures and practices in special treatment clinics was recognized by the committee and we understand that a study of this problem is already under way by the department.

I would like to table that report, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: Before we proceed, perhaps we should discuss the matter of the order of dealing with the various votes. Vote 801, which is the departmental administration, it seems to me, should be taken as a total vote. Is that agreed? Does the hon. Minister agree to that?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Yes.

Mr. Chairman: Vote 802 seems to be broken down fairly well in programmes of activity, on pages 75 and 76, and perhaps we could deal with that specifically in programmes.

Agreed?

Vote 803, I think, is one that must be taken in total.

Agreed?

Mr. Shulman: Taken in what?

Mr. Chairman: Taken in total.

Mr. Shulman: Yes.

Mr. Chairman: Now of the last votes: 804 is the OHSIP, 806 and 807 is the hospital and 805 in the middle is HIRB. You cannot talk about OHSIP without talking about HIRB and vice versa. I am wondering if we could perhaps deal with OHSIP, which is 804, and HIRB at the same time, pass the OHSIP vote and then go to 806 and 807 which is hospital, and leave the HIRB to the end, so that we can refer to it.

Mr. MacDonald: I am wondering, Mr. Chairman, whether it would not be a feasible proposition to take the last three together, medical, HIRB and OHSC?

Mr. Chairman: Well, one can speak about hospital without the—I mean I am just trying to separate this medical from hospital.

Mr. MacDonald: I think it is all one package.

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): Mr. Chairman, may I seek some direction? On what vote can I talk about chiropractors?

Mr. Nixon: Vote 801!

Mr. Chairman: I would like to get some concurrence on this.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I have no objection to discussing the last three votes but the hospital service commission is distinct from the other groups and that—

Mr. Chairman: That is what I was trying to get across—

Hon. Mr. Wells: It is a commission, and perhaps should be dealt with separately.

Mr. Chairman: Could we not deal with medical insurance, medical services insurance and refer to HIRB at the same time and get that cleared up; and then refer to hospital and leave the HIRB so that there is no restriction in debate on it? Is that satisfactory?

Hon. Mr. Wells: That is agreeable—

Mr. Chairman: Very good. Now—

Mr. Gaunt: Mr. Chairman, my remarks would be in direct reference to vote 804, if it is permissible. I can either deal with it on the first vote or under 804. I leave it to your direction.

Mr. Chairman: If it has to do with 804, which is the OHSIP programme, you should deal with it under OHSIP. The first vote is departmental administration.

Mr. Gaunt: As long as I can be assured that I can raise it at that point. I have had some difficulty in former years talking about chiropractors under The Department of Health estimates, but I presume that in view of the report which the hon. member for Quinte has just read to the House, I would be able to do that. I suggest perhaps the most appropriate vote would be 804.

Mr. Chairman: I do not recall specifically what was done last year, but I would think the reference could be made under the OHSIP programme to chiropractic—the fact that it may or not, or should or should not be included. I will not restrict the hon. member.

On vote 801.

Mr. Ben: Mr. Chairman, under this vote we are discussing, among other things, alcoholism and drug addiction research and also the committee on healing arts.

I should like to deal first with the latter, the Ontario committee on the healing arts. We can only, of course, Mr. Chairman, applaud the work that this committee is doing. However, it is interesting to note that in the statement by the chairman of the Ontario committee of the healing arts, Mr. Ian B. Dowey, at the inaugural meeting of the committee in September, 1966, he had this to say:

The expression "healing arts" was new to most of us when we first heard of this committee and I have found since then that it is new to a great many people. The definition that we have adopted is that it means all the professions and occupations in the health field.

There are an astonishing number of them and we have made a list to which we are still adding. It numbers 42 and includes the following—

And this is what makes it interesting, Mr. Chairman. I am going to read the list and make comments as I go along, because it is my submission that, if all these professions do, in fact, cover the field of all occupations in the health field called the healing arts, then the services that they provide should be included in the health services provided under OHSIP.

Now many of them already are, but it is interesting that many are not. The committee looks upon these particular occupations as being in the health field.

Chiropractors—which my friend was referring to and wants to be called later. The committee on healing arts included these as professions or occupations in the health field, yet their services are not taken in, or are not covered, by OHSIP.

Healing through the Christian Science—I do not know how we are going to work them into the health scheme, but perhaps we leave that to somebody else.

Child-care workers dealing with retarded children. Obviously their services should be covered by OHSIP.

Dentists, dental mechanics, dental technicians and dental hygienists. We can all look forward to the day when all dental services will be covered by a scheme, as I said during the initial address. I think all health services should come under a Ontario health services commission.

Hydrotherapists; one of the complaints that was made by the operators of nursing homes was that they no longer can even have physiotherapists and charge that service to OHSIP.

Here, the committee, on healing arts includes hydrotherapists, hypnotists, and subsequently occupational therapists.

Then there are medical laboratory technicians and medical laboratory technologists. I am frankly at a loss to understand the difference. Perhaps somebody could enlighten me there.

Blood-bank technicians, masseurs — this committee looks even upon masseurs as being engaged in the field of health and yet I could just see us trying to have OHSIP pay for the services of a masseur for, say, somebody who is paralyzed.

Naturopaths — I mentioned occupational therapists—ophthalmic dispensers, opticians, optometrists, osteopaths and physicians, of course.

Then pharmacists — there is an indication that drugs should be included in our scheme. I have mentioned physiotherapists, physicians, psychologists, radiological technicians, registered nurses, registered nursing assistants, nursing aides, medical social workers, psychiatric social workers, and speech therapists.

Remedial gymnasts, dieticians, medical librarians—well, I imagine they should come under hospitals—medical record librarians, such as cardiographing technicians, inhalation therapy technicians—I guess that is where respirant comes in. I guess that is why the predecessor of this Minister has taken unto himself a new job. I imagine he has become now an inhalation therapy technician, with an MD behind his name.

Operating room technicians, electroencephalographic technicians, intravenous therapists, administrators.

The reason I read this list, Mr. Chairman, is that I firmly believe that all these occupations and professions which the committee of the healing arts acknowledged as being in the health field, should be covered by one comprehensive medical services scheme, not only in this province but in this country.

How the Minister and his predecessor could have ignored the recommendations that come down from these committees and either refuse to bring these occupations and professions into OHSIP, or OMSIP as it was, and even today delay so doing, is beyond my comprehension. To me it is just simply setting up these committees for no reason except to postpone the day of reckoning.

I think the trouble with this government, Mr. Chairman, and the trouble with this ministry is that it is always reading from reports from task forces, or Royal commissions, or standing committees, or inter-departmental meetings. I was amazed that the Minister had the gall to get up here and in referring to the report of the task force reporting on the cost of health services in Canada, tell this House that there is now a task force looking into how the recommendations of the task force looking into the cost of health services in Canada can be implemented. This borders on the sublime.

Report after report after report. And the strange thing is the Minister admitted that this was a compendium of much that was already known. It seems to be a passion with this government not to do anything until a compendium has been made by somebody.

Prior to the McRuer report coming down, all of the Opposition parties and many people in this province and elsewhere concerned with civil rights had been trying to get this government to listen and implement certain legislation touching on civil rights. They had to wait until the McRuer report came down and, all of a sudden they start implementing some of the things.

They had a commission, a select committee, to deal with the problems of youth. This particular select committee again prepared what might be a compendium of the knowledge touching on youth and the recommendations that had been made over a long, long period of time. The Minister was a member of that committee. Again, after the report came in nothing has been done.

I imagine that what we shall hear next is some Minister of the Crown—perhaps the Prime Minister himself—getting up and saying that they have just appointed a task force or a select committee to find ways and means of implementing the report of the youth committee. That was just one of them.

Then we had another select committee of this Legislature dealing with the problems of the aged.

Mr. S. Apps (Kingston and the Islands): Can I make a comment on this, Mr. Chairman, just for a moment?

Mr. Nixon: There is the young man himself.

Mr. Ben: There is the young chairman himself. He is getting younger looking every day.

Mr. Apps: I would just like to point out, although all the recommendations of the select committee on youth have not been approved as yet, there are a great number of them that have been implemented. I would not want the House to be misled to the extent that none of them have been implemented. Many of them have. I must admit that the odd important one has not been, but a great many of them have.

Mr. Ben: I am sure if they did not implement at least one, the hon. member who just sat down would throw the whole government benches against the boards. They would have to do something just to keep him pacified and peaceful there for a while. All of us admit over here that the hon. member—and I think I should identify him, from Kingston and the Islands—has a real, sincere and abiding concern for the youth of this country, and we applaud him in that.

I must also say that I think it must be rather galling for him to have chaired the committee that brought down such a splendid report and find that almost no action is being taken on it. Yes, we will admit that some of the things have been implemented, but good grief, they were implemented by having been fallen into them rather than deliberately, but most of them still are not implemented.

This is the trouble with this government: Task force after task force, after special committee, after select committee, after Royal commission. If we only spent one-tenth of the time implementing things that we do writing reports, and only a fraction of the money we pay for all these commissions in implementing their findings, this province would be a Valhalla.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The Opposition is always asking for Royal commissions.

Mr. Ben: The Opposition does not ask for Royal commissions, it asks for action.

Hon. J. R. Simonett (Minister of Public Works): Better read Hansard.

Mr. Ben: We know the reason you appoint Royal commissions is because you do not like the Hoover people. You would rather sweep it under the rug than clean it up. So what we would like to see, Mr. Chairman, is these people, this government, implement some of these suggestions that come down. They cry that things cannot be done. Eventually they have to be done, so what happens—Minister after Minister has to resign because staring him in the face is a fait accompli in some other province. What he said cannot be done is being done day after day in some other jurisdiction, and the result is that you are going to run out of people to sit in your front benches. Everybody is resigning in embarrassment. That is what happened to this Minister's predecessor. He conned us into believing that he could use the money coming from Ottawa for Medicare for the expansion of the services in the reduction of premiums and then he found out he had to use it to build hospitals or train nurses.

Mr. Sopha: All the old timers are going.

Mr. Ben: All the old timers are going. They just could not face having to see their statements backfire and slap them in the face like a custard pie in a Mack Sennett movie. This is what is happening to these individuals here.

Now the Minister was speaking on the Drug and Alcohol Addiction Foundation and it is very interesting reading what has been done in these different regional boards that are set up—the Lake Erie region, the St. Clair region, Niagara County region, etc., but I would remind the hon. Minister that in his speech which announced the establishment of the foundation—as a matter of fact it was when the first spade full of dirt was turned—the Prime Minister pointed out there were three phases in the Foundation's existence or intent: (a) research; (b) treatment; (c) education.

Well I am not going to deny that there has been a lot of research to date but I am going to question whether there is very much treatment. As a matter of fact, we had the shocking situation in Toronto not too long ago where a drug addict could not get treatment because he went up to the research centre at night and evidently they work on a 9 to 5 basis there. They take the position that the addict knows when he has to take his next or final shot and he ought to take it at hours suitable to them. The result was that he could not get any help anywhere, this addict who wanted to take the cure, and instead of being a possible candidate for rehabilitation he had to take another shot, after most of the hospitals turned him away.

Now since the Prime Minister said treatment would be one of the services offered, perhaps the Minister will answer this question. Will the foundation offer treatment on an emergency basis? Does the foundation provide assistance in the form of grants and/or consultation services to such organizations as the Digger House and Oolagen? The latter is run by James Wake. It started as a private endeavour and has grown and is now supported by small grants from personal contributors. It takes kids until they can be referred to the proper agencies. Some stay and attend school. But what grants are given to these organizations?

There is another problem that arose that is covered by this vote and this is the drug quality and therapeutics committee. We had this particular committee before our own health committee and frankly it was laughable. Mr. Minister, if I may have your attention for a moment. Your people profess that they are going to reduce the price of drugs by publishing tables consisting of graphs which would indicate the prices of drugs of equal strength, or similar strength, and similar purpose—that is comparable drugs.

Well, I will tell the Minister this: They are not going to lower the price of drugs. They are going to increase the price of drugs, and for them to have tried to lead us to believe that because one manufacturer of tranquilizers lowers his price by 15 per cent, and that this is an example of what is going to happen with all the other drugs, was asinine because all this committee is going to do after it publishes the graphs showing the different prices is that those manufacturers, or wholesalers, whose drugs are being sold at less than the mean or average price are going to see they are charging less than the traffic is bearing and they are going to increase their prices.

There is no doubt, Mr. Minister, that some of the manufacturers who are charging the highest prices will lower their prices. They will be extremely grateful that this committee is doing a survey for them to let them know what comparable drugs are being sold for. So they undoubtedly will lower their drug prices. But the fact is that many people are now going to be deprived of drugs at the lowest prices, because the manufacturers of those drugs are going to increase their prices knowing that they could sell them for considerably more than what they have been charging. And that is what is going to happen, because that happens to be the law of the commercial jungle. So all you have done is set up a committee that has led a lot of people to believe they are going to get drugs cheaper when, in fact, the poor will have to end up paying more for them, and they are the ones that suffer the most.

You talked about the Ontario Council of Health and I would also ask the Minister to tell us what special facilities have been set up to train many of the European doctors who have come over here. I should not say European doctors. Let us say doctors from outside North America who have come here and cannot qualify. Have you set up any course whereby they can be articulated to Ontario doctors for a specified period to get a certain type of training which will be a little more comprehensive than perhaps internship? What have you done in this line? I would suggest very little. But I do await an answer on that.

Your grants covered by this vote are to the Canadian Red Cross Society, the College of Nurses and the Registered Nurses Association of Ontario. I suspect that there will be a place to discuss them under further votes and for that reason I am going to leave that. I notice legal services comes under this vote and I will leave that for a while.

Mr. Lewis: You are having a little chat with yourself, are you, George?

Mr. Ben: No, I am not having a little chat with myself.

Mr. Lewis: Sort of a tête-à-tête with your own alter ego?

Mr. Ben: I do not have an altering ego. I am not like the hon. member over there—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Ben: Oh, he is always shuffling his feet; he is trying to avoid all the barbs that have been thrown at him, that is all.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Ben: Would the Minister answer those questions for the time being?

Mr. Chairman: Does the hon. Minister wish to reply now?

Mr. Ben: I would ask him to give a reply now to those questions.

Hon. Mr. Wells: The questions may be duplicated Mr. Chairman, I think I would like to—

Mr. Ben: If you answer them they won't be.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Let us hear what some of the other members have to say.

Mr. Ben: You mean you are not going to answer the questions?

Hon. Mr. Wells: As soon as we listen to this—the hon. member for Middlesex South wants to make a statement, I think.

Mr. Chairman: Has the member for Humber any further questions at this time?

Mr. Ben: I have lots of questions, but if that is all he wants, if he is going to wait to go all the way through before he answers them, we will go on for hours.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Middlesex South.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. K. C. Bolton (Middlesex South): Mr. Chairman, later in these estimates I plan to be obnoxious, I plan to say many adverse things, but in the mellow glow of our conviviality before 8 o'clock this evening, may I say something that I think in justice should be said in connection with vote 801? My reference is to the alcohol and drug research foundation.

An hon. member: Very appropriate!

Mr. Bolton: Perhaps I am very proud to belong to the province of Ontario, because of its very enviable record in this field. Some years ago I took a course at Yale in alcohol studies, and again and again in the course of our lectures, illustrations came from Ontario. This is a province that is very highly regarded throughout this whole continent for the work that is done in that area. Furthermore, in my capacity as Professor of Pastoral Theology at Huron College, I gave a seminar in alcohol research studies and had most excellent co-operation from that department in London, and when I was elected—

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Bolton: I missed the observation but I doubt I missed much—

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The member wanted to know if you made reference to this great work during your election campaign.

Mr. Bolton: No, I did not—I had other things which will come up later in these estimates, with reference to the election in Middlesex South. I say that when I was elected on September 18—as some of you may recall—my resignation from the college became automatic; but it had been anticipated and so arrangements were made that when I had to give up this course of lectures, the alcohol research foundation in London was approached. I want to report that they very kindly took on this responsibility, they are doing an excellent job. We can be very proud, quite apart from party consideration, of the work done by the alcohol and drug research foundation in this province. I want to record that.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Do not spoil it by becoming obnoxious.

Mr. Bolton: I rather kid myself I have an obnoxious side.

Mr. Apps: Mr. Chairman, I think this comes under vote 801.

I am rather concerned at getting some correspondence indicating the difficulties that some people are having when they leave the employ of our psychiatric hospitals to receive their pension or their backpay or their vacation pay in a reasonable length of time. I realize that the Minister may not have had an opportunity to look into this, because he has not been in his office for very long. But I would suggest to him that one of the things he should investigate is this inordinate length of time that it takes to get the pay that is coming to those people who leave the employ of the hospitals.

For many of them it creates a financial hardship to wait so long, and although I realize that the Treasury is involved in this, yet I would ask the Minister if he would look into it and try to hurry up this long time that it takes to receive the pay that is coming to these people and which, in an ordinary commercial enterprise, would be forthcoming in a week or two. In many cases it takes several months. So, Mr. Chairman, may I ask through you to the Minister that he would take the time to look into this and try to hurry this up.

Mr. A. W. Downer (Dufferin-Simcoe): Mr. Chairman, I am sure that all of us from this side of the House appreciate the kind words of the member for Middlesex South, regarding the alcoholism and drug addiction foundation—

Mr. Nixon: Britishers stick together well.

Mr. Downer: I would just like to say a few words about that particular foundation tonight. Over the years this government has many times demonstrated its progressiveness and its wisdom—

Mr. MacDonald: Let's be factual.

Mr. Downer: —and its vision.

Mr. Gisborn: Tell us what you think about the foundation.

Mr. Downer: One of the areas in which this far-thinking leadership has been particularly evident is—

Mr. Nixon: How many pages have you got there?

Mr. Downer: —its approach to the investigation and planning to overcome the wide and costly programme for problems resulting from the irresponsible, excessive use of alcohol and other drugs. In the creation of the alcoholism and drug addiction foundation by an Act of the Legislature in 1949, this government established its leadership in this field. And the foundation of which I would like to speak now, was the first official agency dealing with alcoholism in Canada.

In the 20 years since its founding, this growing organization, under the leadership of Mr. David Archibald, who sits at the table tonight, its executive director, has become widely known not only in Canada, but throughout the world. The organization is known for its research work, its clinical operations, its far-reaching pioneering programmes of public and professional education. Now it is a very easy thing for me to observe the development of the foundation's progress over the years—and I do it from my vantage point as a member of the Legislature.

We have seen it grow from a small beginning with a very small budget. We have seen only at the beginning a handful of dedicated individuals. They had only one out-patient clinic in the city of Toronto. Today the foundation is operating on a budget of over $7 million. It conducts a programme of clinical, biological, psychological, and social research across this province, and we now have 31 treatment and clinical centres in 31 different municipalities in the province of Ontario.

Now, sometimes there are isolated incidents that invite misunderstanding and sometimes these isolated incidents invite or create criticism of the foundation. Such things as the member for Humber was mentioning, such things as the practical impossibility of providing round-the-clock, instantaneous service to alcoholics and drug addicts whenever and wherever they need help. I like to point out that there are somewhat more than 115,000 such individuals in this province right now. They are in various stages of their disorder and they are located in every community in the province of Ontario.

It would be manifestly ridiculous for the foundation to attempt to provide the kind of treatment necessary in all these locations which would assure an open door and a helping hand whenever and wherever the occasion demands. To me, and I am sure to you when you consider the matter, it makes a great deal more sense for our foundation to follow a plan under which the available treatment and helping professions which exist in every community of this province are trained and encouraged to take on a fair share of the task of dealing with the alcohol and drug addiction.

Indeed, the very involvement of greater numbers of people in this day and in this way, will inevitably bring about a greater awareness of the need for caution, and for knowledge, in handling and using the hundreds of drugs and chemicals which have in them a real potential for creating dangerous and injurious patterns of use.

Now alcoholism is a problem. Up to this year, we were holding the line, but it is moving out again, and the rate is going up. But that is not the only problem that we have to deal with. There is a more alarming problem, and it is the problem of drugs and drug addiction.

With the studies that have taken place, we find that 16 per cent of all the students that are in the secondary schools of Ontario have something to do with drugs. They have tried them out, experimented with them, used them and you know 16 per cent of the boys and girls in the secondary schools creates a tremendous number; a tremendous problem!

This is one of the great problems that the foundation is trying to cope with at this particular time. Now I am quite sure that the foundation will come up with an answer. I am quite sure that the foundation, with their great experience and with all the people they have on the staff, will find an answer to this problem.

Now take this matter of family involvement—in alcoholism, for example. The foundation is soon to publish, and I think that perhaps it already has, an extensive examination of the impact of parental alcoholism on children. I am confident that this will bear out something I have personally observed and felt for many years, namely, that the alcoholism of the father, or the mother, or both, is frequently visited upon the next generation.

Certainly a home in which alcohol is destroying harmony and creating conflict, and hardship, and suffering will not be able to produce children of robust emotional health and spirit. And one would expect that such emotionally vulnerable young people would be prime products, prime targets for alcohol and drug dependence in the future.

I am looking forward to reading the forthcoming foundation report again—and I hope that it will serve to focus the attention of doctors and social workers on the treatment of the total family unit, not just the treatment of the drug addict and the alcoholic member.

Right here might be a good place to clear up a point about the philosophy and purpose of the alcoholism and drug addiction research foundation, which may sometimes get in the way of public understanding.

I have just been talking about upset families, in which the excessive use of alcohol has become a problem, a real problem. And I have not spoken of families which have been broken up by alcohol alone.

Someone has said that you have to see alcohol as a solution before you can understand it as a problem. I take this to mean that, in many cases, a family situation is already at a desperate stage of conflict and antagonism before the consumption of alcohol leads to the final straw that breaks the camel's back.

In many cases of alcoholism, the alcoholic has been all but overcome by other insurmountable problems, and he or she has turned to the comfort and temporary relief of alcoholic intoxication as a temporary seeming solution—only to find out that when he sobers up the bad situation has been worsened.

The government, in setting up the alcoholism and drug addiction research foundation, did not start from the mistaken position that alcohol itself is the root of all evil. It was fully aware, however, that alcohol, irresponsibly used, is a significant component in many social problems confronting our people.

The foundation is not dedicated to the total removal of alcohol from our society. That would be futile. The foundation is dedicated to finding out how our society can manage to live in the presence of alcohol, and in the presence of other addicting substances, and not become the victim of inappropriate and irresponsible use of these substances.

I know, and I know you know, that there are still people in this province who feel that our government should take steps to eliminate all alcohol, and all other comforting drugs.

History shows that this has been proved over and over again to be impossible. And one would expect today, in the presence of hundreds of new substances with addiction potential, it would prove to be even more futile to attempt to put one chemical or drug after another out of reach of the public.

Far better, it seems to me, to research the question of why people of all ages and all stations in life feel a strong attraction to chemically comforting or exciting drugs. This research has to look at the individual, and the society in which the individual functions or fails, as well as investigating the drugs themselves.

Well I think that one of the answers is education. And when one thinks of education about these matters, it is helpful to think in terms of goals and targets.

In the matter of goals, we may think of preventing problems in people who are as yet encountering no alcohol or drug problems. And we think also of alleviating problems that already exist, and preventing people from getting in any deeper. Public health people tell me that the former might be described as primary prevention, and the latter secondary prevention.

The prime target for primary prevention must surely be young people, and I believe that all of us here would agree that to keep young people free of trouble, free of trouble arising out of the unwise, unsound use of alcohol and drugs of various kinds, is a worthy purpose to which we should commit as much money as we can.

Of course, there is a great deal more to education about alcohol and drugs than merely putting the words in front of the public and into the courses of study in our schools. We must remember that the research has now shown that the strongest influence of our young people in learning about drinking and using drugs comes from the way they see their parents and older people using these things. All of us, every one of us in this House and everyone outside, are responsible for teaching the younger people and younger generation by example. This is an inescapable fact of life. And I would submit to you that we should never lose sight of the fact about the way we use alcohol or drugs ourselves and in the way we serve it to others, will influence a young person.

Some good friends of mine, successfully recovered alcoholics, lay great stress on one point; they say that whenever and wherever alcoholic beverages are offered to guests, there should be alternative beverages offered as a matter of free choice. I think that is a good move, that would be a good suggestion.

As far as the drugs are concerned—and I was listening to the member for Humber the other night saying that poor housing and bad housing and poverty had a lot to do with the use of drugs by these young people—I do not think it makes any difference what class you are in or what group, you find drug users in the finest areas in the city and the finest areas of the country. You will find drug users and alcoholics in the poorest slum areas in the province. It does not have anything to do with where you live, but it has to do with how you think.

In ending up this little talk, I commend to you the alcoholism and drug addiction foundation, an organization that this Legislature can be very proud of. On its behalf, I bespeak the continuing support you have given it over the years and I would urge the government to make provision for increased financial support for the important work that it is doing and the important work that it will be called upon to do in the years to come.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Chairman, I think we can assure the hon. member for Dufferin-Simcoe of our continuing support to the efforts of the foundation.

I want to refer to it specifically and particularly in some of its programmes that are under way recently.

I read, I think, every word that comes out publicly from the foundation that is available to me and I would begin by saying that I miss the publication of the booklet called Addictions which used to, I think, come out quarterly. I do not recall receiving it in the mail recently. There may be some reason for this, but I think this was a valuable vehicle by which the foundation put before the citizens of this province up-to-date views based on science and not prejudice, based on research and not just hand-me-down information upon which thoughtful people could base their own judgments.

I well recall reading Addictions three or four years ago when the articles pertaining to the threat of marijuana pointed out very clearly in repeated articles that had come from other jurisdictions that there was ample scientific evidence to at least say it was no worse and, in fact, not nearly so great as the threat posed by alcohol.

This particular booklet I think was a very valuable one and I hope that no one in the foundation is under the impression that it was not widely read. And I do not know whether it has been discontinued or whether my name has fallen off the mailing list because I did not send in a subscription, but I believe it is an important addition to the work that this organization does.

We are prepared to be sarcastic about the publication programme of almost any other commission, the OWRC and so on, but not this commission. Its publication programme is the most important thing it does. In recent days, maybe weeks, but days, there have been substantial ads, paid for by the foundation, in all of the dailies with a factual approach to what happens to human physiology when alcohol is imbibed.

If the hon. member for Sudbury were here, he would be able to tell us about C<sub>2</sub>H<sub>5</sub>OH—he usually refers to it that way—but I can tell you, in my limited experience dealing with young people as a teacher, that one of the most effective ways to get their attention to the problems of alcoholism was to talk about it in a factual, scientific way, and this is precisely what the ads, brought out in the last few days by the foundation, have done.

I have a son aged 15 and I said, "Did you have a look at this?" He said he saw it, but he did not read it. This is too bad, I read it, and I asked him to read it also and I believe he did. But somehow or other I believe that there might be just a bit of an improvement in the presentation in the public press. Young people, between the ages of 13 and 15, I think, are perhaps the most impressionable. While there are many people here expert in the subject, who are prepared to recount instances of the young people in the elementary schools and so on, you have to train them there or give them the facts there, I think it is in the early teen-age period that they can be impressed with the factual information associated with the use of alcohol; and not put forward any attempt to frighten them, but just so that when they make a decision on the use of alcohol it is based on factual knowledge and not prejudice.

About a year ago, perhaps two years ago, the foundation had another series of ads which were not so impressive in their textual content, but the attractiveness was better, there were pictures of teen-agers that had a real impact for me and I think for young people. As they turned to the paper, coming to the sports page or perhaps the cartoon on the editorial page or the funnies, a picture of an attractive adolescent will centre their eyes on this—and I am no advertising authority obviously—but I believe that this is one of the most essential, the most essential thing that foundation can do.

Their work with alcoholics, of course, is commendable. It almost seems, though, it is practically impossible to gain much in this endeavour. Where we can gain is impressing the early teen-agers in what decision still lies with them. And I commend the foundation, along with the Anglican clerics who have spoken previously, in the really impressive features of the work they have accomplished.

As far as drugs are concerned, I think for the last two sessions there have been impassioned speeches on this vote, about the threat and the spread and the general use of drugs. I think perhaps for the first time this is having great impact in the community on a realistic basis. Where the hon. member for Dufferin-Simcoe gave us some statistics, something like under 20 per cent of young people who have experimented with drugs, my own feeling is that this experimentation is expanding very rapidly and that if government policy is really to retain and repress this, that perhaps they have to look at this very carefully.

There are two things which concern me in this. The first is the expenditure of this $6 million—according to page 72 of the estimates—is to be in amounts as may be authorized by the Minister. And the second is that in his House, about three weeks ago, the Minister made a statement which shook me to the core, and I feel that it reflected a closed mind in his attitude to experiments and research with marijuana which he may have attempted to correct in statements since.

It was either in response to perhaps unreal political pressures, or a statement that I feel is as benighted as any that J. Edgar Hoover has made over the last 40 years, and if, in fact, he personally controls—as it is indicated specifically here in these estimates—the expenditure of the $6 million that we are asked to vote tonight, I am worried.

It means really that the hands of the foundation are tied, or else there is a general attitude that the Minister may be displeased if the foundation moves beyond the periphery of the most restrained, perhaps "responsible" approach to this problem, because I think that the community awareness of the use of marijuana particularly and some other drugs is expanding much more rapidly than either the member for Dufferin-Simcoe or perhaps the representatives of the foundation, and certainly the Minister, are aware.

I have a daughter age 14 and she was playing a Beatle record, one of the more catchy songs which is called "Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds". And she said, "Do you know what that means Daddy? It is LSD—Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds—and it means that the Beatles take LSD". I said

"Oh, that is very interesting". I had read this somewhere else as well, and I believe that it is true. The Beatles are talking to my daughter in code and I have no particular objection to this, she thinks that is great—

Mr. Lewis: And they are communicating.

Mr. Nixon: Yes, real communication. And this foundation—

Mr. J. Renwick: And you are not?

Mr. Nixon: Oh no; I would not say that. I can communicate with them better than I can with you.

But this foundation still has great respect and will continue to have great respect as expressed on all sides of the House; I believe that the respect is there. I think they are doing a great job. I like their publications.

I am afraid that the policies of the government may tend to inhibit them and I would say to you, Mr. Chairman, in the presence of the people from the foundation, that they should not be inhibited this way; that I think there will be other pressures on the Minister—I hope I am not being unfair when I say this—that will change his attitude in a hurry so that it will be abundantly clear that the community does not want prejudice to be exerted. They want to know the facts, and surely this is precisely the attitude that all of us must take at this time. We may have very different attitudes when more facts are known.

It was in this connection that I wanted to refer to the alcoholism and drug addiction research foundation. In many respects, perhaps, their work in alcohol is going to fade into insignificance in the next few years because one of the other things associated with a new approach to the drugs and alcohol is that according to reading that I have done, and I suppose some of it has been in the publications of the foundation itself, these young people who are experimenting with drugs are not nearly so interested in experimenting with the booze that they get out of daddy's liquor cabinet, because daddy has been left behind in this. I think it is up to the foundation to determine whether, in fact, this is a considerable boon to the community or not.

So we follow their work with great care and I can say that they have general support on all sides. There is no quibbling about money spent for their buildings or anything like that. The people who make pronouncements from the foundation have respect on all sides and this important, and we are counting on them for great things in the immediate future.

Mr. Burr: Mr. Chairman, in his opening remarks, the Minister praised the government's pesticides advisory board for issuing the partial ban on DDT. This occurred some time after the middle of September. Back in the spring session of the Legislature, my colleague from High Park repeatedly urged the government to take this action on the basis of the evidence then available, and the Minister might have given him a little bit of the credit for speeding up the action.

I should like to ask a question about the pesticides advisory board. It has been represented to me that this board consists entirely of government experts and commercial representatives. Now one question, is this so, and if so, why are there no representatives from the universities on this board? There is perhaps a natural tendency for government—

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, I am sorry to interrupt but I think that matter is under vote 802, the public health vote.

Mr. Chairman: I am sorry, I was not paying that close attention.

Hon. Mr. Wells: This pesticides advisory board comes under the environmental health branch, which is part of the public health programme, Mr. Chairman, so I think that in fairness we should discuss it there.

Mr. Chairman: Well, that is quite right. If it is not under the first vote perhaps the hon. member would—he has not been speaking very long, perhaps he could repeat his remarks—bring them up under the proper programme under 802, environmental health service, on page 76.

Mr. Burr: Well okay, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: Vote 801?

Mr. J. P. Spence (Kent): Mr. Chairman, may I, under this vote, ask a question of the Minister? What is the policy of the mental institutions or general hospitals for maybe 30 years?

Mr. Chairman: Would that be the mental health section?

Mr. Spence: In regards to your policy—

Mr. Chairman: That is under vote 803, mental health division.

Mr. Spence: Right!

Mr. J. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I want to comment simply about the Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Research Foundation of Ontario. I have the greatest respect for the member for Dufferin-Simcoe; indeed, I have the greatest respect for the work which is being undertaken by the foundation.

I want to suggest, however, that what is fundamentally wrong is the misunderstanding of the problem, and I do not pretend for one moment to know exactly what the problem may be, but I want to suggest to the Ministry and to this Minister and to the foundation that the basic problem is to treat the use of drugs of any kind, whether it is alcohol or any other kind of drugs, as though it were some superficial part of our society; as though it were some aberration of society.

The view which certainly has come through very clearly to me in my limited experience in this particular area, personal and otherwise, is that in fact it is society which creates the need for the use of drugs. And it is very simple, if you take that particular view of it; because then to the extent that you deal with and solve the pathologies of society and the pathologies of the individuals within society, who find great difficulty in coping with society, you tend to solve part of the problem of the dependency on drugs, whether it be alcohol or otherwise.

I want the Ministry to be very, very clear on this, that they are not expending the number of dollars which are required to cope with the problem involved in alcoholism, let alone in the problem which may ultimately be involved in the question of the use of marijuana, and the reason is—and I have come to this reluctant conclusion—that you have isolated the foundation out from all other elements of the community responsibility for health care.

The foundation reflects the kind of reaction against a guilt complex in society which derives one of its major sources of revenue from the consumption of alcohol and from the use of cigarettes. That reflects a reaction against the puritan ethic, and that in addition the puritan ethic is a part of or a product of industrial society which degraded many men and women and created this immense dependence upon alcohol.

And that immense dependence upon alcohol is reflected in the province of Ontario by upwards of at least 100,000 people and maybe more. My guess is that if it were well known in terms of the male and female population of the province of Ontario that have an alcoholic problem, which is a sickness problem, which is a medical problem, you would find that it is in the neighbourhood of at least 200,000.

What I am saying to the Minister is that he has got to re-think the whole of the philosophy under which this foundation was established. My guess is that the foundation performs what the leader of the Opposition has indicated is a very valuable function, a very real educational function. It is very much like sex education in the schools. I, as a parent, am not qualified or capable of transmitting accurate information about sex education, and I doubt very much whether other parents are.

Mr. J. B. Trotter (Parkdale): Why are you not qualified?

Mr. J. Renwick: I just do not happen to have the expert knowledge which is required for that kind of transmission of accurate information, and in the field of alcoholism I think that is perfectly true about what the leader of the Opposition had to say. He was asking that the foundation continue its programme of transmitting accurate, medical information about the use of chloroform in society, about the use of other forms of drugs in society, and that is a very valuable function. It may well be, in fact, that the educational system of the province is about ready to absorb that part of the responsibility of the foundation, and I am suggesting, from my own experience in my own riding, from my own brief life experience, I am saying to the Minister that he must re-think whether or not he should not now dissolve into a community approach to the problem of medical care, the responsibility about this particular aspect of the medical requirements of the community.

Because my guess is that the members of the foundation will be the first ones to say that in every instance in which alcoholism is a problem, apart from those limited number of instances where it can be traced to a natural physiological requirement—and my suggestion is that that is a limited number of cases, but a very real number of cases—in substance what you are talking about are the ills of your society. And the ills of your society are all the things which are involved in the areas which create a sense of indignity in the individual.

When you begin to remove those and when you recognize the place of the drug in our society in that context, I think you will make very real progress.

But our tendency has been to isolate, as we used to isolate in the social and family services area, particular categories of people. In fact, the alcoholic or the drug addict cannot be isolated into a specific category. The alcoholic or the drug addict has got his own particular life style which has resulted in that dependency. It has been affected a great deal by the environment in which the person has been brought up, for any number of reasons. It is a highly individualistic problem, but its basis and its importance rests within society as such.

I am suggesting to the Minister that certainly I can attack the alcoholism and drug addiction research foundation from the point of view of the government and the scarcity of the number of dollars. And I would say, even when I entered the House, that on that basis I would have attacked it, in terms of the number of dollars which the government derives by way of revenue from the sale of the very beverages which create the problem that the government is faced with.

But that is no longer a solution. I discarded it because I do not think it is viable; I do not think it was viable at any time. What you have got to do, in my view, is to take this problem back into the general area of the overall responsibility for the health care of the citizens of the province.

This is only one aspect of it, and it has its pathology deeply embedded in the economic circumstances, the background, hereditary circumstances, the social circumstances, all of the areas within which people live in society. It is an outcropping and a very real outcropping of that society. And until we recognize it as such, and not as an aberration within our society as we have constituted it—and I emphasize, in the way which we have constituted it—then you have got a situation where people will continue to resort to the use of drugs. At some point in the lifetime of most people, there will come a point where he may or may not be a person who passes beyond the limit in which he can contain or control or tolerate the use of drugs; and he becomes a medical problem.

Until we do that, until we absorb it, what I am saying to the Minister is: He should, with his expert knowledge, with the knowledge of the people in the foundation, seriously consider dissolving the foundation back into the general area of the community health problem, because until we do that, we cannot effectively deal with the question which we have raised year in and year out in the estimates of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Wishart).

We cannot deal with the question effectively, of why you treat a person who is a drunk or an alcoholic in a criminal way, in a criminal court. That is the first thing. We are inhibited because we have categorized the affliction. We have treated this particular form of social behaviour beyond a certain limit as a criminal offence, or at least as an offence which is punishable. And I am not going to get hung up on the technical question of whether it happens to be within the Criminal Code of Canada or prohibited by the laws of this province. It is, and the government has got to recognize it, in most of its aspects a medical problem. There is absolutely no excuse in our society why people should be charged under the provisions of our penal code, or the penal provisions of our statutes, as if it merited that kind of punishment.

Now there is nothing that the foundation can do about this problem because the foundation is a creature hived off by this government to deal with a problem which is the government's responsibility. I would hope that this Minister would say, "While I am Minister I am going to see to it that in this province of Ontario no one who is charged with something called drunkenness is, in fact, simply another person who is put through the revolving door or the treadmill or the traditional jail treatment, because that is not adequate."

I am not suggesting for one single moment that it is within the competence of either this government or any medical practitioner or any skilled person to rescue anyone from the affliction of alcoholism. But it is quite obvious that the present treatment of alcoholism in this province is totally wrong. And I am saying to the Minister that he must dissolve the foundation—at least that is my view that I put forward—and absorb it within the general health requirements of the province on a community basis. Then I am saying to the Minister that he cannot isolate himself from the place which I have referred to before—and some people will say that it happens to be a hobby of mine because I have been there once—Moosonee.

You cannot isolate yourself nor can the foundation, and I would hope that basically the Minister of Health will deal with it. In three months in Moosonee there were 90 charges laid; 90 charges. At least 95 per cent of them were involved with liquor offences and derivative offences. I am simply saying to the Minister that it is not adequate if he allows this particular categorization of people to continue with the agreement of the Minister of Justice, to permit people to be constantly charged for offences related to drunkenness. And that is what it is, the undue consumption of alcohol.

I am saying, and I repeat, and I simply leave that particular problem at that point, that you have to seriously consider re-absorbing drug addiction and alcoholism into the general health care atmosphere of the province. If there is an educational function to be performed, the Minister of Education (Mr. Davis) is quite competent for most people to perform that particular function. I want to say also, Mr. Chairman, that so far as marijuana is concerned, I expressed the grave concern that we here felt about the rather adamant attitude which the Minister of Health adopted in the House just a few days ago. I do not think it is an attitude which the Minister of Health can afford to adopt.

Again, I share the rudiments of the thoughts of the leader of the Opposition. My guess is that, in fact, a generation is appearing which is not prepared to accept the drinking of chloroform as a solution to the problems of society. And it is a very much interrelated problem. I think we may be the tag generation that thinks that is in some way a solution, even on a short-term basis, of anybody's problems.

What shocks me about the Minister of Health is that he is not prepared to give total and complete backing to the kind of experimentation, the kind of study, which will decide, so far as it is within our capability of making a decision, that marijuana is or is not harmful.

I am simply saying it requires a Minister of Health with considerable courage to suggest it may well be a good thing for this society to provide another avenue for people to solve their particular difficulties of accommodation, rather than just alcohol or just tobacco. These are the two traditionally accepted drugs which, by the way, were introduced into our society without any great scientific study.

I would suggest that if this Minister was determined to do so, within four or five years he could come up with a definitive study about the effects of marijuana. If that was a report which indicated that it was equally or less offensive, or less debilitating, than the use of alcohol or the use of tobacco, then he should authorize the use of marijuana or take steps to make this province's voice heard about it.

Mr. Nixon: If it were equal in harm to alcohol, it should not be permitted.

Mr. J. Renwick: I would agree with that. But if it is a different character of drug, and if it is a response of our society to the world in which we live, then I say to the Minister, that he cannot stop it without falling into the same trap of those persons who were temperance advocates.

All that I have said—and I have not said it as well as anyone would like to say something which is of basic importance to us—is that you have got to re-think. My guess is that within the alcoholism and drug addiction foundation there are men and women who would agree with the approach which I am suggesting. The government has got to re-think the fact that it is the pathologies of society over many centuries, and particularly since the industrial revolution, which have produced in this society people who require the use of alcohol or tobacco in order to make the life which they live relatively tolerable.

I am not, in those terms, categorizing people according to their economic level in society. I am simply saying that in my view and my attitude towards the problem and my recommendation is that you should absorb back into the general area of community health care, this area of alcoholism and drug addiction. Because if we do that, I think that we may begin to be able to deal with the basic and fundamental problems which are involved in the so-called non-medical use of drugs, including chloroform, in our society.

Mr. W. Newman (Ontario South): Mr. Chairman, on this particular subject which we are discussing tonight, I am a little concerned about another aspect which maybe has not been brought forward.

I had the occasion this morning to sit in one of our juvenile family courts at the request of one of our juvenile judges, to listen in on a couple of drug cases. I had the occasion to talk to someone from The Ontario Department of Justice regarding drugs and the problems that we are faced with in our courts today—not only in our juvenile and family courts, but in our provincial courts.

One of the things that does concern me greatly is that many of our young people, or juveniles, have to be held over from court to court until such time that an analysis can be made of the various drugs they are using and handling. The same in our provincial courts. Many people have been held in jail up to one month awaiting testing of certain drugs to see what the analysis is.

I understand, from this person to whom I talked this morning, that The Ontario Department of Justice and The Ontario Department of Health have only about a five-man laboratory in Ottawa to test all the drugs that come in from court cases throughout the Dominion of Canada. I would point out also—

Mr. Ben: May I ask a question? Is that true that in Ontario county they keep youngsters in jail for certain drug offences until they can get a report from the drug laboratory? Is that what he is telling us?

Mr. W. Newman: If you will listen. I have just finished saying that in many of the juvenile court cases, young lads are held over on probation until such time as they can be heard, because they do not have analysis of the drugs that they have been dealing with. And, in other cases in our provincial courts, people have been kept in jail for up to one month because they have not had analysis of certain drugs that had been handled.

Mr. Ben: Kept in jail—just awaiting a report? Not for any other reason? I do not think they were refused bail for that reason.

Mr. W. Newman: In order to press charges properly, they cannot be charged until these drugs are analysed by the federal authorities. It takes about one month to analyse LSD, and about three weeks for marijuana. And for other drugs, it sometimes takes even longer. Unless there is a fuss raised at the time. They are brought in sometimes in an even shorter period of time if a certain fuss has been raised.

What I am saying here tonight, is that I am asking our Minister of Health—

Mr. Lewis: Are these juveniles or adults?

Mr. W. Newman: I am talking about both.

Mr. Lewis: A detention centre for a month, awaiting analysis? You must be joking.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: It is a federal case.

Mr. W. Newman: I will explain it to you again, if you do not understand, I said there are many cases—

Mr. Trotter: We are getting the picture.

Mr. W. Newman: There is a case in question this morning where a boy was brought before a juvenile court and the justice man from the federal Department of Justice asked for an adjournment until January because he did not have the analysis of the drug involved.

Mr. Lewis: Did that adjournment involve detention of the boy?

Mr. W. Newman: In this particular case, no.

Mr. Lewis: No. Well surely that is what happens?

Mr. W. Newman: I am saying in provincial courts. I am talking about older people who have been held in jail until such times as the analysis has been available, and because of inadequate facilities in the laboratories in Ottawa it takes about a month to get many of our drugs analysed.

What I am asking tonight is, would our Minister of Health's department intercede with the federal authorities to establish adequate facilities for much faster testing of these drugs?

This is why I would like him to intercede—because I think it is wrong that people have to wait around for a month to six weeks to get an analysis of drugs that have been used.

Mr. Ben: Why does the hon. member not ask the Attorney General to make sure that they were released on their bail instead of keeping them in jail? Are you more interested in the report, or of people sitting in jail?

Mr. W. Newman: I beg your pardon?

Mr. Ben: Should you not be demanding that they not be kept in jail pending a report, rather than demanding that they get an earlier report? Let them take six months if they want to, providing the person does not have to sit in jail. That is the important thing—not having to sit in jail. Besides there are laboratories here in Toronto for the RCMP to—

Mr. D. M. De Monte (Dovercourt): That is correct. Are not the analysis laboratories in Toronto—not in Ottawa—under the jurisdiction of the Attorney General?

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Minister of Justice): Surely, Mr. Chairman, the hon. members know that all narcotic cases are conducted by the federal authorities. That is the first thing to get into your minds—the federal Department of Justice pursues all narcotic cases. The second thing that I am sure the hon. members are aware of, is that bail, bail procedures are set forth in the Criminal Code, which is a federal statute and we have the administration of them, and that bail procedures and the principles by which judges set bail, are set out also in the Criminal Code and the discretion as to whether a person may be let go on his own recognizance or whether he shall be granted his bail—the amount of the bail—is in the discretion of the court. Now I have said many times in this House that the Attorney General will not instruct a judge as to how he shall conduct his court.

Mr. Sopha: What about bail?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: We do, from time to time, and frequently, have our judges together. We instruct our Crown Attorneys on the principles regarding bail. We have seminars of our judges and we try to inculcate in their minds the principles which should be followed regarding bail. I think there is—

Mr. Ben: You have not been successful in Ontario county.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: We have the judges meet three or four times a year in what we call seminars in which—

Mr. Sopha: Seminar—well that makes all the difference. Is it a seminar?

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Sopha: He is communicating and relating.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Attorney General, the real question is have you had any real incidents in Ontario county brought to your attention of people remaining in jail for an extended period of time, say, a month without bail waiting for a report on analysis of a drug? No, right?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Let me finish my statement, please, because the question of bail is raised here. We do have our judges meet in seminars and we have them discuss. We have them addressed—we have lectures made to them as to the principles of sentencing and the principles of bail. But I want to make it ultimately and finally clear, that the Attorney General does not tell a judge how he will conduct his court or what bail he shall grant.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Sopha: May I ask the hon. member a question? I would like to understand, are you alleging that in the light of the delay in getting the analysis, that these people are unreasonably held in jail pending their trial?

Mr. W. Newman: Mr. Chairman, may I say this—and first on a point of clarification to the member for Scarborough West—I was not referring to Ontario county. I was in a court in Toronto this morning and I was told by this man from the federal Department of Justice that the people are held in jail on charges because they have not had the analysis of the drugs back in sufficient time to deal with the matter.

Mr. Sopha: Well, did they apply for bail?

Mr. W. Newman: Well, he was talking about many cases, and he said that in some cases they are held in jail because they do not have the results back on the tests from these drugs; and it takes anywhere from three to six weeks to get them back.

Mr. Ben: Oh, I have to get up and defend Toronto. It is not Toronto judges, maybe Ontario judges—

Mr. W. Newman: I did not say—

Mr. Ben: Toronto would not act like that and I am not trying to defend them, but we have so many drug cases going through the Toronto courts, it is a most shocking thing.

Mr. W. Newman: Mr. Chairman, that was what I was trying to tell the hon. member.

Mr. Chairman: Order! Only one member may have the floor at one time.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. W. Newman: This is the problem I put to the Minister of Health, that we do not have adequate facilities in the federal labs in Ottawa to deal with this growing problem.

Mr. Lewis: That is an indictment of the foundation, certainly.

Mr. Shulman: I want to thank the Minister of Health for giving me a raise today, since he has now opened the institutions to normal inspection again. I have just been out to the phone and he will be getting two resignations with two weeks' notice with'n the next few days from two of my employees.

Mr. Lewis: But no one else in the Cabinet should take succour from that.

Mr. Chairman: Any further discussion on vote 801?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence moves that the committee of supply rise and report progress and ask for leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of supply begs to report progress and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence (Minister of Mines): Mr. Speaker, in moving the adjournment of a rather raucous House tonight, I would like to point out that on Friday, tomorrow, we will return to estimates; and on Monday, estimates again; on Tuesday, legislation; on Wednesday, legislation and estimates; on Thursday we will deal with the report of the committee on estimates of both education and highways; and on Friday return to the Budget.

At any time, now that we are getting down to the end, we should be ready to rely on the Budget and also the order paper.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 10.30 o'clock, p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1969

The House met at 9.30 o'clock, a.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: Statements by the Ministry.
The hon. Provincial Treasurer.

Hon. C. S. MacNaughton (Provincial Treasurer): It is with pleasure that I submit to you, Mr. Speaker, and to the members of this Legislature, the 1969 financial report of the province of Ontario. The reports will be distributed to the members shortly and I hope it would be appropriate for me to read the brief résumé of our financial operations which appears on page 3.

In the 1968-1969 fiscal year, the government was under heavy pressure for major expenditure increases over the previous year in a number of high priority areas, such as education, health and aid to local governments. This was the fiscal year when the residential property tax reduction grants were introduced, the administration of justice was taken over from local authorities, and major increases were made in the government's assistance to school boards and universities. As a result of the government's emphasis on greater efficiency, and restraint wherever possible and realistic, it was possible to stay well within the original Budget estimates with total net general expenditure some $44 million below the Budget forecast.

Total government revenue was significantly higher than anticipated in the Budget. While tax revenue was about one per cent above the original estimate, liquor revenues jumped sharply because of a prolonged strike in Quebec and the federal government made a catch-up payment of about $35 million for post-secondary education spending in 1967-1968. Consequently, net general revenue was about $90 million higher than originally anticipated.

These buoyant revenues and spending restraints combined to keep the government's budgetary deficit down to about $141 million compared to the Budget forecast of $275 million. This budgetary deficit is the equivalent of the increase in the government's net debt, which rose to $1,591 million by the end of the fiscal year. This level of debt remains well within the Ontario committee on taxation's guideline of nine per cent of provincial domestic product.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Surely that net is $1.5 billion.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I said $1,591 million—one thousand, five hundred and ninety-one million, to say it another way; one and a half billion dollars.

Proceeds of Canada Pension Plan loans and other non-public debenture issues combined with non-budgetary receipts were adequate to finance the budgetary deficit and a high level of lending by the province for purposes such as school, university, hospital and public housing construction. In addition, these funds enabled the government to finance its debt retirements during the year.

This year's financial report contains a summary of departmental services, beginning on page 23, which are intended to give the reader some insight into the various programmes and services provided by each department in the provincial government.

Again, and as I have indicated in the report, I would welcome any comments that the members of this House or the general public may wish to make about the financial presentation.

The members may be interested in a general comment at this time on the outlook for the current fiscal year. You will recall, Mr. Speaker, that in my March Budget I indicated that the government hoped to achieve a modest surplus from 1969-1970 operations. This was a formidable objective, considering the deficit of the previous year and the normal cost increases that we are obliged to meet. While some tax adjustments were required, we placed the primary emphasis on expenditure restraint in our budgetary plan to reach a surplus position.

With four months to go, it is too early to be precise about the current fiscal year. However, our internal financial reports indicate that our current Budget objective will still be met, notwithstanding some unexpected expenditures. The Budget control process, particularly on the expenditure side, is being applied on a day-to-day basis.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): On a point of order, sir, last week I raised the problem of an electric car which is being manufactured by the Eldon Company, with a sulphuric acid battery. On Wednesday, the Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs (Mr. Rowntree) stated in the House that there had been 200,000 such units sold without an accident. I am sure, sir, he did not deliberately wish to misinform us but just to correct the record, I wish to inform you and through you, the House, sir, that on Tuesday, on the front page of the Montreal Star an accident that occurred with just such an automobile was reported.

Mr. Speaker: Oral questions.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Treasurer, based on his announcement this morning. Am I to gather that his predictions from a year ago of $134 million were, let us say, on the pessimistic side; that the situation has improved by that amount since his original forecast for the fiscal year that is reported in this booklet?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, we are talking about the Budget year that ended last March 31, not the current Budget.

Mr. Nixon: Not this year?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: That is correct. The forecast deficit was $275 million. The actual deficit turned out to be $144 million, and I just cited in my statement the reasons how that came about: Revenue more buoyant by one per cent than was forecast, a catch-up payment of $35 million for education from the federal government, which was owed prior to the end of the year but was not paid until after, so it had the effect of increasing revenues although it was a debt by Canada to Ontario in the previous year that could not be included for Budget purposes; and then I mentioned, of course, the rather significant increase in liquor revenues due to a prolonged strike in Quebec, which is not the best way to balance the Budget, I might say, or to reduce the deficit, but it helped quite materially.

Mr. Nixon: As a supplementary question, the first one—there are two of them—the one per cent increase in net revenues over and above what was expected must reflect an improvement in the economy of the province substantially beyond what the Minister's advisory predicted 18 months ago. Perhaps the Minister could tell us what the growth of the province was that reflected in this increased revenue.

And, secondly, if my memory serves me correctly, pessimistic forecasts followed by optimistic figures seem to be a policy of the government. This is a good political policy, but is it normally the Minister's view to predict as accurately as possible, or to use things like "fiscal nightmares" to tide them over a difficult Budget presentation, which reflects in a silver lining a few months later?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Well that—

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Wade your way through those words.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Yes, that will not be too difficult to do; that will not be too difficult to do at all, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): Stick handling—

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, and all members of the House, that the economic forecasting tools that are at our disposal are used wisely and well. At the time of the formation of any budget, the forecasting is based on financial, fiscal and economic indicators, the same as they are in any jurisdiction, and they are applied to such things as projected growth in the gross provincial product. Projected growth in the gross provincial product then lends itself to a determination of related revenues that will accrue to that growth. When that growth exceeds the forecast based on the best indicators that we can employ, then of course revenues are going to exceed the forecast.

These are changing times in the economic field, I draw to the attention of you, Mr. Speaker, and the hon. members of the House, that it is an absolute impossibility, I think, and it should be accepted as such to forecast with any greater degree of accuracy in these days. But let me say to you again, Mr. Speaker, that I think if you are going to err, to the greatest extent possible, it is prudent to err on the side that we appear to have erred on in the Budget for the preceding year that I have just described to you.

Mr. Nixon: And every one, I would think, for many years.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Well, let us say I think it is prudent to do that. I think it is prudent to protect your reserve positions to the greatest extent possible and—

Hon. J. P. Robarts (Prime Minister): Conservative government—

Mr. Nixon: Tell us about the growth rate.

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Why does not the Minister just answer the question in his own way?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I might say I do not propose to do it any other way.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: So, we would like, Mr. Speaker, to be able to forecast with a greater degree of accuracy than has been done in the Budget that I have been dealing with today. I would like to be able to forecast with a greater degree of accuracy in the current Budget or in any Budget, but I can assure the House as long as we are custodians of this particular government process, we are going to be conservative, as has been said, and to the greatest extent possible. References—

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): The Minister should get off his soapbox and answer the question for a change.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Oh, Mr. Speaker, there is the great noise from Sarnia with the long finger; the great noise with the long finger.

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Well, in the back row.

Mr. Bullbrook: Say something. The Minister has said nothing for five minutes.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I am answering the questions.

Mr. Bullbrook: A year ago he was saying—

Hon. S. J. Randall (Minister of Trade and Development): Is the member mad about it?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Do not get angry, now.

Hon. Mr. Randall: Just because we have prosperity, do not get mad.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I was about to say there is still a financial and fiscal nightmare in this country of ours and there is likely to be until the problems of all three levels of government are recognized as components of this picture.

I am not saying that in a critical sense, but I have said it before and I will keep saying it. There are three taxing jurisdictions in this country of ours, federal, provincial and municipal. I hope we can bring them together more meaningfully.

That is what I mean by a fiscal nightmare. It has got nothing to do with changes from the forecast of the Budget, at the time a Budget is brought down. It has nothing to do with that.

Mr. Bullbrook: Why did not the Minister explain that to the people of Ontario when—

Hon. Mr. Randall: We did.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Oh, the member was not there. He was not at the places where we were explaining it or he would have heard it.

Mr. MacDonald: We were in Strathroy when it was said.

Mr. Nixon: If the Minister would answer my question and give us some indication about the actual growth of the provincial product upon which the extra one per cent is based—

Hon. Mr. Randall: Straight up?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Does the hon. leader of the Opposition want me to detail—

Mr. Nixon: No. What was the average growth of the provincial product or the growth of the provincial product, over the last year. It must surely have been much larger than predicted by the—

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Yes. Well, the forecast growth of provincial product was, in that year, I believe, based on 7.5 per cent. Something on the order of four per cent real and 3.5 per cent inflation or cost.

Now, as well as I can remember from a year ago, it was exceeded by something on the order of one per cent. The gross national product was exceeded by that much. The growth rate was, shall we say, something between eight and nine per cent.

Mr. H. Peacock (Windsor West): Eight point seven!

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Eight point seven.

Mr. Nixon: Is that for Ontario?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: That is for Ontario; I said something between eight and nine per cent.

I might say, Mr. Speaker—and I make no bones about it—the current year has been characterized by a similar excess in the growth of the gross provincial product. So that at the moment—and I have said this publicly, as a matter of fact, the hon. leader of the Opposition was at a meeting in England when he heard me say this—we, up to the moment, appear to be enjoying a growth rate of something in excess of nine per cent.

So these factors do lend themselves and translate themselves into increased revenue.

Mr. Nixon: That is the factor that does it.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: It is the factor.

Mr. Speaker: The member for York South.

Mr. MacDonald: A further supplementary question. Were the final remarks in the statement that the Provincial Treasurer gave about maintaining a more favourable situation despite added expenditures in reference to this year or the year that concluded on March 31, 1969?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: The member is alluding to the observations I made at the meeting I have referred to?

Mr. MacDonald: No, no, no. The observations which were made in the final paragraphs of this morning's statement—was the reference made to the year concluding March 31 last, or to the current year?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: No, everything I have said was about last year, until we reached the last paragraph—

Mr. MacDonald: That is what I am referring to.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I said with four months to go it is too early to be precise about the current fiscal year.

Mr. MacDonald: Well, will we be getting the details of how the Minister has maintained a balanced Budget in spite of expenditures of close to $70 million or $100 million more during consideration, for example, of the supplementary estimates?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I do not think that is possible.

Mr. MacDonald: We will have to wait until next year, will we?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Well, maybe by Budget time we will be in a better position to do it.

Mr. MacDonald: We like to get these explanations of how the Minister keeps things balanced when he spends $100 million more.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, I can assure the House it will get these figures as soon as I am in a position to give them accurately and properly.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Premier. As I recall, the amendments to the Criminal Code permit provinces to make arrangements to have lotteries under the jurisdiction of the province. Also, there are some indications of more extensive controls of lotteries on a small scale which are very much a part of the community from this time onward over the Christmas season. Has any study been made of a change in provincial policy with regard to the control of lotteries on a small scale, which are in the community as of now?

Hon. Mr. Roberts: Yes, Mr. Speaker, the changes in the Criminal Code will come into effect on January 10. At that time, the legislation provides that provinces may license—and there are various classes of lotteries, and so on—provincial lotteries, and may license other bodies for charitable purposes to operate lotteries.

The question that faces the government, of course, is just how are we going to do this? First of all, are we going to do it at all, because it is permissive? If you do not wish lotteries in your province, you do not have them. If you do, there are methods—or the power is there—for the province to license.

What we are studying at the moment is just how this is to be done, the various alternate ways in which it might be done. But it will not become effective until January 1. That is in reference to the member's comment on the Christmas season.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sudbury.

Mr. E. W. Sopha (Sudbury): I should like to ask the Minister of Municipal Affairs, if he may inform the citizens of—

Mr. Shulman: What is going on?

Mr. MacDonald: Can we have the rules?

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry, I had forgotten that the hon. member for York South had taken a supplementary. He is entitled now to his questions.

Mr. Sopha: I offer the penitent apologies requisite for interfering with the pecking order.

Mr. MacDonald: In view of the inconsistencies in the pecking order from the Liberals, I am glad to see consistency on the part of the hon. member for Sudbury.

Mr. Sopha: He was raised 100 per cent. He is sensible.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, in view of the statement of the president of Chrysler Corporation that the increase in nickel prices is going to result in an increase in car prices, and in view of the more than 100 per cent jump in the profits of Falconbridge for the first nine months of this year, from $15 million to $35 million, will the Prime Minister reconsider his decision and investigate the validity of the increase in nickel prices?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: No, I do not think that we propose to institute an investigation of the nickel prices. The whole question of price increases is under study and consideration at the national level. There is a committee or commission to go into these matters and to look at price increases on a very broad basis.

The Prime Minister of Canada has indicated that he might wish to place the same question on the agenda of a federal-provincial conference early in the new year. So I do not think much would be served by us, as a government, starting to examine particular incidents at this stage.

It is my own opinion that it is a very broad question. And I do not think we can go at it in a piecemeal way. I think we need, perhaps, to be looking at the question of price increase per se—not in the nickel industry, or the food industry, or in any one particular industry. As I have said many times before, I do not know how you can separate that type of investigation from an investigation into wage and salary increases. I do not think that we will start investigating specific price increases.

Mr. MacDonald: By way of a supplementary, Mr. Speaker, I would acknowledge the validity of the Prime Minister's contention that it can best be done at the federal level. Has this government made representations to encourage others to move with vigour on some of these important prices within the economy, such as nickel and steel?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: No, we have not. I have not communicated with the Prime Minister of Canada to urge him to do this and that and other things. I do not think that this is really a proper function for me. I see what is happening and I see how, in due course, we are going to make a co-operative attack on it, if the long-term restraints are not effective. I think he is fully aware of the problem and I think his financial advisers are fully aware of the problem, so I do not think he needs any urging from the provincial Premiers.

Mr. MacDonald: I have a question of the Minister of Energy and Resources Management. Is it accurate that the provincial government has provided a sizeable grant to an American company to study the problem of pollution in the Metro area? If so, what is the grant and which is the company?

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Minister of Energy and Resources Management): Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of any branch of my department, or my department, providing a grant to an American company. I will look into this and I will be happy to communicate with the hon. member about this.

Mr. MacDonald: May I make it more specific then? What department of the government has made money available to Travellers Insurance Company to study the pollution problem in the Metro area?

Mr. Sopha: Why did the member not ask that in the first place?

Mr. MacDonald: I gave him an opportunity to—

Mr. Bullbrook: Hang himself.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: I assume that the hon. member is asking whether or not my department has made a grant. I do not know what goes on entirely in other departments. As I indicated, Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of such a grant at this time, however I will make some enquiries and report to the hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: I wonder if I might not pursue it with the Prime Minister immediately. Can the Prime Minister inform us if any department that he is aware of has made moneys available to the Travellers Insurance Company to study the pollution problem in Toronto, and if so, how does he explain or rationalize the fact that the Travellers Insurance Company is studying pollution in Toronto?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: It sounds rather peculiar to me. I know nothing about it. That has not been brought to my attention. Once again, I do not think that I could be expected to know, so I will have to take the same attitude as the Minister. The member brought it to my attention, and I will find out.

Hon. J. Yaremko (Minister of Social and Family Services): Is the member suggesting that they did get a grant?

Mr. MacDonald: I am asking because I am informed that they have, and I am a little puzzled, as I am sure everybody will be puzzled, as to why the Travellers Insurance Company, an American company, is studying pollution in Toronto. We do not know why they are, but I have reason to believe that there is something in—

Hon. W. D. McKeough (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Give us the details.

Mr. Sopha: I would like to ask the Minister of Municipal Affairs, if he might be able to inform the elected representatives of the municipal councils of the various Sudbury municipalities and the citizen body generally, if he has received the report of the study of regional government by Mr. Kennedy, and if not, when he might, and if he expects that it will be received at an early time?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: I have not received it. Of course, the holdup has been the assessing of the smelters, so that Mr. Kennedy could be provided with the dollars and cents figures which we are all eagerly awaiting. This was held up because of the strikes, both of which are now settled, and I am informed that the assessment is proceeding and is practically finished now. After that, I imagine the figures will be available to Mr. Kennedy very quickly. How soon after that he would be able to prepare a report and present it, I do not know. I will undertake to find out.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

Mr. Shulman: I have a question of the Minister of Public Works, Mr. Speaker. What is the reason for the rapid rise in the costs of accidents in his department, which has now reached the figure of $295,916.36 in the last six months, according to a survey which has just been completed by his department?

Hon. J. R. Simonett (Minister of Public Works): What type of accidents?

Mr. Shulman: Accidents under workmen's compensation.

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry I cannot answer the member's question this morning. I will get the information, but as far as actually stating what caused them to increase, I would think that would be very difficult for anyone to answer. Whether they had not been following safety rules, I do not know. I have personally not heard from any of our people that there has been any abnormal increase in accidents or claims as far as workmen's compensation is concerned.

Mr. Shulman: Let me then ask as a supplementary, Mr. Speaker. Does this sum in excess of $250,000 for six months as the cost of accidents not appear excessive to the Minister considering the number of employees that he has?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Yes, it does seem that it might be higher than normal and I will check it out. Does the member know whether it includes just our employees?

Mr. Shulman: Just the Minister's.

Hon. Mr. Simonett: And it is over $250,000?

Mr. Shulman: $295,916.36.

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Very good, sir, I will check it out and see if there is an answer that I can give to the member and the House.

Hon. Mr. Randall: Thank operative number 42 for us.

Mr. MacDonald: Training course for new Ministers.

Hon. Mr. Randall: Quisling operative 42; thank him.

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Provincial Treasurer: When is the Treasurer going to give the taxpayers of Ontario the same privilege in regard to reports, as The Department of Financial and Commercial Affairs requires the corporations to give shareholders? In other words, when are we going to get a report on the operations of the province within the six months as is required of any corporation in this province, regardless of size; when are we going to have a report that has the auditor's statement in it at the same time; when are we going to have the reports of all the corporations—in other words the departments that make up this report—within the six months' time, and have it on a basis that we can all compare instead of having reports from each department in overlapping periods that give us no basis for really giving a true analysis of what we have here?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, it should be recalled, I think, that three years ago we indicated that we were going to change the form of reporting entirely. This we have done. We have made some changes every year to the point of considerable refinement. This report provides much more disclosure and in a much more meaningful and understandable way than it previously did.

The report is now on a cash-flow basis rather than the form that was used previously, and the process of refinement was undertaken even more this year. While I had hoped to have this report available for tabling either in August or September I just simply have to tell you that the accounting people required more time. There is more detail in here as far as departments are concerned, in terms of revenue and expenditure, than ever before. If the hon. member studies it and compares it with the abridged reports of three or four years ago I think he will find a substantial improvement.

I can assure the House that we are going to continue to improve this so that it is a document that is much more meaningful to the people in disclosure terms.

Mr. MacDonald: Progress comes slowly.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, sound progress does come slowly sometimes, indeed it does. I might say, Mr. Speaker, these criticisms would almost imply that someone from the other side would impose immediate changes, revolutionary changes, overnight.

Mr. MacDonald: Oh no, we would move with vigour and determination.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Well, vigour and determination—I am getting away from answering the question here, Mr. Speaker, because of these interjections.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I simply just want to say to the hon. member who raised the question that this has caused a little more delay because of refinements. At the point in time when we hoped to publish the report we went on to refine it even more. That is the cause of the delay.

Mr. Deacon: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Would the Minister consider that a corporation should be given three or four years, if it had a problem in meeting requirements to fulfill proper reporting practice, or would he feel that they should do it in one year? I cannot see why we have to put up with this long—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I have some doubt that the question actually is supplementary to the first question. The hon. Minister of Transport.

Hon. I. Haskett (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, on Wednesday afternoon the hon. member for Wellington South (Mr. Worton) raised a question and asked me if I would care to comment on a newspaper article in which my Deputy Minister, Mr. Walter MacNee, was quoted as having said something with respect to damage caused to Highway 401 as a result of overloading, and the inference of the question was whether we are now allowing overloading that was causing that kind of damage to our highways.

My Deputy Minister was speaking to the Automotive Transport Association convention and dealing with the matter of overloading. He was dealing with the increased penalties that were introduced in the amendment to The Highway Traffic Act last spring, I think, expressing the hope that they would result in considerable reduction in the amount of damage caused by overloading. He went on to speak of the emphasis that would be placed in the future on the loading of individual or groups of axles.

I think it was in that context that he was pointing out that in this one stretch of Highway 401—the east lanes from Highway 25 to Highway 10—there had been a very intensive loading of the highway so that it showed through there. As a result that piece of the highway required a major repair job in only a fraction of what was considered to be its normal life, and he was making a very good point to the trucking people that individual and group axle loading would be given more attention in the future than it had in the past. Normally a truck is weighed against its maximum registered weight, and not too much attention had been paid in the past to the distribution of the load as against the spacing of the axles.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, by way of supplementary question: Is the Minister saying that the individual or group axle road regulations have been altered, or is he considering altering them, or what?

Hon. Mr. Haskett: Mr. Speaker, that is exactly what my Deputy was emphasizing before the trucking association—that more emphasis is going to be placed on the distribution of loads on individual axles.

Mr. MacDonald: Then, Mr. Speaker, the Minister has admitted, has he not—

Mr. Speaker: Order! A question?

Mr. MacDonald: —that the responsibility rests with this department and not with the overloading, because the regulations have been wrong and he has been beating the highways up as a result?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Parkdale.

Mr. J. B. Trotter (Parkdale): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Agriculture and Food.

In view of the information given to the standing committee on health, would the Minister consider withdrawing Bill 194 and using the Christmas recess to discuss the matter with the contending parties and bring in a new bill?

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): Mr. Speaker, there are many suggestions that have been made before the standing committee on health concerning proposed amendments to Bill 194, and yesterday I undertook to suggest to the committee that all of these proposed amendments would be given very serious consideration before implementation.

I would point out, however, Mr. Speaker, with great respect, that there has been a great deal of discussion on the principles that are inculcated in that bill. These discussions have been going on, as was indicated yesterday, and as I indicated, since 1962 by various people and by various committees, many working together, some working separately. The bill has been introduced as a way of, we think, resolving the issue. We appreciate the suggestions that have been made concerning amendments. I would suggest, Mr. Speaker, that if we are to inculcate the amendments that were proposed, we simply emasculate the bill, and make it virtually useless. Now I think we have to take that into consideration when we are talking about amendments to that bill and as far as I am concerned, I see no justification for any Royal commission to be established. That would take a long time—maybe a year or two years or whatever it may take. I think that with the amount of work that is being done by our staff and others in seeing how some of those amendments can be made—and some were quite valid—we intend to try to put them in. Then I would at least hope to have some type of a progress report to make that might wind these hearings up to the satisfaction of all concerned. I would hope to be able to do that.

Mr. Trotter: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the fact that there seems to be some agreement by the main contending parties, could the Minister not get them together and stop the great hassle over Bill 194? I am not asking for a Royal commission. It never occurred to me that I was asking that.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Speaker, that is a fine suggestion that has been made by the member for Parkdale. I appreciate the sincerity with which he has made it, but let me say that the presentation which was made yesterday by the general manager of the humane society indicates clearly that the position of the humane society has not changed one iota since 1962.

Mr. Trotter: Oh, that is wrong.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No, it is not wrong.

Mr. MacDonald: A supplementary question. In view of the fact that at one point the humane society said, "No matter what amendments are made we will never accept Bill 194," and now Tom Hughes has said, "Here are specific amendments, accept them and we will support Bill 194," how can the Minister pronounce such an intransigent position? The Minister is the problem—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Oh no, oh no. That is not the position at all.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Correctional Services): Why does the member not show some courage over there?

Mr. MacDonald: We are showing some courage. Why does the Minister not show some flexibility?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I must point out to the hon. members that if they wish a reply to the supplementary question, the time has expired. I will permit the hon. Minister to reply if he so wishes.

Mr. G. Ben (Humber): That Minister wants dogs and cats to lead the lives of pregnant mares.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Speaker, there is no one more interested than I am in getting this matter resolved, and resolved satisfactorily, and we hope to be able to do this. I was concerned that the president of the organization said that regardless of the changes that we would make, they would not accept the bill.

Mr. MacDonald: But he changed that. He—

Mr. Trotter: They got him on tape.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Now just a moment, just a moment. The president said one thing. The general manager said another. This is what happened yesterday and we are wondering just where the position really lies. But when you study the amendments—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Speaker, will my hon. friends just desist long enough to listen?

Hon. Mr. Randall: They do not want the facts.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: If they really want to make those amendments that were proposed yesterday we simply emasculate the bill.

Mr. MacDonald: We will examine that.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: There are some things in that brief we can do. We intend to try to do them. But let us not forget that we have a purpose in mind and we want to fulfill that purpose which is our objective, nothing else.

Mr. Speaker: The time for the question period has now expired.

Petitions.

Presenting reports.

Motions.

Introduction of bills.

THE SEPARATE SCHOOLS ACT

Hon. W. G. Davis (Minister of Education) moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend The Separate Schools Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS ACT

Hon. Mr. Davis moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend The Public Schools Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, both of these Acts are, I think, very non-controversial; basically some clarification of definitions, some housekeeping. In The Separate Schools Act there is an extension to the transportation provisions that the boards will have the right to pay fees or moneys to the parents for board and lodging as well as transportation. There is nothing controversial, I think, in either bill.

Mr. E. W. Sopha (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, before the orders of the day, may one enquire how it comes about that The Landlord and Tenant Act, which is Bill 234, was introduced on Tuesday of this week; today is Friday and the bill is still not yet printed? Surely there must be a great many people in the province who are anxious to examine the terms of this statute.

Mr. Speaker: I am informed that the bill is actually printed, it is available and will be on the paper on Monday, in the books.

Orders of the day.

Clerk of the House: The 26th order, House in committee of supply; Mr. R. D. Rowe in the chair.

On vote 801:

Mr. Sopha: Mr. Chairman, at the conclusion of the proceedings last night, the member for Riverdale (Mr. J. Renwick) was advocating a new approach to the problem of alcoholism and drug addiction. He was far from clear in respect of the implementation of what he called the necessity of the absorption of this important branch of The Department of Health into the total framework of health services in the province.

We on this side of the House have consistently, at least for a decade, taken the position that it is completely wrong in coping with this very grave social problem, to adopt an attitude that has implicit in it a heavy element of punitiveness. When I was saying that, my mind went back to the former member for Dovercourt, when that constituency consisted—Joe Gould—

Mr. J. B. Trotter (Parkdale): It still exists, it was Bracondale.

Mr. Sopha: Bracondale. Joe Gould. I can well recall his very tenacious fight in this House about certain amendments to The Liquor Control Act which would have imposed very severe penalties in respect of the offences of being intoxicated in a public place. Indeed, it was one of the few occasions during my time in this House that a member, by reason of perseverance, compelled or intimidated the Attorney General at times to change the provisions of the bill.

We have always had wide agreement on the Treasury benches, and certainly from certain prestigious and sophisticated individuals over there, about the rationale of the approach. To name one, the Minister of Correctional Services (Mr. Grossman) has perennially agreed with us about the distasteful aspect of the revolving-door policy. And he has said, in so many words, quite bluntly and frankly—that quality for which he is noted—that he would just as soon not have the responsibility in his institutions for the care of the many thousands of people for whom he must assume responsibility during the course of a year. Indeed, Mr. Chairman, many of them come to visit him on different occasions during the course of any one calendar year.

I do not want to belabour that. The member for Riverdale picked a figure out of the air, which he alleged had some validity, that there were some 90 cases that he saw in Moosonee. Of course, a great preponderance of those would probably, because of the ethnological quality of that community, be from our Indian brethren there. I say through you, Mr. Chairman, to the member for Riverdale, if he reads these remarks—and the Minister of Health (Mr. Wells)—that if you wanted to get 90 people in any community under charge before the justices for being intoxicated in a public place, you could have the police forces station themselves at almost any social setting where alcohol is consumed.

In the city of Toronto they could stand outside the private clubs and pick up 90 in a relatively short period; they could go to the lobbies of the major hotels, certainly the one I stay in, and they could get all sort of candidates who infringe that statute. I have always condemned the punitive approach which must at least have the tacit support of The Department of Health. The Minister of Health must at least be complacent about it in that he permits his Cabinet colleagues responsible for these things to perpetuate the approach. I have always condemned it because it is so terribly and wrongly discriminatory against the poor. If you go to the magistrates' courts and the provincial judges' courts, the people in the dock, the prisoners who are there to answer to the charge of intoxication are invariably people from the lower economic strata of the society. You do not get the well-heeled drunks there, you get those who are largely without abode; they do not have a fixed place of residence, they are transient, they are wanderers, and particularly wandering at night. And the force of the law comes down on them indiscriminately. They are haled into court and go through the revolving-door process.

There is a breath of fresh air on the horizon. We have said these things many times in this House, but I want to ask something of the Minister of Health—I had hoped the Attorney General (Mr. Wishart) would be here so that I could ask him, especially since this matter I am going to refer to arose in his constituency. The ray of light that I advert to is the remarks made by Provincial Judge James Greco a week or so ago in Sault Ste. Marie. I know that Judge Greco, a very able, alert, intelligent man, one of the younger of the provincial judges, has not been a long time on the bench, so he has not developed that staleness and sometimes that cynicism that one sees among occupants of the bench who have been there for a number of years.

I observed in the press—and, like my friend from York South (Mr. MacDonald) I do not clip these things out, I cannot quote verbatim into the records—but I saw in the press a week or so ago, where Judge Greco adverted from the judicial bench that it was terribly wrong to make drunkenness an offence at all. That it ought not even to be an offence. That is a more extreme position than we ever took on this side of the House. I cannot recall any of my colleagues and myself, though we talked about this perennial question, ever saying that the offence ought to be eliminated altogether. Now Judge Greco has said that we ought not even to have these people in the court, we ought not to condemn them from the point of making the vice a prohibited one. Now, perhaps—

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Correctional Services): Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. member a question? Is it an offence to be "drunk" or is it an offence to be "drunk in a public place"?

Mr. Sopha: It is the latter, of course. But Judge Greco has said that we ought not to descend upon the element of the public place. We ought not to select that. In other words, and I think he went on—I wish the newspaper report had been longer than it was—but he appeared, to say that a person in this permissive society has the right to get drunk if he wants to get drunk. Well, of course that is true. You, Mr. Chairman, although you would not think of doing it, if you wanted to go out this afternoon and become intoxicated, you are perfectly free to do so; you just must not flounder around the lobby of the Royal York Hotel when you are doing it.

Judge Greco poses a very good question. If the Ontario government, which surely must be among the world's biggest bootleggers—there must be few in the world that are involved in the whisky business to the extent of this government—puts in the hands of people this potable substance, this anaesthetic, then there must be an element of hypocrisy about it. It singles out this one aspect and says: Here is conduct that is proscribed if you over-indulge in it, in a public place. Then your conduct is of the type that society wants to render you an apostate.

Well, it may be that this Judge Greco has given the Minister of Health, and those officials who serve under him in the alcoholism and drug addiction research foundation, some food for thought. And we might begin to think in terms of sponging this discriminatory provision from the statutes of the province altogether. Surely we cannot pass this over without again referring to the fact that, of that vast amount of money the Minister of Correctional Services spends, a very substantial proportion of it must be spent on the custody of those who have infringed that specific statute.

I, for one, will not rest, as long as I am a member of this House, from declaiming against this discriminatory provision in the statute as it discriminates against the poor. I must be very careful and choose my words with great solicitude—but it discriminates, as I observed with my own eyes, very seriously against the Indian population. Daily, when I go to the provincial judges' court, a heavy proportion of those in custody for being drunk in a public place are of Canada's first citizens. I suspect that is because they are away from the reserve. They are away from their normal home. They are visiting in the community. They have not got a fixed place of abode in the community, so they come under the surveillance of the police. The police see them.

But I have never been able to understand why the police forces do not see with the same perspicuity the well heeled people who have overindulged. The answer is plain. Another element to that discrimination is that they do not see them because, if they know the individual that is a bit under the weather, they either take him home, or call him a cab, or suggest that he gets home, or call his wife.

Calling the wife, of course, is the most therapeutic device ever designed by man. She brings to the problem far more effective measures than the alcoholism or drug addiction research foundation could ever dream up—and puts them into operation with great dispatch. That is what some of my married friends have told me.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Sopha: That is what they told me. Well, maybe Judge Greco has something, and I would like to hear from the Minister of Health—the new Minister of Health, said to have young and progressive ideas; certainly a man of great human compassion. I cannot recall that he ever spoke in the House on this subject before.

I would like to hear whether he intends to pursue, or his people are going to pursue that area of what Judge Greco has opened up. I only wish that the Attorney General had been here. I should have spoken to him last night, as I was anxious to do—he was in his seat, and I am not criticizing him at all—but I especially wanted to hear him, because he is responsible for Judge Greco. That is his community and he appointed the judge, and he knows him well. Maybe the Attorney General has had an opportunity to discuss this with Judge Greco at greater length? Well, I just hope that there are a great many more of the younger provincial judges who will speak out fearlessly along these lines, in order to achieve some justice and equity toward these unfortunate members of our society.

Before I sit down, I was bothered by the remarks made by the member for Riverdale. He appeared to be telling us in terms that his leader, the member for York South would call "simplistic"—that word is not in any dictionary of course—he appeared to be saying that people take drugs because they seek escape, because the society is what it is, because it is structured in the manner it is.

That, of course, is not new. I think Thomas Hobbs said that, in the mid-seventeenth century or at least that was implicit in his remarks. Max Weber said it in a different way. Of course society as it is presently structured creates many hangups, many frustrations, many stimuli for the seeking of releases.

I am depressed, because I am quite sure that among my 117 colleagues there are a great many who do not yet understand that it is an aspect of the society about which many of our young are complaining, and they are complaining in two major ways. I am sure a great many do not understand just how forceful is the assault upon the values of this society by many of our young people. They are showing their opposition to its structural form by withdrawal, and the characteristics of contempt. And a great many of them, of course, are seeking escape by use of the drugs that organized society seeks to limit.

Those are two major facets of the attack upon the values of this society. They say that the structure of this society must change very radically in order to evolve something—like a phoenix from the ashes. Where you do not have to keep building bigger and better mental hospitals to care for those who are unable to cope with the society, who can no longer adjust themselves to it, which is precisely what this society is doing.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): That is what the hon. member for Riverdale says, and you dismissed it as simplistic.

Mr. Sopha: Yes, because he did not tell us. I would have been delighted to hear how you—

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Of course it is simplistic.

Mr. MacDonald: It is not. It is guidelines.

Mr. Sopha:—propose the alcoholism and drug addiction foundation must alter its ways of conducting its business in order to cope with the total structural picture of the society.

Unfortunately, we do not know what characteristics the new Utopia might have that would lessen dependence upon these release mechanisms in the form of addictive drugs. We will have to wait a decade or two in order to see just what changes are effected.

In the meantime, the member for Riverdale was perfectly correct that the drug addiction, the alcoholism foundation, is part of our guilt complex. That, of course, is the old idea of the indulgences. That is, the purchase of indulgences. We make $150 million, or perhaps more—the profits keep going up. This is one of the biggest businesses in Canada. We spend six of it. I am no good at mathematics—six over 150, how many per cent is that?

Mr. MacDonald: Four per cent.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Approximately.

Mr. Sopha: Four per cent. We put four per cent back into corrective and research measures. The justification of the limit of that expenditure is that we have the largest operation in research on the continent—or at least they continue to proclaim. Well, who am I to complain? I recall when I came into the House the expenditure, I believe, was something like $700,000. I can remember the day that Leslie Frost stood up in that inimitable way and put his palms up—and you knew when he put the palms up that was a real blooper—and he said, “We are spending $700,000, the most on the continent, the highest expenditure on the continent.” Well, it has become ten times that amount now, but maybe it is not enough.

I am one of those who share the enthusiasm and high regard of the leader of the Opposition (Mr. Nixon), as he so correctly said, for the operations of his branch, but notwithstanding that, it appears that the total number of alcoholics in our society keeps increasing. The curve is an endless one, a Mount Everest, a 45-degree perhaps. It is cause for some pessimism that we do not achieve a situation where we have some form of check upon it. Maybe Judge Greco has the answer in the permissiveness. If you take away the sting of it being proscribed conduct then it becomes less attractive to do it.

Believe me, I have said this before, those are just not idle words, and I do not like to talk in generalizations, but I know, among many of our Indian friends, that they will take a bottle of wine and drink the whole thing down in a couple of gulps, because they are so accustomed to the policeman being at their elbow and taking it away from them when that very objectionable law was on the books that an Indian could not have alcohol in any form. They were so afraid of losing it that it was safer to have it within the stomach than run the risk of the policeman taking the bottle. That is a cultural problem, of course, and you can imagine my delight when the other day the Supreme Court of Canada finally declared ultra vires that objectionable feature of The Indian Act in respect of Indians not having possession off the reservation.

I notice the man from Prince Albert got up and said, “All this is a tremendous victory for the Bill of Rights,” and yet he was Prime Minister of Canada for how many years—five years?—and it was open to him when he led the government to change that provision. He never did. He never took that provision out of The Indian Act, and certainly his statement of last week must have some taste of ashes. But he is a strange man, he is a unique man, and you never know, he might say anything from day to day. He has arrived at that point where—

Hon. Mr. Grossman: A great man.

Mr. Sopha: Well, in some ways.

Mr. MacDonald: Some people reach it early, some people reach it late.

Mr. Sopha: In some ways.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Even the hon. member for Sudbury is great in some ways, but I do not know which.

Mr. Sopha: In some ways. What I do not care for particularly, is the trail of French Canadians that he has left behind him.

Mr. MacDonald: What vote are we on now?

Mr. Sopha: I would be delighted to hear the Minister of Health in respect of Judge Greco's observations.

Mr. MacDonald: Does the Minister wish to deal with this topic before we move on to others?

Hon. T. L. Wells (Minister of Health): Yes, Mr. Chairman, I would like to thank the members who have spoken about this, particularly about the alcoholism and drug addiction research foundation. I think the member for Middlesex South (Mr. Bolton), the member for Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Downer), the leader of the Opposition, the member for Riverdale and now my friend from Sudbury have presented some very good and very interesting and very valid points about the work of this foundation, because I think we all realize that it is a very difficult problem. It is a problem that society as a whole faces—the problem of addiction to various substances, such as tobacco, alcohol and drugs, and the like. It is one that quite a few people feel they are experts in, and about which they want to impose their views on the rest of us. I think it is an area where perhaps we know far too little.

Mr. MacDonald: Put the mirror away.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Oh, just sit and listen. I sat here and listened, so just listen to what I have to say.

Mr. MacDonald: But you are closed-minded on one of them.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I am not closed-minded. Listen to hear what I have to say.

Dealing with some of the specific points that have been raised, first I want to say to the hon. member for Sudbury that I do not think I am going to comment on Judge

Greco's remarks as such in their context, because I think perhaps the Attorney General should comment on those, but on basic philosophy I certainly would agree with the position that has been put that a person who is picked up drunk should not be put in jail. I agree with this basic philosophy and I agree that we have got to work toward some other method of treatment. These people should not be considered as a legal problem; they should be a medical problem, and this certainly is my philosophy on this matter.

The question then remains, what do we do about it? I immediately wanted to find out what we, in our department, were doing about it because it is not a single department's responsibility, it is an inter-departmental responsibility of this government. I found out that we had set up a detoxication centre in Toronto, here, on Harbord Street. This is a pilot project. It has 23 beds in it. This is a centre where people who have been picked up as drunks can be brought and can be treated rather than taken to jail. I understand that about 1,000 patients have gone through this detoxication centre in the last year.

From this project we have been able to establish guidelines to see how this thing can operate, to see the kind of staff that is necessary, to begin to come to grips with the handling of this problem of the chronic, drunken offender. The results of this work and the recommendations that are coming out of the work of the detoxication centre have been formulated and they are presently being studied by the officials of our department, The Department of the Attorney General and the department of my friend on my left here, the Minister of Correctional Services. I am not at liberty to discuss the complete recommendations at the present time because we have not had a complete opportunity to study these. I just want to assure the House that my philosophy is such as I stated it, and I am going to do everything possible to see that based on the recommendations and the studies we have from the detoxication centre that is being operated by the addiction foundation, we are going to press toward a policy of making this thing a medical treatment problem and not a legal problem.

I am sure my friend from Sudbury is aware that we do have a centre in Kenora also run by the foundation. It may not be the perfect answer there, but it is operating in a manner particularly for the Indian population and I am told that it has had a help and an effect there. Perhaps when we have the general recommendations from this centre here, we will be able to improve that, but it will also provide us with input on this whole problem which I think will be useful.

I would like to go on and deal with the remarks of the member for Riverdale and in so doing I want to say that while I appreciate his remarks, I think that his suggestion that the foundation be abolished and be taken into the mainstream of the department and other services of government in the community, is another case—as the member for Sudbury said—of oversimplifying a solution to a problem. Basically, I would say that we have been discussing with the addiction and research foundation over the last few months, its future role, trying to work out a statement of policy as to where it fits into this whole picture in this province. We have been working together toward the development of a comprehensive network of treatment services for alcoholism, but we have realized, and we realize this very definitely, these kind of things should not be operated by the addiction research foundation.

It is not its role to operate the treatment facilities. The treatment facilities must be part of the general health stream; they must be part of the general health services in the community. Therefore, the treatment facilities that the foundation operates—and I think you can make a valid case for its operating some of them—are those that will assist it in its research function. Therefore, it is a 100-bed hospital connected with its new centre down on Spadina Avenue, because into that it will be able to bring people who will be used for research and, of course, this will all be tied in with the medical science centre at the University of Toronto.

In planning such services, it is recognized by our department and by government, as I said earlier, that alcoholism is a complex problem involving physical, mental and social components, and it follows therefore that effective treatment services require attention of all these factors which go to make up this syndrome. Therefore, they have to call upon the general resources of the whole community and we have to use the general hospital system, we have to use the social service agencies, we have to use other agencies in the community to assist in the treatment of drug and alcohol problems.

The second component of treatment requires attention to problems of family life, employment, associations and social behaviour. In some cases, it requires extended contact with patients over a long period of rehabilitation. This range of treatment services requires skills and abilities available again through other community groups—social service agencies, the church, the Alcoholics Anonymous group, and other community facilities. These have to become part of the total picture of looking after the alcoholism and drug dependence problem. The experience of the foundation is that government must support the rationale of comprehensive treatment if efforts to deal with this problem are to prove successful. In other words, we are not suggesting that it be isolated as we did in the past with tuberculosis control; we are saying that the foundation here is a catalyst and that the treatment facilities, the treatment of the total problem, rests with the total health services and the social services of the community.

I think it has to be made very clear that there is a role for the foundation in this overall picture. The budget of the foundation, in the estimates that are presented here, is $7,325,000. There is the one vote, and then there is the research money. This, of course—and my friend from Sudbury was quoting percentages—is only the money that is spent directly by the foundation and their grants for treatment services, their grants in aid and so forth. There is, of course, much more spent in the general health stream on treatment of this problem than shows in this actual vote. A very simple percentage. I suppose the member for Sudbury might say—what is his term—simplistic?

Mr. MacDonald: Simplistic. He says it is not in the dictionary.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Well, he is probably going to write a new dictionary one of these days, so we may as well all use his terms now.

Anyway, he has been a little simplistic in quoting that percentage because of course there are many more—

Mr. MacDonald: Do not accuse him of being simplistic! Thank God he has gone out.

Hon. Mr. Wells: —there are many more dollars being spent on treatment for those suffering from alcoholism and drug dependence and so forth, that do not show in the budget of the addiction research foundation.

I would like for the benefit of the members of the House, to outline what we think and what the foundation and the department have agreed. We have agreed on the approach that the treatment shall be part of the general health stream and that The Department of Health is the responsible agency, with our bodies and groups, for co-ordinating all these treatment facilities in the community settings where they would normally be found. The role of the foundation is this:

First, it has the research role, the further development of programmes, clinical, biological, pharmacological, physiological, social and legal research and investigation into problems of alcohol and drug dependence, and methods of control and prevention.

Secondly, it has the responsibility for the operation of a limited number of high-quality, comprehensive treatment programmes, as I mentioned before. These programmes will serve the purpose of further developing and refining the techniques of treatment, providing a base for programmes of clinical investigation and evaluation and for providing an environment for training programmes for the wide variety of professionals who must become involved in treatment.

Thirdly, the development of programmes directed toward the prevention of alcoholism and drug programmes both within the school system and the general community. For this purpose, the foundation will extend and intensify its co-operative programmes with the various departments of government concerned with abuse of alcohol.

Fourthly, to provide advice and consultation to government and its various departments on the nature and number of programmes required in various areas, and on ways of improving the quality of treatment, education and prevention.

As I said in my opening statement, the foundation is the catalyst and the social conscience for this problem in this province. And as the hon. member for Middlesex South has said, many of us find it is like all kinds of things; you are not appreciated in your own community or your own province; you go outside this province, as I do to the federal Health Ministers' conferences; you go down to the United States, as the hon. member did, and you hear this group quoted as one of the ideals in the way to handle this problem, the kind of body that many jurisdictions could set up. I think that within these general guidelines is what I called the philosophy and future approach of this body. I think we will find it will give an even greater service to this province in the years ahead.

I would like to assure the hon. leader of the Opposition that he will be continuing to receive his copy of Addiction. We have not quite found out—

Mr. D. M. De Monte (Dovercourt): I have not been getting mine either.

Hon. Mr. Wells: The hon. member for Dovercourt has not been getting his, either? All the members of this House should be getting them. I have been getting mine—

Mr. L. M. Reilly (Eglinton): I have been receiving mine.

Hon. Mr. Wells: You have? The member for Eglinton has been receiving his. Anyway, it is published quarterly and it is mailed to approximately 20,000 individuals, and I am sure we all agree with the sentiments of the hon. leader of the Opposition; it is a valuable publication and it adds much to our knowledge in this field.

It is only one, of course, of many programmes that are of an educational nature, planned and carried out by the foundation. They have several approaches in their educational thrust. They are trying for educational programmes to reach young people, through schools, teachers and parents. They work closely with The Department of Education and with other groups who are planning programmes on this whole matter for young people. There are special educational programmes for employed people and the literature about these programmes, and so forth, that is prepared, is distributed to all levels of management and labour. There are professional information services for professional people directed to those who are responsible for providing treatment for alcohol and drug dependence problems. Then there is the general programme to provide information for parents.

I would just like to show the hon. members one example. These fact sheets that we have mentioned—I have asked that they be sent to all the hon. members, if they have not got them now. We have sent out over 1.5 million copies. They are very inexpensively prepared so that they can be changed to keep pace with changing developments in each of these fields. These were issued in October 1969 and they can be quickly revised if new information is needed. There is one on amphetamines, on LSD, on cannabis, and on solvents; and these are available. As I say, over 1.5 million of them have been distributed already. I thank the hon. leader of the Opposition for his comments about our advertising programme. We have had many comments about it, and I think that the information that it conveys, which is much the same as that found in these pamphlets on these various subjects, has been very helpful to many people.

I appreciate his comments that they are perhaps being a little more attractive to young people. And a little more—being in the advertising business I know exactly what he means. You cannot always encourage a person to read an ad that is completely typed. You have to have something to draw him in and keep him interested, and I am told that the foundation is planning a special series of ads for Canadian High News which will contain much of the same information as these ads but will be presented in a manner that we hope will attract the attention of the young people who read this newspaper which goes out to high school students.

We also, as I say, are planning an approach that may be used on television, and this is in the active planning stage. The hon. member for Humber (Mr. Ben), in his remarks referred to grants to various treatment centres and so forth. I just want to tell him that in Metropolitan Toronto, there is a 24-hour, seven-days-a-week information and referral service operated by the foundation. From 9.00 a.m. to 11.00 p.m. this is staffed by trained staff at foundation headquarters, and from 11.00 in the evening until 9.00, they have commercial answering service at present, with very specific instructions to refer calls requiring assistance to the professional staff at the foundation. And I am told that many of them get up at 2.00 and 3.00 in the morning and go out to a specific call to take that person to one of the treatment centres and help him out, to find out if hospitalization is required for any of these calls. The calls sometimes are just informational with the caller wanting to know something. Others of the calls are a specific request for assistance. And I think they have about 150 calls—a week is it?—150 calls per day has been the average that has been coming in on this service.

Now for the benefit of the members of this House, I will give you the phone number if anybody might want to use it at any time. The number is 365-6801. This phone number is listed in the phone book under the Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Research Foundation of Ontario. But I am also told that it is well known in the areas where it is determined that the drug sub-culture exists—those who perhaps have had some contact with it, that this number is well known there—and they know that they can get assistance and help by phoning this number.

Now, the member for Humber also referred to some specific treatment centres—places where they had programmes to help drug users and so forth. I would like him to know that Street Haven in Toronto receives $10,000 as a grant in aid from the foundation; the Distress Centre in Toronto receives $2,000; Community Services Organization receives $5,000; Yorkville Diggers Incorporated which runs the digger house receives $12,000; the Logan Centre in Toronto receives $6,000; the Jewish Family and Child Service group in Toronto, which operates a trailer, I believe, receives $12,000. And there are many grants similar to this, made in other centres in this province.

I would like to say a few words about marijuana and some remarks that have been made about my statements in this regard. I made these statements in this House, because I was expressing, as I said at that time, a personal opinion, and I think that there is no member of this House who would suggest that any member cannot have a personal opinion on any particular problem. I want to assure the House that this in no way affects my attitude towards the work of this foundation, or the job that they have to do. I still feel, as I said then, that I am not in favour of the general legalization of marijuana as some people tend to portray this. I talked to people who say that marijuana should be legalized so that it can be sold just as cigarettes are being sold today, and to this proposition I am just as opposed.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): What about your quote on research, though?

Hon. Mr. Wells: That is my position and I think that there are not really too many people, even those who say “legalize marijuana,” in a simplified manner, who really mean this. They do not really mean that they want to start having huge advertising campaigns and the cigarette companies switching over and selling packages of marijuana in every corner drug store. I do not think that this is what they mean. But this is the kind of simplified approach that they use, and I merely used the other approach to say that my personal opinion is opposed to this. But I want to assure the members that I am in no way opposed to any of the research activities of the alcoholism and drug addiction research foundation. I feel that this is certainly a subject that needs a considerable amount of research, and more research, on it. And certainly I am pleased with the kind of programmes that have been proposed by the foundation.

I also would like to say that in my assessment of the situation, I think that this is an area we need more research in. We do not only need research as to whether marijuana is medically harmful or not. This is not really the complete problem. The complete problem is what about the social effects of legalization of marijuana? The hon. member for Riverdale said: "If it is shown to be about the same, or less danger, or to present less hazards or less trouble than alcohol or tobacco, would you not be in favour of legalizing it?" I would just have to say again: personally, I would not. Because, and this is a personal opinion, why should we inflict on society a substance which is going to necessitate in 25, 30 or 50 years huge expenditures of money to pick up the pieces, as we are now doing with tobacco and with alcohol? We really see this as an overall public health problem.

The legalization of marijuana on a very general basis could present a very great public health problem in the years ahead. I am saying "it could" because we do not have any research on this. This is what we have got to find out.

We are going to carry out studies at the research foundation, to find, for instance, how you can actually measure the amount of cannabis or the actual drug in the bloodstream and so forth. It may be, while we have breathalyzer tests to test for alcoholism now, we may have to have some particular test to find out if a person can drive safely if he has been smoking five or six or a pack of marijuana cigarettes. We do not know anything about this yet. This is what we have to find out. We do not know whether a person will be fit to drive if he has been smoking marijuana.

This is one of the things that I say really are the social problems. It may not do any physical damage to him, perhaps at once, but we have got to find out the answers to a lot of these things.

Mr. De Monte: Has the Minister, Mr. Chairman, checked into the incidence of people who start taking marijuana as a kick or something and ultimately end up with the heavier and more dangerous drugs?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Well, I think the hon. member realizes that that of course is another problem. There are many conflicting reports and stories about this.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): Will the Minister accept a question?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Sure.

Mr. Shulman: While the Minister is doing that, will he also check on the number of people who take cigarettes and ultimately end up taking stronger drugs?

Hon. Mr. Wells: These are perhaps valid points, and really, what they suggest is that we need a lot more research. Now, let me just state this point: I accept this fact and as I said, my personal view in no way contradicts the activities of this foundation. They are going ahead. Indeed, I would be dismayed if they did not go ahead and carry out the kind of research that needs to be done in this whole area. And they are going ahead to do it within the limits of how they legally can do it. And this is what we are working on. Now, I accept the position, that for instance marijuana is not a narcotic.

Mr. De Monte: Neither is LSD.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Marijuana is a hallucinogenic. It is in the category with LSD and others. It is a type of hallucinogenic. So I think that it perhaps does not belong in The Narcotics Act, and should be switched to The Food and Drug Act and this is a position which I stated yesterday in my opening remarks. This, of course, is something that again is continually being worked on. And I want to tell the members of this House that we discussed this subject at our Ministers' conference in Ottawa on Wednesday, and we discussed it with Mr. Munro, and he gave us an outline of how he expected the format of the LeDain commission to operate. In other words, he suggested that they would perhaps be bringing in some type of interim report. And he agreed with the suggestion of this government. We made the suggestion—as a matter of fact my predecessor, the member for Ontario (Mr. Dymond), made this suggestion—last spring, that a federal-provincial committee on drug dependency be established as an adjunct, as a working group, to the federal-provincial Ministers' conference.

You see, we do not really have any backup secretariat, but it is co-ordinated down there. We have to set them up especially. Mr. Munro agreed to this and he is setting up a federal-provincial advisory committee on drug dependency. The undertaking was given to us that this committee would be called in to consider the recommendations of the commission of enquiry into the non-medical use of drugs—in other words, the LeDain commission. So as we understand it, the terms of reference he gave to us were that this federal-provincial committee will be set up, and Mr. Archibald will be our representative on that committee. They will consider the interim report of the LeDain commission and we are hopeful that they will report to the council of Ministers on this matter, which will be another step in bringing all the resources in this country to focus on this very important matter.

I hope that clarifies my position on this, Mr. Chairman, and I think perhaps the other subject that the hon. member for Humber referred to was the committee on the healing arts. I am as sorry I do not have that report here as he is, it is always with regret to me that these reports seem to take about twice as long as anybody ever envisages that they will take when they are commissioned. But I am assured by the chairman of the committee on the healing arts that his report will be ready by mid-February. And I need it, we need it, we want it, and he has guaranteed me he will do everything possible to get it ready. It is just about ready for printing now.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order. I had the floor before and therefore I think I can make my point of order. I am not saying this so much in criticism as just to make a point.

We spent an hour and a half, or two hours, last night on the alcoholic research foundation and now another hour this morning. I could take an hour—I would be delighted to take an hour—and perhaps I should take an hour, but the fact of the matter is that on Monday night these estimates end. I submit that those of us who have other topics on vote 801 should have the right to go ahead to them. We will leave some time for public health, for mental health, for OHSIP, for OMSIP—for the whole department.

If we are doing to spend another two or three hours on this, it is obviously a very senseless apportioning of the time. So, Mr. Chairman, I have risen to take my place on the pecking order, if I may get back to your list, to move to other topics.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, could I just say that I appreciate what the leader of the New Democratic Party has said. That is why I have refrained from sort of hopping up and answering questions each time, because I realize in our new format we do not have time to continue on endlessly. If we could get all the questions together, I will do everything possible to make my remarks short and brief.

Mr. Chairman: I think the comments are very appropriate. Unless there is some pressing question in connection with alcoholism and drug addiction, we really should move on to another point.

Mr. G. Ben (Humber): With all due respect, Mr. Chairman, I have sat here quietly. Yesterday we had a disgraceful performance with interjections flying back and forth between the hon. Minister and the NDP. We sat here silent.

Mr. MacDonald: Just ask the questions.

Mr. Ben: The member for Riverdale got up and made a long talk on this subject. And before the Minister got up I indicated to you I had something to say on this topic and if the Minister wanted to proceed, fine, but I had something to say on alcoholism. I am going to say it, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order. I got the floor at the beginning of this sitting; I conceded it to the hon. member for Sudbury. I respectfully suggest to you that some time before 1.00 o'clock, having conceded it to one man, I do not have to concede it to everybody who gets up and makes an excuse.

Mr. Ben: I would point out, Mr. Chairman, it is the practice of this House to ask, "Is there anybody else on this topic?"

Mr. Chairman: Order, please!

Mr. MacDonald: Not under the new format.

Mr. Chairman: The member for York South did defer to the member for Humber a moment ago to pursue the same topic. Now, if it is a very brief discussion, I think it would be in order to carry on with that.

Mr. Ben: On a point of order. First of all, I would point out, Mr. Chairman, that the previous discussion was on the topic of alcoholism and then the Minister went into marijuana. I just want to point out, with reference to the discussion on marijuana, that it is not quite the way the Minister and others here have indicated. There is a body of research on the effects of marijuana. Perhaps it is not as clinical as some people desire, but there is not only a body of research but there is a body of literature on this particular topic.

For example, here in Toronto Dr. Sherwood Appleton, chief of psychiatry at Scarborough General Hospital, warned of one of the effects of marijuana. He said: "It can happen, even though they may not have been smoking pot just before getting into the driver's seat."

What was this with reference to? He was linking marijuana to killer drivers. He said that this is because regular smokers are continually subject to aimless drifting and often their smoking symptoms can occur spontaneously, at any time. That is, they may not have taken marijuana immediately before driving, but if they are continuous users the symptoms can return.

Mr. Shulman: That is not true.

Mr. Ben: All right. That is a symptom. It is a recorded symptom and is something that has been brought to the attention of the public by a doctor and therefore it is one reason why the use of marijuana is dangerous.

The hon. member for High Park shakes his head. His argument is this; some people have said that you should not use marijuana because it is a narcotic.

Mr. Shulman: It is not a narcotic.

Mr. Ben: The member for High Park says it is not a narcotic, therefore people can use it.

Then the hon. member for Dovercourt asked the Minister a question about the relation between the use of marijuana and the subsequent use of hard drugs. Facetiously and sarcastically, the member for High Park gets up and asks about the relationship of smoking ordinary cigarettes and hard drugs.

In other words, what he was going to say was if you could find one person who used marijuana and did not end up on hard drugs, that establishes the theory or the principle that people who do use marijuana do not go to hard drugs.

The findings of the United States commission on crime indicated that an overwhelming majority of those people who were on hard drugs had started on marijuana.

Mr. Shulman: They started on mother's milk.

Mr. Ben: All right. There he goes. They started on mother's milk too.

So what he is saying is this: Although most of the people who are on hard drugs started on marijuana, not everybody who started on marijuana has so far gone to hard drugs. Therefore, nobody should say that you go from marijuana to hard drugs. That is his philosophy in life. Let him live with it, it is not mine.

I will read an article here from Ann Landers. A lot of people read Ann Landers; maybe more people read Ann Landers than read what the hon. member for High Park has to say. The headline is, "She smoked marijuana and learned a lesson." If you need a letter from a 19-year-old girl who has smoked marijuana and can tell the world what it is like, here it is:

For months my friends talked about pot parties. They insist that marijuana is harmless, that it is less damaging than liquor, is not habit forming, has no withdrawal symptoms, no hangover, and is cheaper. I decided to try it.

At first we smoked in groups and everybody got high. Each of us paid the host, who bought the stuff from a pusher. Then we began to smoke in pairs. After a few weeks I started to smoke alone. I bought the stuff by the ounce from a friend.

After a while I had trouble making simple decisions. I had to ask my sister which dress to wear to work. I found myself asking a girl at the next desk how to spell simple words. I began putting things off because I could not make up my mind about anything. I lost my appetite and could not sleep. I used to read a lot but suddenly I could not concentrate long enough to finish a magazine article.

I had trouble getting up in the morning. My supervisor told me if I was late again I had better look for another job. It was then I decided to get off the junk.

The first day was fine, the next I was jittery, the third day all the problems I had been running from hit me in the face. I knew then that I was in worse shape than I had ever been in before. I was determined to kick the habit. I have gone through hell but, thank God, I have licked it.

And then she goes on.

Then here is an article from perhaps a more reliable source, since the hon. member for High Park does not think highly of Ann Landers. It says:

DROP THAT POT

Marijuana, said the advocates of legalizing its use, is safer than liquor.

And that, I imagine, is the hon. member for High Park.

As evidence to support this position they cite that 20,000 deaths that occur in the U.S. each year from cirrhosis, heart disease and other disorders, were related to alcoholism, but a report issued at the American Medical Association meeting seriously questioned the logic of the pro-pot argument and flatly declared that marijuana is a dangerous drug and as such is a public health concern.

The statement, the strongest yet to come from the medical profession on the marijuana question, was issued jointly by the American Medical Association's committee on mental health and alcoholism and drug dependence, and the committee on problems of drug dependence of the National Research Council after a two-year study.

The trouble with the pot-versus-alcohol argument, said the committee, is that proponents of legalizing the use of marijuana—

Our friend from High Park:

—are comparing the relatively slight effects of low doses of marijuana with the disastrous results of high doses of alcohol.

When high doses of marijuana and alcohol are compared, said the report, the effects upon the individual in society are highly deleterious in both cases.

In reaching a conclusion, the committee drew heavily on research conducted by Dr. Harris Isbell, of the University of Kentucky medical centre, on prisoner volunteers at the United States public health service addiction research centre in Lexington, Kentucky. Isbell gave the volunteers varying doses of tetra-cannabinol, one of the active ingredients in marijuana. At high doses he found the drug produced psychotic symptoms, including delusions and hallucinations, in most of the volunteers.

The fact that psychotic reactions among typical pot smokers in the U.S. seemed to be rare, both Isbell and the AMA-NRC committees concluded, is due to the low potency of the marijuana available here. However, serious antisocial behaviour has long been associated with such potent forms of the cannabis plant as hashish used in the near east.

Should pot be legalized, the committee warned, potent forms of marijuana might eventually dominate the legal market, even as they are now beginning to appear on the illicit market. Even weak marijuana preparations, the report added, can cause behaviour disorders with serious consequences.

The AMA-NRC committee concurred with the growing number of medical groups in its view that pot smoking should not be placed in the same category as a narcotic use. Although favouring a severe penalty for marijuana selling, the committee regarded punishment for possession as harsh and unrealistic.

That is, I trust, a little more of an authority than Landers. I read Landers because it was a young 19-year-old that was presenting a view as to what happened with her, and, frankly, I would accept that 19-year-old's opinion perhaps more than I would medical research, because this is factual. This is what happened to this young girl. As the police themselves say, they are going to have 100,000 instead of 3,500 addicts if marijuana is legalized.

Then there is another one:

TESTS PROVE MARIJUANA HARMFUL

Proof that marijuana is harmful began unfolding here today. A physician of the National Institute of Mental Health said the active ingredient in marijuana, recently isolated, had produced psychotic-like states resembling that produced by LSD.

Dr. Donald R. Jasinsky told a national conference on psychedelic drugs that a patient developed visual hallucinations, distortions of sensory perception, loss of insight, muscle rigidity, and muteness. He later related that he felt detached from his body, saw himself shrivelled down to a doll, and witnessed his own funeral.

The damaging new evidence comes as an answer to those who justify use of marijuana on the ground that no hazards have been proven. One study has shown up to 20 per cent of college and high school students have tried marijuana.

Then, further on, he said:

A sufficiently high dose can cause psychotic reaction in almost any individual.

They say there is no research. They say there is no evidence. There is no one so blind as he who will not see, and this is what those people over there will do—I say.

I do not know when they are going to be satisfied. I would suggest never, because they do not want to accept this. They would prefer that this state exists and that children continue to get themselves into difficulty.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Are you talking about us?

Mr. Ben: I am talking about the hon. members over there.

Now, Mr. Chairman, with regard to both marijuana and alcoholism. There was a most interesting article on addiction a couple of years ago—I think it was in 1968—by Dr. Charles Aharan.

Mr. Lewis: Charron!

Mr. Ben: It is Aharan, not Charron. It was printed in the United Church Observer and said: "Let us stop fooling ourselves about alcoholism." I am only going to read parts of it, because the Minister mentioned all the different social units that are going to be involved, or should be involved, in working with the alcoholism and drug research clinic, but he missed the most important one of them all—ourselves perhaps, and the churches.

Mr. Chairman: Before the hon. member proceeds would he permit the Chairman a brief interruption?

When the House opened this morning there were no guests with us, but we do have some very special visitors at this particular moment. They are from the great county of Waterloo. Not only the great county of Waterloo, the greatest part of that county, Waterloo South. Not only Waterloo South, but from the high school of the town of Preston.

Mr. Ben: To that I have to yield.

The article starts off:

Alcoholism is a disease. We have all heard that a great many times in the last 20 years—often enough that most of us believe it. It has been a useful idea in some ways because it has made it respectable to do something to help the alcoholic. "After all," we say, "he is sick. He cannot help it."

It is useful, but, unfortunately, in my opinion it is not true.

This is Dr. Charles Aharan.

On the basis of a good deal of experience with alcohol I no longer believe it is appropriate to consider alcoholism as a disease, at least not in the traditional sense. I believe that by calling it that we may ignore other important issues and we may also encourage the alcoholic to avoid his responsibility for his condition.

One difficulty with considering alcoholism a disease, like any other disease, though not the major one, is that treatment programmes narrowly based on a medical model are not merely wasteful, but often downright harmful when applied to the management of alcoholism.

By far the most widely prescribed medicine in the treatment of the alcoholic, the tranquilizer, is aimed at alleviating the discomfort. It has little or nothing at all to do with curing his disorder. The alcoholic is almost by definition a person who has dedicated himself to the avoidances of discomfort through reliance on the effects of a chemical.

Where the alcoholic receives medication over a long period of time—a treatment service—it is communicating to him its agreement with his philosophy that discomfort is not to be endured. The only difference is in the choice of the chemicals used.

Then he goes on:

To excuse the alcoholic for his conduct is potentially harmful, for it reinforces his already well-developed tendency to rationalize his conduct and avoid responsibility. If I were pressed to use one word to describe the alcoholic's behaviour I could think of no better word than "irresponsible."

The alcoholic tries to avoid making choices. When he does make choices, he makes them recklessly and on impulse and refuses wherever possible to accept its consequences. Recovery for the alcoholic depends on his gaining control over his behaviour and becoming responsible.

He goes on to say—and this is the important part—that perhaps there is a moral issue involved. He says:

I personally believe that the moral aspect is a central issue in alcoholism and that it cannot be ignored in any successful treatment programme.

Further:

To avoid the moral issue of alcoholism is at best stupid or at worst cowardly.

He goes on:

I believe that alcoholism in the individual is a symbol of a serious—

Mr. J. L. Brown (Beaches-Woodbine): Must he go on? Is it necessary, really?

Mr. Ben: Obviously. This is an article that was—

Mr. MacDonald: You are breaking the agreement we made with regard to the use of the time.

Mr. Ben: I am breaking no such agreement.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Chairman: Point of order.

Mr. MacDonald: The hon. gentleman is saying that he is not breaking an agreement. Then I think it is time for the deputy leader of the Liberal Party, in the absence of the leader of the Liberal Party, to face up to the issue. We have not five days to deal with these estimates, we have five periods. And if one member is going to re-hash this issue for the umpteenth time, then I think, Mr. Chairman, we have got to cut it out and sit down and take a look at the agreement again.

Mr. Ben: On a point of order. If the hon. member would just shut his mouth for a while, we could get on with the business of this House. This has not been brought up in these estimates, it is something new.

There was an agreement with the hon. member for High Park that he would speak only for as long as I spoke, but he went on twice as long.

All right, this is the kind of agreement they make. The hon. member for Riverdale took an hour yesterday, and judging by the cackle that came out of those headless chickens there, you would think it was something amazing. Now just shut up and let other people carry on. We sat here quietly all evening while you rattled, you prattled like a couple of old ladies who had nothing else to do. Now just shut up. One cannot make a gentleman's agreement with you people, because there are no gentlemen there.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Order please. The hon. member had—order. Order. Order.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order. Can you bring this person into order?

Mr. Chairman: I am attempting to.

Mr. MacDonald: Such slanderous comments, irresponsible—let us deal with the issue, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: I am attempting to do—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: The member for Humber is publicly losing control, and you should bring him to order for the good of this House, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. MacDonald: Exactly, exactly.

Mr. Chairman: I shall attempt to do so. The hon. member is—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Order, order. Will the hon. member for Humber please take his seat? He rose first on a point of order which turned out to be a speech.

Mr. MacDonald: Right.

Mr. Chairman: I might say that the agreement was, to my knowledge, under the new procedures, that there would be a total of 75 hours allotted to this debate on the estimates in the House—an additional 15 hours for the three departments that had gone to the standing committee.

I might inform the members that as of the completion of the previous departmental estimates, we had consumed 65 hours and 9 minutes, which would have left 9 hours and 51 minutes. At this point we had yesterday consumed 4 hours and 53 minutes, which leaves less than five hours including this morning.

Mr. Lewis: And the Minister would like to get to OHSIP.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Sure.

Mr. Chairman: How in the world the committee is going to complete five sittings in the remaining hours, I fail to see. I must point out that if everyone is going to stick to the agreement as per the rule, they should proceed, because we have not passed even one vote.

The hon. member for Humber.

Mr. Ben: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I was on my feet. By the way, the agreement was that five sittings are allocated to the consideration of the estimates of the Minister of Health—

Mr. Lewis: And we are well through the third.

Mr. Ben: We are on the third one and I point out that in The Attorney General's Department we used up most of our time considering the first two estimates. Then the rest of them were just approved.

An hon. member: You used up all the time.

Mr. Ben: The time is used up by the interjections of the NDP, not by this member.

I stated to say—

Mr. Lewis: Reading articles from Addiction.

Mr. Ben:—I believe that alcoholism in the individual is a symptom of a sickness underlying a personal disorder—

Mr. K. C. Bolton (Middlesex South): Point of order.

Mr. Ben:—characterized by an—

Mr. Chairman: Point of order.

Mr. Ben:—in the absence of—

Mr. Chairman: Point of order.

Mr. Bolton: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman. Lest silence should appear to give consent, may I reject the statement of the previous speaker that we are all atheists in this party.

Mr. Ben: First of all, I do not believe that the cloth—the collar reversed—necessarily means that a man is not an atheist. I recall in the early church—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Chairman, how long is this going to be tolerated?

Mr. Ben: It is going to be tolerated as long as you keep yattering.

Mr. Chairman: This is not a point of order. The hon. member—

Mr. Ben: I am on my feet.

Mr. Lewis: That was a legitimate point.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member should take his seat because a point of order has been raised.

Mr. Ben: He sat down.

Mr. Chairman: He directed a point of order to the Chair—

Mr. Ben: But he sat down after he made it.

Mr. Chairman: I would ask the hon. member to please be seated.

A point of order has been raised by the hon. member for Middlesex South in which he took objection to the allegation that members of the New Democratic Party were all atheists. I think at the least it is an uncalled-for remark and I do not believe it should have to be accepted by the members of the New Democratic Party in view of the objection. I would put it to the hon. member for Humber that he withdraw the statement to the effect that all New Democratic members are atheists.

Mr. Ben: Well, let us put it this way: I am entitled to express my opinion in this House. If anybody wants to get up and say things about me, that is fine. I will accept it.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Order. The hon. member is entitled to his opinion. He did not state it as a fact, he stated it as a matter of opinion.

Mr. Ben: That is right.

Mr. Chairman: We are all entitled to our opinions.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Chairman, we are going to move the adjournment of the House unless you pull this member into line.

Mr. Ben: Oh, go ahead and move it.

Mr. Lewis: This is ridiculous.

Mr. Chairman: I would ask the hon. member—

Mr. Lewis: He has now descended to approach us with—

Mr. Ben: I have not.

Mr. Chairman: I think the hon. member should—

Mr. Lewis: We have been listening to articles from Addiction which could be read by an adolescent three years ago. The time of the House is going, we have five periods for the Health estimates. We have mental health and OHSIP to debate and you allow this kind of travesty to persist.

Mr. Chairman: I think the hon. member should take cognizance of the fact as stated by the persons who have opposed his procedures.

Mr. Ben: Is it not something, Mr. Chairman? Do you remember how you tried to keep in line the hon. member for Scarborough Centre when she read letter after letter after letter after letter?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Ben: Last night the hon. member for High Park was reading and reading, and reading. All I do is read excerpts, not whole letters; I just read excerpts which show that the wrong attitude is being taken toward alcoholism and all of a sudden—

Mr. Chairman: Perhaps the hon. member would try to keep his remarks brief—

Mr. Ben: I just cannot count the words that were read over there—

Mr. Chairman: Would the hon. member please permit the Chair to conduct the proceedings? I would ask the hon. member to please try to observe the courtesies and the agreed-upon procedures, however informal they may have been, because all members of the committee are anxious to get to the remainder of these departmental estimates. I am sure the hon. member for Humber does not want to purposely waste the time of the House, so perhaps he would observe the courtesies and privileges attributed to all members.

Mr. Ben: I would suggest that you keep order over there, will you?

Mrs. M. Renwick (Scarborough Centre): On a point of order, Mr. Chairman. What was the reference that was made by the hon. member for Humber to the member for Scarborough Centre? I heard reference to the member for Scarborough Centre. Does the member for Humber mean the member for Scarborough West?

Mr. Lewis: No, alas no.

Mr. Chairman: I am sorry, I heard no reference to the hon. member for Scarborough Centre.

Mr. Ben: I did make a reference, Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Chairman: Is the member for Scarborough Centre objecting to whatever the reference may have been?

Mrs. M. Renwick: I want to know what it was, Mr. Chairman.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Sopha: I think it was complimentary.

Mr. Chairman: Perhaps the member for Humber would—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Chairman, will you allow the member to continue this agnostic fundamentalism?

Mr. Chairman: I am quite willing to do that if all other hon. members are agreeable. The hon. member for Humber.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): Mr. Chairman, on a point of order.

Mr. Chairman: Point of order.

Mr. Martel: Are you going to allow him to continue without withdrawing that statement or not?

Mr. Chairman: Which statement was that?

Mr. Martel: The statement about all of us being atheists.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member said, "in his opinion" and any member is entitled to his opinion—

Mr. Martel: I do not think the guy has an opinion.

Mr. Chairman: He did not say that they were—

Mr. Lewis: What do you mean, "in his opinion"? Would you like to know my opinion?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member may express his opinions. He did not state it as a fact.

Mr. MacDonald: He was slandering other members of the House.

Mr. Chairman: If the members of the New Democratic Party wish to make an issue of the thing—

Mr. Lewis: In my opinion, the man is a fool.

Mr. Chairman: —they may so proceed.

Mr. G. Bukator (Niagara Falls): I demand that you withdraw that remark.

Mr. Chairman: Does the hon. member wish to make any statement regarding the objections raised to his suggestion that the—

Mr. Ben: Oh, I believe he is entitled to his opinion. I have always stated that, during the four years I have been in this House.

Mr. Martel: You should take the fool's part in "King Lear."

Mr. Ben: I have always said I will listen to the hon. member for Scarborough West.

Mr. Chairman: I think perhaps we should proceed with the estimates, we are wasting time.

Mr. Ben: Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Martel: Can the Minister provide a headshrinker for him?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Order. The hon. member for Humber has the floor.

Mr. Ben: Mr. Chairman, Dr. Aharon of the Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Research Foundation of Ontario stated that he believed that, "Alcoholism in the individual is a symptom of a serious underlying personality disorder, characterized by inner emptiness and an absence of purpose and meaning in the individual's life. As a social problem," he believes, "alcoholism is a symptom of society's failure to inculcate values that challenge the individual and provide meaning to his existence".

Mr. Chairman, it is striking that when I try to bring this to the attention of this House and through this House to society, the necessity for inculcating values that challenge the individual and provide means to his existence—that is, bringing morality into people's lives—most of the interjections come from a party that professes to have more members of the clergy in it than any other party, and I fail to understand why.

It is fine to have an addiction research foundation, and an alcohol research foundation, but what one of the leading doctors of that foundation says, basically, is this: That perhaps we are wrong in treating these people as having a disease or referring to them as diseased—that what, in essence, is the basic fault is that they have not had inculcated in them principles on which our society was based.

It may be fine to have psychiatrists, psychologists, and all these other research directors. But what we need more than anything else, is perhaps a plain word which is losing very much style these days. And that one word is religion.

So I would just suggest that we might assist people who are carrying on this research by supplying whatever they are lacking, or unable to supply, and there are moral principles which should be inculcated in our young people. If we do that, we are getting down to the cause, the basic root, of this evil that has possessed our society today, rather than just trying to cover up the evils with talcum powder.

Mr. Brown: Mr. Chairman, I would like to raise a question referred to earlier by the Minister of Health in reporting on the specific grants to private institutions that are providing care and shelter for young drug addicts. The question is simply this: That the figures, while they indicate a general support of these programmes, do not go far enough to make any substantial financial difference to the programmes; I am wondering whether the health department—or this particular section of the health department, the drug addiction section—can think of the possibility of giving some real substantial support to these programmes by, wherever possible, providing service for a child, or a young addict, or a young person who is struggling to deal with the drug problem, that cannot be served elsewhere? That they be funded, person by person, so that the programmes have some basis for operation? It is fine to give $10,000 once, but if it represents one fifty-secondth of the total cost per year, it does not stabilize the programme.

We are far past the time when we can count on the charity of the community, or of private welfare, to take care of these important tasks. If the programmes merit a grant at all, then I would suggest, why not a grant that has to do with a per diem cost for serving these children?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Answering specifically to that, Mr. Chairman, these are, of course, grants in aid to show our support of a programme, where these people have come to us and said: We feel that these groups are all serving a valuable purpose.

I do not know whether in the overall research that is done, we may not find which is the best way to treat these problems. There may be many ways.

Now we do have the regular facilities which are completely publicly supported in the hospitals, in the various places such as this. It is a suggestion and we will take a look at it. But I just want to assure the House that, at this time, these are not intended in any way to cover all the treatments. They are merely a showing on the part of the foundation of an interest and support of this programme—to let us see what these groups can do.

Mr. Brown: I think my point was that the programmes are in danger of financially collapsing, and they are continually struggling for funds. If they have enough value to have a grant, then the grant should be in terms of specific service that they give to an individual child. Whether or not they have been proven, I think the fact is that there may be a need for a great many approaches.

I would not agree with all the approaches that all of these programmes have. I would have considerable difference with some of them. Nevertheless, I think they should have a right—and I think it is to our advantage that they do have the right—to get proper financing so that it can be tried.

They are going to keep on draining off a certain amount of the resources available in the community privately; whether or not they are the proper form we wish to use, they exist. They are there; they are draining off some of that resource. I think they should have, at least, a proper opportunity to operate until it is demonstrated one way or the other.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Well, I would say, Mr. Chairman, that we think this should be part of the on-going programme of the foundation—that they will look at this. If they are giving a grant in aid they are, of course, interested in what is going on in that body. And if real problems exist, and they feel there is a real beneficial programme, and something that should be supported, I am sure that they will look at it. That is part of their work.

Mr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Minister.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Hamilton East.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): Mr. Chairman, I would ask the Minister—I do not have my last year's book here—is there an increase in the budgetary amount for the foundation in the 1969-1970 period, from the $6.5 million last year?

Hon. Mr. Wells: In the vote for the alcoholism and drug addiction research foundation, yes. The estimate has been increased by $1 million.

Mr. Gisborn: I want to raise a question with the Minister, and I will not take too much time. I want him to keep track of the situation for me. I was interested in the remarks of the Minister regarding the programme, and the anticipated progress of the work of the foundation, and also of the remarks of the member for Dufferin-Simcoe. But I think that the member has got to play a stronger role so that we can get a stronger position of his opinion of the work of the foundation. Because, regardless of what we say, I have found some gaps that are not satisfactory—satisfactory to myself.

There must be a breakdown, some place, in the work of the foundation, and the work of those interested in reducing the alcoholic problem in this province. First, I am aware that in the local branches—and I have listened to about four in the past two years—their main complaint is that they are not getting enough money to carry on the work at the local level. I will leave that point there for the Minister's perusal.

I want to raise a specific case and I will send the information over to the Minister, and I would like the department to answer me as to the outcome of this particular individual, and this is the case of one Douglas Harvey, who was sentenced to seven months in Guelph, in approximately October 1968, because of six convictions for drinking under age.

I will make it brief. The defence counsel said the chap was unfortunate. He was caught six times, and the fines ranged from $50 on upwards. He was given time to pay the fines and was unemployed and could not pay them.

On the sixth conviction he was sentenced to seven months and a fine of $1,750. The defence counsel says the boy was not alcoholic. There was no evidence that he was ever under the influence, impaired or drunk. The defence counsel in his plea said that he was just an unfortunate, that when he had a drink with the boys, or at a party, or at a social function, a policeman was there to put the hand on him.

But the judge says: "Alcohol is a problem with you, you owe money, a substantial amount of money. I am told that you do not have an alcoholic problem; but you do. You are an alcoholic", said the judge. But he still sent him for six months to Guelph Reformatory. Now there is some gap somewhere in our programme if this happened. The boy was not there long before an allegation by his mother generated a story in the Hamilton Spectator. It was headed "Son Beaten In Reformatory—Mother".

He was subsequently transferred to the Burtch Rehabilitation Farm in Brantford. Now, there are two things. If he was an alcoholic, or had an alcoholic problem, this was—without any reasoning—the wrong thing to do. If he was not an alcoholic, and he was a victim of circumstances, that some particular policeman had the finger out for him, then the drinking age should be reduced.

To send him there for that purpose—there is a complete gap in our programme someplace.

This is only one of the several cases I have watched in the past two or three years. I would ask the Minister—I will send copies of the clippings over to his office—to follow this case, and I would like an answer as to outcome of this particular situation. Something is wrong with our whole system when this sort of thing happens.

Hon. Mr. Wells: We will look into that. Perhaps you should send it to the Attorney General, too—or I will. Because I think it perhaps comes under—

Mr. Shulman: I will be one minute exactly.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for High Park.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Chairman, I would just like to draw to the attention of the Minister, through you, sir, a bill which was introduced in the United States Senate this year, Bill S1816, and this is The Drug Abuse Prevention Rehabilitation Act of 1969. I will send him my copy, because there is some good material in here which I think we could incorporate into Ontario which will be a benefit to all of us.

The second point I would like to make is not directly under this vote, sir, but it is an emergency. I have just received a phone call that 20 more patients have just been stricken at Whitby and they urgently need some help there.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for York South.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Chairman, there are two points I would like to raise on this first vote. The first one has to do with the college of nurses, one of the items for which there is a grant given. May I just confirm one point, Mr. Minister? As I recall, your predecessor indicated on one occasion in the debate in the House the Minister of Health is automatically a member of the council of the college of nurses.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I have a representative on the college of nurses. I do not sit there myself—

Mr. Ben: Do not cover the mike, please.

Hon. Mr. Wells: A member of our research and planning division sits there as my representative on the council.

Mr. MacDonald: Well, I want to raise with the Minister the general proposition of the relationship to a professional body which has self-regulatory powers roughly comparable to those, I suppose, of doctors and lawyers. I want to raise in that context a specific issue which was raised before the orders of the day a week or two ago. Namely, the regulations the council has imposed on Grace Hospital nursing graduates as they seek to upgrade their accreditation by writing an RN exam. The problem of these professional bodies is a perplexing one, for protocol has to be observed, or at least we have been told that this is the case. We pass an Act giving them certain powers to run their own affairs, but it seems to me at some point, Mr. Chairman, there is an obligation on the part of somebody—and I presume it is the Minister—to move, if we come to the conclusion that public welfare is not being served as fully as it might be. We can change the Act, that is certain. But without even changing the Act, in the instance of the college of nurses, you are in an even stronger position, because you have just confirmed that you have a representative right on the council.

Now, admittedly that representative may be outvoted, or she may be outvoted in this instance, but the theoretical point that I am raising still exists. To come to the specifics: We are desperately short of nurses in this province. Rightly or wrongly, the college of nurses came to the conclusion that the standards of Grace Hospital graduates were not high enough and that they would be given an opportunity to prove, that through experience or otherwise, they had upgraded their standings and could qualify for an RN by writing exams.

The interesting thing is that the council stipulated that if a person had not been practising continuously in the last five years in the province of Ontario that they would not even have the opportunity to write the exams. It seems to me that this is—if the term is not too inappropriate—sort of a dog-in-the-manger approach. An RN that has not been practising for 25 years can come back into the profession and start practising and there is no requirement to re-check her skills and qualifications.

If the council came to the conclusion that an exam must be written, why isn't the writing of examinations stripped of all these other restrictions. There are instances where women have been out of the country with their husbands on overseas duty in the armed forces. They have perhaps been married and had family obligations, so they have not been practising for the last five years and they, in effect, are denied an opportunity to upgrade themselves. There is another example of an ostensibly picayune attitude but rather it is indicative of the kind of approach—they do not have an opportunity to write the exams a second time, if, perchance, they failed the first time. In short, there are definite restrictions and barriers. If a person writes an exam and passes, fine. If they write an exam and fail, good, those the the rules. But why each of the other restrictions that have been injected into the picture?

I put this question to the Minister in terms of what he can and is going to do about it. In my experience, as I talk to doctors, Grace Hospital graduates are generally regarded by doctors as perhaps as good, if not the best maternity nurses in the hospitals. This is the specialization that is well known of the Grace Hospital graduates and their training. If we have a shortage of nurses, why, can you not in the staffing of hospitals—assuming this is an accurate judgment—why can you not put Grace Hospital graduates on the maternity wards and use the other nurses elsewhere, so that their specialized skill will be used as fully as possible?

But the proposition of forcing them out of the picture in effect, so that they cannot practise at all, or forcing them to take nursing aid status—with the lower income and the lower status sometimes after they have been acknowledged as nurses, and maybe have practised for 15, 20 or 30 years—it seems to me to be a pretty indefensible kind of proposition.

So I ask the Minister what his present view is on this question. More important, since it is obvious that the council of nurses has dug in on this issue and has given no indication that they are going to change their minds, what power he thinks he has to intervene to see that when the exams are written the results of the exams without any other restrictions, are accepted—in short to stop this effort to keep these women out of the nursing profession. Does the hon. Minister wish to deal with that before I go to my second point?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Yes, I would be happy to comment on that, Mr. Chairman. I am a little more familiar with the whole subject than I was when it was brought up in a question several weeks ago. I can appreciate very much the comments of the hon. member for York South and I really cannot find too much wrong with a lot of his reasoning, except that perhaps the general statement that we have a great shortage of nurses is perhaps not exactly accurate at this time. I find there are many registered nurses in the Metropolitan area coming to me and telling me they cannot get jobs. I made a few comments at the opening of the Credit Valley Regional School of Nursing last week about this. I am not ready to say anything definitively on this. I suspect that some of the problem is that the hospitals are not willing to adjust their traditional methods of employing nurses to take advantage of these skilled people who are skilled registered nurses and who want to work on a certain part-time basis. But I also recognize, of course, that you cannot expect to have the cream of the jobs and not take the tough shifts, which of course some do. But I do find there are more registered nurses, particularly married women, who have raised their families, who have taken the refresher course and now tell me they cannot get jobs in Metropolitan Toronto as registered nurses. I was surprised at this, but it is something I am looking into.

Mr. MacDonald: The Minister has company.

Hon. Mr. Wells: But I think the other point, of course, that I made in this general situation, is that we in this province in regard to nurses are in a pretty good position because we have so many nurses coming in from other jurisdictions. The thing that worries me is that if this supply from other jurisdictions was ever to be cut off, we could be in a more difficult position. But, of course, we are taking the necessary steps to make sure our training programmes advance, as they are doing.

In regard to this specific one, the Grace Hospital situation, I cannot give any definite answer on it. I have had contact with Mrs. Mathers who, I understand, is one of the leaders of the group that is concerned about this. I am trying to make arrangements to see her. I realize there is a deadline some time later in December. I thought we could meet her about December 15, but I asked my secretary yesterday to move that meeting up so that we can meet probably next week, if we can get the meeting going, so that I can get to talk to them specifically about this and meet with Miss Black and our people at the college and try to see if there is a way to resolve this.

That is all I can tell members, that we are going to look at it very carefully. I can appreciate the problem the nurses have; I also think the hon. members can appreciate the problems we have when you appoint these regulatory bodies for the professions and you give them a certain leeway to operate under regulations, and they decide to operate that way but you do not like what they do; then it again becomes a problem that has to be considered.

Mr. MacDonald: I appreciate the Minister pursuing the Grace Hospital question. As to the general proposition, I, along with him, and a lot of other people, would like to have some definitive assessment as to whether or not we have a shortage of nurses at the present time.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I suspect it is trying to fit these married women who want to come back into the field.

Mr. MacDonald: I cannot think of any reason why there should be a greater flow of married women back into the profession than any given year over the last 20 years. So why has that altered the picture? They did not all get married at the same time and all get their families to a point where they were free to return to the profession this past year. However, I do not want to spend any more time on it, I want to go on to a final point.

I think the first estimate is an appropriate point to take a look at the general approach of the government and this department. I was fascinated by the report that came back from the standing committee on health yesterday. If I may make a comment in passing, this committee, in my view, has operated as a standing committee should operate and as very few of them normally have operated in past years around this Legislature. And that is—providing a forum to acquaint both the members of the committee and the government with the inadequacies, or at least the facts of all the various aspects of the fields that happen to fall under its jurisdiction.

However, without dwelling on the general conduct of the committee, which deserves commendation, it is the report that attracted me. I do not think we can stand pat where we are, in providing health care in the province of Ontario, when all we have provided, basically, are two of the major components after some 25 years of talking about the issue: namely, hospital coverage and medical coverage. Let me set the context, not in my own words, but in the words of one paragraph in this report from the standing committee:

It is the conclusion of this committee that there is an urgent need for review and revision of the health care of our province.

It is our opinion that only a total health care programme will sufficiently satisfy our needs. We appreciate the tremendous cost of such a programme and at the same time we recognize the need, with the realization that it can only be instituted in a gradual manner.

We feel that the most important need is in the field—

And I am going to stop right there. They began to express their views as to what were the next steps. The significance of that comment is the assertion that we cannot stand where we are, that we must move forward and that we can move forward. The thing that delights me about that report is that, in its own way, it underlines precisely what I said in a press conference this week when we announced our new approach to the financing of OHSIP and OHSC. The Liberals immediately said that it is impossible, it is not credible, we cannot go forward any more—essentially the Conservative stand.

Mr. Nixon: Oh, we did not say that!

Mr. MacDonald: Read what the hon. member for Humber said. He says we are doing all that we can do at the present time—

Mr. Ben: Bosh!

Mr. MacDonald: Well, I thought, when the hon. member for Humber was speaking for the Liberals in the lead-off, he was speaking for the Liberal Party.

Mr. Ben: The member did not listen to all I said; he is so far off.

Mr. MacDonald: He said it was not credible; this was all we could pay for at the present time. And I repeat, Mr. Chairman, that is essentially the Tory position. If the Liberals are in the process of changing, that is interesting, but their previous position was enunciated as of yesterday.

Mr. Trotter: The member should get his ears blown out and listen.

Mr. MacDonald: However, the point I want to draw attention to, Mr. Chairman—there will be an opportunity in later estimates to go into detail—is that there are three urgent areas where we can move immediately. We can and we should move to the coverage of drugs. Otherwise, medical coverage is, to a degree, ineffectual. What is the point of going to a doctor and getting a prescription if you cannot, in effect, pay for the prescription? You may have wasted both your time and the time of the doctor.

Secondly, I think there is no reason why we cannot move forward to the inclusion of chiropractic services in the paramedical field. And thirdly, as has been argued by many people in this House, including the chairman of the standing committee, it is just nonsense, economically and socially and from the point of view of human conduct to other fellow human beings, that we should not move immediately to the inclusion of nursing homes under the hospital plan. And that is precisely what we have put in our package. As to the cost of it, I will deal with that at a later period, but I just sum it all up in a nutshell.

Mr. Ben: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order, would you please indicate to me what item we are on?

Mr. Chairman: Yes—

Mr. MacDonald: We are under the first item, Mr. Chairman, on which I am presenting a different approach to delivering health services.

Mr. Ben: We are discussing item No. 1; would you please tell me, Mr. Chairman, under what item of that vote are we?

Mr. Chairman: We are not taking the first vote under items; we are taking vote 801, which is departmental administration and policy, but it seems to me that the remarks are in order.

Mr. Ben: Is this an opening address?

Mr. MacDonald: Particularly, Mr. Chairman, since I am commenting directly on what was presented to us on the first vote regarding the general approach of the government to health care, in the report of the standing committee on health.

Mr. Chairman: I was relating the hon. member's remarks to those remarks of the hon. member for Quinte (Mr. Potter), which I thought were permitted with the consent of the House, and therefore it cannot be out of order.

Mr. MacDonald: That is right.

Mr. Ben: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman, I do not mind if you refer to this report, but I would point out this was not brought down as part of the estimates. What happened was that the hon. member for Quinte was not present in the House when he intended to have it tabled as a report of the committee. In fact, it should have been tabled in the House, not in the committee stage. And he asked for the concurrence of the hon. member for High Park and myself for permission to bring it forward in committee, but it is a report of the committee and ought to have been tabled in the House.

Mr. Chairman: I would point out to the hon. member for Humber that last evening when the hon. member requested that he be permitted before the votes were called, I asked for the concurrence of the House and I did get that concurrence. It has now been brought in as part of the remarks prior to dealing with the votes, and I think that the hon. member for York South has made brief reference to the content of the report. I cannot see that it should be out of order at this moment.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson (Victoria-Haliburton): Mr. Chairman, perhaps on a point of clarification, did the member for Quinte say that was the report of the committee on health, or was it the Chairman's reflections?

Mr. MacDonald: No, he said it was the report of the standing committee.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Quinte has told the committee that it was the report of the committee on health.

Mr. De Monte: May I say that all members of the committee studied the report and accepted its contents. I, as a member of the standing committee on health accepted the contents as did everybody.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: I hope we do not waste any more time. I do not plan to take more than two or three minutes to wrap up my comments that got a little scattered with these interruptions. I think the report from the standing committee of this Legislature, representative of all parties, places the correct context for our approach, namely, that what we have is inadequate and is not financed equitably.

Secondly, we have to move forward on major gaps in our health care coverage. Admittedly we cannot provide the whole health package at the present time. There may be arguments as to which elements we add to the package, but we cannot stand still.

That, in essence, is not only what we believe in—that, in essence, is what we have done, as far as the New Democratic Party is concerned—in a presentation a couple of days ago. We have picked out for immediate inclusion chiropractic services, drugs and nursing homes.

Indeed, it can be done as we pointed out—and I can deal with it in a later estimate—by reducing the cost of present expenditures for health for every average family of four below $13,000, even though you add to the health package drugs, chiropractic services and nursing homes. With that kind of a practical possibility I would hope that even the hon. member for Humber would be persuaded and that the government would move immediately.

Mr. Chairman: Does the hon. Minister wish to reply?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Yes, Mr. Chairman, I had hoped that I had perhaps conveyed the general impression of what this department and this government is doing in my opening remarks. But perhaps this was missed on some of the members.

As I indicated, we have a unique body in this province, the Ontario Council of Health, which is an advisory body to this department and to this government on health matters. It was set up under statutory authority in The Department of Health Act, and we gave it this task of preparing for us, as people have said many times, a total health plan—an outline against which you can operate. And all the expertise of the health service fields have been drawn together in this.

I was very amazed to see the kind of work they are doing, to meet the personnel that have been taking part in all the operations of the council of health, and to see the kind of things that they are drawing together.

Mr. Trotter: How long have they been at it now?

Hon. Mr. Wells: They have been at it about a year and a half. About two years.

Now they have taken all these various problems and they have drawn them together in various sub-committee reports—which I said to this House would be ready with a general statement in January. Now this represents a total approach to health care in this province against which all these things must then be put in perspective.

Mr. MacDonald: Are you talking about the committee on healing arts?

Hon. Mr. Wells: No, I am talking about the council on health. This is not the committee on the healing arts. The committee on the healing arts has prepared basically by bringing in recommendations about the various professional groups, and their licensing, and regulations and their relationship. In fact, the very things that the hon. member was talking about—relationships, for instance, with the council of nurses, and the various councils of the healing arts, the chiropractic councils, and so forth.

But this is the council on health—dealing with the whole broad spectrum of health services in this province. Out of this, we think will come a plan against which can be placed all these programmes.

Our view is that you just do not do these things. You do not just take isolated things, and say you add this, and you do this and you do this. You look at it, and you do this in the total context. I think that a good point to be made here is, for instance—and I am sure the hon. member for York South realizes that the approach is not as simple, or “simplistic”—as the member for Sudbury would say—as just saying you include nursing homes under OHSC.

It has to be related to the total, not to the cost, but to the total picture—to the number of acute beds and to the moving of patients from acute beds to convalescent beds, to nursing home, to home care. And there has got to be a total policy worked out so that you just do not add costs at one end. Because I am firmly convinced that, with a total approach in a total programme, we can do these kinds of things without really adding much cost, with better utilization of all the facilities in the community. And this is the kind of thing we are looking for.

In this very regard, there is a Cabinet committee presently working very actively in developing this approach to the nursing home problem, and I hope we will have an answer to that very soon. That is one area that is being looked at in that total approach manner. Not just as a question of adding it as another benefit, because that is not the answer.

I say this because I just want the House to know that the department, and the council on health, which represents all those people in the province who have to do with total health picture, are working on a plan for this province. I am hopeful that as we get that plan, we can then fit these other components, and take those that are of highest priority, and work towards—as we all want to do—the best health care for this province.

Mr. Chairman: Shall vote 801 carry? The hon. member for High Park.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Chairman, last night one of the members—I think it was the member for Humber—spoke of the new pharmacy drug plan which was presumably to lower the cost of drugs. I hold in my hand the minutes of the meeting of the Council of the Ontario College of Pharmacy for April 14, 15 and 16, 1969, and there is something in here I wish to draw to the attention of the Minister, because it is of great importance.

Moved by D. L. McInnes, seconded by W. R. Foltas that council approve the seeking of an amendment to the Act which would give the Council of the Ontario College of Pharmacy, subject to the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, power to make regulations defining improper conduct in a professional respect for the purposes of the Act.

It sounds quite innocuous, but let me warn the Minister now of the reason for this, and what the meaning is behind it. The purpose of this will eventually result in higher prices for drugs. Let me urge you now: Do not pass this amendment. I will read the next paragraph, that will explain everything:

“Speaking to the motion, Mr. McInnes explained the motion was part of a two-pronged attack which was planned to make on (1)—” which is irrelevant, and—“(2) advertising in the province”. And it goes on: “This will allow the college to take action in the matter of advertising.”

In the discussion that followed, the whole point of it was: “We will be able to crack down on places like Vanguard Pharmacy and other cutrate drug stores that are advertising low prices.”

If you allow this amendment to pass, if you bring in this amendment in the House, you will have higher drug prices in this province. Let me strongly urge you: Resist.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I thank the hon. member for drawing this to our attention. I am quite aware, you know, of what is going on within that profession. I know that there are two sides to the thing. On one side are those who want to advertise as they do. There are others who want to have the same kind of regulations that the other professions have, so that they can control it in a very professional manner. Now, as far as I am concerned, I have not had any new regulations or amendments to the Act presented to me as Minister yet. They may have been working with our department on it, but they have not been presented yet. They will all have to come to us, and we will be looking at them very carefully.

Mr. Shulman: Well, let me warn you that you are apparently unaware that someone in your department has promised this group that they will get this amendment. If they get the amendment you are going to find before election day that drug prices are going to be higher in this province than they were at the time you went into office. So you have been warned.

One other brief matter on this vote, Mr. Chairman. I want to draw to the Minister's attention a model bill which has been drawn up by the council of state in the United States for a birth defect institute. This is a bill which I would like to have introduced here as a private bill, but I could not because it involved the expenditure of funds.

I would ask the Minister to get a copy of this bill because this is a great thing, and it is being done in a number of the American states. It has not yet been done in any provinces in Canada, and we would do well to lead in this particular field.

It has a number of points in it, but basically it is for the conducting of scientific investigations and surveys of the causes, mortality and methods of treatment, prevention and cure of birth defects. This is an area which is relatively untouched in the medical field. It would cost very little money, surprisingly little. I commend it to the Minister, and I tell you, if you bring in this particular bill, you will be remembered many years after all your other foibles, both good and bad, have been forgotten.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, I would be happy to see that bill. It might just fit into the study that this group on perinatal deaths is doing, and they might take a look at it in their work.

Mr. Chairman: Shall vote 801 carry? The hon. member for Scarborough Centre.

Mrs. M. Renwick: A question of the Minister. Would he please table the names of the Ontario Council of Health, and the areas that they have been pursuing in the last year and a half?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Do you wish me to read them into the record now, or would you just like to have them?

Mrs. M. Renwick: We just need to have it.

Mr. Shulman: Just send it across.

Mrs. M. Renwick: I would like it put in the record, but not necessarily read in the House, Mr. Chairman. How is that arranged?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Well, I can read them quickly. I do not have the—did you say you wanted the background?

Mrs. M. Renwick: The areas in which they have been working in the last year and a half. You said they had been working in several areas. Just give us a rough description of the areas in which they have been working.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I will give you the names of the members: K. C. Charron, MD, Deputy Minister of Health, chairman of council; S. W. Martin, FCIS, FACHA, chairman, Ontario Hospital Services Commission; Miss C. Aikin, RN, BA, BN, MA, London; R. M. Anderson, BA, MD, CM, Kingston; R. Auld, Toronto; E. H. Botterell, OBE, MD, FRCS(C), Kingston; W. J. Dunn, DDS, London; Mrs. J. P. Forrester, BA, Belleville (appointed June, 1968); Rev. R. Guindon, OMI, BA, BPh, LPh, STB, STL, STD, Ottawa; G. E. The committees that these people have been working on are: the committee on priorities and phasing, the committee on health manpower, the committee on education and the health disciplines, committee on physical resources, the committee on regional organization of health services, the committee on health research, the committee on health statistics, the committee on library services, the committee on certain health services requiring special attention. These are people who sit on the main Ontario Council of Health, of course. There are many others who come on these committees. They will be on one of these committees and other people are co-opted to work on each of these special committees.

Mr. Chairman: Shall vote 801 carry?

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Chairman—

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, I would say that there are at least 200 people working on the whole process.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Chairman, the Minister has not given much of a report of the meeting of the federal-provincial conference last week, but one of the things that did come out as a news item was that John Munro is going to undertake a committee on nutrition for Canada and I understand that there is going to be research made in each of the provinces as to the level of nutrition.

This sounds like a fairly pedestrian approach to the matter until we realize what a similar committee in the United States turned up about three years ago. Unfortunately it often happens that we are two or three years behind them, perhaps longer, in realizing what problems we do face and the Minister, no doubt, is aware that as a result of the research in the United States, programmes to improve the nutritional level of large areas—geographic areas and groups in the population—have been undertaken, with moderate success, particularly among those who literally were starving to death, either through ignorance of basic nutritional facts or simply through poverty. Is the Minister going to take a specific role in this research in the province or will it be done exclusively by the federal department? If he is going to be involved in it, surely the emphasis would have to come in some of those communities in the heart of our major centres and also in the northern Indian communities, particularly.

There, I personally am positive that the results would indicate the same thing that has been turned up in some American communities—a startling level of malnutrition which could be corrected if a co-ordinated policy of this government, or the federal government, made use of some of the food surpluses that are presently waiting to find suitable sales. I think particularly of the surpluses of powdered milk that are available, which could be put at the disposal of these people if we find that, in fact, they are suffering from malnutrition. This would be an appropriate project for this government, or this government in conjunction with the government of Canada.

Programmes to combat poverty are important, but if we were to determine that the problem is as acute as it might be and as it has shown to be in some other somewhat similar jurisdictions, then I would suggest that we should be gearing ourselves to using public funds to improve the nutritional level, in certain areas of this province, of groups in our community.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I thank the hon. leader of the Opposition for those comments. We, of course, will be co-operating very actively with the study. This is why it was announced and we discussed it at our federal-provincial meeting. In many of the undertakings, the survey will be done in this province. I understand that the survey that they are going to do is scheduled to begin in October 1970, and carry over a two-year period. The Ontario survey will take place in the winter season of 1970-71. But, I think I would agree with the leader of the Opposition. This, of course, is helpful and it is a good thing to have this survey done, but that will not stop our efforts in this whole area of going ahead either; the efforts of our department to find out and to assist in the whole field of nutrition in various areas of this province. I think that the need for this survey was amply demonstrated and supported by the Federal Minister at our meeting and we are happy to co-operate with them in it.

Vote 801 agreed to.

On vote 802:

Mr. Chairman: I believe it was decided earlier to explore this programme by the various activities. So, under the first activity, programme administration, the operation of schools for registered nursing assistants. Anything on that particular activity?

Mr. Ben: Yes, Mr. Chairman. At this juncture, I want to say a few words about the qualified nurse and how we misuse her services in Ontario. It seems to me that we forget the nurse is a true professional, and we ought to pay her like a professional and we ought to treat her the way business treats all its high-priced help, by not letting her waste her time on menial chores that can be done by nursing aides, or assistants.

I was reading Yvonne Crittenden's interesting report in the Toronto Telegram last Friday in which she tells how fulfilling the work of the registered nursing assistant is for older people like widows and grandmothers, who have the qualities necessary to give unskilled, but tender care and love to patients. These people find real satisfaction in a job which is reasonably well paid and it is clear that we have to do a big job of advertising if this second career does, in fact, exist for suitable people.

I think, also, that we have to make a special effort to recruit nursing orderlies of both sexes to take the burden of the chores from the qualified nurses. Then as soon as it can be done, and I realize it may take five, six or seven years before it is possible, we have to start putting the pressure on nurses to obtain full degrees.

The ambitious plan announced in 1965 by the then Minister of Health to have 5,000 new nurses by 1970 has fallen short of its target and the present enrolment indicated that there is no way that target can now be met. The answer, as I see it, is to couple greater status with more pay and make nursing a real profession. For example: Are we still in the two-years-plus-one transitional stage where the nurse must slave for the third year on a fraction of her eventual pay just so that the province can recoup some of the cost of training?

Hon. Mr. Wells: I just might point out that a lot of this discussion comes under the Ontario Hospital Services Commission vote. Unfortunately, we do not even have the staff from that commission here with us this morning. A lot of these training programmes, and hospital matters—however, there is a section. Certainly part of nursing pertains to this vote.

Mr. Chairman: Registered nursing assistance.

Mr. Ben: I thought it was registered nursing assistants?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Yes.

Mr. Chairman: General nursing comes under the other vote.

Mr. Ben: Oh, yes, that is right. The course would have to tie in, too, why you need—

Hon. Mr. Wells: The course for nursing assistants.

Mr. Ben: Perhaps they should have been together, I agree, but unless we want to discuss that here—

Mr. Chairman: Just the registered nursing assistants part of it, if you could wait until the proper staff is here. If it is general nursing training then it should come under the later vote.

Mr. Ben: I do not think you can, Mr. Chairman. If you brought in registered nursing assistants because we could not get registered nurses, you have to tie in the two occupations. One works with the other.

Mr. Chairman: It is not that. I do not know much about it.

Mr. Ben: I am convinced that the large turnover among Ontario nurses has a good deal to do with the small-mindedness of—

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, the hon. member is in order if he is talking about the training programme. There is a section of this vote for the programme run by our department directly, and that is the schools and they are in here in this vote.

Mr. Chairman: If it is general nursing, you could.

Mr. Lewis: An ominous portent passes through the gallery, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: General nursing, as I understand it, is different from nursing assistants.

Mr. Ben: I understand the difference, Mr. Chairman, but, pray tell me, how can you discuss the function of one without referring to the function of the other? After all, we got registered nursing assistants because we did not have enough registered nurses. We got in registered nursing assistants to do some of the jobs which we discussed earlier as having been—

Mr. Chairman: Carry on with your remarks, Mr. Minister—

Mr. Ben: Well, why interrupt me when obviously you cannot divorce the two?

Mr. Chairman: Will you carry on please. Thank you.

Mr. Ben: Good grief.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Come on, let us not waste time.

Mr. Ben: It is getting beyond belief. I am convinced the large turnover among Ontario nurses has a good deal to do with the small-mindedness of our hospital administration as a whole.

Mr. Shulman: Order. You are out of order.

Mr. Ben: Granted there are exceptions, but by and large, your Canadian hospital administrator is one of a kind. No wonder the brain drain has reached down to the nursing profession—and the nursing profession includes registered nursing assistants.

Anyone these days who is treated as though this was still the Crimean War and every girl Florence Nightingale, is not going to stomach it. The next thing after graduation will see the spirited girl chasing after the sun and adventure and romance and a better climate, not only in a meteorological sense but also the climate of human relations. So I say, let us treat all our nurses or registered nursing assistants like the professionals they are.

Let us not fight over every penny of their remuneration but let us reward them generously. In return, we can then expect professional pride, competence and the realization that there is a worthwhile career to build in Ontario. At least we ought to try it. I suggest the reason we have to have registered nursing assistants is because we ran out of nurses, because they were doing, as even the Minister admitted, menial tasks. He stated that this is being tied up, and "hallelujah" is all I can say. The fact is that there are still many of them having to do menial tasks.

I spent 14 days observing the operation of a ward in the hospital with a ringside seat. In fact, some of the things that they have to do were demeaning. There was a complete waste of talent. For example, registered nurses were required to make the beds of non-ambulatory patients. Do not ask me why. Ordinary staff, not even nursing aides, were making the beds of ambulatory patients. But if the powers that be were not notified that patient "A" was now ambulatory, the staff that came in would make all the beds in that ward except the bed of that ambulatory patient even though he was not in it. You asked them, "Why do you not make that bed?" They said, "Our instructions are that this bed has to be made by a nurse".

Now, Mr. Chairman, I am not saying that that is the case in every hospital but it does indicate a very, very big breakdown of communication. Surely, surely nursing assistants could make those beds and surely there should be better communication. Since obviously you are not going to get your 5,000 nurses, what you have to do is really expand the registered nursing assistants programme and you have to drive after older people to come into this programme. Not only older people, but the males also.

This is the important thing. Everybody seems to have a stereotype of what a nurse or nursing assistant is. They think a student nurse or nursing assistant is some young girl fresh out of high school. There are many others in higher age brackets that can do these tasks which we assign to nursing assistants, not even just as well as, but even better than the younger ones. They are more mature, they stop to think, they have more patience, more understanding. I suggest, Mr. Chairman, to the Minister, that these training schools should look for their nursing assistants among the 40-year-olds and up. I think they would find a great number of them there and they would really cut down on the cost of operating a hospital.

Since we are under this, are we not going to be discussing special health services here, Mr. Chairman, under this item?

Mr. Chairman: Just for a few moments.

Mr. Ben: Just for a few moments? All right.

Mr. Chairman: Is there anything else under the first part of vote 802, administration and the registered nursing assistants? Any comment from the Minister before we move on?

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, a point of clarification: Are you dealing item by item under—

Mr. Chairman: This was what was decided last evening, I understand. Yes.

Mrs. M. Renwick: What item did you just ask about?

Mr. Chairman: We have been discussing the programme of administration, the operation of schools for registered nursing assistants, top of page 75.

Is the Minister going to reply to the last speaker?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Yes, if there are no other comments on this programme. Of course, I am happy to have the comments of the hon. member. As I told him yesterday, you can go into any hospital in this province and you will find certain things, approve certain points and so forth. We are certainly working towards the proper position of having the total health stream with certain defined responsibilities, the registered nurses doing the jobs for which they are professionally trained, and very well trained; the registered nursing assistants fitting into their picture, and others who are doing orderly assistants' jobs, the technicians' job, and so forth.

Now, our programme here, Mr. Chairman, in this vote covers the registered nursing assistants schools which we operate directly. About 43 to 44 per cent of the registered nursing assistants that are graduated in this province come from the schools that are operated in this programme, which runs for 35 weeks. We think it is a very effective programme.

Incidentally, I think in our six schools there are about 197—just for the information of the hon. member—that are over 26 years of age. I have noticed from going to some of these graduates, that there are in fact, a lot of people coming in as registered nursing assistants, women who have decided to come out and take part in the community in another career. They have taken this particular avenue and this course. Unless the members have any other questions, I do not think there is anything else on that, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: Programme of administration carried? Special health services then. The member for Thunder Bay.

Mr. Stokes: Mr. Chairman, before I get into the remarks that I would like to make under special health services, I would like to know whether this particular item covers the health services provided by the northern Ontario health service operation. I am referring to the district health units and the provision of mobile dental clinics for the people of northern Ontario.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, the last item is under local health services.

Mr. Chairman: Anything under the special health services which are listed on page 75? The member for Scarborough Centre.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Minister about the committee that he has assigned for venereal disease control.

Hon. Mr. Wells: What would the hon. member like to know about it?

Mrs. M. Renwick: I would like to know about the committee, what it is doing, where it is doing it? Who is on that committee? Was it recently formed? I would like to know what has happened since recent facts have come out about the increase in venereal disease in the province of Ontario.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, in following the guidelines which the leader of the New Democratic Party put before us, rather than repeat all this again—I said all this yesterday in my opening remarks. I outlined what I felt about this, I named the committee and told you their guidelines, and they are now going forward.

If the House would like me to repeat it all, I will be happy, Mr. Chairman, but if the hon. member looks in Hansard of yesterday—I named the committee, I told you what their guidelines were, and I told you why we were doing this, and so forth.

Mrs. M. Renwick: I guess, Mr. Chairman, what I really wanted to know is exactly what they are doing. The guidelines, of course, are probably something which depend on how well they are followed and how widely they are expended. That makes the difference.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Well, Mr. Chairman, of course the guidelines will be followed. The committee has just been named in the last couple of weeks. They have not had a meeting yet, but they are going to be meeting soon, the hon. member will see that it includes a good cross-section of people who are widely interested in this field, including a doctor who appeared before your committee to talk about this problem and who has agreed to take part on that task force, Dr. Keyl, I think.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Could I ask the Minister, Mr. Chairman, briefly, is this what prompted the committee being formed or the appearance of Dr. Anna Keyl before the health committee?

Hon. Mr. Wells: No, no, it was not, Mr. Speaker. As a matter of fact, I had the memo for my consideration on this, much before that matter came up in this House, or before Dr. Keyl appeared before the committee.

There were recommendations made in the past year by the Ontario Public Health Association, and indeed I think parts of the Ontario Medical Association, that suggested to us that they were aware of the kinds of problems that we had pointed out, and I think that the hon. member for Scarborough Centre pointed out.

It is quite obvious, for instance, apart from the methods of treatment in the kind of drugs that we are providing, that the method of notification—as I pointed out in my statement, we are not being notified about a lot of cases, for many various reasons.

The hon. member mentioned a suggestion in the House, I think a few weeks ago, about perhaps we should consider identifying by number rather than by name and things like this. Well, it was a medical association which made this known to us over the past year, and these kinds of things prompted the setting up of this committee to look into it and find out what is the best way.

A task force like this really has a two-fold purpose, and I realize that it is always very easy from one side to criticize setting up task forces all the time. But you know, apart from the recommendations that they present, they serve a very useful educational purpose. Because the various groups who are on them, and are represented on them, share together their concerns about the problem.

They see the other person's side, and sometimes out of that comes an appreciation of what should be done. And they are ready to accept the recommendations when they come along. That is why it is very nice to involve all these groups who are not members of our department, in the evolving of a new venereal disease control programme in this province.

Mr. Chairman, that is exactly what we are doing, and I am hopeful that out of this will come some improvements—and some real improvements—in the way that we are handling the whole programme, because we have got to. The hon. member knows that the incidence has been rising in this province, and we have got to come to grips with the problem.

I am told that the first meeting of the task force will be at 9.30 on December 3.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, would the Minister survey the doctors in the province of Ontario, as has been done in other countries wanting to bring in better reporting to The Department of Public Health?

Will he survey doctors most likely to be treating venereal diseases, twice a year, and general practising physicians once a year? It would appear that what is happening is they are not reporting the way they should be reporting, and they are not going to do so unless this department gets right out at the doctors' level and instigates that wish to report.

It would, of course, require that the Minister would have to set up a VD reporting centre. That should not be too difficult. And make certain that the doctors report.

When the OMA talked about the things that it would like to see, as recently reported in the Ontario Medical Review of July 1969, it asked:

That the present venereal disease report be simplified, to encourage complete reporting; that the OMA recommend all persons infected with venereal diseases be interviewed by the physician, or the public health authority, with his permission to obtain the names of contacts; that the reports of positive serologies and positive gonococcal specimens be followed up as in above, to obtain better reporting in cases and of contacts; that the OMA cooperate with The Department of Health in conducting a survey of all physicians in Ontario, in an attempt to determine the true incidence of a venereal disease; that a tabulated schedule of up-to-date approved treatment, as described in Dr. F. R. Manuel's paper, "Gonorrhoea today, a résumé of epidemiology diagnosis and treatment," Ontario Medical Review of February 1969, be furnished to the emergency and out-patient departments of all hospitals and all doctors' offices.

Mr. Chairman, the Minister of Health is new, we realize this, but the problems of venereology in Ontario is not. I have journals here dated right back to 1962, 1963 and 1964, where pressure has been placed on The Department of Public Health to do something about the increases in venereal diseases.

I would say to the Minister: Will he undertake to follow at least the request of such a body as the Ontario Medical Association, and get right out over the problems within his own department, and take those requests and institute them in the province of Ontario, because the doctors who want those programmes instituted are desperate?

Hon. Mr. Wells: To sort of accept these suggestions—which are some of many that have been made—while this task force is going to work would not, I do not think, be very prudent on my part.

The setting up of this task force, and the fact that I want to get a new and definitive programme in this area, was motivated partly by those comments of the Ontario Medical Association and their request that we do something about this. As I pointed out to the public health association, they may be valid from the medical point of view. The public health people, however, may have some modifications.

As I said, we are trying to get them all together, so that out of the task force will come recommendations in which all have participated. All will have taken part in an educational process of getting the best methods. For me to do something unilaterally would not, I think, be right at this time. I do not know what more I can do, Mr. Chairman, for the hon. member.

I have expressed my own concern, as I told the hon. members before in this House. I worked for a year in the venereal disease control branch of this department, back in 1949, so I was aware of the kind of things that were—

Mr. Lewis: You know, you are the Horatio Alger of venereal diseases?

Hon. Mr. Wells: In fact, I worked for one of the gentlemen who is sitting in front of me here, Mr. Nichols, in those days.

Mr. Lewis: I do not know what that says for him.

Hon. Mr. Wells: All I can say is that he has done very well since then. I do not know about me. But I am well aware of many of these things, these problems that are concerned with reporting, and many other things associated with this problem. That is why we are having these people come in. We think that we have got some of the best people here. Let us get them going on it, rather than us trying to decide whether the answer is right here at this point.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I would say, with all due respect to the Minister, that the plight of the doctors at this point, is desperate and the things that they are asking for, are reasonable requests.

For years and years, the department under the Minister has known of this problem, but there has not been the kind of action that now brings this tour-de-force from the Ontario Medical Association. The medical association has asked simply that you do get the reporting. That you do not continue any longer with this haphazard manner of having some physicians reporting, some not; some reporting 11 per cent of what they really see, and so on. They are asking that you make a non-identifiable process for reporting which might help the physician to report more easily to you.

They are asking for something like a number for identification purposes. There are clinics in some parts of the world at which women who are possibly infected but do not have any apparent symptoms of gonorrhoea can go and be examined, yet not written into any medical record whatsoever.

If the Minister wants to have a conversation with his staff, I will sit down and wait while he finishes the conversation, Mr. Chairman.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Carry on. I have to chat with my officials.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence (Minister of Mines): Has the hon. member for Scarborough Centre never talked when someone else was making a speech in the Legislature?

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I would not talk if I were the Minister of Health, and someone was trying to speak to me about the problems in Ontario.

Mr. Chairman, as far back as 1963, a national survey of treatments was carried out in the United States, similar to the one that the doctors in Ontario are asking for now. The dramatic decrease in reported cases from 1947 to 1957 was a success story in the field of public health against venereal disease. And then doctors in the United States, Mr. Chairman, became as concerned as the doctors are in the OMA in Ontario that they were not getting true reports from the medical profession—from their own people, from their own profession.

They are asking that a survey be made, and I would say to the Minister that he might well consider the type of survey that is reported here in this national survey of venereal disease in JAMA—the Journal of the American Medical Association October 5, 1963. Because at the same time, Mr. Chairman, in Ontario, in 1964, in our own Canadian Journal of Public Health, February, 1964, there appeared an article "The Resurgence of Venereal Diseases." This is not something that the Minister can sort of pretend became suddenly important in the last little while.

In a survey in the United States, the task force committee was particularly disturbed by the fact that effective techniques of control and therapy to stop the spread of syphilis were available, but not applied widely enough. The committee recommended that an intensive effort be inaugurated to enlist private physicians in a syphilis control effort, and that health departments foster the establishment of a full partnership with private medicine. The task force specifically recommended that at least two visits per year by a qualified health worker be made to the 100,000 general practitioners in the U.S. and one visit per year be made to the remaining 130,000 physicians. During these visits the importance of case reporting and the need for adequate interviewing of infectious patients for sex contact were to be stressed. A necessary first step in carrying out the recommendation of the task force was to ascertain how many physicians encountered syphilis and gonorrhoea in their private practice and how many cases they diagnosed and treated during a given period. To answer those questions, the American Social Health Association, through co-operation with the AMA, the American Osteopathic Association and the National Medical Society conducted a mail survey—"mail" being m-a-i-l, Mr. Chairman—of all physicians in general practice and in medical specialties in the United States. The survey questionnaire was a brief three-question form, requesting the number of new cases, of primary or secondary syphilis, of other stages of syphilis, of gonorrhoea treated in the three-month period from April 1 to June 30, 1962. The specialty of the physician was also requested. They did the same thing in 1962 with a questionnaire mailed to 184,500 physicians, 172,000 medical physicians and 12,500 osteopaths. With a follow-up questionnaire and replies to those letters, the total response to those letters was an amazing rate of 71 per cent. I would feel, Mr. Chairman, that until this Minister gets some sort of personal contact with the physicians in Ontario, we are not going to get a 71 per cent report back from physicians. We are getting reports back that when the doctors speak about them publicly, they speak about them in a way that they cannot even use the figures that they are having to quote from in the Minister's own department.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to come back up to 1969 in the Ontario Medical Review where F. Russell Manuel, MD, DPH, DTM & H (Eng.), who was on the staff of the Minister's department at this time, gave a résumé of epidemiology diagnosis and treatment. And his introduction began—and I will make it very brief, Mr. Chairman:

—that worldwide increase in the reported cases of gonorrhoea has been observed in the past few years. This increase has also been seen in Ontario. Some physicians working in the field of VD control feel that with the present tools we can do very little to control the spread of gonorrhoea. Today we hope to demonstrate, by concentrating our efforts on certain aspects of the gonorrhoea problem, we can at least halt the present increase in cases and possibly make some headway in reducing the number of cases.

But he winds this introduction up, Mr. Chairman, by saying:

We would, however, agree that any talk of eradicating gonorrhoea using our present tools is premature.

Dr. Manuel was addressing the OMA in Toronto on May 8, 1968, when he presented this paper and at that time he was the medical officer in charge of venereal disease control section, epidemiology service, Ontario Department of Health.

I would like to ask the Minister, where is Dr. Manuel now?

Hon. Mr. Wells: He is at the University of the British West Indies on an exchange programme.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Had he been here for some time? Is it likely he might return?

Hon. Mr. Wells: He is on a two-year leave. We are expecting that he may return, yes.

Mr. Lewis: Was he the public health man and the MOH in one of the counties?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Yes, he was the medical officer of health in Owen Sound.

Mr. Lewis: Yes, a superb fellow, as I recall him.

Hon. Mr. Wells: He is an old friend of mine. We went to the same church together when we were kids.

Mr. Lewis: I was not trying to cast aspersions on the Minister's character.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Apparently not an atheist.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Well, Mr. Chairman, Dr. Manuel spoke about statistics and he said:

Statistically, the incidence of gonorrhoea may be hidden because an apparently high incidence of reported cases may indicate either many cases, or good reporting of a moderate number of cases. On the contrary, a low reported incidence may indicate few cases or poor reporting. For example, in 1967, the reported cases of gonorrhoea per 100,000 in some areas of Canada were as follows: Maritimes, 65; Quebec, 56; Ontario, 49; Prairies, 242; British Columbia, 245.

And beside those figures in Dr. Manuel's address is written:

The apparent low rate for Ontario most likely represents poor reporting and not fewer cases of gonorrhoea.

Mr. Chairman, I would say to the Minister that some of this may be new to the Minister, but this is certainly not new to the doctors who are in the public health department, in the department of venereal disease control.

Hon. Mr. Wells: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. member, did she hear my remarks yesterday?

Mr. Ben: She was not here. She did not hear the Minister.

Hon. Mr. Wells: If she was not here yesterday, I said exactly those words, that I realized there was not good reporting. I do not know how many times I have to say it.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I was here yesterday, I listened to the remarks. I did not feel his remarks had any teeth in them whatsoever regarding the serious problem of venereal disease control. I felt that the proposed committee is simply another stall over the number of years that this sort of thing has been pressured from outside. You can go back very briefly, Mr. Chairman, to this Minister's predecessor saying years ago—the member for Ontario, June, 1966, from the Ontario Medical Review, published by the OMA, page 468:

Following criticism of the poor reporting of venereal disease by the province's doctors, Dr. M. B. Dymond, Minister of Health, told the Legislature that his department would consider the feasibility of using the cluster method of reporting, for which physicians would report VD cases and contacts directly to the medical officer of health rather than to the provincial department.

What about that, then, Mr. Minister? Let us go back to June 1966. You have taken over the reins from someone who said in 1966 that he recognized that there was a problem. We cannot see what you are going to do when we cannot see what he did. Would you mind telling us how different your approach to this problem is going to be from the approach of the former Minister? Did he ever go into the cluster method of reporting, reporting in areas, or reporting to local MOHs? Is there an onus on private doctors to follow up contacts of cases? What happens to the contacts of a case that a private doctor treats and has no knowledge or does not want any knowledge, does not want to bring in—and in some areas people are brought in by law—does not want to bring in people who have been contacts? Where did the former Minister go from his statement?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, I am not sure what he did in those matters. I know that in my statement yesterday I dealt with this matter. I said up to the present time, it appeared that central reporting was the best way because there were certain problems that arose in the cluster reporting method. If the contacts were in different municipalities, it entailed certain co-operative efforts that perhaps did not always work out. There were advantages and disadvantages to both methods but I just cannot seem to get across to the hon. member that I have been in this portfolio for about three months now. I am concerned about this problem and I have indicated what we are going to do and we have some of the best people in this province on that committee—people like Anna Keyl and others. If they cannot come up with a new system for us that we can put in—I think really that we have stated the problem and we are just repeating and repeating in this House. I think there are other matters that perhaps we would like to get on and talk about.

Mrs. M. Renwick: I was listening to the Minister's address very closely, I believed, but also I did not hear the names of the committee. Would the Minister quickly run over the names of that committee?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, they are in Hansard but for the benefit of the member I will read them over. I said the task force was composed of individuals with expert knowledge and experience in various aspects of venereal disease and they represent those groups with particular interest in involvement, and indeed the Ontario Medical Association and the Ontario Public Health Association were asked to name people. Dr. Frank Adderley, GP, Scarborough; Dr. Harry Brown, GP, Sarnia; Dr. Anna Keyl, clinic director, Toronto; Miss Ella Beardmore, director of public health nursing, Scarborough; Dr. W. T. R. Linton, dermatologist, Toronto; Dr. G. W. Moss, associate medical officer of health, Toronto; Dr. W. E. Page, medical officer of health, Brantford; Dr. Charles Boden, GP, Toronto; and the chairman of the committee is Dr. J. Stewart Bell, the chief of our epidemiology service.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The hon. member for Humber was given a hard time for repetition.

Mr. Ben: That is right. I was given a hard time.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Minister—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please. Would the member for Scarborough Centre please complete her presentation?

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Minister under the present system, what onus is placed on medical doctors to report contacts of the patient whom they treat?

Mr. Ben: Pride cometh before a fall.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Under The Venereal Disease Prevention Act, he is required to report contacts. I might also tell the hon. member that members of the department's staff have been calling on doctors in this province for the past 25 years acquainting them with the programme and encouraging them to report.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I would ask how many doctors these people have called?

Hon. Mr. Wells: I would not have that statistic here, Mr. Chairman.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Would the Minister undertake to get that statistic because this is where this department is falling down on the whole problem, Mr. Chairman. It is that we are not getting the facts from the department of public health. If the Minister can say that doctors have visited physicians with this in mind—of acquainting them with their need, the need of the department of public health, to have these statistics, and to have these contacts given to them, so that The Department of Health can even go out after the contacts—and if the private physician does not wish to do so, then the Minister, I would say, must be able to tell us how many doctors these people have been calling on. It is not good enough for the Minister's department to say: "We have been calling on doctors in Ontario." They could mean six doctors.

Hon. Mr. Wells: They have been making regular calls in the province over the years to acquaint them with what they should do under this programme, to make available the literature to them and so forth. As I said earlier, though, Mr. Chairman, the point of this committee is that the task force has got to bring them on. There are certain reasons why some of them do not want to report and this is what we have got to get at, and this is what we are going to get at through this process, and when maybe they realize some of these problems and we come to grips with a new method of reporting, we will get better reporting. Indeed, we have to, and this is what the task force is going to do. But I do not think I can emphasize more strongly—I cannot seem to convince the member—that action is being taken.

I might also say that I recall signing, and I cannot remember the exact details, a research grant under our public health research programme, for a study—I think at the University of Waterloo, although I cannot recall that for sure—where a group is setting up a computer system approach to the treatment and the reporting and the methods of venereal disease control into which new methods of control can be put, to test their effectiveness. This, of course, is an on-going thing of using the new technological systems that are available and putting them to work in the public health field and this, I think, is a very interesting thing. Of course, this task force will be looking at it because this will be a very useful tool for them in their work.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I would like to clarify for the Minister that it is not that I have not accepted that something is being done. I have accepted that something is being done, Mr. Chairman, and I am asking the Minister how much—where, with whom, by whom, and most particularly how much is being done. You see, Mr. Chairman, the problem of medical doctors not reporting venereal disease is nothing new. I quote that from a medical journal where the question of the week was “How can medical doctors reporting a venereal disease be improved?” I am trying to read which journal I took this out of. I will have to let the hon. Minister know if he is at all interested and I suspect he is.

Dr. James Scooley, obstetrician, gynecologist, in Fresno, California, said that in California a physician must, according to law, report any case of venereal disease he treats, or is made aware of in a medical capacity. His reports must be submitted to the state health department which, in turn, is committed to track down the person who gave the disease to the doctor's patient.

Hon. Mr. Wells: With the indulgence of the House, if we are going to close this part off, because this has to be done today, if the House would agree, I would just like to tell them that we have, over in Room M-258-I of the Macdonald Block, all the samples of the summer and spring clothing that will be used in our mental institutions.

This is a display. I think it is about the third time it has been displayed over there. This is where the people from the various institutions come in—the purchasing agents and the administrators—and choose the clothing from these samples that are in this room. The question of clothing has been brought up in this House under the other vote a couple of times and I would just like to invite all the members of the House to come over and see the quality, style, colour, and so on, of the various garments that are provided for patients—

Mrs. M. Renwick: I will be there.

Mr. Lewis: Was your colleague, the Minister of Correctional Services, the cutter?

Hon. Mr. Wells: —in hospitals, schools and our facilities for the retarded. The press is welcome to come along. It is in Room M-258-I, which is over in the new block.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: If you find it, that is better than I do over there.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I relinquished the floor to the Minister because he said he had a statement which had to be read today. I fear for our operation here if it was not read. I presume I still have the floor.

Mr. Chairman: Time has run out anyway.

Mrs. M. Renwick: It being 1.00 of the clock, Mr. Chairman, I adjourn the debate.

Mr. Chairman: Oh, no, no.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence moves the committee of supply rise and report a certain resolution and ask for leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of supply begs to report that it has come to a certain resolution and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence (Minister of Mines) moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 1.05 o'clock, p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

MONDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1969

The House met at 2.00 o'clock, p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: This afternoon in the west gallery we have students from Hermon Public School, in Hermon; and we also have representatives from across Ontario from 18 homes for special care and approved homes under The Mental Health Act.

Hon. J. P. Robarts (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have supplementary estimates from the Honourable, the Lieutenant-Governor signed by his own hand.

Mr. Speaker: The Honourable, the Lieutenant-Governor, transmits supplementary estimates of certain additional sums required for the services of the province for the year ending March 31, 1970, and recommends them to the legislative assembly. Dated, Toronto, December 1, 1969.

Referred to committee of supply.

Statements by the Ministry.

Oral questions.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, perhaps this question should be referred to the Minister of Agriculture and Food first, having to do with the report of the standing committee on health with regard to Bill 194.

Is it the Minister's intention to bring a bill forward for second reading even if there are those who feel they have not had a sufficient opportunity to express their views to the committee? If not, would the Minister consider allowing the committee to extend its hearings sufficiently so that all those who wish to put forward their views may have such an opportunity as the Minister undertook to give them even though the bill might then have to be postponed for introduction in the session which we expect will begin in February?

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): Mr. Speaker, there are many ways this matter could be handled. I have no idea as to how many people wish to appear before the committee. I have nothing to do with it. It has been left with the secretary of the committee, I understand, to make the arrangements for any to appear before the committee. As far as I am concerned there is something new to be offered. I think the chairman quite wisely suggested early in the hearings that he and the committee would welcome any new suggestions that might be made but he did not feel that much could be gained, if I interpreted it the right way, in having repetitive presentations made, where nothing new could come out.

This is the situation as far as I am concerned and I have not any idea how many are scheduled to appear at this time.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary question. Even though it appears there is a real shortage of animals for experimental purposes, would the Minister consider the presentation of a new bill in the session in 1970, based on fuller consultation than has been undertaken so far, in an effort to reach agreement among those concerned about the principle and subject matter of the bill the Minister has submitted so far this year?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Speaker, I am afraid that as far as this bill is concerned we have attempted in every possible means to give as wide consideration as possible to all presentations that have been made, both in the committee as well as in the many letters and briefs that have been submitted to me personally. I can assure you that they have been given very careful consideration.

Basically, there has been very little change in the position that has been taken by various organizations and individuals. I feel that we should, if it is at all possible, pursue this legislation in view of the fact, as my hon. friend, the leader of the Opposition has said, of there being a very serious shortage of animals which has developed in several of the teaching schools, in fact classes have had to be withdrawn.

So, it would seem to me that we should get on with the legislation and try to bring about a correction of these things, and by the same token provide for the very humane care and treatment of the animals so used.

Mr. Nixon: A further supplementary question. Has the Minister given any further consideration of a suggestion by the member for Parkdale (Mr. Trotter) that without infringing in any way on the rights of any individual to make a presentation to the committee, that he, the Minister, undertake to speak to the chairman of the delegation representing the medical schools and the chairman of the delegation representing the humane societies, in an effort to perhaps bring this thing to a point where there would be better agreement on all sides?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Speaker, I am afraid I have missed the suggestion.

Mr. Nixon: He made it on Friday, I believe.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I have the copy of Hansard before me. I have not read it yet, and if it was made there, I did not understand it. He asked me if I would withdraw the bill. The question asked by the member for Parkdale is outlined here:

In view of the information given to the standing committee on health, would the Minister consider withdrawing Bill 194, and using the Christmas recess to discuss the matter with the contending parties and bring in a new bill?

I did not interpret it in quite that way. I have answered the hon. member, the leader of the Opposition as to my feelings about withdrawing the bill. There have been a very great number of discussions that have taken place between the humane societies and the deans of medicine. Certainly I sat in on several of these discussions myself. I know that some have taken place between them since that time. As far as I know, there has been no basic change in the position that was taken by either party.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, if I might, and I do not want to pursue this—and you—I am sure you would bring me to order, but is not the hon. Minister aware of the fact that the positions expressed by the two opposing views do appear to be able to be reconciled by someone like the Minister in a position of responsibility before the bill is brought forward?

Is the Minister prepared to confirm that these views can be reconciled and that he, himself, has indicated there will be some change, minor or major, in the bill before it becomes law?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Speaker, it seems a better time to debate this issue would be when the bill comes up for second reading.

At the present time we have listened with great attention and studied quite carefully the recommendations that have been made for amendments to the bill.

As I indicated earlier, last Friday at least, I could not determine any basic difference in the position by the Ontario Humane Society to the bill. I think when one studies the brief that was submitted last Thursday, in detail, that situation remains very much the same as it has for a number of years. We just do not think it can be reconciled. We just do not think that there will ever be a reconciliation of that position.

Every possible means I know of as to how to reconcile that situation has been dealt with, and apparently it is just not reconcilable, so it would seem to me that the committee on health would have to hear whoever they decide in their wisdom to hear, and then make their own decisions.

Frankly, I have gone as far as I can in doing everything that is humanly possible to provide for the care and welfare of the animals that would be destroyed anyway. However, if we are to do as we were asked to do in the brief that was presented last Thursday, that would simply mean exempting all existing humane societies from the terms of the bill, and then only using animals from municipal pounds for non-survival experimentation or teaching purposes.

That simply emasculates the bill to the place where, in my humble opinion, it is virtually useless other than to regulate animals that would be used in teaching and research institutions. But the problem is this, that while we recognize that regulation should be established by legislation if we possibly can do it, by the same token, we feel that a source of animals must be provided for these teaching and research facilities. If we are to dry up this source of animals completely from the municipal pounds or from the humane society pounds then, in my opinion, we so emasculate the bill that we do not provide a source of animals in any way, shape or form.

Mr. Speaker: Is there a supplementary question from some other member on this matter? After that I would suggest that since the committee on health is meeting again tomorrow on this bill, perhaps the leader of the Opposition's question might be better answered then. The member for Grey South.

Mr. E. A. Winkler (Grey South): I would like to ask the Minister if he would once more make an appeal to the public, even on an individual basis, to send in written submissions in this regard so that no one will be precluded from having consideration given to individual positions and these can be considered even though the committee may not be sitting at that time.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Speaker, I would say that the hon. member's suggestion has considerable merit. I would think that most people already know about the legislation and the hearings that have gone on through the excellent coverage that has been provided by the press. I would doubt very much if there were those who felt that they had anything to contribute to the bill who have not already done so or indicated they so wish to do.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. leader of the Opposition have another question?

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Attorney General concerning the charges made by Constable Peter Lott that superior officers in the police force have interfered with prosecutions of prominent businessmen, arrested for impaired driving. Is he considering an investigation from the level of the Attorney General into this matter, or what disposition does he feel should be taken?

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I have not heard of this matter, having just arrived in the office this morning. I will look into it and give the hon. member an answer very shortly.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Attorney General if he would also look into the question of making any hearing public. There is a private hearing going on at the present time; it has been going on for a month, and I think it is quite important to all. Will the Attorney General agree that it is extremely important in the matter of subversion of justice that these matters be made public?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: No, Mr. Speaker, I do not agree that in every case this is so. There may be reasons in the public interest why this should not be made public, but generally I would think that the hon. member is correct. Not in every case, however, could I agree.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary question. You usually do not allow supplementaries when the Minister does not answer, but in this case he has undertaken to give some further information. In view of the somewhat disappointing investigation by the Toronto authorities into the matter pertaining to Mrs. Shirley Hunter, and the other matter pertaining to a Mr. Bennett, in which the Attorney General had indicated to this House that he had felt there should be further investigations, would he not feel, perhaps under his direction—that is, a somewhat more objective point of view—that there should be an examination into the charges made?

Mr. Speaker: I would think this question could only be answered when the Minister answers the first question, when he has looked into it.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Speaker, if I may, I would say when I examine the matter I will answer both the original question and the supplementary.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Prime Minister: He has made no announcement as yet to the House as to the agenda for the federal-provincial conference next week. I wonder if he could tell the House if there will be an item under which the possibility of federal assistance to the cities, either direct or through the agency of the province, would be considered?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: I do not think there is anything which would deal with that specifically, but there is no doubt, particularly in view of the meeting that is to follow the federal-provincial conference, that discussion will be considered. The tax structure committee, if you recall, previously did the forecasting of all debt—that is, all government debt; municipal, provincial and federal—is working in the same field, and I have no doubt that the situation regarding the municipalities will be covered in its work. That committee is going to meet following the meeting of the conference itself.

While I am on the subject, Mr. Speaker, there will be provision for the leader of the Opposition and the hon. member for York South to attend and sit in on all the meetings next week.

Mr. Nixon: As a supplementary, in view of the fact that this matter might come forward for discussion, does the Premier feel that it would be possible, without regard to the constitutional requirements, that federal assistance might be forthcoming directly payable to certain urban agencies rather than payable to the provincial authority and then passed on?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Mr. Speaker, I think we would take the attitude that we would want payments made to the province in order that all the machinery existing would not be bypassed. I do not think we want to face the situation where the federal government leapfrogs—if I may put it that way—over the provincial government dealing directly with the municipalities, because there are all manner of arrangements and controls between the province and the cities now. I do not think there is any difficulty in working this thing out. I propose to have some representatives of municipal associations in the delegation from the province so that our municipal people will be aware of what is going on. I do not really anticipate any difficulty, but I do not think I would be particularly happy at the thought of the federal government dealing directly with the cities and not coming through the provincial government.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Mr. Speaker, my first question is of the Prime Minister: In view of the fact that representatives of the homes for special care have been seeking an interview with the government to discuss their problems since last June, without success, would the Prime Minister intervene with the Minister of Health (Mr. Wells), or such other Ministers as he deems appropriate, to give these people a hearing?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Well, yes, I would be quite happy to do that. We see most delegations, most people, who ask to see the government. I do not know just where this particular request is, but I would be happy to look into it.

Mr. Shulman: As a supplementary, Mr. Speaker, inasmuch as there are a number of representatives who came from all parts of Ontario to be here today, would it be possible for someone from The Department of Health to see them today?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Well, I am not aware that they are here or why.

Mr. Shulman: It was announced by the Speaker.

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Perhaps I was thinking of something else where the Speaker listed who was here this afternoon. The Minister of Health is finishing his estimates today. I will see what I can do to arrange that they see somebody if that is what they wish.

Mr. MacDonald: I thank the Prime Minister. After six months I am sure that will be appreciated.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member is asking questions.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A question of the Minister of Lands and Forests.

In view of the new proposals with respect to the Niagara Parks Commission, could the Minister indicate whether or not consideration of the Parks Integration Board involving the use of redundant land from the Welland Canal will be co-ordinated with this proposed expansion of the Niagara Parks Commission?

Hon. R. Brunelle (Minister of Lands and Forests): Mr. Speaker, I would say to the hon. member that this matter will be discussed at one of the future meetings of the Parks Integration Board and I will be pleased to keep the hon. member informed.

Mr. MacDonald: By way of supplementary question: Could the Minister indicate to me whether the proposed expansion of the Niagara Parks Commission is a topic that the Parks Integration Board has any jurisdiction over, or is the Niagara Parks Commission more or less autonomous? What is the working relationship between these two bodies?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: The Parks Integration Board is a liaison committee. I am just wondering whether the chairman of the Niagara Parks Commission wishes to comment on this matter because he is a lot more conversant than I am.

Mr. MacDonald: I will be glad to put the question, if the Speaker will permit, to the hon. member for Haldimand-Norfolk, who is the chairman of the Niagara Parks Commission.

Do the proposals that were announced this morning with regard to expansion of the Niagara Parks Commission involve any consideration of the use of the land in Welland along the Welland Canal, land that is now becoming redundant, in an expanded provincial park set-up?

Mr. J. N. Allan (Haldimand-Norfolk): Mr. Speaker, the answer would be no. The plans that were outlined on Saturday, are not the plans of the commission, the studies that are carried out, have to do only with the present park land. Due to the fact that the parks commission does not receive government grants or government assistance by way of grants, there would have to be a good deal of spade work done before they could undertake to extend their activities to that part of the canal land that you speak of.

Mr. MacDonald: By way of a supplementary question then, if this land along the old Welland Canal is going to be used for a provincial park, would I be accurate in assuming that it will be a new and separate provincial park, and not part of the Niagara Parks Commission?

Mr. Allan: Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that that would be a matter of government policy and I do not think I am in a position to answer.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Yorkview, a supplementary?

Mr. F. Young (Yorkview): Mr. Speaker, a question of the member for Haldimand-Norfolk: Did the examination of this new concept announced today include co-operation with the authorities of New York State across the river in their development plans?

Mr. Allan: Mr. Speaker, no, it did not include co-operation with them. We develop our areas entirely independently although we have a very friendly arrangement, and have friendly discussions.

Mr. Young: A further supplementary: Is the member aware that there are committees working in the two cities across the border at Niagara Falls, in connection with development plans, and it seems to me that these ought to be brought into consideration.

Mr. Allan: Mr. Speaker, I am aware of those committees, but there has been no direct contact between the committees and our commission.

Mr. Speaker: The member for York South.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Provincial Treasurer.

Is the Provincial Treasurer aware of it, and if so, what are his comments, on the proposals of the Ontario Economic Council with regard to tax restructuring involving opposition to a capital gains tax, opposition to any increase in a corporation tax, and in favour of further commodity taxes?

Hon. C. S. MacNaughton (Provincial Treasurer): Mr. Speaker, I am just very barely aware of the matters under consideration or proposed by the economic council. They are being studied by the economics branch of The Department of Treasury and Economics and at the moment it has not gone any further than that.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary question to the Provincial Treasurer or to the government as a whole—what is the purpose of having a body that comes in with reactionary policies that are out of step, even with the policies of this government?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I think, Mr. Speaker, it is quite appropriate to say that whether these proposals are in tune or in harmony with policies of the government is beside the point; they are being studied at the moment.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: I have a question of the Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs. Representations were made to the securities commission by Pat Sheridan on October 30. At this date, more than a month later, is the Minister in a position to indicate what, if any, reaction the securities commission is going to make to his critical propositions?

Hon. H. L. Rowntree (Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I have looked into that matter and the Sheridan evidence before the commission was where Mr. Sheridan indicated his views with respect to certain policies and requirements of the stock exchange. That case was dealt with on a fairly broad basis of principle and judgment. The decision was reserved and has not been handed down as yet. As soon as it does, it will indicate the commission's attitude in the matter.

Mr. MacDonald: By way of a supplementary question to the Minister: Since these proposals involved the accusation that the Toronto Stock Exchange is acting beyond its powers as laid down in its charter and is usurpation of the powers laid down in The Corporations Act, is this not a matter for the Minister's immediate consideration?

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: These were allegations made by Mr. Sheridan and I think they are being dealt with appropriately in this hearing before the commission.

Mr. Speaker: The member for York Centre.

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs. Has the Minister or his department enquired into the source of funds used by the relatively new real estate firm of J. D. Franciotti Real Estate Limited of 6 Adelaide Street East, for the purchase of three substantial downtown buildings within the first six months of this year—namely 170 Bay Street, 34 Adelaide Street West and the Lumsden Building?

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: I have no knowledge of that particular business transactions in the city of Toronto, but I would be pleased to look into it. I do not know that we would have any knowledge in our department of the source of funds. If it was simply a real estate transaction, it would not go through the real estate division, and if it was a promotion of a stock or accomplished through a securities issue, then it would have been cleared with the securities commission. Was there an issue of securities to the public involved in this matter?

Mr. Deacon: I understand the purchase was as principal of these three buildings and there has been no public—

Mr. Speaker: We are back in the old position where the Minister asks the question and the question period is for private members. If the hon. member wishes to ask a supplementary question and give such information as he has, it will be in order.

Mr. Deacon: A further question of the Minister, Mr. Speaker. Has the Minister requested the federal government to negotiate with the government of Switzerland an agreement whereby tax and security offences by parties in either country will be recognized by the other in order to reduce means whereby illegal groups can hide transactions?

Mr. Shulman: That is not a supplementary question.

Mr. Deacon: I did not ask a supplementary. It is a new question.

Mr. Shulman: I have a question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Just a minute. Mr. Speaker is looking after the question period, not the member for High Park. I believe the member for York Centre is in the position to ask a further question—not necessarily a supplementary question—and if he has done so, the Minister may answer. If he has not done so, he now has the right to do so.

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: I have no knowledge of the accomplishment of any such international tax agreement.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Why does the Minister not be consistent?

Mr. Deacon: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary. In other words, has the Minister requested Ottawa to negotiate such an agreement whereby we can follow up transactions which are hidden behind Swiss banks?

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: No, I have not made any such proposal to the federal government.

Mr. Deacon: May I ask the Minister—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member has pursued this matter to the point where it has become almost a debate now.

Mr. Deacon: I wanted to ask the Minister—

Mr. Speaker: Further supplementary questions are out of order from that member. The member for High Park.

Mr. Shulman: A question of the same Minister, Mr. Speaker. In view of the fact of the accident with the Eldon electric car last week and in view of the fact that Eaton's has now withdrawn that car for sale because of safety reasons, would the Minister care to revise his earlier remarks and take steps to see that that car is withdrawn from sale everywhere in this province?

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: Yes, I would be glad to comment on that matter.

It was last Friday, on a point of order, that the hon. member for High Park referred to an accident in Montreal involving a toy electric car, the sales of which have been referred to in this House..

The incident in Montreal involved a father who got a drop of sulphuric acid on his sweater. His child did not come in contact with sulphuric acid in any way. Our consumer protection division has been in contact with the Ottawa authorities, namely, the federal department, which is responsible for The Hazardous Products Act. It advised that while they do not give approval of toys, they do give their view regarding whether a particular toy is hazardous. They do not consider that the toy in question is hazardous.

The toy automobile is powered by a six-volt motorcycle battery which is completely enclosed. The battery is installed under the seat of the toy automobile and the seat itself is screwed down by means of a counter-sunk screw which requires a special screwdriver to remove. The caps of the battery itself are very tightly secured in place and a tool is required to remove those caps.

Mr. Shulman: As a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, is the Minister aware that on Friday last, Eaton's withdrew these from sale because acid was leaking out of the batteries?

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: No, I am not aware at all.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): The Minister cannot defend that toy.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Correctional Services): It is only dangerous to fathers.

Hon. Mr. Rowntree: As a matter of fact, I think we might just lay all of the information before the House about these cars. In the Globe and Mail of November 28 it was pointed out that the safety division of the town of Mississauga police force is using these automobiles to teach children the rules of traffic safety, and think they are a desirable thing.

Mr. Shulman: Three-year-olds?

Mr. Speaker: The member for Riverdale.

Mr. J. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Energy and Resources Management: Would the Minister clarify for the House the present position of the hearing before the Ontario Energy Board by Consumers' Gas for the purpose of acquiring control of Union Gas; and will the Minister comment about the statement made by Mr. Jones, the president of Consumers' Gas, that in the event the acquisition is not approved by the Ontario Energy Board, there will be an increase in Consumers' Gas rates for customers of that company?

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Minister of Energy and Resources Management): Mr. Chairman, the hearings have been adjourned sine die. There is an appeal from the Supreme Court decision handed down last Thursday. I believe that it is to be heard tomorrow. So on Friday the board adjourned sine die pending the disposition of that appeal.

Regarding Mr. Jones' comment, I would not really want to say whether or not what he said is a fact. I think this is one of the things that would be revealed from the hearings before the energy board. He may well be in a position to make a statement like that, which could very well be true, but I do not have enough information to really comment on it.

Mr. J. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, by way of a supplementary question: Does the Minister have any idea when the hearings will reconvene and what steps are required to be taken by Consumers' Gas in order to have the hearings recommence?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Assuming, Mr. Speaker, that the appeal will be heard tomorrow and that it would be completed tomorrow and a decision handed down this week, I would assume that the hearings would be heard again immediately after that decision was handed down. If, however, the appeal is successful and a long adjournment is allowed as a result of the appeal, the date could be some time after the first of the year. However, if the appeal is not successful, I would assume that the hearings will be resumed immediately. As far as reconvening, either the board or the applicant can have the hearings reconvened.

Mr. Speaker: Are there any further questions? The member for Scarborough West.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Trade and Development. Is the Minister aware that Courtalds Canada Limited in Cornwall, I believe, has received grants from government, EIO grants, I think, verging on $200,000, and has just laid off 600 men? Has he any comment on this process?

Hon. S. J. Randall (Minister of Trade and Development): Yes, Mr. Speaker. Courtalds are going through a very difficult economic situation in Cornwall due to the fact that most of the goods they are producing are being imported from the far east, particularly linings. The last layoff is due to the fact that the linings you have in the inside of your suits are being imported and that is doing away with a major part of their business. These 600 people are involved in that.

The company came to us during the summer and said: "We are going to have to close this end of the plant down. But we have tried to get our parent company to let us manufacture another product here, which will take roughly about 136 to 150 people and put them to work on a new product, if we can get it into Cornwall. Could we make an application for another EIO loan?" We said: "Yes, as long as it is a new business. As long as you can bring people back on the payroll, we are quite prepared to look at any new business." And I was aware they were going to have this layoff. In fact, there is another company there which may be doing the same thing in a different line of business. Cornwall, at the present time, has about 1,600 people unemployed, as you can appreciate. We have put into Cornwall since the EIO loan started, ten loans totalling $2 million, giving employment to about 300 people. But it seems every time we get one plant started, we have a difficult situation with another one.

However, I am of the opinion that we are going to continue with our programme at Cornwall and if Courtalds can come back in with a new product, a new plant, new machinery and invest their own money to put these people back to work, we are quite prepared to listen to them.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary: Is the Minister saying that an investment of $2 million resulting in a net deficit of 300 jobs lost makes good economic planning?

Hon. Mr. Randall: No, I did not say the net deficit—I said we saved 300 jobs already in Cornwall and there will be another 300. There will be a total of 600 jobs over the next five years in these new businesses they have started. Now, if they lay 600 people off, we are not going to be able to place those 600 people tomorrow. But I just told the hon. member that we hope to put back 135 or 150 of them if they start this new business. The others will have to come on as they can find new jobs there for them. If we can create other operations those people will be employed in there, but I do not think they are all going to go back to Courtalds. I can assure you of that.

Mr. Lewis: One final supplementary, Mr. Speaker. In the giving of loans or grants in this situation, is the Minister in contact with his colleagues in The Department of Labour about the retraining of men, because the understanding in Cornwall at the moment is that only 34 of the 600 or more that are laid off will be re-employable by the EIO loans.

Hon. Mr. Randall: Superannuation has taken care of some of them. I know the Minister of Labour (Mr. Bales) is very much interested in retraining people down there because, as I think the member is aware, the welfare roll is something like $1.7 million a year—

Mr. Lewis: Right.

Hon. Mr. Randall: —and it pays to get these people retrained and back on the job. But first of all, we have to create the jobs and that is what EIO is trying to do.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Timiskaming.

Mr. D. Jackson (Timiskaming): I have a question of the Minister of Transport: Is the Minister aware that on a PCV licence for a vehicle of less than 5,000 pounds it is $2 more on a half-yearly rate than if it is purchased on the quarterly rate? In other words, if you purchase on a three-month basis, it is cheaper on the half-yearly basis by $2.

Hon. I. Haskett (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I do not know the particulars of each and every weight of PCV licensing, but the principle is to provide quarterly licensing where it is convenient for the operator and where the operator is prepared to pay a little more for the quarterly licensing than for the half or whole year.

Mr. Jackson: Mr. Speaker, on a supplementary, is he aware that it is, in fact, true, that if you purchase on a quarterly basis you pay $16 for the half year, whereas if you purchase on the half yearly basis it costs you $18? Can the Minister explain the thinking on that?

Hon. Mr. Haskett: Mr. Speaker, that confuses me just as much as it does the member.

Mr. Jackson: Will the Minister look into it? Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of—

Mr. Speaker: The member for High Park has been trying to get the floor.

Mr. Shulman: I have a question of the Prime Minister, Mr. Speaker. In view of the fact that he has been kind enough to agree to see the delegation from the homes for special care, and in view of the extreme emergency that has arisen in those homes because they cannot manage on the pay they are receiving of $4 a day, will the Prime Minister use his good offices to have a rapid revision of this rate, because otherwise there is going to be an emergency in the province?

Mr. Speaker: I would think that is a question which the Prime Minister, or whoever sees the delegation, will be able to answer later. The member for Hamilton East.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): My question, Mr. Speaker, is of the Minister of Lands and Forests. Subsequent to the Minister's department stating they would reconsider acquiring land for the development of a provincial park in Saltfleet and Grimsby townships known as Fifty Mile Point, has any progress taken place, or any action as to the acquisition of land for a provincial park at that point?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Speaker, in reply to the hon. member, I have not received any new information lately. I believe the matter rests in this way: We will agree, provided that a recommendable price can be submitted to us. As the hon. member knows, the price of the land per acre is away beyond our acceptance level.

Mr. Gisborn: A supplementary: Would the Minister advise as to whose responsibility it is now to initiate such a programme in face of the fact that the Niagara Regional Development Association has continually urged action at this point, and, as far as anyone knows, has not yet dropped its proposition that this is the proper area for a site.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Speaker, I would say to the hon. member that the matter is certainly not a dead issue, but at the present time it is just not possible for us to purchase at that high price.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Timiskaming has another question.

Mr. Jackson: The Minister to whom the question would be directed, has just left the House.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Riverdale.

Mr. J. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Education and University Affairs. Does the Minister agree with the decision of Ryerson Polytechnical Institute to suspend one of its teachers, Mr. David Humphries, pending an appeal of convictions which were registered against him with relation to marijuana?

Hon. W. G. Davis (Minister of Education): Mr. Speaker, this matter, of course, is one that relates to the internal administration of the institution, as I understand it. My information comes from the same source, I guess—the press report. The president of Ryerson has suspended the faculty member on the conviction, pending the appeal.

I think, Mr. Speaker, with the kind of institution that Ryerson is—an educational institution—that probably the president was acting with what he thought was the best interests of the institution in mind. Certainly I have no criticisms to offer as to his conduct in this matter. I recognize the point that may be made by the hon. member for Riverdale that with the pending appeal, there might be some inequity. Perhaps, in certain situations there would be, but with an educational institution, Mr. Speaker, I think that one can recognize the desire on the part of the president to deal with this the way he has.

Mr. J. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, by way of a supplementary question, in any other of the educational institutions under the direct control of the Minister of Education, does he have any similar policy?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I do not have the specific Acts here. There is some statutory provision related to this with the question of certification of teachers. The policy has been that if the person has been convicted of a criminal offence—depending on the nature of the offence—generally, his certificate is suspended. In those situations where conviction has been registered, and appeal has been made, the question of the suspension of the certificate has been held up until such time as the appeal has been heard. I believe this has been our custom but it is also customary in many instances, for the teacher not to continue teaching in the classroom until the appeal is heard, but the certificate itself has remained.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Timiskaming.

Mr. Jackson: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Mines. Does Falconbridge nickel mine enjoy an exemption from the terms of The Mining Act which require the processing of Ontario ores in Canada, in that it ships ore to Norway? If so, what percentage of full production is represented in that exemption?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence (Minister of Mines): No, this matter is being considered by the government at the moment. The amendment to section 106, to which I think the member is referring, does not take effect until January 1 of next year. No order-in-council exempting the Falconbridge ores has yet been approved.

Mr. Shulman: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker. Is it the intention of the Minister to exempt Falconbridge—

Mr. Speaker: I would think that that is not a proper question for the oral question period under the rules under which we operate. The member for Nipissing.

Mr. R. S. Smith (Nipissing): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Energy and Resources Management with regard to the hiring practices on the construction sites of the Lower Notch of Ontario Hydro. He was to provide me with the information, but I have not received it yet.

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps while the Minister is finding that we might allow the Minister of Public Works to reply to a question that was asked of him by the member for High Park last Friday.

Hon. J. R. Simonett (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, I wish to point out that it is only since April 1 of this fiscal year that we have developed methods in this department of analyzing and recording accidents and their costs. Our accidents, though I cannot substantiate them by figures at this time, are on the decrease and not on the increase.

Since April 1 until the end of September we had, in the department, a total of 149 injuries. Of these, 68 were lost-time injuries and the other 113 required only first aid and did not involve lost time. Of the 68 lost-time injuries, 59 occurred in the Metropolitan area, and the vast majority of these were among our cleaning staff.

As to costs, the total cost of accidents to the department since April 1, 1969, amounts to $73,979.09. These costs are made up from compensation, medical aid, pensions and salary in lieu. I do wish to point out the cost that I have just quoted does include cost of accidents that could have happened two or three years ago, and the compensation for those accidents is still going on, and thus is shown in our present-day costs.

Our system of accounting and records does not permit us to show the costs of these accidents that happened since April 1 of this year, though it could be made available if required. It would take a good deal of work and manhours of our staff to break these figures down further. The figure quoted by the member for High Park for the cost of accidents in the last six months—$259,916.36—is, therefore, not correct.

Mr. Shulman: Two supplementaries, if I may, Mr. Speaker. The first one is, if the accidents are falling, why is it that the last month of accidents shows an all-time high figure since the department has been compiling figures? That is my first supplementary.

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Mr. Speaker, I suppose the hon. member is taking the year's accumulated figures, and of course, as I explained in my answer, this includes all accidents in the department, those receiving compensation and those receiving wages in lieu of compensation. As they accumulate, they would increase, but the total figure so far this year is, as I have quoted it, not over $250,000, as the member tried to make the House believe last Friday.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, I ask permission to table the report from his department showing the cost of $295,000, sir.

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Mr. Speaker, I would be very happy to table the report. The member has a copy of that report?

Mr. Shulman: I have.

Hon. Mr. Simonett: The only problem he has is that he cannot read reports. He cannot read reports and he tries to mislead the House.

Mr. Speaker: Order. There is no provision that I know of for tabling reports as part of an oral question. If the hon. member has already incorporated it in his question of last Friday, then of course, that is on the record of the House. He indicated he had another supplementary question.

Mr. Shulman: His statement made that unnecessary, sir.

Mr. Speaker: Has the Minister of Energy and Resources Management found his materials?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: It is my information that Ontario Hydro is not the prime contractor for the Lower Notch project. H. G. Acres and Company is responsible for the design, management and supervision of the construction. Apparently the strike involved some union workers engaged by Pitts, McNamara and Atlas, who are the general contractors of the project.

The strike was triggered when men in the local teamsters union walked off the job, contending that Ontario workers were being laid off the project while workers from Quebec were being retained. A picket line was set up and I understand that line has now been withdrawn on the grounds that the strike would be illegal.

As far as Ontario Hydro is concerned, Mr. Speaker, under our agreement with Acres, we have specified that local Ontario workers must be given full and appropriate consideration when labour is being recruited for the project.

Apparently some of the applicants from other provinces were giving a local address. This guideline also applies to Pitts, McNamara and Atlas, and these provisions are written into the agreement with these contractors.

Also, in recruiting people, the contractor relies upon the local offices of Canada Manpower services. So under those circumstances, it should be recognized that many people come from other jurisdictions to obtain employment in our province and it is not always possible to distinguish between these people.

Mr. R. S. Smith: As a supplementary, Mr. Speaker, since full and appropriate consideration is not being given to the local people by the construction company, what steps has Ontario Hydro taken to make sure that this is done in the future? That is the whole question.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, Ontario Hydro, in view of the trouble that developed there, has insisted that the terms of the agreement be adhered to.

Mr. R. S. Smith: The trouble has been going on for a year and a half and there have been a great number of workers—

Mr. Speaker: Is the hon. member asking a question?

Mr. R. S. Smith: Yes. Why did Ontario Hydro not intervene a year and a half ago, when this problem started?

Mr. Speaker: I am not sure that the Minister can answer that. The member for Port Arthur.

Mr. R. H. Knight (Port Arthur): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a question of the Attorney General. I would like to ask the Attorney General whether there is some consideration being given to dropping the charges against Domtar Newsprint Limited at Red Rock, in view of the company's announcement on Thursday or Friday, that it would launch into an $18 million expansion programme which would include the installation of pollution abatement equipment? I am just wondering whether there would be some change in the administration of justice in this case, since the company has obviously reacted in a most admirable way?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Speaker, the charges in that case were initiated by the Ontario Water Resources Commission. It was on their study of the matter and their initiative that charges were laid. Our duty would be confined to prosecuting the charge through the Crown attorney. The conduct of a person following a charge would be a matter for the judge to take into account.

Mr. J. Renwick: The Minister got his fingers burned once.

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, could I address a supplementary question, then, to the Minister of Energy and Resources Management, in relation to the same subject since the OWRC falls under his jurisdiction?

Mr. Speaker: It is quite proper to pass from one Minister to another and this supplementary may be asked.

Mr. Knight: I would like to ask the Minister whether he feels that his department and the actions of the OWRC have been responsible. He has the inside story on this of course, but would it be responsible to prosecute this company which has decided to spend $18.3 million in pollution abatement? Would the Minister find here that he has—

Mr. Speaker: This is not the supplementary question the member indicated he was going to ask. The member is now questioning the withdrawal or the laying of certain charges. If the member wishes to ask a supplementary on that basis, it is allowable; if not, he is out of order.

Mr. Knight: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, that will be fine. Would the Minister tell the House whether the OWRC would not perhaps consider dropping those charges in view of the action of the company?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Is that a loaded question, Mr. Speaker? In answer to the intent of his question, all I can say is that because of our action the result is this announcement from Domtar. Although the figures quoted indicated a certain amount of plant expansion, at the same time, they did indicate the acquiring of approximately $7 million worth of pollution abatement equipment. As far as the charges are concerned, Mr. Speaker, they are in the hands of the local Crown attorney and certainly we do not intend to interfere with those.

Mr. Shulman: On a point of order, sir, a few moments ago the Minister of Public Works made certain statements here which were incorrect. He stated first of all that his department has only been able to collect the statistics on accidents since April 1, of this year. Secondly, he stated that the number of accidents has fallen. I wish to inform you, sir, that I have here in my hand a report dated October 31, 1969, comparing this October with October of last year, which shows they were collecting such statistics last year, and it shows that the number of accidents last year for this month were 70 while this year it was 88.

Hon. Mr. Simonett: Mr. Speaker, I do not think I said the number of accidents had declined; I said that the figures, in amount paid out, were on the decrease and not on the increase. Many of our accidents with the cleaning staff in this building require only a bandage or something like that, although they are reported and they are in that report. These things will happen and we do not consider those as accidents where compensation is paid.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Oshawa.

Mr. C. G. Pilkey (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Attorney General. When the new Landlord and Tenant Act was introduced, it prompted two headlines in the Toronto Daily Star: "Security deposits to be Abolished; Rents Could Rise", and "Rentals Will Rise Tremendously, Landlords Say".

Would the Minister consider introducing a moratorium on rents until the bill is passed and becomes effective here in the province of Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Speaker, that would be a matter for the government to take under consideration as a matter of policy and I could not answer that. But I would say that I am hopeful the bill might be called for second reading this week, the day after tomorrow or the following day.

I would also hope that perhaps, since it has had such study before the law reform commission, and since we have met with many delegations of landlord and tenant groups and construction people in the drafting of the bill, and have taken some ten or 12 months to draft it, that we could deal with it in committee of the House without taking further time to go to committee, and that we could pass it this week. So, if we were able to do that, more time would not be necessary.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Waterloo North.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a question of the Minister of Agriculture and Food. If the provisions of the new assessment Act no longer require assessors to take a canine census, will the Minister consider making the provisions of The Sheep, Livestock and Poultry Protection Act, permissive, instead of mandatory?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Speaker, that is a question that we could take under consideration. I would not want to give the hon. member a positive answer one way or the other at this time.

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): Supplementary, Mr. Speaker. May I ask the Minister of Municipal Affairs if he has had any representation from municipalities that are concerned with the loss of revenue in respect to the question raised by my hon. friend?

Hon. W. D. McKeough (Minister of Municipal Affairs): I do not think so, Mr. Speaker. There may have been some, I do not recall them. But there is a resolution making the rounds at the present time, and I think it will either be going to the municipal associations or perhaps come directly to government, suggesting what the hon. member for Waterloo North has suggested that The Dog Tax and Livestock and Poultry Protection Act be made permissive rather than mandatory insofar as the levying of a dog tax by a municipality is concerned.

Mr. Gaunt: Is the Minister aware that this will mean a loss to some municipalities of roughly $3,000, if the dogs come off the roll?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: There is nothing to prevent the municipalities from hiring someone to do this, we think.

The reason behind taking it out of The Assessment Act, is that it is a dreadful waste of qualified people's time, to be taking the census of dogs.

Mr. Speaker: Does the member for Thunder Bay have a question not yet answered? The member for High Park.

Mr. Shulman: I have a question of the Minister of Public Works, Mr. Speaker. Inasmuch as the report prepared in his department at the beginning of November, showed that lost-time injuries for the month of October were up 30 per cent from the same period last year, would the Minister care to change the answer he gave us a few minutes ago?

Hon. Mr. Simonett: No, Mr. Speaker, I am not going to change any answer. The answer I gave was correct. We were talking about moneys being paid out, and I stated that it was improving; that it was not on the increase. As far as individual accidents are concerned—getting a Band-Aid on your finger, or if there is a scratch or—

Mr. Shulman: Lost-time injuries!

Hon. Mr. Simonett: —or something like that, I am not going to discuss it in this House.

Mr. Gisborn: Indefensible!

Mr. Speaker: It would appear to me that any further questions along these lines would not be in order. They are matters which are not of great urgency, and I think could be decided between the member and the Minister privately, or by correspondence.

Any further questions? The leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, of the Minister of Education.

Is he aware of the problem faced by the committees of arbitrators that are established by county school boards to deal with financial matters between townships that were taken over by the county board?

Is he further aware that the chairman of the arbitration board in Brant county resigned because he said he could not get sufficient guidance from the Minister, and is he aware that the amendments which were designed to assist in this have been before the House since December 19 last year and are still before the House?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I do not know that the chairman of the Brant county arbitration group actually asked for my personal guidance. There are some who are having difficulty. I think the majority of them are sorting it out really rather well. The amendments will help somewhat but do not solve the problems entirely because that is what arbitrations are all about.

I hope they will be considered and finalized by the education committee tomorrow at which time, of course, they will be forwarded, but the arbitrators are really fully aware of the legislation that is being proposed, and as I say, there have been some difficulties, but not nearly to the extent that we had anticipated.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary question. Would the Minister agree that the postponement of the passage of that bill for a full year has increased the difficulties that might otherwise have been ironed out?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I think those who are involved in it know roughly the clarifications in the bill and I do not think the passage or non-passage of this has really had any effect whatsoever. There are some difficulties in these arbitrations. They are fairly complicated but, by and large, they are going quite well.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary question. Would the Minister consider that the bill, when passed and given Royal assent, will relieve these boards of the difficulties that they presently experience to the extent that some of them feel that they could not take any action, and many have not taken any action, for a full year—a wasted year?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of any board that has not taken any action. Most of them are well along with the work; there is no doubt about this. It will not relieve them of some of the judgment decisions that have to be made. This is where some of the complexities are; there are certain judgment or value decisions that will have to be made and this is what arbitration is all about.

Mr. Nixon: The original bill was not permitted to make those judgments.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh yes.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Thunder Bay.

Mr. Stokes: I would like to direct a question to the Minister of Social and Family Services.

Has the Minister been approached by the Union of Ontario Indians with a view to the construction of an old people's home for elderly Indian people who do not wish to take advantage of the services provided by the regular homes for the aged, and is the Minister aware that they have started a fund of close to $6,000 expressly for this purpose?

Has the Minister given that particular project any thought or any endorsement?

Hon. J. Yaremko (Minister of Social and Family Services): Mr. Speaker, I have not been approached directly by the union with respect to any specific project. Last June, on a visit to northern Ontario, I mentioned our homes for the aged programme to those whom I met and that we had amended The Homes for the Aged Act in order to make this type of institution available. I do know that there has been interest on the part of certain groups.

Interest was shown one time on Manitoulin Island. We made a survey there. There is interest now shown in northern Ontario. The problem will be in what machinery can we develop to create an institution which will not just serve one small community, but perhaps serve a much larger community, because in order to have a base of support and a base to draw residents from, you need a pretty broad base. We were up there over the week-end, as the hon. member knows, and I discussed with our homes for the aged director the practical way in which we should meet the need.

I was very much interested in meeting, at the opening of the Grandview Lodge extension, one of the elderly residents who was of Indian origin. I am aware of the desirability, from the point of view of the residents, of having a home environment which is more suitable to their personal needs. This is one of the things we hope to deal with very extensively in the coming year.

Mr. Stokes: Do I take it from the Minister's remarks that he will give favourable consideration?

Mr. Speaker: The oral question period has now expired.

Petitions.

Presenting reports.

Mr. Evans, in the absence of Mr. Demers, presents the report of the standing legal and municipal committee and moves its adoption as follows:

The committee begs to report the following bills with certain amendments:

Bill 205, The Assessment Act, 1968-1969.

Bill 222, An Act to amend The Municipal Act.

Resolution agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House that Bill 205, The Assessment Act, be ordered for third reading?

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I think we had better have it go to committee—

Mr. Speaker: Committee of the whole House? The House must decide whether it goes direct to third reading, as the member for York South knows, or to the committee of the whole House. The committee of the whole House? Agreed.

Bill 222, An Act to amend The Municipal Act—is it the pleasure of the House that this be ordered for third reading? Committee of the whole House?

Agreed.

Motions.

Mr. D. A. Evans (Simcoe Centre): Mr. Speaker, I move that the standing health committee be authorized to sit concurrently with the House tomorrow, Tuesday, December 2.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, this resolution will permit the health committee to continue and expand its hearing of briefs in connection with the animal bill that was discussed in the question period today. The only difficulty in extending its hours would be that those people who might otherwise have intended to present their views on Thursday, when I believe the committee intended to meet in the morning, might find that this opportunity is not available.

The chairman is not present in the House right now but I wonder, Mr. Speaker, if there is some way we can have assurance that everyone who intends to present his views will have an opportunity to do so.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: May I reply to that, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park is speaking to the same matter. Perhaps he might speak first and then the Minister can reply.

Mr. Shulman: I would just like to know before we agree with this, what is coming up in the House tomorrow? We cannot be in both places at the same time and if we have to be over there, we want to know what we will miss here.

Mr. MacDonald: Can I have another point of clarification before the Minister speaks? Do I correctly assume that this extension is for tomorrow alone?

Mr. Speaker: The motion reads, "concurrently with the House tomorrow, Tuesday, December 2."

Mr. MacDonald: Do you interpret that, Mr. Speaker, as being henceforth?

Mr. Speaker: Only for tomorrow.

Mr. J. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, if I may just ask one further question about it—on whose decision is this kind of motion brought before the House? Is this the decision of the health committee to make this request, or is it a unilateral request by the chairman of the committee?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member will realize that the motion is not seen by Mr. Speaker until it reaches him on the floor of the House, so I cannot answer this. Perhaps the Minister of Agriculture and Food, or the House leader, or the Minister of Health, may have the answer to that. Would the Minister of Agriculture and Food wish to speak to this matter?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Speaker, I can only say that the chairman of the health committee asked me if it would be acceptable to pursue these hearings because on Tuesday afternoon and evening they looked as though they were going to involve many days. Inasmuch as there were some who wished to present themselves on Thursday, we undertook to advise them or have the secretary advise them, that they would be received tomorrow at the committee. If that met with the approval of the House, the hearings could continue tomorrow afternoon and, I believe, tomorrow evening. I am sorry I cannot answer the hon. member for High Park as to what is taking place in the House tomorrow; I do not know. I simply assume that normal business of the House will proceed.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Mr. Speaker, the only business tomorrow would be to deal with legislation on the order paper.

Mr. Speaker: Has the member for Scarborough Centre a question with respect to this or wish to speak to the motion?

Mr. M. Renwick (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, on November 20, the chairman announced publicly that the hearings would continue on Tuesday and Thursday morning until all persons were heard and that there were some 50-odd briefs to be heard. The people who have talked to me and are slated for Thursday, have been asked to move up to Tuesday. Some are ready, Mr. Speaker, and others are not prepared because they were told they would come late on the list, meaning late on the bottom of 50 briefs. The problem that I see, is that we are being asked to judge the authenticity of Bill 194 although we do not have the proper public hearings, as the Minister promised on November 6. In Hansard he said that we would have an opportunity as members of the committee for full review and examinations so that a complete and full discussion could be held in a public forum where all members of the public would be welcome to come and present their side of the case and their position with regard to the bill and to the whole matter of providing animals for research purposes.

Mr. Speaker, it puts the people in the health committee in a very difficult position, if what is happening is that we are now moving the Thursday people to Tuesday—those who are ready—leaving those who are not ready in abeyance. The people beyond Thursday's hearing do not know, Mr. Speaker, when they are going to be heard or in fact if they are going to be heard. As a member of that health committee, I object to this type of operation for public hearings, which I understood were to be fair and open hearings.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Humber.

Mr. G. Ben (Humber): Mr. Speaker, it goes deeper than just whether or not people who wish to make representations before the standing committee on health can be notified and then be present to make their presentation. We may find ourselves, Mr. Speaker, with the standing committee on health studying the plight of our animals, while in the House another group is studying the plight of human beings who are tenants.

What is a member of this Legislature supposed to do? Is he supposed to go and listen to the people presenting their briefs on the plights of dogs and cats and ignore the plights of human beings when the landlord and tenant bill comes in—or vice versa? This is the invidious position that you are putting people into.

If the members of the standing committee carry out their responsibility to sit on a health committee and listen to the presentations being made with reference to the dogs and cats, they could very well be accused of ignoring the plight of human beings—who are being exploited by the landlords—in that they were not present when the landlord and tenant bill was being discussed. I would suggest that the hon. Prime Minister let us know what is going to be the business up before the House—

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Obviously we are not going to pass this motion. If there is any objection to this procedure we will not follow it; it is just that simple. I think really what the chairman of the committee is attempting to do and what the Ministers are attempting to do is to devise a better means of dealing with this. But, if this is not going to be better, the committee will sit Tuesday and Thursday mornings as planned and we will withdraw this motion. It is only an effort to—

Mr. Ben: Tell us what the order of business will be tomorrow.

Hon. Mr. Robarts: We have committee meetings, but if the member feels this way about it, it is perfectly all right with the government.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The Opposition members just hate to make up their minds.

Mr. Nixon: I think the Premier has made a very wise contribution here, because surely the meeting of the committee taking place at the same time is going to be inconvenient and I think it should not be permitted.

Mr. Speaker: I would just like to point out to the members that I was endeavouring to watch it, but I thought that this was about to finish off. The debate on this motion is a debate in the House, and any member is only entitled to speak once in that particular debate. I would have interrupted the leader of the Opposition had I not thought that the motion was being withdrawn. Do I understand from the Prime Minister that this motion is being withdrawn?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Now, they will have to make up their minds.

Mr. Shulman: Not till next year.

Mr. MacDonald: Our minds are made up.

Mr. Speaker: Introduction of bills.

THE SECONDARY SCHOOLS AND BOARDS OF EDUCATION ACT

Hon. Mr. Davis moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend The Secondary Schools and Boards of Education Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

THE SCHOOLS ADMINISTRATION ACT

Hon. Mr. Davis moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend The Schools Administration Act.

Mr. Speaker: There is important legislation coming before the House and I would ask the members at least to give a hearing while it is introduced. It is particularly noisy on my right.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, both those Acts are basically administrative housekeeping and re-organization. There are two or three interesting amendments. One relates to the establishment of an advisory committee to the boards on a permissive basis—which has been mentioned here in some of our discussions. There are provisions, once again, to extend the board and lodging provision in the basically northern areas of the province. There are provisions contained in the bill for the payment of those funds requisitioned by the school boards from the municipalities in four payments at four specified times during the year.

I anticipate, Mr. Speaker, that with the consent of the House, we will be discussing these matters in the committee on education. Do not be overwhelmed by the number of pages. Most of the material, Mr. Speaker, relates to repeals because of the obsolescence of certain sections.

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR OSGOODE HALL LAW SCHOOL OF YORK UNIVERSITY

Hon. Mr. Davis moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act respecting scholarships for Osgoode Hall Law School of York University.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mr. Nixon: These have been on the order paper since March.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, they have all been altered within the last three days. I would just point out very briefly that this—

Mr. Nixon: They have been what?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am sorry, five days. This Act refers to the scholarships that have existed or still exist at Osgoode Hall as related to the Law Society of Upper Canada. With the affiliation now of Osgoode Hall with York University, the scholarship provisions are now being transferred and put in trust in the responsibility of York University. It is fairly complicated, but I think the principle of the bill itself is relatively simple.

Mr. Gisborn: Mr. Speaker, before the orders of the day, may I, on a point of order ask for clarification of your ruling as to the corrections or the proper procedure for one of the House, including the Prime Minister, to withdraw a bill or, a report, or carry instructions to the House made by the member for Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Downer) on behalf of the chairman of the committee. Is it correct that one other than the one introducing the motion can withdraw the motion?

Hon. J. H. White (Minister of Revenue): What tiny minds they have.

Mr. J. Renwick: We believe in proper procedure.

Mr. Speaker: I understood that the member who introduced the motion also gave his approval. At least, I looked down his way and as far as I am concerned it was withdrawn on his volition—

Mr. MacDonald: I wonder what option he had.

Mr. Speaker: —presumably with some direction from the House leader.

Mr. Evans: Anyway, Mr. Speaker, it is not the member for Dufferin-Simcoe, it is the member for Simcoe Centre.

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Anyway, the members had better be here tomorrow.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: They had better get something right.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

Clerk of the House: The 28th order, House in committee of supply; Mr. A. E. Reuter in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: I wonder if the House leader would call the order of business.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Correctional Services): Estimates of The Department of Health.

ESTIMATES, DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH (continued)

On vote 802.

Mr. Chairman: If the hon. member would just wait, I would like to look at the official book and see how far we have gone on this.

I believe we had passed the first programme under vote 802, which was the programme on administration and the operation of schools for registered nursing assistants. Does the committee concur?

Mrs. M. Renwick (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Chairman, we were on vote 802 under public health services, discussing the VD clinics, when we adjourned.

Mr. Chairman: The special health services programme.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Special health services programme, venereal disease clinics.

Mr. Chairman: Yes, the hon. member for Scarborough Centre may proceed.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I will try to make this brief, Mr. Chairman, because all of us are hoping for enough time in which to discuss the important issues at the end of the health estimates.

When we finished our last discussion with the Minister (Mr. Wells), Mr. Chairman, we were talking about not having some sort of casual slipshod conversation with isolated doctors throughout the province with regard to the reporting of venereal diseases. I was asking the Minister to contemplate a comprehensive data system set-up where doctors would be encouraged to report more accurately than they are doing now.

In the Minister's comments about his department in the area of venereal disease control, the Minister did verify that there was not as much control in the department in Ontario as there should be. And I think this is to be a compliment to the Minister, really, because part of our frustration as members of the Opposition with The Health Department heretofore has been that they would never say to us that something is wrong and they are going to do something about it.

I accept that the Minister is sincerely interested in this and I would ask the Minister: Does he accept from the Ontario Medical Association the low percentage of cases they say are being reported? Will he personally take an interest in having the type of reporting done that I spoke about, in the Journal of the American Medical Association, where they reported in 1967 how their survey had gone in 1963. When I finished speaking to the Minister, Mr. Chairman, I finished on the point that when the American Medical Association mailed out reports requesting returns from physicians, they got back as high a percentage as 71 per cent.

In the same journal, years later, they refer to the fact that those were the kind of results they got when they worked on the problem where they only had 11 per cent reporting in the original reports on syphilis and 38 per cent reporting in cases of other syphilis and 11 per cent on gonorrhoea. Does the Minister accept OMA's statement that only about 11 per cent of gonorrhoea cases have been reported? If he does, then we have an understanding and we can go from there about how they are going to treat this particular type of disease.

Hon. T. L. Wells (Minister of Health): I have some figures on the Toronto area here which show that the percentage of positive smears compared with the number of reported cases by private physicians is about 61.5 per cent in the Toronto area.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I asked the Minister, does he accept the MOH figures? Does he have figures to show the MOH report of 11 per cent of gonorrhoea cases were being reported? Does he have any other figures that would show that these figures are not correct? Is that what the Minister is saying, that 25 per cent—

Hon. Mr. Wells: The MOHs do not report the cases.

Mr. G. Ben (Humber): Would the Minister take his hand off the microphone, please.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I am sorry, the MOHs do not report the cases. The doctors report.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Sorry, did I say MOH? It is the OMA figures. Does the Minister accept the OMA figures of 11 per cent of cases being reported of gonorrhoea?

Hon. Mr. Wells: I do not know whether we accept them or not. We realize that there could be some validity to them and they are part of the total input that causes us to take the study which we are going to do.

Mrs. M. Renwick: The Minister has said that an important reason for the failure to control the spread of venereal disease within the province is that the interviewing either was not done, or has not been successful, in obtaining the names of contacts and that the doctor relationship to The Department of Health has not been good enough.

Mr. Chairman, I do not want to spend too much time on this, but I want to ask the Minister whether he really does embrace the fact that that is the problem, because away back in 1966 in one of the reports from the department, it stated that:

Efforts will be made to improve reporting by physicians, contact with physicians will be increased.

This is from the 42nd annual report of The Ontario Department of Health. That was for the year 1966. How has that work been increased and improved through contact with the doctors?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Perhaps the hon. member would like to deal with the whole subject, then I can tie everything up into a package. We just seem to be going around in circles, Mr. Chairman. I have indicated that I have a great concern with this. I have been in this portfolio for only a few months. We are getting this task force going; we are really going to get down to business on this problem. I do not know what else she wants me to do.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I am simply asking the Minister to tell me how they have stepped up their programme with contacting doctors in Ontario since 1966. The Minister, when we closed off on Friday, said that there were people from The Department of Health contacting doctors in the province, urging them to make more accurate reports on venereal diseases. I asked the Minister on Friday, Mr. Chairman, how many had been contacted and by whom? Could the Minister give me the answer to Friday's question, and then I will continue with the summarization of the treatment?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, I would be happy to read into the record about a three-page report on what has been happening in the department if this is the wish of the hon. member, to give her a bit of a background. However, as I said, I feel this is perhaps an unnecessary waste of our time now because we have acknowledged the problem and we have said what we are going to do about it. But if you would like that, I would be happy to do it.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I think, in view of some of the statements of the Minister in his opening remarks, that we do not really have to have that sort of report read into the record. I think what we really need to know is: Does the Minister recognize that very little was being done in this respect under the previous Minister?

The challenge now rests with this particular Minister—not so much with The Department of Health, because The Department of Health has had report upon report. It has had Dr. C. R. Amies and his seven-year study on sensitivity to penicillin and so on, and this department has not moved in any direction, and it has not, obviously, moved in any direction on more accurate reporting, or the Minister would have an answer to Friday's question.

Not to waste too much time on trying to get the answers until the Minister can go through the text and provide the House with them, would the Minister consider recommending to his committee, or discussing with his committee, a system that is in effect at the Royal Adelaide Hospital—I presume that is in Australia, Mr. Chairman—where The Department of Public Health conducts a female investigation clinic, so that women may be examined without their personal particulars being entered in hospital records.

That is where I ended up with the Minister on Friday. It was asking him, for a form for the doctors to use that has a number on it, instead of a name, to encourage reporting, so that the contact can be followed up by the department through the doctor without a record in a central file of the name of the patient.

Would the Minister seriously think about some type of clinic service for women. The symptoms do not show, although they can be carrying this disease for some time, apparently, and it is not accompanied by pain as it is in the male venereal diseases. Would the Minister try to have a clinic where women can come, have an examination and not be entered into clinical records, at least to get a certain degree of work done in that area as well as the area of pushing for contacts and getting all contacts and prosecuting them.

I would say, Mr. Chairman, it is not in opposition to the other system, not in opposition to tracking down contacts but as an ancillary type of service.

I am very concerned, Mr. Chairman, and maybe the Minister would comment. In the legislative assembly on November 6, the Minister said that the clinics, to quote from page 8097:

I am told by our people that in most of the clinics we operate in this province these drugs are the ones that are being prescribed.

The drugs that the hon. Minister was referring to were the two drugs which the member for High Park (Mr. Shulman) asked about the Minister's allowing doctors to use—drugs of their own choice—other than penicillin and tetracycline in the treatment of venereal diseases.

But, does the Minister not realize that the reason the people in the clinics are using only two drugs is that the directives that come from The Department of Health, the people whom he lauds so highly, have been set out very clearly, and have said—in capital letters, on one of them—that tetracycline, even provided by The Ontario Department of Health, may only be used when a culture has been taken at the first visit, and must not be used for the initial treatment of gonorrhoea patients unless they are hypersensitive to penicillin. It says that tetracycline will not be provided for a treatment of non-specific urethritis and non-gonococcal infections.

Mr. Chairman, this is a little technical, but the non-specific urethritis is a subject which bears looking into by the Minister separately from the diseases which are required to be reported now. There is work by lab people who were associated with the department, pointing out the need for an understanding by the health department of the amount of this type of infection, how it is a contagious disease that should probably be listed with the other diseases which the Minister has already got under the VD control section.

In this directive, that came from the VD control section epidemiology service—

Hon. M. Wells: Mr. Chairman, can I ask the hon. member, is she suggesting that non-specific urethritis should be listed as a venereal disease?

Mr. M. Renwick: I would suggest, Mr. Chairman, that the Minister should take a look at a report which points out reasons why perhaps it should—perhaps, Mr. Chairman—and the Minister will have it in his hands as Minister of Health; it is not my decision. I am trying to say to the Minister that—

Hon. Mr. Wells: I am just—

Mrs. M. Renwick: Fine. Perhaps this Minister might bring new luck to this department, I do not know. We seem to see a couple of things coming along that surprised me, I have been so used to this department being such a dead-end street. I think what the Minister might like to know is that the directives to the—

Mr. Ben: Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: Point of order!

Mr. Ben: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman, I do not dispute the right of the member who is on her feet to discuss these estimates. I would draw to your attention, however, Mr. Chairman, we had a considerable debate here on Thursday and Friday, led by the leader of the NDP, stressing some kind of an agreement which was supposed to have been made by the party Whips to the effect that we were supposed to get on to the hospital debate.

They took strong objection to my pursuing a particular item. Now, Mr. Chairman, the NDP Whip came and said that this speaker was going to finish her remarks at twenty-five minutes to three. She was on most of Friday. If there is an agreement, all I am asking is this: Would the NDP please practise what they preach?

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): On the point of order, Mr. Chairman, I understood there was some agreement also, but I think if the member is going to be fair he would have had his Whip here to lay the complaint. I understand that they have agreed that tonight, at 6.00 o'clock, is the close of everything except the OHSIP estimate.

Mr. Ben: I am sorry, Mr. Chairman, I want it noted that that particular agreement was abrogated by the NDP three minutes ago.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order, is the member for Humber on a further point of order or did he rise to debate?

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Humber was speaking to the point of order raised by the hon. member for Hamilton East. I might say, actually, that strictly speaking there really was no point of order. The informal arrangement was something certainly that should be abided by by all parties entering into such an arrangement. It is not, strictly speaking, a point of order for the Chair to decide. I believe the Whips should get together and if there is any agreement it should certainly be adhered to. Unfortunately, I cannot rule on any such matters.

Mr. Gisborn: Might I ask, Mr. Chairman, have you any specific note from the Whips outlining the schedule for this afternoon? If not, I will try and get one from our Whip.

Mr. Chairman: I would say to the hon. member and perhaps it might be opportune at this time to point out to the committee that the order changing the rules of procedure for the remainder of the estimates indicated that there would be a total of 36 sittings to deal with supply, 15 hours of which, or six sittings, would be in the standing committees' reports as they came back to the House. This would be 75 hours for discussion in the committee of supply.

Up until we commenced this afternoon a total of 72 hours and 47 minutes had gone by which, under that provision, would leave two hours and 13 minutes of the 75 hours to discuss the remaining items in The Department of Health. I just put this forward to the committee at this point.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, I do not want to let that point about non-specific urethritis go by, lest people who are not as familiar with some of the terms, as we in the House, might be led to believe—

Mrs. M. Renwick: I am just asking you to look at it.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I just think it has to be made clear that non-specific urethritis is not caused in the same manner as venereal disease and catheterization. Cystoscopic examination and various things like that can cause the development of non-specific urethritis in a person, which, of course, is not a venereal disease condition. I would not want anyone to get the impression that it was connected with venereal disease.

Mr. Chairman: Perhaps the hon. member for Scarborough Centre would pursue her discussion on the special health service programme, bearing in mind the points of orders raised by other members.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Might I ask you what time you began these estimates?

Mr. Chairman: Yes, at exactly 3.23.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Three twenty-three. We have spent, how many minutes on this point of order?

Mr. Chairman: Three twenty-three was the time we started. We have spent about four minutes on the point of order.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Very well, thank you. Mr. Chairman, I was trying to engage the Minister of Health in the problem that doctors face in the clinics with only two drugs with which to treat patients of venereal disease—only two free drugs prescribed by The Department of Health. The Minister has outlined in his committee a plan to study the problem of the use of free drugs. Is the Minister contemplating the use of whatever drugs the doctors in those clinics feel they require? Could I please ask that?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, it is our intention to let the clinic directors and the others on the task force come up with a recommendation for us on this—I do not want to prejudice their work. Certainly, my aim is to let them use the most effective method of treatment that is possible and I want them to come up with it.

I think it should be pointed out that we suggested some of the clinics could engage in private projects with some of the newer drugs, such as canamycine and so forth, and most of the clinics have not come up with any suggestions as to pilot projects even on this, so that we are just at a little loss.

Most of them are using the two drugs we suggested, but we realize that it is an area for discussion and concern and we want them to come up with something. That is why we have the clinic directors.

Mrs. M. Renwick: So, Mr. Chairman, I ask the Minister briefly, how soon were you aware of the fact that Women's College Hospital, obviously in the presentation of the health committee here, was not satisfied with having only B2 drugs because of the sensitivities of penicillin?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Our people tell us they really have made no representation to us asking for other drugs than the ones that we have been supplying.

Mr. J. B. Trotter (Parkdale): I rather doubt that.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, Dr. Amies worked for The Department of Health—is that not right, Mr. Minister? Dr. C. R. Amies worked in the public health laboratory?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Yes, I am told that is right.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Dr. Amies discussed with The Department of Health, sir, the sensitivity of penicillin in his rather startling figures that he came up with—I believe it was about 40 per cent. I would just like, Mr. Chairman, to state briefly the summary of Dr. Amies, because this was a very important work, which discovered that the sensitivity of penicillin to the disease was rising in such proportions that it was going to become totally ineffective.

Mr. Ben: That has been known for 25 years.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I would ask for order from the member for Humber, please.

Mr. Ben: I would just point out, on a point of order, that the hon. member is misleading the House as to the effect of penicillin and people becoming accustomed to. That is something that has been known for 25 years and it is absolutely nothing new.

An hon. member: Is that a point of order?

Mr. Ben: It may be new to her—yes, that is right.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, we have had penicillin in our use for very little more than 25 years.

From the British Journal of Venereal Diseases, Dr. C. R. Amies, who is still in Toronto and who at that time was with the public health laboratory in The Department of Health for Ontario, wrote on the sensitivity of Neisseria gonorrhoea to penicillin and other antibiotics, and he referred to studies carried out in Toronto during the period 1961 to 1968.

I just want to make sure of the right reference here. I do not wish to go into the figures, Mr. Chairman, but Dr. Amies said in his summary that in 1959 in Toronto only three per cent of the currently circulating strains of Neisseria gonorrhoea were resistant to .1 units of penicillin. This figure has gradually been increased until it now stands at 50 per cent.

At present, 30 per cent of the strains are resistant to .3 units of penicillin. This drug will soon be useless for the treatment of gonorrhoea. It is now advisable to isolate the infecting organisms in every case and to determine that sensitivity, not to penicillin, but also to tetracycline, which you will note Mr. Chairman, if I might interrupt for a moment, is the only other drug that these clinics have the use of at this time.

To go back to the text; with tetracycline and sulfanilamide, in this way a choice of treatment becomes possible. Resistance to penicillin is never abating. Only a few strains are insensitive to a concentration of one unit. To obtain this concentration in the body however, a heavy dosage, variably estimated at a total of two to ten million units, must be administered intramuscularly. The results of sensitivity tests in VETRO with ten different antibiotics are presented in detail. Tetracycline appears to be a satisfactory drug at present but resistance to it will eventually develop if it is widely used—

Mr. Ben: Point of order.

Mrs. M. Renwick:—particularly if treatment is inadequate.

Mr. Chairman: Order. Would the hon. member for Scarborough Centre please be seated while I listen to the point of order?

Mr. Ben: Mr. Chairman, on Thursday umbrage was taken by the leader of the NDP and the hon. member for High Park

(Mr. Shulman) and the hon. member for Scarborough West (Mr. Lewis) because I read some excerpts from a report which was mentioned in this House—an addiction report. This hon. member has been reading and reading and reading. Mr. Chairman, we have some kind of an agreement even though you say it is an informal agreement. I have suggested that this agreement has been abrogated by this member but are you going to call her to order on her continuously reading, reading, reading? I would refer you to the rules in that regard.

Mr. Chairman: I think the hon. member is quite correct in that there was some objection raised to reading of reports during the last two days when these estimates were considered. Objection was raised by certain members. I think perhaps the hon. member for Scarborough Centre may take those objections into consideration if she has any considerable amount of additional material to read into the record at his point. It might be well if she could condense it.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I was on the last line of the paragraph and I would point out to you that I spent some time over this weekend condensing this material so that it could be presented in a concise fashion which would have been completed by now, if I had not had interjections from the hon. member for Humber. Dr. Amies The Department of Health knows well. The Department of Health cannot plead ignorance to Dr. Amies' recommendations, because Dr. Amies presented them to The Department of Health. I would like to know what the Minister has to say about no one in The Department of Health paying any attention to them. And are they going to pay any attention to Dr. Amies' recommendations that they use penicillin administered in intramuscularly. Intramuscular type of treatment is not obviously the most pleasant type of treatment, but when the disease is on the increase such as it is, obviously the Minister might have to go to something that will not be pleasant.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Could I ask the hon. member a question, Mr. Chairman? I presume the hon. member is aware that chlora-phenocol has some very adverse side reactions and chlora-phenocol, I would say—I suppose I should not say it as a non-medical person—but I think chlora-phenocol should be resorted to after other things have been tried, because it can have adverse side effects in contrary indications.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Is the Minister considering the work of Dr. Amies—Dr. Amies is no longer, Mr. Chairman, with The Department of Health and also the work of Dr. Manuel, no longer with The Department of Health—who wrote his "Symposium on Gonorrhoea Today"? Does the Minister place any value in these two reports? Is he saying that these two doctors, in particular, Dr. Amies, do not know what they are saying? Will the Minister make himself quite clear about these two reports, because they went into that department quite recently? Dr. Manuel is 69, Dr. Amies is 69 also.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Yes, Mr. Chairman. First we paid attention to these reports. Any reports such as this are considered very carefully. In fact, I guess it was on the receipt of reports such as that one—I am not sure whether it would be exactly that one—that tetracycline was added to the programme. I am also—

Mrs. M. Renwick: It is a seven-year-long report. Mr. Minister, it is not a fly-by-night—

Hon. Mr. Wells: It is perhaps rather strange that two non-medical people should spend all this time discussing treatment methods, Mr. Chairman, when I have indicated that we are quite willing to look into this in the task force. We have asked them to go to work on this problem, but I just should tell the hon. member that the United States public health service still says that the treatment of choice in gonorrhoea is aqueous penicillin in a sufficiently large number of doses.

Also, the United States public health service still recommends this as the treatment of choice yet still recognizes there are resistant strains. But I should also tell the hon. member that our figures for this October show that 69 per cent of the gonococcal bacteria that was isolated at our lab is actually still sensitive to penicillin, so that there are still an adequate number of cases that can be treated with penicillin.

What we have got to do is just find out what other drugs should be added to the schedule and then do it, and this is what we have asked the task force to do, so I really do not think we need to take all this time discussing it because we agree with the hon. member that there is certainly—we recognize—

Mrs. M. Renwick: I would say, Mr. Chairman, that we agreed pretty well until a moment ago on the fact that the Minister was probably going to do something about this situation.

I would like to refer briefly to the archives of environmental health, Vol. 13, No. 3, September, 1966. The American Medical Association arranged a national symposium on venereal disease control, and in the covering of that symposium, Mr. Chairman, there is the sixth line saying—

Mr. Chairman: Is the hon. member still on special health services? She is mentioning environmental health which is the next programme.

Mrs. M. Renwick: No, that just happens to be the title of this journal, Mr. Chairman. I was referring to the Minister's statement that in the United States penicillin was still effective in the treatment of venereal diseases.

Mr. Ben: He did not say that.

Mrs. M. Renwick: I would like to say, Mr. Chairman, that in this particular volume it states:

Problems in gonorrhoea control today include the problem of penicillin resistance and the need for better diagnostic as well as treatment tool.

It has the financial support to go ahead with what the Minister already knows, Mr. Chairman, about the crux of the problem. I would like to ask the Minister—he has got a $40,000 budget here—what does that cover? I am wondering if it covers services for the clinics or services for the doctors? What exactly does that $40,000 cover? Is that an honorarium that the doctors receive, or is it for the use of the clinics?

Hon. Mr. Wells: That is the grant to clinics—the public health clinics, not the ones that are in the hospitals—because they get grants, as I understand it, under the Ontario Hospital Services Commission as an outpatient service.

Mrs. M. Renwick: It is such a small sum, Mr. Chairman, could the Minister break down where the $40,000 goes and what he is going to do with that?

Hon. Mr. Wells: The $40,000 goes as special grants to personnel in the hospitals and that is broken down here—$23,000 to those clinics; $9,996 to the boards of health in Ottawa, Sudbury and Windsor-Essex; and then payments were made from item 3, maintenance, to boards of health based upon treatments given in Ottawa, Sudbury and Windsor, amounting to about $13,000. Some of that is paid by OHSC to hospitals.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, that is what I wanted to get from the Minister—whether some of that amount is paid under OHSC, or, in fact, the amount that The Department of Health is prepared to put out into the field to doctors as honorariums or clinics in operation.

I would say that he has written to hospitals saying that now that OHSC will accept the cost of the operation of the clinics, this grant is now for the honorarium for the doctors, and if so, it is pitifully small. This particular one is about $4,000.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Yes, but you have to remember that the people who come into the clinic and have medical insurance will be handled on a regular fee for service basis.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, as a wind-up to my remarks, in the 43rd annual report for 1967 the department referred to staff additions and it referred to the fact that:

Some of the services and programmes in the branch were not developing during the year because of the scarcity of experts in the field concerned. Despite this chronic defect, however, considerable success was achieved in adding qualified staff to some programmes during 1967. In mid-year a physician was placed in charge of venereal disease control on a full-time basis.

I ask the Minister: Who was that?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Which report are you reading from? The latest report?

Mrs. M. Renwick: No, that was 1967—you were going to put somebody in charge then.

Hon. Mr. Wells: 1967—that was Dr. Russell Manuel.

Mrs. M. Renwick: That was Dr. Manuel, who is no longer there. Mr. Chairman, could I ask the Minister who heads that department now? It would appear, Mr. Chairman, that there has been a shortage of staff—a shortage of qualified staff, the department said in that 1967 report. I would like to know who is there now if Dr. Manuel is gone.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Dr. Bell is the head of the epidemiology section and Dr. Persad, and I believe there is one position vacant at the present time. We are looking for another person for this staff.

Mrs. M. Renwick: What is Dr. Persad's title? Is he head of venereal disease control?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Officer in charge of the epidemiology section, venereal disease control.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Who is the director of VD control that the Act calls for, Mr. Chairman? The Act calls for a director. It says, "the director is the director of VD control in Ontario." Who is that person?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Dr. Jim Bell.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Or is Dr. Bell head of epidemiology?

Hon. Mr. Wells: As head of epidemiology he is also head of the venereal disease control section.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, to make it brief, I would like to ask the Minister: Did you plan at one time to open a clinic in Toronto, a central clinic, for venereal disease, and did you bring over from England a Dr. Hutfield to head up that work, and was he not fired recently from The Department of Health, and if so, why?

Was he fired, Mr. Chairman, because he spoke to the press about the shortage? Was he fired for inefficiency? Was he fired for not being able to get along with the people? What was the reason that Dr. Hutfield was fired last month from this particular department?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, the reason Dr. Hutfield was fired—he was employed here for about three months—was that he did not seem to be getting along and people were not getting along with him. Things were not working out in staff relations, and it was a case of personalities and so forth.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Fine, Mr. Chairman. I would suggest to the Minister he see that when they have an enquiry on the proposed push for a resignation of a staff member, that the enquiry is required to direct to the staff member the reason for their not being satisfied with him, or for his not being satisfied with them. I have the letters and the correspondence to Dr. Hutfield which simply say that it would seem that he does not really want to be around there, and we do not know to this day exactly why he was fired. The gentleman has numerous references from hospitals in London, in Britain, that make one wonder if his qualifications were not more expert than those around him in that particular department.

When he called for a 24-hour clinic, and for more drugs and reported a 55 per cent increase of venereal disease in Ontario for five years, he did so, Mr. Chairman, in the belief that money is always short in hospitals where he has worked. This was not to hurt The Department of Health; it was to create an interest by The Department of Health in giving him the kind of material to treat the problem.

Does the Minister see what I am saying? We have had trouble with The Department of Health keeping members of Parliament out of mental institutions. I am glad to see that ban is lifted. Notices went up to the staff in the Lakeshore institution not to talk to any visitors, not to talk to the press. Then we get a firing in the department because the man refused to resign, because he did not see any reason to resign, and we do not get a proper understanding of why the man was fired. I believe he was hired in England, he was hired at a higher position than he was paid for here, during the time he was employed.

I understand that retroactivity is being made up now, that this is a professional man whose career stands to be in some form of jeopardy. Part of his concern, in this Department of Health, was that The Department of Health was not going to go ahead and use this serum that was offered to this department by Dr. Greenburg in Ottawa in The Department of National Health and Welfare. If the Minister will check this file, he will find, probably that Dr. Greenburg, as he assured me, has not even received a reply from The Department of Health with his request to use vaccine in the province of Ontario. He has now gone to another source to use the vaccine.

Mr. Gisborn: Some kind of a purge, all right.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Are you purging all these former civil servants?

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): I wish to speak, sir, if I may, for 30 seconds. There is a group here who are leaving and it is a matter of interest to them, if I might. Less than one minute. I just want to draw the Minister's attention to the people who are in the gallery. They are all representatives of the homes for special care and other nursing homes under The Metro Health Act. It is a matter of extreme urgency and I want to draw to the Minister's attention they cannot subsist on the $4 a day and I hope that some action can be taken before the end of this month. Otherwise you are going to have homes closing and people being forced out into the street.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, let me just say, as I said the other day to the hon. member, I have this matter under very active consideration. We know the problem and I am happy to see that these people are here today, and we are going to take a look at it.

Mrs. M. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I would just like to raise one point with the Minister. Would the Minister look at an inter-office memo dated August 1—

Mr. Ben: We cannot get into your problems.

Mrs. M. Renwick:—and see that that sort of activity is not pursued any further. Instead of dealing with the problem of putting Dr. Persad in the place of Dr. Hutfield, a memo simply went out from Mrs. Pearson saying: "Re telephone calls, answer 'VD control' and your name, and unless specific request for Dr. Hutfield, refer to Dr. Persad for the present. Re personal calls: These must be limited, etc."

I think, Mr. Minister, if you want to do something in that department, you make sure that they have their hands up on top of the table on operations within their own staff. I understand in Brookfield, we now have an administrator in the Brookfield psychiatric hospital. The Department of Health or the Minister or the Prime Minister (Mr. Robarts)—somewhere in there—is to be complimented for that changeover, to bring some action in that area.

Now I would ask the Minister to take a look at his own shop in the Hepburn Block.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I just want to assure the House, Mr. Chairman, that the doctor referred to was not fired nor was it in any way suggested that he resign because of what he said to the press or for anything of that nature. He was a probationary employee and it was just one of those staff situations that did not work out.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Humber.

Mr. Ben: Patience has its rewards. I want to apologize to the people up in the gallery. It looks as if we are never going to get to their problems.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): You do not have to apologize.

Mr. Ben: The hon. member who just sat down is some kind of an expert on VD. I should ask the hon. Minister: Is penicillin still a valid remedy for running mouth disease?

Mr. Lewis: To the hon. member. Patience has its time. Some of us do not consider you rewarding.

Mr. Ben: I trust that we are finished with that particular vote and we are now on the next one, that is, special health services.

Mr. Chairman: We had been discussing special health services.

Mr. Ben: We have—no, by Jove, I—

Mr. Chairman: The first programme has been carried.

Mr. Ben: I was certain that we were covering the item higher up, but, anyway, I do want to talk this little bit about home care.

Mr. Chairman, it is going to be very short and sweet. I am just going to resort to two letters and I am not going to read them in total. One letter was received, not by myself, but my colleague here who sits next to me, the hon. member for Algoma-Manitoulin (Mr. Farquhar). He received a letter from Dr. Jean Pigeon, B.A., M.D., M.R.S.H., from Blind River.

He was telling my colleague here that a couple of weeks ago, in October, he was at the OMA district 9 convention and heard a Dr. G. Guay of Hull, Quebec, describe the operation of a home care plan.

He was pointing out to the member for Algoma-Manitoulin the benefits that flow from a good home care plan. He stated patients who do not require all the services of our general hospitals, which are established a very high standard can be treated at home, provided that nursing, housekeeping and other ancillary services are available to them.

They were shown people who were in hospitals, who ought not to have been in hospitals, who could have been at home had there been a very good and comprehensive home care programme. He pointed out that the cost averages $5 a day, in comparison with hospital services costing $40.

I might point out that in the city of Toronto at the Toronto General Hospital they will not think that your $40 is enough, so that home care—even nursing home care—runs only a fraction of what hospital care does when people use active treatment beds or acute treatment beds when there is no reason for it.

He offered, Mr. Chairman, through the Minister of Health, to set up a pilot home care programme in Blind River, and I can only be led to believe from this remark from such a prominent doctor as this Dr. Pigeon, that they do not have a home care programme in Blind River.

He offered to set up a pilot programme and I would suggest that perhaps the Minister ought to give consideration to that. And in so doing, I think he should listen to a short letter. It is going to take me about three minutes. It was received from someone who was subjected to home care here in the city of Toronto. It is addressed to me and it is from Robert M. Campbell, and he states:

I appreciate your interest in my complaint about the services provided me by the Ontario hospital commission and I am, as you suggested, outlining the circumstances.

Three weeks ago, Friday, March 14, I broke my leg and was admitted by ambulance to the Owen Sound General and Marine Hospital. My leg was encased, and still is encased, in a cast extending from my groin to my toes. I cannot put on my sock nor will I be able to until the cast is removed, probably in three weeks.

I was discharged from hospital on March 22 at my request as I assumed—and so did the hospital people—that OHSIP would care for me at home until such time as I could cope.

For the first week at home, in Toronto, I was visited daily by a VON nurse who washed my back and got my clothes on. Concurrently, I was provided a homemaker who came in daily from 9:00 to 1:00 and who made my bed, emptied the urinal, washed my dishes, put my clothes where the laundry could get them, put out the garbage, made me a hot meal at noon and prepared a cold plate for the evening meal. Last week, I trained myself to dress alone and so did without the nurse. The homemaker got my sock on the difficult foot.

Monday of this week I called a taxi, hopped to it on my crutches, and was taxied to work. Same yesterday. I taxied home in the afternoon and ate my cold plate.

This morning the homemaker did not show. There was no warning. She just did not show at 9:00 a.m. I waited until 10:00 and called the homemaker service to be told I was cut off because I was going to work and because—actually through self-negotiation in an effort to relieve the service—I did not have a daily nursing visit.

I have just talked to my doctor who is helpless to do anything about it.

Right here, I should mention that I have paid for Ontario hospital, for Blue Cross, for PSI for—through my firm—major medical. I am not a charity case. I am owed service.

I would point out to you that there is no change whatever in my need for service between now and the day I was discharged from hospital. I was on crutches then, I am on crutches now. On crutches it is impossible to empty urinals, carry pots and pans around, make beds, carry food parcels home, put out laundry, put out and take in garbage cans and all the other things. As long as I am on crutches, I am helpless. The fact I sit in my office all day or part of a day instead of at home has nothing to do with the problem.

The homemaker service people—a service provided by OHSIP—have constantly tried to shirk. They wanted me to get friends or relatives to care for me over weekends so their people could have holidays. Their attitude is that they are a welfare outfit and that I should try to relieve them. I told them they had a choice in giving me the service my insurance pays for—either cope or put me back in hospital and let them pay the $60 plus per day. I resent their implication that I should try to impose on my friends or relatives to relieve them of what I am paying them to do.

One other thing about OHSIP. Sunday morning a VON appeared unannounced—I had already suspended nursing service—and told me I was going to get a hypodermic. I am not slated medically for a hypodermic. I refused to have a hypodermic. She went away. Later the dispatcher called to try to get her because “someone needs a hypo”. This is a shocking menace to public health. In this my doctor concurs. I might have been given the wrong needle while obviously someone who needed it was suffering.

Although there is, I feel, a need for a correction of the slack and cavalier attitude of this monster of the present government. Bringing this to the attention of the public will not help me. By that time I hope to be out of my cast. But it may help others who lack the connection I have in you. God bless him for that.

I suggest you hand Dr. Dymond a pair of crutches and slip a straight leg brace on him and then tell him to carry a full urinal down the hall and ask him if it would make any difference whether he sat in his office or his home.

I am enclosing a copy of “Home Care Programme”. You will note the copier does not pick up the blue print headings but they are non-significant. As for Ontario Hospital, as you know we have no contract. It is an Act of the Legislature and we pay as billed.

Thank you for your interest, Mr. Ben. I hope my squawk may help others.

Yours sincerely,

Robert M. Campbell.

Mr. Chairman, through you to the Minister, I believe that the content of this letter has a very legitimate complaint. He voluntarily left the hospital in order to relieve the hospital of the cost of keeping him there when there was no need for him to be kept there under the circumstances. He felt that he had paid for coverage through many different plans and, as he states, he is not a charity case. He feels he is owed service. But, anyway, being concerned with saving the service money, he felt that he could be at home just as well with the limited service that would be provided him by home care. And because he ostensibly went to work where he did not need any kind of help, except to perhaps have his swivel chair swung in place for him, he was cut off from home care.

What he said in here was true: "If you do not want to give me home care, fine, put me back in the hospital and pay your $60," but he is entitled to have care. He was entitled to have care, I should say.

It does not matter as far as Mr. Campbell is concerned, but I am sure this prevails with many other people in this province who also are not getting adequate home care because of the silly notion that once they can move out of the house, they no longer need home care. I would suppose a paraplegic who had an electrically operated cart which took him outside the house, would have been cut off too.

Now, something should be done about that. The department advertises home care and says:

Home care programme arranges service to existing community agencies. The patient must require at least one professional service in addition to the services of a physician.

Obviously he needed one professional service.

A patient in need of homemaking service only would not qualify for admission.

And:

The following range of services are available without charge to the patient:

nursing visits by a registered nurse; physical, occupational, and speech therapy; homemaking service on a part-time basis—the home care programmes assumes the right to determine the need for this service—diagnostic and laboratory service; medication and medical supplies; hospital and sickroom equipment; transportation, provided on the judgement of the home care programme.

This patient did not get it. There is nothing that can be done for him at the present time, but the fact is, I am sure, that he is right in his assumption that many, many other people fail to get the service to which they are entitled and the doctors knowing this prefer to keep them in acute treatment beds and active treatment beds rather than to send them home or rather than to send them to a nursing home where they cannot afford to keep the patients because the department is niggardly in the attitude adopted toward them.

The department expects the operators to keep them on peanuts and does not even give them the shells to see if they can sell them and get some money that way.

So let us hear the Minister's answers on this. When is the department going to do something about giving adequate treatment for non-active treatment bed patients in this province?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, I thought we started out with the home care programme, which of course is what we are talking about under this vote. I feel that the home care programme has been a very effective one and one which has to be continued. Now, in respect of the particular case to which the hon. member referred, I understand we also got that letter, so he must have favoured us with it too, and it is being looked into in our department—his specific case. Was that person in Metropolitan Toronto?

Mr. Ben: The person's home is in Metropolitan Toronto.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Yes; well we do have a home care programme operating, of course, in Metropolitan Toronto.

Mr. Ben: He is referring to the home care programme in Metropolitan Toronto. The accident happened in Owen Sound but he was transferred to Toronto.

Hon. Mr. Wells: If he left an active treatment hospital in Metropolitan Toronto, there is, of course, a home care programme available here now. The reason why it did not take him into it I do not have at this particular time. But certainly he is entitled to it if his doctor and the director of the plan agreed.

We must remember that in the home care programme you are referred by your doctor, because it is to do exactly what the hon. member suggested. It is to take people who do not need to take up an active treatment bed, who really are being kept there and need services that could be supplied in their home. They could go into their home and these services are supplied. If the doctor agrees on this, this is what is done, and the services are supplied.

As far as the home care programmes are concerned, we are looking forward to extending this throughout the province. There are about 15 of them in the province right now and the majority of them are operating under the aegis of the VON to a great degree, but we are looking forward to making home care part of the operation of the district health unit and getting them into this, so that they become community centred plans that can be of help.

I would just like to assure the hon. member that part of our complete thinking is a total health programme that will make the best utilization of all the facilities and not have people in the active treatment beds when they do not have to be there—home care where necessary and nursing homes where necessary. As I said, we are working toward this and I hope in the near future we will have a policy to put forward.

Mr. Ben: Mr. Chairman, I just want to finish this off. I believe this vote also takes in the foster home programme for patients of psychiatric hospitals, is that not so, Mr. Chairman?

I have a very short statement to make; while they are looking, I could probably make it. I believe these homes are chosen and inspected in the same way that the children's aid society picks foster homes for children. I believe the people in charge of these homes for patients of psychiatric hospitals admit that these homes are not of the calibre they would like them to be, and I think it is because what they pay them is piddling. Sometimes it works out to about $10 a week. Perhaps what should be done is to make arrangements with some of the nursing homes to care for these people at a decent remuneration rather than pawning them off, so to speak, into the hands of some well-intentioned citizen—of whom some could be not-so-well-intentioned.

Some people may be just looking for the money it brings in or they may be just neurotic do-gooders. It is hard to say. Everybody you can get to do these jobs is not the best person. This applies to foster homes for children and I am sure it would apply to these people also. I think the principle that these out-patients will adjust more rapidly in a home environment than they would in a hospital environment is very sound but I think some more action should be taken by this government to set up proper foster homes for patients of psychiatric hospitals and pay the people who look after them a decent remuneration so that the patients receive proper care at all times.

Mr. Chairman: The member for York North.

Mr. W. Hodgson (York North): Mr. Chairman, as a backbencher in the government I am most concerned about the homes for special care. I have a large group of them in my own riding in the Newmarket area, which are doing an excellent and very fine job for their patients. But I do not want to leave the impression that I have done nothing for these people.

I had a request from Mrs. Sedore and her group a few months back at the time the member for Ontario (Mr. Dymond) was vacating his portfolio as Minister of Health, and I requested a meeting on behalf of Mrs. Sedore and the group from Newmarket at that time which he promised to give. But, as I say, he left the portfolio and the hon. Minister now has taken over and I have written him on two different occasions asking for this and he said that his estimates are coming up and immediately at such time as his estimates are over—I wrote him again on Thursday on behalf of Mrs. Sedore and requested that meeting and I am sure the information I get from him now, is that he will give it immediately as soon as the estimates are over—and I am asking the hon. Minister to give it as immediately as possible and also to give the fullest consideration at that time on the needs as far as the pay increase is concerned. Thank you.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, I had many discussions with the hon. member for York North about these people in his riding and as we have indicated, within the next couple of weeks we will be arranging a meeting with these people. I am sorry I did not have the opportunity to see them earlier but, as I stated, I did want them and him and others in this House to know that the matter of the per diem rates are under active consideration with us right now.

I thought I might just point out to the House that they will see that there is a considerable increase in this particular item. The $21,647,000 that is being voted this year is comparable to $12,100,000 in the 1968-69 budget. Now this is because, as the members will realize, we moved from $8.50 to $9.50 per diem charges.

That, of course, does not account for the bulk of the increase. The fact is that we now have increased the patients being placed into this programme. We have moved from 3,479 for those that are in the institutions where they require nursing care up to about 5,300 this year. In the ambulatory patients, or those requiring only residential care, we have moved from about 892 up to about 1,600 patients and this accounts for the increase in the budget. I think that it is a programme that we are happy with and we are certainly evaluating placement of these people into the community and into this type of setting very carefully.

Mr. Chairman: Is there anything further under the special health services? The hon. member for High Park.

Mr. Shulman: Very briefly, Mr. Chairman, under laboratory services, I want to just—

Mr. Chairman: Excuse me, I am calling the special health services programme, which is two programmes before laboratory services.

Mr. Shulman: Sorry, under tuberculosis prevention extension, I would just like to draw to the Minister's attention a serious public health problem which is developing. A number of doctors, I for one, give BCG routinely to all newborn children and I have been doing this for some 20 years now. We have now run into a serious problem when you are doing tuberculin testing and find these people tuberculin positive, which, of course, they are. They are started on therapy. This happened to one of your employees, to my great embarrassment, who was a patient of mine and they were all for rushing her off to the san and starting her off on umpteen pills a day.

This is, of course, a very serious error and I would suggest you should have someone take a look at your whole tuberculosis prevention programme again, because what we should be doing here is what is done in so many European countries; routine BCG vaccinations and forget your tuberculin testing.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Huron-Bruce.

Mr. Shulman: I just wonder, is the Minister going to make any comment?

Hon. Mr. Wells: As I say, Mr. Chairman, I am not a professional in this area. Our people tell us that they do not recommend a routine vaccination to all newborns but only when there is a good indication that it should be given. I would be happy to look into what the hon. member suggested and take a look at it. But that is what our stance—

Mr. Shulman: I would suggest you do so because if he does, that is the end of TB in this country, the end of your sanitariums, your tuberculin testing, your mass x-rays and everything else. In the long run, I mean over a period of 10 or 20 years—and this has been suggested for 10 or 20 years in this House—you would be much further ahead of this system which you have now.

The problem is that enough doctors have recognized this and are now using BCG and I personally, within the last three months, have had two patients who went down to the Sick Children's emergency for accidents and were routinely tuberculin tested. The parents were then notified that their children had tuberculosis, and they wished to ship the child off to the sanitarium. Only after a great deal of excitement and running around and great mental turmoil to the parents, did I get that stopped. Let me suggest that this is one programme that needs further looking into.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Huron-Bruce.

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): My comments are going to be very brief, Mr. Chairman. I know that you want to move on to the next vote. But I could not let this particular vote go by without saying a word in respect to nursing homes, vis-à-vis the rates that have been discussed here today and the other areas which affect very greatly the total role of nursing homes in the entire health care field.

It seems to me that the department, up until now, has not really given full recognition to the role that nursing homes can play in the health care field. I think had they done so, they would have moved in a number of directions. I have been one of those people who have spoken many times in this House in respect to the fact that OHSC coverage should be extended to nursing homes which are licensed and which are in good standing. I still maintain that stance.

I do not see any reason in the world why the department cannot move toward that type of coverage. There are many older people in this province who have undergone real hardship because this is not being done. Now, it seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that if the department fully recognized and appreciated the role of the nursing homes in the whole gamut of the health care field, they would certainly move very quickly to adjust the $9.50 per day rate.

I do not think this is—in any way, shape or form—fair. I think the Minister would agree with that and I hope that he would take steps immediately to rectify it. It seems to me that there is no reason in the world why a person who is of a type—

Mr. Ben: I should point out, so that the other party does not start going on nursing homes, that nursing homes are not under this vote. I have to rise so that we will not start going on something that is out of order.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Deans: With friends like that, who needs enemies?

Mr. Gaunt: Mr. Chairman, I appreciate—

Mr. Ben: I have to be fair about it—

Hon. Mr. Wells: In fairness, Mr. Chairman, the rates that the hon. member is talking about though, are under this vote insofar as they apply to our homes for special care which—

Mr. Shulman: Four dollars a day.

Mr. Gaunt: Four dollars a day, yes.

Mr. Chairman: I was concerned that perhaps the hon. member was speaking under the wrong programme in this vote. I wanted to give him the benefit of the doubt because I felt there was some area within this programme—

Mr. Gaunt: Right, right, Mr. Chairman, I recognize—

Mrs. M. Renwick: You all have our sympathies.

Mr. Gaunt: Mr. Chairman, I was in and out of the vote, I recognize that, but I just want to conclude by saying that surely to goodness The Department of Health can give the type of recognition to the nursing homes which I have suggested.

Mr. Chairman: Anything further under the special health services programme?

Mr. Ben: Under the next vote, then, Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Chairman: Special health services is carried then. We will move on to the environmental health services.

Mr. Ben: Yes, Mr. Chairman, one of the new factors that is creeping into the environmental health picture is the fact that what used to be local exposure to toxic materials, gases, particles and the like, can no longer be so defined or so confined because it is a characteristic of the new materials, the new processes and the new operational procedures that the entire environment tends to be contaminated.

Workers who would not normally be expected to receive exposure do, in fact, come down with illnesses that the workmen's compensation board will not recognize as being directly attributable to their working conditions, but which are, indeed, proving to be attributable to their working environment. Now, Mr. Chairman, I want to stress that I am only talking about a workmen's compensation claim to illustrate an environmental health point, so please, Mr. Chairman, do not rule me out of order.

I should like to raise once more the case of Mr. Nelson Davison, aged 66, of R.R. 1, Port Colborne, who was treated at the Hamilton clinic of the Ontario Cancer Foundation for carcinoma of the middle turbinate, in plain language—cancer of the nasal passage—at the beginning of this year. His workmen's compensation claim #S7805085 was disallowed on the grounds that the departments of the International Nickel Company in Port Colborne, where he worked, were not those where he would have been exposed to cancer-causing agents or carcinogens as they are called.

Dr. R. G. C. MacLaren of the Hamilton clinic, wrote to the medical officer at the claims department of the workmen's compensation board, Toronto, on April 3 and his remarks are interesting in the light of our new concern with environmental health.

First, let me tie this in by reading from the annual report of The Department of Health, under the heading, environmental health and the sub-heading industrial studies:

Previous studies has shown an increase in lung cancer in certain occupations in the refining of nickel, in a silver and cobalt refinery and in the production of gas from coal. Though exposure in these occupations was eliminated some years ago, cases of lung cancer have continued to develop among men who were exposed. Follow-up is being maintained on these men, and other occupations in the nickel industry are being studied to determine whether the increased risk of lung cancer extends to them. A study of chronic bronchitis and emphysema in relation to sulphur dioxide exposure is also being conducted on four occupational groups in the nickel industry. Other studies in progress include assessments of the risk of bladder cancer in six companies in the rubber industry and of lung cancer in coke oven workers in the steel industry. Investigations in other countries have shown an increased risk of lung cancer and mesothelioma in some occupations entailing exposure to certain kinds of asbestos. A study of these conditions in asbestos workers in Ontario, is presently being planned in co-operation with our occupational health service. In view of reports of increased mortality from lung cancer among uranium miners in the United States, arrangements are being made for a study of mortality among active and former uranium miners in Ontario.

So you see, Mr. Chairman, the fact that this is a workmen's compensation case is incidental so far as this discussion and this vote are concerned. What I want to establish is the fact that environmental health is blurring the boundary between what used to be the clearly defined limits of work and play.

To get back to the doctor. Dr. MacLaren goes on in his letter of April 3:

I know nothing of the details of the processes of refining nickel, but I do know that this type of tumor is unusual in the general population. This clinic sees patients from Hamilton, Burlington, Guelph, Galt, Brantford and the Niagara peninsula, and between 1958 and 1967 we have records of nine cases in males. Their towns of origin are: Port Colborne 6, Fort Erie 1, Welland 1, and Wellandport 1.

I have no way of knowing that these nine cases all worked at the International Nickel Company, although some certainly did. We have other cases of women who are scattered on a more random basis and I am surprised that we have no other cases of males from the rest of our area, as we should have one or two cases from large cities like Hamilton.

As this patient has worked at the International Nickel plant for many years and as the disease from which he suffers seems to be uncommon elsewhere, I think it would probably be advisable to review the decision regarding his claim.

Perhaps members would care to turn to page 6292 of Hansard and examine the answers to questions about this topic addressed both to the Minister of Labour (Mr. Bales) and the Minister of Health, particularly the latter, on page 6293. New chemicals are not tested to see if they are cancer-causing unless it is previously suspected that they are likely to be. Whoever thought that cyclamates and Accent would be suspect, but now we see that they are.

It should be realized, says the Minister of Health in his answer, that the response in humans does not necessarily parallel that in animals. Why then send a monkey up to study the effects of weightlessness? Surely we cannot have one philosophy when it suits, and another one when it does not.

Publication is on a voluntary basis in the learned journals. How much information is suppressed because publication is not compulsory? Would a research worker for INCO risk prejudicing his job by publishing against the will of his masters?

The Department of Health does not undertake to test new materials to see if they are cancer-causing agents. Why not? What is that beautiful new laboratory for, up on the 401 Highway, if not for this? It is beneath the dignity of the addiction research foundation to treat people, and now it is beneath the dignity of the departmental laboratory to test materials to see if they are cancer-causing agents. What nonsense this is. What are we coming to?

Why are the special studies of morbidity and mortality undertaken by the health study services confined to specific occupational groups? It almost looks as though, in today's atmosphere of general pollution, the geographic approach would be more fruitful. Anyone who is in a certain locality, for example Port Maitland, is obviously in greater danger than anyone who is away from the source. So why confine it to the occupations?

Everybody who is around the process regardless of whether he is a clerk or furnace man is breathing the same air and surely the criteria are the length of exposure, the frequency of exposure, and so on, rather than who has a specific union card.

The results of industrial hygiene investigations by The Department of Health are only reported to the workmen's compensation board "where applicable" the Minister says on page 6293 of Hansard. Who decides when a finding is applicable? Are there any rules or guidelines? Should not all cases be reported to the workmen's compensation board? After all, who knows what the long-term consequences of lack of hygiene are in relation to subsequent compensation cases? Must the board begin from ignorance every time?

To return to the case of the late Mr. Nelson Davison, who died of his cancer on June 13. He was the one man out of six whose case was disallowed because it was said that in his 36 years and nine months of employment with INCO he had only been employed in the electrolytic department and not in the cupola, calcining or sintering operations, where a statistical relationship had been established between occupation and health.

The board took these findings as gospel and Mr. Davison, after 36 years and nine months with INCO, all in the environment of the operation, got no compensation for the cancer in his nose. He died a bitter man.

Now does the Minister mean to tell this House that had Mr. Davison spent his days fishing on Lake Nipigon, he would have contracted this disease? No, the plain fact is that anyone working in the INCO operation at Port Colborne or in a similar environment anywhere in the province, is much more likely to get cancer than someone who is away from the immediate location of such nasty and unpleasant inhalations and vapours and airborne dust and acid and all the other factors that go to make the operation what we would call heavy industry. The plain fact is that Mr. Davison died of cancer because he worked at INCO, in that atmosphere, and for no other reason.

We are coming to the point in time where we have to broaden the public liability toward those we expose in the front line regardless of the narrow findings of scientists who are only looking for specific correlations to suit their own research ends. We have to admit a collective guilt in the matter of personal health in subnormal and subnatural environments. The cost of this will of course not be negligible. But neither will any of the debt settlements that must now be made as the unpaid bill for progress is totalled. Our fathers and grandfathers left us a legacy that we could well do without, and certainly industrial disease, looked at in a much broader sense than ever before, is part of the price we must pay for their philosophy of man conquering nature rather than abiding with it in harmony and peace.

The time is over when we can approach these matters on the basis of insignificant statistics. I have always been suspicious of this approach but it hits the reader forcibly on page 6294 at the top, where the fact that Mr. Nelson Davison got cancer in his nose is said to be not statistically significant. To him, it was everything. He died of the thing, did he not?

How local then are local effects? What constitutes exposure? In the smog of Toronto, where are the boundaries? Obviously, Milton is clearer than Etobicoke and Whitchurch township is fairer than the junction of the Don Valley Parkway and the Gardiner Expressway. But the extremes merge and build imperceptibly.

This, I think, is why the case of the late Mr. Nelson Davison—which we have purposely documented so well in the Hansard record, from page 6291 onward, in the issue dated June 26—is a milestone. We have made it such a milestone by building it into the record for posterity to see and to ask the question: Is this the first case of a legion of cases—the new generation of environmental health cases which will not answer to any present workmen's compensation code but which are nevertheless the fruit of people having to work in generally polluted, rather than specifically polluted, environments? What does society owe such people and how can we discharge this debt?

Mr. Nelson Davison lies in his grave and he has left a widow 56 years old, who fortunately owns her own small home. But all she has to live on today is $86.99 a month, the USW negotiated pension that INCO pays. It is a non-contributory pension but because of this, Mrs. Davison has been told that as soon as she gets a cheque from any other source the rules of the agreement say that her INCO pension will cease. Certainly, Mr. Savelle, INCO's claims officer, told Mrs. Davison: "If you are lucky enough to get a workmen's compensation board cheque, however small, we shall immediately stop your INCO payment."

In another nine years, Mrs. Davison will qualify for a $78-a-month old age pension and she asks: "What will happen then?" We cannot tell her the answer. She is at INCO's mercy.

Now, Mr. Chairman, that deals with Mr. Davison but I want to just tie in again the principle that I was making that you do not know where the two fields merge—immediate local pollution and long-range, long-distance pollution. Mr. Chairman, I want to draw to the Minister's attention the report in the Toronto Daily Star of Friday last entitled "No Need to Panic Over Air Pollution, Ontario Expert Says." Mr. Chairman, I say categorically that the so-called expert who made that statement is talking through his stack. The fact that this man is head of the provincial government's meteorology and air quality section makes his gaffe inexcusable. Louis Shenfield's complacency could have us all in our graves.

High stacks will only dilute the concentration of toxic gases and will only reduce the human peril in the immediate vicinity. I think it was my leader who said that dilution is no solution to pollution. Anyway, whether he did or not, I say it. The elevation of toxic waste matter into the stratosphere, where it can be acted on by ultra-violet light, is nothing to be proud of. Studies now going on in Los Angeles suggest that far from the sun's rays having a sterilizing effect on the uppermost layers of smog, they have just the opposite effect. They make simple elements join together and become more complicated ones, until finally we may produce life itself in the soup, in the form of viruses.

The broth of smog is like the primordial seas. It has every ingredient that photosynthesis needs to build with. And that, Mr. Chairman, is exactly what happens when we build high stacks. We turn simple poisons into viruses, and we replace bronchial poisoning with epidemics of new varieties of flu and similar virus-carried diseases. Since cancer is now thought to be caused primarily by viruses, it will be interesting to see if, in fact, high stacks do not produce greater and more irreparable damage than the damage they are supposed to alleviate.

Our research into this is hampered because most of the findings are U.S. Air Force property and still classified. But we know enough to see that high stacks are not the answer to our problem. Again, I repeat, dilution is not the solution to pollution.

Mr. Gisborn: What are you quoting from? What paper?

Mr. Ben: I am quoting from the Toronto Daily Star of Friday last. The caption is: "No Need to Panic Over Air Pollution, Ontario Expert Says." The Toronto Daily Star—a good NDP paper.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Ben: May I have some answers from the hon. Minister?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Sandwich-Riverside.

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): Mr. Chairman, I began to ask a question on Thursday evening concerning the pesticide advisory board. It has been represented to me that this board consists entirely of government and commercial representatives. I would like to know whether this is so, and if so, why there are no representatives of the universities on this board. There is a tendency—perhaps natural, perhaps unintentional—for government representatives to protect the government party and there is a similar inclination for the commercial representatives to favour the business aspect.

Why is there no representative of the public itself, whose interest presumably might be protected by some independent university scientist, for example Dr. D. A. Chant, whose interest in this subject is well known.

The first chairman of this less than two-year-old board, Mr. G. F. Manson, resigned. Now, what difference of opinion did he have with the rest of the board, or was it with the government? Was it over the narrow reference terms given to this board? Was it that the advisory board was not going to be asked to do any advising?

If so, has this policy now been definitely and permanently changed so that it is now in a position to give advice and not merely issue licences?

A few remarks about the disposal of DDT: For several days, I had a question waiting on my desk for the Minister of Health. I intended to ask him whether any kind of incineration of DDT was possible without creating any equally disastrous pollution of the air. The Minister answered this question in the House the other day—on Thursday afternoon—and in giving an answer, he indicated that this is a possibility, but that the only suitable incinerating equipment was in the United States. Many months ago, Mr. Chairman, I drew to the attention of the then Minister of Energy and Resources Management, a device for eliminating liquid industrial waste without—according to the manufacturer's claims—creating odour, smoke or air pollution. This is manufactured in Cleveland, costs about $18,000 and, if it works as advertised, seems to be the answer to many problems of waste disposal.

Although they asked for the details of this device, the only answer I have been able to get from the pollution control people is that their department does not endorse or test such devices. I believe that is the way they phrased it. The Ministers of Health and of anti-pollution have had over two months to devise a method for collecting and destroying—or rendering harmless—the unused stocks of DDT.

On October 20, I asked what was being done and on October 23, I suggested that there be designated immediately collection points to which people could take unused stocks of DDT. The Minister of Health assured me that plans were being made and would be made known soon. Yet, even today, we are still waiting. Why does it take this government so long to do anything, Mr. Chairman?

It took the Minister of Revenue (Mr. White) many months to come up with the idea, after consulting with the restaurant association and all kinds of people, that it was all right for a waitress to list several meals on one bill. It took many months to reach that complicated decision and now we have two Ministers taking two months to figure out a way merely to collect unused stocks of DDT.

The destruction of DDT is a much more difficult problem. But while the Minister shelved the collection problem, how many ordinary citizens decided that it was too dangerous to keep quantities of DDT in their garages or in their sheds or their basements and having weighed the danger to their small children and their neighbour's small children against the danger to the earth's total environment, made an understandable decision and threw the DDT down the toilet? How many, Mr. Chairman?

Nobody knows, of course, how many times this has happened in October; how many times it has happened in November and how many times it is going to happen in December. The collection of DDT must begin at once. It has already been delayed far too long. My question is: Have you and the Minister of Energy considered the possibility of incinerating DDT in the Superprencio device that I referred to before? If so, what steps has the Minister taken to test the feasibility of doing this?

I want to speak for about two minutes on the occupational health branch work in the matter of asbestosis. Recent studies have shown that asbestosis is present as a serious environmental hazard, although hitherto it was unsuspected. In London, England, 76 consecutive cases of death from mesothelioma, a disease characterized by tumors of the lining of the lung and of the abdominal cavities, were studied. Thirty-one had been asbestos workers, 11 had lived within one-half mile of an asbestos plant and nine had lived merely—and this is the important part, Mr. Chairman—nine had lived merely in the household of an asbestos worker.

Subsequent studies of asbestos workers' homes in New York showed that asbestos particles present both in the air and in the settled dust were in great supply. The 44th annual report of The Ontario Department of Health in 1968 tells of examinations of almost 3,000 asbestos workers in Ontario.

My question is regarding them: What steps are being taken to protect these workers at their work? For example, is any kind of mask feasible? And what steps are being taken to protect those who live in the homes of asbestos workers and are adversely affected by the dust or the particles of asbestos carried home on the clothing of the workers?

For example: Are asbestos workers required to wear special overalls or clothing which they put on when they arrive at work and take off and leave before they return home? Are there public health measures of this kind or of a similar nature being implemented?

Mr. Chairman: Any other speakers on this, until the Minister replies?

Mr. Ben: Yes, I just want to speak on The Department of Health and it is very short, Mr. Speaker. It has to do with radiation as it affects our environment. The state of Minnesota wants a higher degree of control in the United States federal government in the matter of low level nuclear radiation and I believe that Ontario should have the same attitude. I think it is nonsense for the Minister of Energy and Resources Management to say that he is satisfied with the standard set by Dr. C. G. Lawrence and the federal Atomic Energy Control Board.

This is just not good enough in the light of the increasing all-round health hazard produced by our environment. To add to smog and chemicals, the further danger of radiation, which will affect our unborn children more than it will affect ourselves, is asking too much.

We have to have a provincial environmental authority and if we are not sure that we have the constitutional authority to establish one, we should pass an Act and then refer it to the Supreme Court of Canada, who can rule on whether or not it is ultra vires of this jurisdiction. At any rate let us make the attempt.

I say that Ontario is gambling over $1 billion already on nuclear power, and there is little doubt that the irradiation of fruits and vegetables will increase as well as the medical uses of radioactive materials. A week or so ago, a box of radioactive material fell off a truck between Toronto and Hamilton, and all the Minister of Transport (Mr. Haskett) could say was that the matter fell outside his jurisdiction. The people are fed up with answers like this. They want action.

Minnesota has recognized this, and Vermont is also ready to press for higher standards than those by the U.S. federal agency. I do not believe that a major user of radioactive materials like Ontario can continue to rely upon standards set by a federal agency, particularly one which has already made a $1 billion mistake in the location of the Bruce plant. Now, how far do we have to go to get this thing into the thick heads of those who think everything in the garden is lovely?

Will the Minister reply?

Mr. Deans: Mr. Chairman, I just want to ask the Minister in regard to what the member for Humber has raised, and that is radioactive material. Exactly what control has the Minister at this point over the transportation of radioactive material, if any?

Hon. Mr. Wells: This is a federal matter, we do not get into that. They exercise the control over the transportation of radioactive materials.

Mr. Deans: As I understand it at the moment, radioactive material, provided it is in a lead-clad box, can be transported in any kind of automobile, train, flat truck, bicycle. Any method of transportation is suitable, and it seems to me in the light of the incident in the Hamilton area this has proven to be very unsatisfactory.

This particular box that I raised with the Minister of Transport some two weeks ago, has not yet been found, and it was potentially very dangerous. I do not believe it is enough to say that provided it is in a lead-clad box that any method of moving it from one point to another is adequate. At the present moment this particular box could well be in the hands of some person who is ill, it could be in the hands of some child, and it could be potentially very dangerous to the residents of the area.

I wonder if the Minister would consider taking some action to ensure that a much more stringent regulation is placed on the transportation between two points rather than just the method of carrying in terms of the kind of box that it must be carried in?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chariman, on that particular point, we would be happy to look into it. It seems to be that the Federal Radiation Protection Division has the authority, and I am sure that they are as concerned as all of us in this House are about making sure there is adequate protection and our people would be happy to work with them to look into this.

I believe in the case that the hon. member is referring to—if my memory serves me right—the Ontario Provincial Police and others have co-operated to the fullest in trying to recover that, which while it is a certain radioactive substance, I understand there is not a really potentially dangerous radiation hazard from that particular substance that fell off the truck.

I would like to refer to a couple of the other questions which have been put forward. First, about the pesticides advisory board. It seems that this particular advisory board of the government has been the subject of quite a bit of abuse in the press and from certain people because of their so-called bias. I, of course, reject this, and I think it is doing a real disservice to the members on that board.

It is very nice to stand up and say that if there were some people from the universities on they would be better than the people we already have on, because they have built-in biases. But I think university people probably have as many biases as the present people and it is a question of deciding the make-up of your board.

I am telling you that because I do not think the board is biased. I think we can make a point and we will certainly be looking into adding other people to it as it evolves, and as our discussions about it evolve. But we have to look at the history of the board and the board was originally set up as a licensing body, in which case its primary function was to be expected in the area of licensing people to handle pesticides, and so therefore, it did have people from those areas which used the materials most and the government departments using them the most.

But, several changes were made and at the present time we have a board that I think, from the advisory job they have done for me since they have been there, show they have fair competence and, therefore indeed, as I say have been subjected to unfair criticism.

The chairman of the board is Dr. Harold E. Grey, an entomologist. He holds a BA, a BSc, a master of science and a PhD. He was with the federal Department of Agriculture but has now retired. One of the other members, is a Dr. George S. Hooper, who has a BA, a BSc, a master of science and also a PhD, and who is with Cyanamid of Canada. He is also an entomologist and he works with, of course, the company which produces these products, but is a very competent scientist.

Another board member is Mr. Kenneth B. Turner, a biologist with The Ontario Department of Lands and Forests. Then there is Mr. B. E. Beeler, an agricultural scientist with The Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food. Mr. Beeler also has a master of science degree.

Representing industry on this board—industry was represented because this was, in its original instance, primarily a licensing board—is Mr. Frank Scott Pierce, from Agro Spray; Mr. Alfred H. Gartner from PCO Services; and Mr. Keith Laver, whom, I believe, is in the nursery business. Also on the board are Mr. Murray Wood, a public health inspector with The Ontario Department of Health and Mr. Douglas Wilson, who is an agricultural scientist with The Ontario Department of Health and acting as an advisor to the board, Dr. R. Frank, who is with The Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food.

These gentlemen, as I say, have been subjected to unfair criticism because I found, since I took over this portfolio and had dealings with them, we have here a group of very competent, informed people on this whole subject of pesticides and the potential danger of pesticides to our environment.

As I said, we have their report on DDT which we are presently having run off and made available to you. It is a very good study. They have done some good studies on dieldrin and heptachlor. They did some very fine work in looking into the diazinon situation at the Toronto islands which resulted in the other inquiry now being done.

They are doing an on-going job in this whole area of advising this government on pesticides. Now, I have in mind, perhaps, some slight changes in the composition of the board and some revamping of their general authority under which they operate and I hope we will have that ready early in the next session.

The other matter which was raised with regard to the industrial section, I would like to say to this House that I think that we have in this department two of the perhaps most outstanding industrial toxicologists in the country, if not in North America, in Dr. Mastromatteo and Dr. Sutherland, and that the reputation of this department in this whole area has been one that has been of the very highest order over the past 20 or 25 years.

They have been looked upon from all the jurisdictions in North America as an outstanding example of programmes of industrial hygiene. I would like to tell the hon. members just what is going on at the present time. Previous studies have shown an increase in lung cancer in certain occupations in the refining of nickel, in the silver and cobalt refinery and in the production of gas from coal. Though exposure in these occupations was eliminated some years ago, cases of lung cancer—

Mr. Ben: Excuse me, Mr. Chairman, I read that.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I did not hear the member read that.

Mr. Ben: I read that.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Well, the member reads so much, I cannot keep up with him.

Mr. Ben: I read that part for the Minister, it is from the report.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Yes, but did you read all the studies we are doing?

Mr. Ben: No, I just read two or three paragraphs.

Hon. Mr. Wells: All right, well, I am going to read on then just to say that follow-up is being maintained on these men, and other occupations in the nickel industry are being studied to determine whether the increased risk of lung cancer extends to them.

This is one of the studies that is presently under way under Dr. Sutherland's aegis. A study of chronic bronchitis and emphysema in relation to sulphur dioxide exposure is also being conducted on four occupational groups in the nickel industry. Other studies in progress include assessment of the risk of bladder cancer in six companies in the rubber industry and of lung cancer in coke oven workers in the steel industry.

Investigations in other countries have shown an increased risk of lung cancer and mesothelioma in some occupations entailing exposure to certain kinds of asbestos. A study of these conditions in asbestos workers in Ontario is presently being planned in co-operation with our occupational health services. In view of the reports of increased mortality from lung cancer among uranium workers in the United States, arrangements are being made for a study of mortality among active and former uranium miners in Ontario. And I think we also have a study going on of the possible health effects of air pollution in the Detroit-Windsor-St. Clair River area.

Mr. Ben: I read to that point, Mr. Chairman, it was kind of you to repeat it.

Mr. Deans: May I ask the Minister a question in regard to the study that is going on?

I was interested in knowing whether at the present time there is any studying going on in the area of heart disease and lung disease among firefighters?

Hon. Mr. Wells: I am told that a study was done a number of years ago on this particular thing. Is the member suggesting perhaps this would be another area that we should be looking at?

Mr. Deans: Yes, I am. I am suggesting that heart and lung disease among firefighters is a definite hazard and as far as I can see, from my close association with the occupation, it is necessary now to establish this. I think if the Minister would undertake some form of study in that area it would be very helpful.

Hon. Mr. Wells: We will certainly undertake to look at that.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Chairman, under this vote I would like to bring to the Minister's attention—

Mr. Burr: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman, is the Minister going to give me an answer about the asbestos?

Mr. Ben: He just did.

Mr. Burr: I did not hear the details.

Hon. Mr. Wells: What was the hon. member's exact question about asbestos? I indicated we have a study going on that.

Mr. Burr: I wondered if the Minister required the workers to use special clothing which they leave at work and do not carry home, as that presumably takes the disease into the home.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Perhaps if the hon. member would let the other member continue for a minute, I will get that answer for him.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. B. Newman: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I wanted to bring to the attention of the Minister the occupational hazard of customs and immigration officers who work in an area where a lot of vehicles pass. The officers must stop the vehicle, examine the vehicle, and as a result are exposed to carbon monoxide fumes from the automobiles. I can mention one area specifically and that is the tunnel at the Windsor exit where a building prevents good circulation of air and as a result it could have, and from what I understand does have, a harmful effect on a lot of the customs and immigration officers. In fact, at one time there seemed to have been quite a few heart conditions as a result of this type of occupational hazard.

Has the Minister's department undertaken any studies concerning the potential hazard of this type of employment at such spots as I have mentioned, a bridge, a tunnel? It could be in the city of Windsor, it could be at Niagara Falls, it could be in any one of the international border points.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, I understand that we have been co-operating with the federal government on a study in this matter as it pertains to tunnels. I am not sure that this, particularly, is the exact problem that the hon. member, as I understand, was sketching for us, and that was the hazard to customs inspectors as the cars stop at the points outside the tunnel for checking and so forth, and the carbon monoxide.

We would be happy to look into that. I do know we do have a study going on in regard to actually inside tunnels and carbon monoxide, but we will look into the other aspect as well.

Mr. B. Newman: I could also mention another, Mr. Chairman, employees working in industries that are manufacturing colour television sets. There has been the talk of the hazard or the potential hazard of exposure to various rays from colour TV, from an individual watching a colour television at a close range. The individual who would be working in the manufacture of the colour TV sets might be subject to a greater hazard as a result of his proximity to a working set.

I am wondering if there are any studies that have been conducted by the department in relation to that?

Then I have one other question of the Minister.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I am not aware of just what we are doing in the field of workers working in plants. I presume, except when they are testing, that the sets are not on so the hazard is not there, but I will also look into that.

Mr. B. Newman: And the last is the new modern methods of cooking which entail the use of a range that uses electronic ultra-high frequency waves. I think they refer to it as a radiant oven.

I understand from my reading of American newspapers that there is a potential health hazard to individuals who are exposed to the use of this range for long periods of time. I am just wondering if the Minister could inform the House as to whether the comments I have made are correct or as to whether there is no danger whatsoever? I can foresee the day when this would be or could be a very popular type of kitchen facility, something that would enable the housewife to cook meals in one fraction of the time that she takes today in the preparation of foods. Would the Minister care to comment on that?

Hon. Mr. Wells: I understand, Mr. Chairman, that in this regard, as with the situation which the member referred to earlier—the workers working in plants where colour TV sets are made and I think we have mentioned here the laser beams that are now being used in schools for demonstrations, our people have been working with the federal people to work out standards and controls of such radiation.

We felt in this country it should be a federal standard and to decide safe limits. And we are working with the federal officials on all these things, anything that would have to do with public exposure to radiation. We are hoping that in the very near future we will have some agreement and something worked out on this.

Mr. B. Newman: Mr. Chairman, the Minister did not answer if there was any health danger at all from the use of radiant ovens. Is the department aware of any at all?

Hon. Mr. Wells: I do not really know whether there is a health hazard, we would have to check on that for the member. I do not have that information. I would hope that basically they would not have been allowed for sale in the country with the various checks they have, if there was a health hazard from them, but we will check that out.

Mr. B. Newman: We thought the same of colour television up to the time it was exposed as a result of some type of faulty construction that there was a health hazard with colour TV or certain types of colour TV. There are thousands of colour television sets manufactured years ago in operation today that might expose the viewer to some type of physical hazard. I know the Minister's department probably does not have any way of checking on this or warning the public but that is a thing that maybe will be taken care of with the length of the use of the set and would eventually phase itself out of operation. I wanted to ask of the Minister if there are regulations at all concerning the installation of x-ray machines in doctors' offices so that an occupant of an office below the location of an x-ray machine is not exposed to any type of dangers from x-ray emissions?

Hon. Mr. Wells: We have a whole set of regulations that control the installation, and how all kinds of medical x-ray equipment is to be handled, in this province.

Mr. Chairman: Anything further under environmental health? The hon. member for Port Arthur.

Mr. R. H. Knight (Port Arthur): Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would like to bring up the matter of noise pollution in this modern day and age and its effect, especially on teenagers. Recently, I was talking to a Beltone hearing-aid salesman and he tells me that the number of customers of 18 years of age and under are increasing by leaps and bounds and that in effect, a large number of our young people are deaf, at least in one ear. He said, to use his words: "These transistor radios with the ear-plugs are just murder on the ear-drum." I was wondering what kind of research is being conducted into the health hazard, certainly the hazard to the hearing of our young, from the use of transistor radios with the ear-plugs.

And, whether directions are being set out to the schools, for example, from this department; to our young people, how to use noise and especially how to respect noise, how to respect music because a lot of them like their music at a very high volume, as parents of teenagers all know. And, I wonder if the Minister could acquaint the House with whatever research is being done in his department.

into this whole subject of loud noise and its effect on the hearing, especially of our young.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, in answer to the hon. member's question, I would say that actually most of our work to date, has been in the area of industrial noise. We have not studied the teen-agers with the transistor radios and hearing-aids. But, I think this is something that we will be getting into. We discussed this as one of the items on the federal-provincial Health Ministers' conference last week: noise pollution because it is a term that is being used along with all the other terms of pollution of the environment, and it is one that perhaps we have not realized or paid too much attention to up till now. We will certainly, I think, be looking at the various things and moving into certain studies in this whole area.

The federal Minister indicated that they were going to prepare some background papers on this, to present at one of our future conferences. They made a statement on this without too many other considerations at this time. But, I think that it is something we certainly will be hearing a lot more about, if I can use that term, in the next little while and we will certainly be undertaking various studies in this area.

Mr. Chairman: Anything further under environmental health?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Yes, I was going to reply to the hon. member who asked about the asbestos. I understand that worker protection in these cases is subject to the provisions of The Industrial Safety Act and our department says that if exposure was severe, we would recommend respirators and special clothing which would be left at work. If the exposure was severe enough, The Department of Labour, apparently, has primary jurisdiction in this area, under The Industrial Safety Act. They also tell us that as far as our people are concerned, they have no knowledge of asbestosis being reported from any members of the general public who might have got it from washing worker's clothes. We do not have any knowledge of that.

Mr. Chairman: Anything further under environmental health? Shall the programme carry?

Agreed to.

We move on to laboratory services. Shall that programme carry?

Agreed to.

Local health services; the hon. member for Thunder Bay.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Mr. Chairman, I would like to raise with the Minister, the inadequacy of the health services in northern Ontario. Before I do it in detail, I would like to draw the Minister's attention to two articles that appeared in newspapers in the last six months. One appeared in the Globe and Mail of April 18, 1969 and the other appeared in the magazine section of the Detroit News, on Wednesday, November 5, 1969, extolling the virtues of the northern Ontario mobile dental unit operated by the Ontario Department of Health. I hope the Minister is aware, in his young career as the Minister of Health, of the importance of these mobile dental clinics.

Dr. Toll, who operates the one on the Canadian Pacific Railway, is doing a magnificent job looking after the dental needs of the young people, particularly along the line of the Canadian Pacific Railway. I understand that Dr. Quest does wonderful work in that area along the north line of the CNR and that you also have three mobile trailers that go throughout northern Ontario, although I have never seen them.

In understand that Dr. Toll got notice a short time ago that his services would be no longer required because of his age. I discussed this with your predecessor and with the member for Quinte (Mr. Potter) who is chairman of the health committee, and they agreed with me wholeheartedly, that it would be absolutely ludicrous to retire the gentlemen who are providing the much needed dental services in northern communities where it is impossible to attract full-time resident dentists.

I would like to prevail upon the Minister to see that those two elderly gentlemen—they are considered elderly by your standards, although if you had an opportunity to speak to Dr. Toll, you would realize that he is younger in spirit and in action than many of the members of this House—I would prevail upon the Minister to see that nothing is done to interrupt the wonderful work that those two dentists are doing in their two mobile dental cars. I would just like to have the Minister assure the people of northern Ontario that this service will not only be continued but would be expanded. Because they are so overworked, the dentists only get to a place about once every five years. I have drawn it to the attention of authorities in The Department of Health, how vitally important it is that this work not only go on but be extended so that someone who does not have access to the vital dental services will be given an opportunity to avail themselves of this service much more often than five years.

Dr. Toll has told me that he had been putting partial plates in the mouths of grade eight students because they had never seen a dentist. A good many of them had never even seen a toothbrush; did not know what it was for. That is why it is so important that this department not only perpetuate their work, but expand it so that these people will be able to get around and be able to attend the children, in particular. They need health services much more often and much more frequently than a five-year visit from a mobile dental clinic.

I would like to expand further on the announcement made recently by the Minister in which he says that Ontario is to provide MDs and dentists for many communities in the province where they find it impossible to attract medical practitioners and dentists. He did state that the population within these areas should be sufficient to support two or more physicians, two or more dentists, and home nursing services. During the north-western Ontario Development Conference held recently in Port Arthur we discussed this with Dr. Young, of the Northern Ontario Health Services. I hope that he has brought the message back to the department of the vital need for an extension of services into those areas that enjoy no level of health services at the present time.

When you consider places like Nakina, Armstrong, Savant Lake, Pickle Lake, White River and Schreiber-Schreiber is the only one of all of those towns that has a doctor—the facilities that a doctor is expected to work in and work with are completely inadequate. That is why it is so very difficult for small communities to attract and to retain doctors when the opportunities, the facilities, and the amenities are so much better in other areas.

The Minister has a letter—I sent him a copy of two letters recently from a northern doctor—explaining how inadequate the services are, particularly in the municipality of Schreiber. Unless we get some kind of assistance through this department, I think it is going to be impossible for northern communities to attract trained personnel to provide for health services. I would like to draw the Minister's attention to the fact that most of the people in the north are covered by some form of medical plan, and I suppose a good portion of them would be covered by OHSIP at the present time. But when you consider that they have to go 200 or 250 miles to either a doctor or to a hospital to get the necessary medical treatment, I think that it would be safe to say that the cost of transportation to these services should be considered a part of medical treatment. When you have people, say in the highly urbanized areas where you have got one doctor for every 1,000 of population, it is much easier for them to have access to the kind of medical personnel that they enjoy in the heavily urbanized areas.

We realize that you cannot build a hospital every 25 or 30 miles and have it adequately staffed so that the services would be available to everybody across the province. But certainly there should be some thought given to subsidizing the cost of transportation for many of those people who do not get the necessary medical attention for the simple reason that distances are so great and they just do not have access to them. I would like to read into the record a letter that the Minister received from the chamber of commerce in Nakina about this very thing. It is addressed to the hon. Thomas L. Wells, Minister of Health:

Dear sir:

With reference to your October 24, 1969, letter addressed to Jack Stokes, we, the Nakina chamber of commerce, would like to take issue with some of your statements, mainly the last paragraph which stated that all things considered, everything is being done to provide Nakina with adequate medical service. We believe the inclusion of Nakina into the Thunder Bay health unit is essential, although an infrequent visit by the public health nurse will not satisfy all our health needs.

We also need a doctor for Nakina and the surrounding area as there are at least 2,235 persons that would be using his services. Nakina has a population of 605; Aroland, 15 miles away, has 225 persons. West of here, on the CNR main line, are Ferland and Auden with a population of 105 and 150 respectively. To the north, and almost entirely dependent upon Nakina for their fly-in services, are Fort Hope, Lansdowne House, Weboquie and Ogoki Post, with populations of 450, 300, 250 and 150. Armstrong, 112 miles west, has an RCAF base which has a doctor making his services available to the townspeople for minor problems.

It is quite conceivable some of the Armstrong populace which number 475 would also make use of a doctor's services, if available. It is our understanding, while talking to Dr. Thoman at the northern conference in Thunder Bay, that a minimum of 1,000 persons would have to be served to get a doctor under your plan.

We wish to indicate that presently we have many more than that number in the Nakina area. There are many good reasons for having a doctor in Nakina. Patients arrive by air from northern points and must still undergo an additional one hour drive by taxi at a cost of $15 to have a consultation lasting perhaps no more than ten minutes. Previous to September 1 of this year we had the Indian health nurse stationed here and in an emergency she graciously assisted. Now we have lost even that and she has now retired and her office has been moved to Geraldton.

Last summer I personally directed an American fisherman to Geraldton for medical attention as he had had a fish hook through two of his fingers. No doubt it was a very painful trip.

You say there will soon be five doctors in Geraldton area. Perhaps so, but a large portion of their clientele must make long pilgrimages to gain an appointment with one of them.

The Nakina chamber of commerce believes that a doctor is needed for our area. Thank you for any assistance you can give us.

I say to the Minister that this is only pinpointing the problem that is so prevalent in so many of the northern communities, some of them with populations of up to 2,500, which are not able to attract a doctor. The reason they cannot attract a doctor is that we do not have the amenities that many of the doctors enjoy in the highly urbanized areas.

Even if they did like the living conditions of the north, the wilderness area, the good clean air, and the good clean water, we do not have the necessary resources to provide them with, say, a clinical surrounding where they would have the facilities to be able to practise like most doctors—the kind of procedures. We do have doctors who do not even have access to a hospital. They have a little two-by-four office where they try to do diagnostic work and they have to refer them to a hospital maybe 50 or 100 miles away. I think that this is the thing that this department should do, and do successfully, to assist local communities and small town doctors in constructing clinics with possibly two or three beds where they could give them overnight care as a stop-over place, maybe, to a hospital, or some place where they could stop over for observation, rather than to have to make a 200-mile trip by air or by rail or by ambulance under sometimes very adverse weather conditions. I hope that the Minister, in this plan that he announced a short while ago, will implement these recommendations, that he is not only going to subsidize the salaries of doctors to make it attractive not only for them to practise there, but assist the municipalities in providing the kind of facilities—a doctor's office, possibly a small clinic, with two or three small beds—where he could provide temporary service, health service, to these people even if for no other reason than to make them comfortable until they can possibly fly out to a hospital where they could get much better medical treatment.

I hope the Minister will take the things I have said under advisement, not only to assure the people in the north that the dental facilities that they have at the present time will be expanded upon. It is very much appreciated by the people of the north, and I would like to say the wonderful job of public relations that these two dentists are doing. I do not think they get enough credit for all that they do. They pull teeth while on the move and they are really just wonderful and I cannot be complimentary enough to them for the wonderful work they are doing. I hope the Minister will assure us that they will be kept on and if possible these facilities and these services will be increased to provide the much needed dental care. I hope that he will take under advisement to assist small-town doctors and these small municipalities to get the kind of clinics or doctors' offices that will attract the much needed personnel in that area. I hope the Minister will comment on it.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, can I just make a comment on this because I think that we all appreciate very much the statements that the member for Thunder Bay has made. He has a very keen knowledge of these problems in the north and he always makes a very sincere statement about them. I appreciate hearing his remarks about them because I am afraid I do not get up to the north as often as I should. I want to tell him though that I do feel that I have some kind of kinship with the dental programme because one of the dentists, Dr. Eddie Guest, is an acquaintance of mine from 'way back and you may not be aware of it but he probably—and perhaps you would hold this against him or against me—but he is probably one of those who influenced me to join this party and to become active in this party. As you may or may not be aware, he was the president of the Conservative Association in Metro Toronto and—

Mr. Stokes: All I know is that he is a good dentist and I insist that you leave him there.

Hon. Mr. Wells: That is right. Well, that is right; he is. What I am really saying is that he, to my way of thinking, exemplifies the kind of things, that if a lot more people did, we would perhaps be a lot better off in society.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Then why are you going to retire them when you have not a replacement?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Wait until I just talk about Dr. Guest for a minute. He is a fellow who had a thriving dental practice in Metropolitan Toronto here and gave it up to enjoy the life in northern Ontario and, as you say, is giving very fine service. I think this is an excellent thing and I have been very much impressed with the fact that he did this. As to the other gentleman, I was not aware of the situation which you indicated. However, I will look into it although I suppose in all of our lives the time arrives when it is time to sort of throw in the towel and quit working and I understand—

Mr. Stokes: It certainly is not so in this case.

Mr. MacDonald: Not without a replacement.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I agree. We will have to find a replacement but it may be that this gentleman has arrived at the point where his advanced years make it impossible to operate in the—

Mr. MacDonald: He will beat you in a run around Queen's Park.

Hon. Mr. Wells: He would not have any trouble in that. But I would like to say this to the member that our bursary support programme applies to the railway cars so that it will now be possible for those dental students who will be getting the bursary support, and in return giving us so many years of service in a designated area, can choose one of the railway cars. So we see this is another matter, that is getting staff into those railway cars.

I would like to tell you that at the present time there are 43 areas designated as underserviced for physicians and there are about 30 more under consideration. I have the list of them here. I am sure the hon. member is aware that Nakina which he mentioned is one, there are many others—Schreiber, South Porcupine and so forth—all designated. Now our job is to get the physicians either under the bursary programme or under the guaranteed wage programme—get them into these areas.

We have the areas designated, we have the programme out now. We have had about 80 applicants for medical service under our programme and the selection boards are sitting about December 9 to look into this. There are about 26 areas designated for dental service in the north. They are different again than those for medical service. We have had about 42 applicants for undergraduate dental bursaries and today 24 have been approved by the selection board and have been so advised. Four of these 24 are final-year students so that they will join the 16 Czech dentists whom we have in the special programme in London and they will be ready to go into these areas in June, 1970. So we will have about 24 dentists to go into some of these designated areas for at least a year beginning in 1970.

If the hon. member would like the list, I am sure if he writes us from time to time we will keep him up to date as to what areas are designated in northern Ontario. This, of course, as he is well aware, is part of the benefits under OHSIP. I could not have written a better speech as to why we should have these as benefits under OHSIP than the member just gave, because, as he has just said, you cannot provide an insurance service or payment for the bills without providing the service and this is what we are trying to do here. It is part of the health resources development plan to provide and get these dentists and doctors to go into designated areas.

On the area that he mentioned about clinics. This of course is another thing we are looking at and what we are going to try and do is set up demonstration programmes because I think we see in the changing concept of delivery of health services that the idea of one doctor in one place by himself may be very hard to sell to a lot of the graduates who are coming out. We also have to try and develop areas where there can be sort of a community of these people, as we said—two doctors, a couple of dentists serving an area. We recognize that in some parts of the north this would be very difficult but there may be areas where demonstration projects could be set up in this manner to serve an area within a certain radius and, as you said, there may be some beds there where they could come in for services overnight.

This is also the kind of thing we are looking at under this whole health resources development programme and I would just like to thank the member for his remarks and for bringing these to our attention and assure him that they are uppermost in our minds in trying to provide the kind of dental and medical services, in fact, total health services that the north indeed deserves and is going to get.

Mr. Stokes: I just might get—

Mr. Chairman: I must point out to the committee the 75 hours allotted to debate on the estimates in committee of supply have elapsed, as of this present moment. Seventy-five hours have been completely taken up. Now we still have the remaining votes in The Department of Health which include OHSIP and hospital services and HIRB. We also have the supplementary estimates. In view of the fact that the 75 hours has elapsed I would ask for the direction of the committee.

Mr. Stokes: If I might make a comment on that, Mr. Chairman. It has been unanimously agreed by the three Whips and the government House leader that we would complete the estimates of The Department of Health by 10:30 this evening and that was by unanimous consent.

Mr. MacDonald: And one further note that perhaps should be added if you are not aware of it. It was understood in some discussions from the Opposition side that we would finish this vote and the mental health vote so that we would have at least this evening's session to deal with OHSIP, HIRB and OHSC.

Mr. Chairman: I have asked the committee simply for direction. I must point out to them, however, that the additional sitting which would be available to the committee, I presume, would be on the basis that there was only one sitting taken up for the debate in the House and Agriculture and Food instead of the allotted two sittings.

There is only available to us, then, the 20 minutes remaining plus the 2½ hours this evening to complete these estimates, and I must point out to the committee that we also have the supplementary estimates which will have to be worked in some manner in the same time.

Mr. Nixon: Oh, that can be arranged.

Mr. Stokes: If I might—

Mr. Chairman: That is based on my direction at this moment.

Mr. Stokes: If I might comment on that? In that 15 hours we are allocated for the reporting back of the three departmental estimates that went into committee, we have only used one of those so we have four of them left, so on the total picture we are well within time allotted for estimates.

With regards to the supplemental estimates that the Chairman made reference to, this was something that was not in the total package and this will not be, I understand, will not be taken from the total time allotted for estimates. This is something that was never anticipated.

Mr. Chairman: No, I have to disagree with the hon. member because the order says the "business of supply" and certainly the supplementary estimates are part of it.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Chairman, I do not want to get into an argument. I think we are wasting precious time but in the discussion I had last Thursday night with the government House leader, he indicated in his normal, affable and congenial way that we would find some solution to the problem of the supplemental estimates and I think it is envisaged that it will be beyond the original allotment for strictly departmental estimates. However, let us not waste time on that now. It is under consideration by those who are the powers that be in this Legislature and I trust that we will have a congenial solution to it.

Mr. Chairman: I am sure the hon. member for York South is quite right. At the moment I am the power that is in this Chair and I must be guided properly and I think it should be properly understood whether or not we proceed with the supplementary estimates tonight.

Mr. MacDonald: Sufficient unto the day is the agenda thereof?

Mr. Chairman: Do I have the concurrence of the committee that we allot the remaining time between now and 6.00 and this evening to The Department of Health? Agreed?

Agreed.

Mr. Stokes: There is only one further comment that I would like to make with regard to the statement made by the Minister of Health. Can I take from what the Minister has said that there will be no curtailment of existing services as a result of forced retirement by the two gentlemen we have just spoken of so highly? It is my understanding that your department has suggested they should be retired. I understand they are about 62 years of age. I do not think that in this case age has anything to do with it. I defy any member in this House to follow those two dentists around and work in such a dedicated manner as they have been and are doing at the present time, I think it would be an awful travesty if, by some regulation within the department, they should be forced to take a retirement much before they should be retired. And I would just like the assurance of the Minister that this will not be the case unless you have some young doctor who is going to be denied the right to practice if you did not do so.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Oh, I would be happy to assure the member that we would not retire someone and cancel the service. We would only impose the retirement if there was someone to take over. I think that the gentleman in question is a little older than 62.

Mr. Stokes: Well, this is Dr. Toll I am speaking of. You indicated you did not know him. I know him quite well. You see a picture of him there.

Hon. Mr. Wells: That is right. I just looked at it. He is a little older than 62, is he not?

Mr. Stokes: No, he is not.

Hon. Mr. Wells: He is not? Oh.

Mr. D. A. Paterson (Essex South): Mr. Chairman, on that same point: the Minister's programme giving financial assistance to those doctors or medical practitioners who will serve in remote areas of the province. The member for Thunder Bay has dealt with it quite well for the far north, but I would like to put a small plea in for the very far south of Ontario, that is, Pelee Island, the remote community out in Lake Erie.

As of about the tenth of this month they will be severed from the mainland, except through air service, which means, in many cases, a cost of $100 for people to fly over, visit a personal or family doctor in Leamington, return to Windsor, stay overnight and go back to their island. This is something that they cannot bear and there was a delegation down here last week to meet one of your senior officials, requesting financial assistance.

As probably the Minister is aware, the island does have a residence, a clinic, and has appropriated funds for years to subsidize a doctor on that island. Now, I would just ask, at this time, if you would review a letter which should be on your desk, or will be in a day or so, putting in a special request on behalf of the residents of this island for some financial assistance in this regard.

I might ask further: Is there a list of communities in southern Ontario where financial assistance is now being given? If so, I would very much appreciate receiving this. Further, can the Minister's department give me any assistance in making available certain medicines in the local grocery store on Pelee Island? I received a phone call after the House sat this afternoon that certain medicines that I would term "patent medicines" are not allowed to be sold in the grocery store so I would appreciate assistance here.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I thank the hon. member, Mr. Chairman. I realize that he had been asking about Pelee Island just a little before, and we will look into that and see what we can do. I have the list here. For instance, the one I notice is a place called Harrow, in Essex county. It is a designated area. The others, in western Ontario, seem to all be in Wellington county, Perth county, and one in Lambton.

Mr. Paterson: May I ask what subsidy Harrow receives? I know they have two resident doctors there.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I do not have that here.

Mr. Paterson: Perhaps the Minister could arrange to send me a note on that.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I think the best thing would be if any hon. member who has any concern about this programme, perhaps, would like to come over and talk to the people in our department who are looking after the programme of designation and getting the requests from the committees and deciding whether they are or are not eligible for doctors under this programme. Dr. Copeman looks after the medical—the doctor situation—and Dr. Feasby looks after the dental designation and placement. They tell me that Dr. Toll is 71.

Mr. Stokes: You would never know to look at him.

Vote 802 agreed to.

On vote 803.

Mr. Trotter: Mr. Chairman, on this vote 803, mental health, I just regret that the time is going to be so short on this particular subject. It not only involves a lot of money—$137 million—but it involves one of the most important, not only health issues, but social issues that faces the government of the province of Ontario and of this country. Some efforts have been made over the past years in the treatment of the mentally ill, but the general situation of the treatment of the mentally ill is a scandal in this province.

I know we have a new Minister, he is going to come along and say: "Well, I have only been at this portfolio for two months." I want to remind the Minister that the government has been in power since 1943 and despite the tremendous amount of knowledge that has been made available to governments and to the people in general, we have done frightfully little in trying to help the people that are in our mental institutions.

There is no question in my mind that the programme of having psychiatric wings in the general hospitals was a good idea, but what has happened is, that in large part, they have completely ignored these huge, ancient bastilles that we call the provincial hospitals where people are piled in like sardines. I give all due credit for most of the superintendents of our Ontario Hospitals. I have said on many occasions that I think they are good men. I am amazed how some of the better men have managed to stay on and put up with the lack of public interest and the lack of leadership shown by the government of the province of Ontario.

We have been told in the opening remarks, Mr. Chairman, of the Minister of Health, that 999 Queen Street is going to be rebuilt. I would ask him, and I do not intend to be on my feet very long Mr. Chairman, to give us some idea of what they intend to do at 999 Queen. We have been promised, year in and year out, that 999 Queen Street would be rebuilt.

It would no longer just be a mental hospital, but it would be a mental health centre. Certainly all of us, on this side of the House, would agree that it should be a mental health centre. There should be expanded out-patient services because it is in a central area of the city of Toronto where it has a tremendous number of demands made upon it.

But, I would hope that the Minister is going to tell us that they are going to tear down the ancient part of that building. After all, the main part of 999 Queen Street was built in 1847, Mr. Chairman, 1847. And despite all the things we have been able to build in this province during the intervening years, that old, stinking building is still standing.

The Minister of Trade and Development (Mr. Randall) can find a few million to put up a new building in the waterfront of the CNE. Well, we are glad to see it go up, but how can you continue to ignore, year in and year out, 999 Queen Street.

So, I would ask the Minister—and I have three other questions—are they actually going to put up that new mental health centre and when? I hope it is in a period of 12 months, not stretched over the next 12 years. The promises that it has been going to go up have been stretched almost over a period of 12 years. The two other questions regard the situation for the treatment of retarded children.

Despite the efforts of Dr. Zarfes, who I give all due credit as being a very able man, there is no question in my mind that this government has not been providing the proper facilities for retarded children or retarded adults in the province of Ontario. People are still crammed in at the Orillia Hospital. I dare say the waiting list is still two or three years. I would like to know from the Minister how long do parents who have a retarded child that should be put in an institution, have to wait?

I know, Mr. Chairman, the former Minister of Health used to like to say: "We are encouraging people to keep the children at home." This is a good thing, if it can be done but the Minister must know, as most of us in this House should know, that there are many children that are simply going to have to be institutionalized and it is a shocking situation that there is the waiting list that there is now.

And the third question is, Mr. Chairman: Have any changes taken place at the hospital for retarded adults at Aurora? People are packed in there in a shocking manner. I know, I went there about three years ago and found in one of the wards the beds were placed so closely together that they were as far as the width of my hand—and I have a relatively small hand.

Each year I ask if any change has been made in that building at Aurora or in the number of patients allowed in. And as far as I know, it is still the same stinking situation, and I would like to know if the Minister has done anything to clean that up. This is why I ask these things about 999 Queen Street, about the waiting list of retarded children in the province of Ontario to get into the hospital system and what is the situation for the retarded adults at Aurora?

Mr. Deans: Mr. Chairman, I want to talk to the Minister for a couple of minutes about the programme in the psychiatric hospitals, where at the present moment you are going through all of the patients and moving out into society the ones that you feel are capable of coping for themselves.

In the Hamilton area, we are moving out a good number of people and what is happening to them, as far as I can ascertain, is that they are coming from the environment of a psychiatric hospital, an environment where they had been protected and where they have been for a number of years, and from what I can see, being released into a society for which they are not ready and that is not ready for them.

They are becoming worries of the welfare department instead of becoming productive or having some employment opportunity available to them before they are moved out, or some method by which they might take care of themselves. They are being moved out of the protection of the Ontario Hospital and just into the welfare section of society, into small rooms in the downtown core, where they are really not any better off, in fact in many instances, much worse off than they were before.

At the present moment there is one case in Hamilton that concerns me and this is why I raised it.

There is a lady in the Hamilton psychiatric hospital who has been in and out of her own volition, a great many times. She wanders out any time she feels like it, and she is a burden to society, in this way, that she is a danger, not potentially to other people, but to herself. And that is quite often. No longer is that the case, she just wanders away, she tends to pick things up in stores and then she is brought back to the hospital.

The police in the area have become fed up with having to pick her up. And a week ago, I was contacted by her family who informed me that she was, once again, out of the hospital wandering the back roads of the township. That evening she was found by the police, lying in the driveway of the municipal building. It was a freezing cold night, and she could have died had she not been noticed at that time. What concerns me is that the very next day she was slated to be released from the hospital, the very next day, and when I spoke to the hospital about it,

I was informed that she was, even at that point, going to be released from the hospital.

At that particular moment she was in the general hospital, by that time, because she was suffering from the effects of the cold, plus some injuries she had suffered when she fell. It seems to me that there is something wrong with this programme. I cannot pin it down, I do not know what it is, but there is something drastically wrong with the programme.

Is a person who obviously cannot cope for themselves going to be trusted out into society? Her family did not want her, so she was obviously going to end fighting for herself. And I am very concerned about her. I think that we have got to take another serious look at whether or not this programme has been properly administrated.

I do not know if the Minister is familiar with what is going on or not—I suspect that perhaps not, since he has not been long in the portfolio—but I am really astounded, that even after having shown that this person was incapable of taking care of herself, after having shown that the family did not want her, after having shown that the police had become reluctant, the hospital even refused to take her back in at one point, when she wandered away. Having shown that she had certain tendencies to pick things up that did not belong to her, and having shown that she was unable to understand the difference between right and wrong, she, as I say, had injured herself in the process of wandering around the back streets. The very best that can possibly happen to this person is that she is going to be released, which she inevitably will be and she is going to end up in jail.

And this is just of no benefit at all. And I want the Minister to tell me, what is going on in the psychiatric hospitals that people can be put out on the street who are unable to take care of themselves?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, of course, that is probably one of the most difficult types of problems to deal with and a little hard to generalize when you do not know the specific case, but I have had people phone me at 3.00 o'clock in the morning and speak to me.

A woman phoned me and said her daughter had been discharged from the hospital and would we take her back in. And I said, "Why will you not take her in?" She answered, "I do not want her here." In other words, the hospital has said that medically she does not have to be there, that she is ready for discharge, but the family does not want her, and this puts a different light on the whole situation.

Mr. Deans: The Minister would agree, though, that this is an important part of any release.

Hon. Mr. Wells: That is right. And this is why it is very difficult. What I am really trying to say is it is hard to generalize on each of the specific incidents which the member and I have indicated, but I do know that our programme is geared primarily to try and keep people in the community environment.

In other words, even the form that is filled out by the doctor to admit them to the hospital, asks them if they have tried every other method of treatment or facility that is available in the community.

I talked the other day about the Scarborough programme, and this, of course, is why our community health facilities are good, as the hon. member for Parkdale pointed out, because we have a community mental health programme in Scarborough which is a demonstration pilot project, but it involves the whole community. You know when a person comes into the hospital, the community resource in the Scarborough General and the Scarborough Centenary, when they do go out they will not be left to fend for themselves because it is community based, all the services of the community will then take part, they will know this person is going out. This is the kind of thing we have to work towards.

Mr. Deans: May I ask the Minister a question?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Yes.

Mr. Deans: At the present moment when they are moved out, even though they become part of the sort of social obligation of the community programme, whatever that may be—in Hamilton I do not think that exists, but that is beside the point—why can you not take these people whom the families do not want and start them into society from the hospital? I know this has been done, where you take the people and get employment for them, you get them into a regular work pattern before you finally let them go.

Hon. Mr. Wells: This is part of what I am saying, it is part of this demonstration we have. For instance, one idea is to have a halfway house. I think that is what we have in Scarborough, where they can move out of the hospital into this halfway house where there are concerned people or social workers and people who work with them, to try and develop these contacts for them so they will eventually be able to move out.

After all, our object now is not to keep them in the hospital permanently, we want to try and make the mental hospitals, as much as possible, a resource that is used for active treatment of mental disease, and then move back out into the community to get rid of this idea of these institutions as places where people are put forever and locked up. But I just want to assure the member it is a problem we are well aware of and we are trying to come to grips with.

Because the time is limited I would just like to tell the member for Parkdale that I personally looked over the plans for the new Queen Street mental health centre and it will be a community mental health centre. It impressed me very much and it will probably be one of the finest institutions or projects of its type in North America.

It will consist of small treatment buildings, active treatment buildings, about 152 patients in each; it will have a large central complex which will be a community mental health clinic, community involvement centre where the community will come in and it will have day patient facilities, it will completely throw out the old idea of an institution where people come in and you lock them up.

Mr. Trotter: When?

Hon. Mr. Wells: The tenders are to be let next summer. The plans are all—

Mr. Trotter: Next summer?

Hon. Mr. Wells: It is a scheduled programme that involves ripping down some of those old wings that jut out. They can build the first stage without ripping anything down. When those are finished they rip down some of the wings, they build some more, and then they rip the rest down and build. It is scheduled over about 30 to 36 months.

Vote 803 agreed to.

It being 6.00 o'clock, p.m., the House took recess.

ESTIMATES, THE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH (continued)

Mr. Chairman: Votes 804, 805, 806, 807, I understand, are to be considered together for the rest of the evening.

Hon. T. L. Wells (Minister of Health): If I might make one comment on that, Mr. Chairman, the only thing is that with the OHSC vote for specifics on certain details, certain of the people from OHSC will not be out here. So perhaps the specific questions that I would not be expected to know the answers to can be left until the end.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): I am sure we will be glad to let them bring up the reserves when they are required.

On votes 804 to 807, inclusive:

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, the attractive part in discussing the votes together is that a good many people, including supporters of the Minister, feel that our two important insurance programmes should be dealt with by the Minister as a unit, and that in fact we should have health insurance, which includes the medical insurance for doctors as well as hospitalization.

This has been said on previous occasions. I well recall the Minister's predecessor saying that he was moving in that direction. The understanding when the Health Insurance Registration Board was first appointed was that this was a body which was going to coordinate the efforts of OHSIP and hospitalization, so that employers and individuals with the responsibility to send forward premium payments would not necessarily have to do so for two separate programmes, but could deal with the government through one particular board.

That board in turn would have the overall responsibility for governing the two kinds of insurance and, more important, putting on an efficient basis the billing of those citizens of the province—now close to 97 or 98 per cent—who take advantage of the services rendered. But unfortunately this is still not the case. We still pay four times a year to the Hospital Services Commission, our $33 quarterly payment. This is paid to the Health Insurance Registration Board. The premium for OHSIP, or the health insurance, is payable to the Treasurer of Ontario in the amount of $177 per family per year.

The Minister is aware of the general deep dissatisfaction with the administration of the programme. It is not necessary for me to recall the government's change in policy which resulted in the acceptance of the federal Medicare programme in June of this year, and the debates in this House which saw the implementation of the programme, and the problem that the Minister's predecessor experienced in getting the administration into gear for the beginning of OHSIP on a formal basis on October 1.

It will be interesting to find out later in the discussion on these estimates just what the programme amounted to in the listing of new individuals and families to be insured as we got close to our deadline date; how many, in fact, got their coverage after they had been informed by the Minister this would be permissible on a date later than the October 1 deadline.

The problems revolve around three areas. The first is the high premiums that are charged in the province.

The Minister knows that at the time that the bill was before the Legislature in June, the premiums were not set, but certainly we were made abundantly aware of the fact that they would be high; that they would be as high as they were for OMSIP with the same assistance to those individuals who do not pay and did not pay income tax, or had a taxable income at a level that under the government programme for OMSIP entitled them to assistance from the Treasury.

In addition to that is the $132 payable for hospitalization. So we find ourselves in Ontario definitely in a high cost province as far as individual payments for health insurance is concerned.

As far as the basis of the federal Medicare programme, we on this side supported it in June and we support it now in that it approaches universality. The Minister's figures indicate that we are now above 97 per cent coverage.

It is government-operated to some extent, and the reason we were able to accept the extent to which private enterprise and private insurance businesses were left in this industry in the spring, was because we felt that the government was not in a position to extend what was formerly OMSIP coverage with two million people covered, to OHSIP with seven million people covered, in the four months that they had to expand the administration.

I now find that this excuse, if in fact it is an excuse, is echoed by the Premier (Mr. Robarts) in a letter that he wrote to the readers of the Conservative organ called Consensus in which he said that the private insurance carriers were being kept on on a limited time basis simply because it was not possible for the OMSIP coverage and the facilities—the administrative facilities—to be expanded rapidly enough to make it completely government-operated.

This is a matter that I believe the Minister should comment on, if, in fact, the private carriers are there on a limited time basis only. This is certainly the basis upon which we supported the bill in January, and in an amendment during the committee stage, the Minister will recall that we tried to place a one-year time limit on the participation of private insurance carriers for those very reasons.

But it is a government-operated programme. Its costs are unnecessarily high. Particularly, the costs of administration, I believe, are more than should be supported by the taxpayers and premium payers of this province.

In my view, since it is fully government-operated, or at least that is the goal, and that we are approaching universality in coverage, we should move away from the direct payment of premiums. What we, as Liberals, are putting forward, is by no means anything that can be called free Medicare.

The figures available for the cost of Medicare vary from the Minister's original prediction of about $408 million to the Premier's comment in the letter in Consensus which said it will actually be $508 million. That, I understand includes the cost for medical facilities, doctor training and medical research in this province.

So, while the one is a minimal figure, the Premier's $508 million is medical care in the general sense, covering many other projects that the government has and did have before medical insurance began.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Nixon: I am sorry I have not been able to fascinate the front bench of the Cabinet there, but that is quite all right. From time to time when I pause I can hear their conversation, probably better than they can hear mine.

Hon. S. J. Randall (Minister of Trade and Development): You are not making much contribution.

Mr. Nixon: So, Mr. Chairman, I feel that the cost of the administration must be and certainly can be, reduced to a considerable degree if the approach to the payment of premium is transferred from direct personal payments at the very high level that they presently are to a system that we, as Liberals, have put forward and was described to the House in the introductory remarks by my hon. friend from Bracondale.

Mr. MacDonald: Humber (Mr. Ben)

Mr. Nixon: Humber, I am sorry. We believe that the payment for medical insurance costs can be met very progressively and fairly by the use of the personal income tax base and we are proposing an increase of one per cent across the board which, if it were to be translated into percentage points, would be less than five percentage points on the agreement for tax collection that we have with the government of Canada.

Now this, admittedly, would be across the board, but it would be progressive in that those people who have little or no taxable income would have the same assistance on a graduated scale as they have presently. And those people with a high income—taxable income—would pay proportionately more for the same service. But it has certainly been a tradition in this province that employers pay a share of the cost of medical insurance. Quite often this was arrived at after lengthy bargaining over a number of years and sometimes arrived at rather easily as it became the pattern for employers, industrial and otherwise, to pay at least a part of the cost of medical insurance, so that this would be continued in a thorough and progressive programme of meeting premium costs without direct payment from individuals.

We have proposed a .8 per cent tax on payroll of the province. Now, the payroll amounts to $17.5 billion and a .8 per cent tax, which would be deducted by the employers, would net about $140 million, and under our programme this would amount to about 35 per cent of the overall costs.

This is actually a fairly neat solution in that it would be possible to deduct these payments based on the same sort of bookkeeping required by employers at the present time to keep a running account of the monthly employee wages and services in lieu of wages. This also would be deductible as a cost of doing business, which means that it would not be as an ordinary part of the corporation income tax but, in fact, it would be a new tax for this purpose.

Of course, the third source of income is that which we already have which comes to us from the government of Canada and once again there is some confusion as to the actual amount that would be payable to Ontario during the first year.

The figure that is normally used and has been used by the Minister of Health is $168 million. I noticed the Premier in his letter in Consensus refers to the figure of 168. I guess you use 178 million? Yes, and the Premier used 168 million, so this is a little slippage of $10 million that perhaps should be accounted for before the evening is up.

By putting together these three sources based on taxation of different forms, we would find that the individual through his own taxation in the province would be paying 26 per cent; about a 33 per cent would be made by industry and just over 40 per cent would be met by the government of Canada, which of course is another tax source. We feel that this would be a fair distribution of the costs and it would have this advantage:

As the costs of medical insurance rise, and I believe they must, it would be possible for the cost to be met without any great changes in the premium structure, since it would be assumed that the same things that require the medical insurance cost to rise would be reflected in the incomes and the payrolls of the province.

So I think that this in fact is what the government must be heading for. At the present time we have more than 3 million individual billings and surely this is an inefficient way to pay for a programme which is, and should be, government-operated; which is almost universal and must be made universal so that all citizens of the province have the advantages of medical insurance and must share the responsibilities for its costs.

So, I would say to you, Mr. Chairman, that there should be a movement on the part of this government toward the reduction of premiums, which is surely something that we can expect in the next Budget, but that the goal of these reductions should be a transference away from individual payment of premium on a basis of direct billing to a responsibility that is based on the income tax itself.

The Minister of Revenue (Mr. White) is much enamoured of the system of tax credits, which, particularly if we have a more modern agreement with Ottawa in the collection of our provincial tax, would lend itself to the payment of these taxes on a progressive, fair and equitable basis, and one that we on this side of the House, certainly in the Liberal Party, put forward as the only alternative and the best alternative at least to what the government has proposed and what they have, in fact, put into the administration of OHSIP in Ontario.

Now, the efficiency of the programme certainly would be improved on this basis. How the government, with its productivity improvement programmes and the kind of research that is associated with the efficient use of taxpayers' dollars for administration, can continue with the separate billings for hospitalization and medical insurance is incredible.

Surely, to begin with, the government can move toward an amalgamation of these two insurance services and it is something that must come about in a much more efficient way than ever has been put forward by anyone on the government benches or in support of the government.

I have proposed on more than one occasion that the membership card that is available to all of us—and I hope the Minister finally receives his; I received mine—which is what we present to the doctors which allow them to treat us and then bill the plan for payment, could be established on a better basis. I have suggested that it be in the form of a plastic card, very similar to those which many of us use for gasoline credit and so on, which the nurse in the doctor's office or the admission official in the hospital could make use of very readily. It would not be necessary to write very much information down. We would be sure that the correct numbers and the information would be available and I am thinking of prompt payments to the hospitals and the doctors, which is certainly not the rule at the present time.

I think, probably, I have had as many complaints from doctors as I have from citizens about the slowness of the payments, and perhaps the doctors are trying to point out to me, their member, that the plan is perhaps less efficient than all of us would hope. If that is their purpose they have done it very effectively. As a matter of fact, I had a letter from one very highly trained doctor—he happened to be a psychiatrist—who indicated that in order to keep his office open he has had to borrow funds while waiting for the payment to come through from OHSIP. Now, I suppose this will be cleared up and once these channels get opened up the flood of payments will be something to behold.

Mr. MacDonald: Once the computer gets unclogged.

Mr. Nixon: That brings me to something further, and that is the amount of the billing. Now, our law in this province pays the doctors 90 per cent of the approved medical association fee schedule, and more and more there is evidence that many of the doctors are billing directly for the additional ten per cent.

Mr. Chairman, I can tell you very frankly that I am disappointed that this has come about. If the Minister thinks that anybody on this side is pleased that this is one of the most bothersome problems he is faced with, then he is incorrect. Frankly, I have always thought that the extra convenience associated with billing one source OHSIP, or at the most, two—that is the patient and OHSIP—would be well worth the acceptance of a 90 per cent fee in place of the full schedule. Unfortunately it appears that the medical profession is moving more and more towards the extra billing of this ten per cent.

I believe all the anaesthetists, as one profession, have decided that they will bill for the extra ten per cent. According to facts and figures that have been made available in the press, and to some extent by the Minister, it appears that more and more general practitioners, and others, are presenting the patient with a bill for this additional ten per cent.

Some of them, of course, bill more than that, because they feel that their services are worth more than the basic fee schedule of the OMA. But we are talking about the ten per cent inconvenience that more and more citizens have to put up with. Since an office call is $5.50 normally, I hear of more and more cases, by letter and telephone, where citizens say the first thing the doctor wants is the 55 cents payment.

This is surely just an inconvenience as far as everyone is concerned. It simply points up, on the part of the doctor, that this is what "socialized" medicine is—that maybe the citizen should be aware of it.

Perhaps this is just a problem associated with the early months of Medicare, but I, for one, am afraid that this problem is going to grow and that the citizens, who are already paying through federal taxation, through provincial taxation, and very high premiums, are going to have to open up their pocket books for additional payments every time they want professional services.

I think this is a bad thing. I hope the Minister is seriously considering amending the bill so that we will pay 100 per cent of the costs. The other side of that balance would be the agreement that the doctors would enter into with the government that they must justify any changes in the schedule before the standing committee on health, or some other appropriate body. And that the administration would put forward, as a basic policy position with regard to this, that they are not prepared to accept changes in the schedule except those that are recommended after consultation with the standing committee, or whatever other body is so designated.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): Doctors have offered to freeze their fees until 1972 if they will do that.

Mr. Nixon: Well, the doctors themselves, of course, I believe, have been afraid for years that, with the advent of Medicare, as they understand it, they will simply become employees of the state.

They point with quivering fingers to the example in the United Kingdom, where doctors are simply employees of the state. They are assigned a panel of patients and they must give them standard treatment. There is considerable complaint about the way that is worked out.

I do not believe that is liable to become a part of the tradition in this province—that the doctors can work as hard or as little as they choose, that they are not going to be assigned a definite panel of individuals that they must care for and that this aspect of the doctor-patient relationship would be maintained.

It is interesting, Mr. Chairman, that the emphasis on the doctor-patient relationship has changed quite dramatically. Doctors find, for their own peace of mind, and the efficiency of the practice that they are engaging in, that it is better if they band together in groups, in clinics. So that an individual going in there to be treated by a doctor will take the doctor who is on duty, rather than the one whose bedside manner he finds most attractive. So the doctors are not playing up this doctor-patient relationship to quite the same extent as they were, because it has obviously become something that is very difficult for both the doctors and the patients to maintain.

But the real fear, of course, is that once the doctors get into a position where some government body, or some body appointed by government, has the last say in what their fees shall be, that they will have lost the old free enterprise prerogatives of setting their fees as they choose and the responsibility of the profession would be weakened.

I, for one, feel this has to come about. I believe if we are prepared to meet 100 per cent of the schedule, then the medical profession should be prepared, on their part, to enter into meaningful negotiations with some emanation of government. I have always said this should be the standing committee on health, which is going to be upgraded and I believe has been upgraded in recent months.

The doctors are very sensitive, of course, about their income. I made the gross error, apparently, of dividing the amount of money available for the doctors by the number of doctors who would have access to it in this province, using the figures that the Minister gave us. He said there would be $428 million available to the doctors in the first fiscal year of full operation and that the number of doctors sharing in this fund would be between 8,000 and 9,000, about 8,600, I believe. At a flat average, each doctor would receive $48,000.

I must admit I have had a couple of letters from doctors saying "You're crazy if you think we make $48,000", to which I replied that the people who are commenting on salary increases do not often talk about the expenses of members of the Legislature. They say we are jumping from $12,000 to $18,000. I suppose it works both ways because we are quick to justify changes in our indemnity, perhaps, by talking about all the hours we work and our heavy expenses.

The doctors are in the same boat. But when we talk about the funds available on a flat average, each doctor has available to him, $48,000. Undoubtedly, they have large expenses. Undoubtedly some doctors will make at a gross level much less than this and by the same reasoning some doctors will make much more. But the fund available for the payment of doctors is well in excess of $400 million. Certainly the costs of administration are computed and always referred to separately and in excess of that fund.

I think we should know what we are doing when we place such a fund at the availability of the people, those insured in this province, for the payment of their medical costs. I do not believe there would be undue regimentation of the medical profession; we do rely on their professional approach to the provision of these services. I believe that the government is lax in not moving in a more definite way to cope with the problem of over-billing and in view of the fact that there is no public review, or certainly any public control, of the funds that must be made available to doctors.

I think we can surely satisfy the doctors that we are not going to take over their profession and dictate the method of their practice. We are prepared to accept changes in the fee schedule from time to time as it can be justified, and as these various requirements of the medical profession change.

But I, for one, cannot support a bill any longer which simply leaves it to the doctors to set their schedule and leaves the responsibility to the members of this House to provide funds that will pay 90 per cent of it. It does not seem to be working. I hope the Minister is prepared to take the steps necessary to improve that particular unfortunate situation.

The various other costs associated with the programme have been referred to on many occasions. The Minister gets very sensitive when we talk about the costs that we may be paying to the private insurance companies being in excess of 10 per cent, perhaps 12 per cent. The point is that we, as private members of the House, are not aware of any specific guidelines that the Minister has issued to the private insurance companies. While they are subject to audit, still the requirement of that audit simply is that we, as the Legislature voting funds in support of this programme, provide funds to pay the cost of their services and there is no limit on those costs. We do know that a well-run public insurance agency, that is a government agency, can reduce the cost below six per cent. For these reasons we on this side certainly do believe that the overall costs for the administration of OHSIP should be, in the first year, substantially below six per cent.

Anything other than that would certainly be construed a wastage of the premium payers' and the taxpayers' funds.

Mr. Chairman, there are a number of complaints across the province with the way this government has introduced the administration of medical insurance in Ontario. The citizens feel that they are paying too much for the service; too much out of their own pockets. The citizens feel the government and particularly the Minister of Health has not taken a strong enough stand to see that these payments are made from the insurance fund and need not be added to out of the pocket of the patient or the doctor. We know that the doctors, to some extent, are dissatisfied but frankly I do not know what can be done about that. It will probably take two or three years before it is generally as well accepted as hospitalization has been for a great number of years.

To reflect the disapproval that we on this side feel with government policy—and we reflect the complaints that have come to us from the community of Ontario at large—we believe that this House should be divided on this vote, or at least all members have an opportunity to show by their vote that there is widespread disapproval in the functioning of the OHSIP administration, and the general level of efficiency or lack of efficiency.

Now I have wracked my brain to find out how this might be done in a more meaningful way than is usually available to us on the provision of money as we are asked to do in vote 804; and we come down to the old stand-by that there is only one person who is in fact responsible for the administration of the programme.

If we have serious complaint about the administration, the Minister is the person to whom we must complain and around whom we must focus this complaint. I would say that there have been a number of areas where the Minister and his predecessor have come under some severe criticism for lack of progressive policy. But it is in this part of the vote that we feel the Minister most severely shows the lack of progressive policy, the lack of a programme which would gain general acceptance of the people of this province. And for this reason, Mr. Chairman, that we feel we can give point to this, and we can give an opportunity to every member in the House to show their support for the disapproval that I have voiced here tonight, with the basis of the programme and with the way that the Minister has brought it forward and is administering it, by moving that vote 804 be reduced by a sum of $12,000. If this were going to be done a little later in the week we would have to amend that sum as well, but, Mr. Chairman, I move that vote 804 be reduced by a sum of $12,000 that is associated with the Minister's salary, and nothing else, as a token of our disapproval of the way he has maladministered this particular programme and his reluctance to improve it, when in fact he has had ample opportunity so to do.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Order please.

An hon. member: You never had it so good, when—

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Nixon has moved that vote 804 be reduced by the amount of $12,000.

The member for York-South.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Chairman, before I commence my remarks perhaps you will permit me to draw the attention of the House to the fact that we have a number of guests this evening in the east gallery. They are all members of the steelworkers area council in Hamilton. They have had two schools in which they have been studying some of the basic elements of politics, and the icing on the cake of their efforts is to come down to the Legislature tonight. I trust that they find that this icing is sweet and not sour.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: What was that the Minister wanted to say?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Do you favour Canadian unions?

Mr. MacDonald: No, they do not need to be persuaded on that point.

Hon. Mr. Randall: There is a little problem then!

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Chairman, let me at the very outset make a comment on the amendment that is before the House.

We shall support it, but we have expressed our unhappiness with regard to this clumsy kind of vehicle to express our opposition to the maladministration of a department. In spite of the fact that all previous votes, we thought, were seriously representative of maladministration, none of them can really match this one; so we will support it.

But I must add, Mr. Chairman, we do not feel impelled to get a vote of non-confidence on the floor on the issue of OHSIP because, may I remind you, when OHSIP was before the House we voted against it then. We did not need the experience of six months to discover that this was a bureaucratic monstrosity that was going to be difficult to administer, and indeed inequitable as far as the people of the province of Ontario were concerned.

At that time there was great derision from both the government and the Liberal benches; but what was at that time regarded as an affront became a badge of honour during the Middlesex South by-election—that fact that we were the only party that saw the issue clear enough to oppose OHSIP when it was first brought into this House.

Mr. J. A. Belanger (Prescott and Russell): Politicking!

Mr. MacDonald: Somebody over here accuses me of politicking. I wonder what game of tiddley-winks he is engaged in.

Now Mr. Chairman, I too am glad that we are dealing with these three votes together—OHSIP, HIRB, and the Ontario Hospital Services Commission—because I want to make my initial remarks in terms of the desperate need in this province, in this country, to get total health services. We have been talking about this for years, we are still miles away from achieving it, and perhaps I can best set the context for my remarks by quoting from that most thorough study that was done of health services in this country, the Hall Royal Commission. On page 18, the following brief paragraph:

We have given careful consideration to the question of health services costs and, as we see it, the problem facing the Canadian people is not solely the financing of physicians' services but the full range of essential services — mental, medical, dental, hospital, pharmaceutical, nursing, prosthetic, home care and optical. On the basis of evidence before us, we believe that government action is imperative and that the nation's resources should be mustered to establish universal comprehensive health services programmes in the ten provinces, the Yukon and the Northwest Territories.

In the province of Ontario, our health services in that context are grossly inadequate.

We provide no coverage for such major needs as drugs and dental care. In addition, there are many paramedical services, such as chiropractic, which are not covered; they remain outside the government scheme.

We do not include nurses, physiotherapists, nursing homes. Vital appliances are not ensured.

In short, in view of the recommendation of the Royal Commission, what we have in the province of Ontario might accurately be described as nothing more than rudimentary—only the beginning—not even the three or four major cornerstones for health services. We have only two of those four cornerstones and such major health needs as drugs and dental coverage, for example, simply are not in the picture at this stage.

There is a second point that I think should be made. Even on the coverage that we have, there is a bureaucratic monstrosity in the administration of OHSIP. There is not an equitable raising of the moneys for the financing of it.

There are serious gaps, such as, for example, nursing homes so that people find that they are discharged from hospitals, they have not the facilities at home to provide the necessary services, and we have not some intermediate levels of care that are available for them.

In short, we have a double-barrelled objective. We have to bring up to date and fill the gaps in the existing coverage, and we have to move immediately towards an extension of that coverage—move in the direction of the kind of total health services that the people of the province of Ontario are entitled to. We do not have that with the programme that this government has presented to us.

We have, in hospital insurance, for example, a programme for which a year or so ago the premiums were increased to $132 a year for a family—costs that are far beyond the means of many people, particularly older people and people who are on a limited income. In spite of the fact that the government had recognized the need for subsidizing premiums at the lower end of the income brackets for OMSIP, and now OHSIP, they have never seen fit to extend that kind of subsidy to hospitalization, though heaven knows, if a person has not got the coverage the need is even greater on the hospitalization side.

If you go to a doctor your bill may be $10 or $15. If you are one day without coverage in a hospital, your bill can be $50, $60 or $70. So the refusal to move in terms of providing an equitable kind of coverage, equitable in terms of its financing, by this government has just been shameful.

Second, as far as OHSIP is concerned, we have talked a great deal about this, and I am not going to spend much more time on it. The leader of the Opposition has put some of the major criticisms of the OHSIP programme on the record again here tonight. The people of this province are in protest across party lines—Tories and Liberals, as well as New Democrats—on this issue to a greater extent than they have been on any other single issue for quite some time. There is no doubt about it, where the people have had an opportunity to raise their voice, they have upset the political applecart in the province of Ontario as we saw in the instance of Middlesex South.

It is not simply that we New Democrats are making this kind of protest. I repeat, without going into great length, that I found it very significant that when a group of all representatives of all parties met in the standing committee of health in this Legislature and began to reflect this sense of protest across the province of Ontario, the report of that standing committee pointed to the gross inadequacies of our health services in the province of Ontario.

That one paragraph I put on the record last week, I think deserves to be put on again:

It is the conclusion of this committee that there is an urgent need for a review and revision of the health care of our province. It is our opinion that only a total health care programme will sufficiently satisfy our needs. We appreciate the tremendous cost of such a plan and at the same time we recognize the need with the realization that it can only be instituted in a gradual manner. We feel that the most important need is in the field of—

And then they go on to list nursing homes, and drugs, and a few of the items which this committee—unanimously representative of all parties—felt that the government should be moving towards immediately.

We in the New Democratic Party agree. Because of that, last week we presented what we describe as a "health package" which, on the one hand, is going to introduce equity into the financing of what we now have. It will also eliminate some of the most offensive administrative features; for example, by getting private insurance companies out of the field altogether, so that you do not have this kind of bureaucratic monstrosity—the problem of doctors today, with OHSIP in operation for two months, suddenly discovering that they are going to have to make claims to no fewer than 33 agencies in the province of Ontario. This is a point that is driving home what a bureaucratic monstrosity we have. When you combine that with premiums of $309 a year for a family for both medical and hospital coverage, obviously this is not the kind of plan that should be tolerated any longer.

So we came in with a health package. On the one hand we feel that we should move immediately to combining OHSIP and OHSC now that we have these two kinds of insurance. There is no point in having a duplication of administration. We should reduce our administrative costs as much as possible.

We think that the subsidization available for OHSIP should be extended for hospital coverage and we would move immediately to do so without going into great detail on this most aggravating feature of the coverage of 90 per cent of cost; until we have worked out a mechanism for fee schedule changes and have the assurance that it is going to work with the medical profession, we feel that we should amend the OHSIP legislation to say that 90 per cent payment is going to represent full payment. I suggest to you, Mr. Chairman, that if the Minister thinks that this is an intolerable kind of idea, he should take a look at what was done by the Conservative government in Manitoba when they first introduced Medicare a year or so ago. Indeed, they made, not 90 per cent full payment, but 85 per cent of the scheduled fees as full payment.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: In reply to the Minister's interjection, there were a lot of other things that took them down the drain. What happened in Manitoba is precisely what is going to happen here, and I would think that you—

Hon. Mr. Wells: What happened in Saskatchewan, too?

Hon. J. R. Simonett (Minister of Public Works): What happened in B.C.?

Mr. MacDonald: Indeed, what happened in Middlesex South was a duplicate of Manitoba. The party in third place went to first place, so you have already had a preview of what is going to happen here. I find it passing strange that a man who is young and presumably has not yet got hardening of the mental arteries, would not have recognized this and done something about it. But obviously he is in here to maintain the status quo. That is the reason why he was put in this position.

Mr. C. G. Pilkey (Oshawa): After they are in Cabinet two weeks their brain calcifies.

Mr. MacDonald: As point one in our package, the premiums can be reduced and they should be reduced, from the $309 a year for an average family of four to $120 a year—a maximum of $10 a month. Second, we must move immediately in the direction of a fuller kind of health service.

Our proposal is that we should move immediately to the coverage of drugs. We had a submission before the standing committee of health this fall which gave us some indication of the costs. It is our belief that with the kind of action that governments have talked about, but not moved with any great vigour in implementing, that we can reduce the cost of drugs, and in so doing we can provide full coverage across the province of Ontario for something like $128 million a year.

Secondly, we have talked for a long time, with regard to paramedical services, particularly chiropractic services, which can be included because the cost is a marginal item. Most of the money that is spent on chiropractic services is an alternative expenditure rather than an additional or initial expenditure to the medical profession. Finally, with the voices coming with greater frequency and strength from even the back benches of the Conservative Party, claiming that nursing homes should be brought under hospitalization, we feel that we should move in that direction immediately to provide a complex of hospital services—the general hospital for active treatment, the convalescent hospital and the nursing home—so that we do not have with such frequency, patients who were in a general hospital at $50 or $60 a day when they could be in a convalescent home at half that cost; or in turn even people who are in a convalescent home who could be in a nursing home and get all the kinds of care that they need for half the cost again.

We feel that the necessary revenue can be secured by continuing the expenditures that the federal and provincial governments are now putting into health services and then raising the remainder, some $433 million, by a combination of the premium of $10 a month, or $120 for a family or $60 for an individual, supplemented by a personal income tax which is raised in accordance with ability to pay. A two per cent personal income tax and three per cent corporation tax will raise the total amount of money that is required to cover not only these existing services, but the extension of the services that I have been talking about—drugs, chiropractic services and nursing homes.

Indeed when that is done—this is a remarkable thing about it, Mr. Chairman—when you have reorganized the financing of what the government is now providing and added these three new additions to health services, you can still come out with a total expenditure on health which will be less for every family of four with incomes of less than $13,000 a year. In short, every family of four below $13,300, every individual under $6,700 a year income will be paying less than he is now paying. It is a wholly credible and sensible kind of reorganization of the financing.

So far, I have been directing most of my comments to the inadequacies of the government programme. For one moment I want to take a look at the alternative that has been presented to the House by the Liberal Party. I made some references to the earlier comments of the lead-off spokesman for the Liberal Party in these estimates last Thursday night, and there were interjections claiming that I was misrepresenting him. So that I might not be guilty of misrepresentation, let me quote from Hansard, first transcript of last Thursday night. Between the hours of 5.00 and 5.10.

Mr. G. Ben (Humber): Point of order, Mr. Chairman. The hon. member is not permitted to quote from that transcript, he is only permitted to quote from the official records which are Hansard.

Mr. MacDonald: Well that is a rather novel idea.

Mr. Ben: Well I am sorry these are the rules.

Mr. MacDonald: With respect, Mr. Chairman, there are no such rules; and I intend to quote it in spite of the obstructionist tactic. I can quite understand why the hon. member does not want this on the records, but listen to this, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: Despite objections in the House, the member should continue.

Mr. MacDonald: I quote some two or three paragraphs rather briefly, but they sum it up very neatly.

Frankly, we think the NDP proposal bites off more than Ontario can chew in one mouthful. It is a matter of practical politics rather than principles that guides us here. We certainly have no objection in principle to hospitalization being integrated with health care and it is difficult to see how anybody could have such an objection. But politics is the art of the possible, and since we believe we have to present a responsible alternative, and a credible one, we do not advocate the impossible.

The NDP knows that they would have to backtrack from their proposal somewhat or, at least stretch it out in time, but we have no such fears. We know that Ontario can afford what Liberals propose. This then is the difference between our plan and the NDP plan. The question of credibility must always be raised, and I hope that this will happen in the union halls across Ontario where the pressure for the total package is said to have risen.

In other words, he is opposed to the total package. He is blaming the union halls who are pressuring us unduly—

Mr. Ben: Just read it!

Mr. MacDonald: I continue:

Let us take this one step at a time, and let us do each step properly, fairly and equitably.

It sounds like a description of the Liberals, who started to talk about health insurance in 1919 and we have not got it yet all across Canada. "Let us take this one step at a time," they say.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Order!

Mr. MacDonald: Continuing again:

Let us do each step properly, fairly and equitably, and we will be worthy of greater respect from the people of Ontario, than those who would irresponsibly reach for the moon. Let us leave that to NASA.

The strength of the Liberal Medicare arises from it being closely tied—

I want to draw your attention to this, Mr. Chairman.

The strength of the Liberal Medicare arises from it being closely tied to a rapidly growing tax base. This means that the increasing sums needed for health costs, so graphically detailed in the report made available today, would come from the dynamic ability of the province to continue to grow. It would no longer be necessary to maintain a surplus to control premiums, as the present government is forced to do.

We could eliminate that $18 million stabilization fund and put the money to work.

Mr. Ben: The Liberal Party said what you read, and nothing else.

Mr. MacDonald: To declare that the proposal of the NDP for the inclusion of drugs, chiropractic services and nursing homes—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: —are steps that are some way on the way to the moon!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: Why have we got to wait, Mr. Chairman? It sounds like a Tory plea—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: Obviously this is getting to them.

What we have got to wait for is this Tory plea that "We must expand our wealth base before we can provide any more health services to the people of Ontario."

We say, no! We say that at the present time we can introduce savings in the current expenditures; we can, indeed, put the raising of funds for health services on an equitable basis, so that everybody who has less than $13,300 for a family, or $6,700 for an individual can get the present health package, plus the immediate inclusion of drugs, plus the immediate inclusion of chiropractic services, plus the immediate inclusion of nursing homes—and we do not have to sit and wait for the expansion of the wealth base.

That is the kind of excuse that the Liberal Party has used for 50 years—"We have to wait until we have the money to do it." We agree with the Hall Royal Commission that we can—and we should move now; that the people are willing, on an equitable basis, to provide the money to get as vital a need as health services. It can be done now; not completely, but we have passed the time when we should stand pat.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: Of course, it is not complete. In our health package we have included drugs and chiropractic and nursing homes—which the Liberals have not included—and we have indicated how it can be paid for. We have not indicated the inclusion of dental services as yet. There are other major items which we will include, in the fullness of time. But I will tell you how full health services can be achieved.

Hon. Mr. Randall: You do not have the money.

Mr. MacDonald: I will tell you how it can be done, Mr. Chairman. Instead of sitting and waiting—which is the rationalization of the old parties, Liberal and Tory—until the tax base and the wealth of the nation develops to be able to finance it, we should move towards the reorganization of the provision of health services so that there will be adequate savings to permit us to move immediately toward some of these major new services; and I will indicate how it can be done.

Mr. Nixon: You had better stick with premiums.

Mr. MacDonald: Oh no!

For example, in the Saskatoon clinic—we will give you a copy of our proposal and what it is going to cost. We have worked it out in detail.

Hon. Mr. Randall: Eight per cent.

Mr. MacDonald: In the Saskatoon community clinic they have moved towards the provision of group health services for the people of Saskatchewan; as indeed the people in Sault Ste. Marie have done under the direction of the steelworkers, and as the people of St. Catharines are doing under the direction of the autoworkers.

Mr. Pilkey: Great unions!

Mr. MacDonald: Great unions, leaders in this field.

While you are sitting and stalling on the implementation of greater health services, they are providing group health services which integrate the full panoply of health services. They have the rehabilitative and the preventive aspects of medicine.

Because they have all that, what happens? Let me remind the House of some of the dazzling statistics. The Saskatoon community clinic reported 655 hospital days per practitioner in 1967, compared to 1,667 days for other doctors in general practice in the city.

In short, where you have group practice, you not only have better medical services, but 655 hospital days as compared with 1,667 across the boards in individual practice.

That is not a new kind of development. The Kaiser Foundation Health Plan in the United States, covering over 200,000 people, provided high quality medical care for 20 to 30 per cent less than comparable care outside the plan, and its members have hospitalization user rates at 30 per cent below non-members.

The proof of the kind of thing that is happening in the group practice provided in the Soo and in St. Catharines today is that both of those clinics have said to this government, "If you will give us a lump sum for the number of people for whom we are providing a service, you can give us 80 per cent of the average payout for the rest of the people in the province. We will accept that lump sum and use it for rehabilitative, preventive medicine."

In short, these clinics are now offering the government an opportunity immediately insofar as the few thousands of families that are involved in those two clinics for a saving of 20 per cent. They know that this can be done.

I repeat, that is the way in which we can save money and move as quickly as possible towards those elements of a total health package which are now still outside even the package that the New Democratic Party has offered in the last week or so.

I repeat, in conclusion, Mr. Chairman, that there is no need to wait any longer. We can rationalize and bring equity into the financing of what this government is doing at the moment. We can move to the provision of drugs, of paramedical services such as chiropractic and nursing homes; and we can do it at a cost, for all families below $13,000 income, for less than they are now paying, and for individuals of below $6,700 for less than they are now paying.

Let it not be said by anybody, whether it be a Liberal or a Conservative, that this is not a credible proposal. This is a realistic proposition and a New Democratic government will move in 1971 to implement it.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Port Arthur.

Mr. R. H. Knight (Port Arthur): Mr. Chairman, I plan, of course, to vote on this motion; and I think I should place my position.

I think that both the leader of the official Opposition and the leader of the New Democratic Party have put the case very well. This government has had to face many very contentious issues in the past year, but there is not any that has bred the disfavour of the populace of this province more than the wishy-washy manner in which OHSIP has been brought into effect.

We call this the "land of opportunity." If it is going to be a land of opportunity it must start with health, because if you do not have health then it does not matter how much opportunity there is, you cannot take advantage of it.

Hon. Mr. Randall: You have the opportunity, but no money to pay for it.

Mr. Knight: Mr. Chairman, I find it unfortunate that the leader of the New Democratic Party has converted such a vital issue as the health of the people into a sort of a political football in lambasting the official Opposition. I do not think there is any need for that at this particular time.

I thought that the position put forth by the leader of the official Opposition party (Mr. Nixon) was very well put, but I do not agree with the vehicle. The leader of the Opposition party said that this was an antiquated vehicle, this motion to reduce the vote by $12,000 and centering it around the Minister, and I understand that is the custom of the House. But it puts me in a very bad position, I say very honestly.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): You put yourself in that position.

Mr. Knight: Well I can speak for myself too.

I just happen to like the way this new young Minister has conducted himself during the course of the discussion of these estimates until now. We all know the manner in which OHSIP has been brought about is the responsibility of the entire Cabinet and not just this Minister.

I would like to see this Minister have a chance to go forward. He has demonstrated some vigour, some keen interest and a lot of hard work and I think he is going to do a good job. I honestly believe that before the next year is out, that there will be some changes in OHSIP.

And because I think this particular type of amendment is an antiquated vehicle, because I am expecting the Minister to say, "We hear the people screaming, we know that there is trouble, we know that there is not acceptance. We are going to review it and see how we can work it." I expect him to get up and say, "We are reviewing it and we are going to do something about it."

If he does that then I am going to vote against the amendment, because the one thing that the leader of the official Opposition and the leader of the New Democratic Party have not pointed out is that it does not matter what programme you put in, the people are still going to pay for it. It is going to come out of them in the form of taxes if it does not come out of them in the form of premiums. This is the problem that any government must face in deciding such a programme.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Correctional Services): The most sensible thing that has been said so far!

Mr. Knight: There is not any question whatsoever—

Hon. Mr. Randall: He thinks it grows on trees.

Mr. MacDonald: He is the new Tory candidate.

Hon. Mr. Simonett: You will never be.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: He could do a lot worse.

Mr. Knight: There is not any question whatsoever that the feelings put forward by the leaders of these two parties to my left, the positions they have put forward, are a true reflection of the feelings of the the people of this province. If this government continues with the same programme in OHSIP, it is going to go down at the next election, primarily on the basis of this one thing.

So there has got to be a change, there is no question about it. But I do not think the way to do it is by pulling the rug out from under this new Minister at this particular time. I seek to encourage him to do a good job so that we are going to get the programme that we all want and that we all know is necessary, and nobody is kidding anybody.

An hon. member: You may be able to fool the Globe and Mail, but you cannot fool us.

Mr. Knight: And providing I get the assurance from this Minister that what I have suggested is going to be done, then I am going to vote against this amendment.

I would like to say one more thing while I am speaking straightforward, off the shoulder. I would like to say that the government can learn an awful lot on OHSIP, Medicare—OMSIP, call it whatever you want—from the party to the left. They are the experts in Medicare, as far as I am concerned.

I think the leader of the New Democratic Party has a lot of excellent points and I hope that the Minister, when he is reconsidering, will take all of this into consideration because I think that he made an awful lot of sense—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Randall: You have to raise the money.

An hon. member: You fooled the people this morning, now let it go at that, eh!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Knight: In short, Mr. Chairman, let us get this vital issue out of the realm of the political football and get it back into the vital area where it belongs.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Middlesex South.

Mr. K. C. Bolton (Middlesex South): Mr. Chairman, the cry I hear from the other side of the House is, "Where is the money coming from?" I want to suggest this as my thesis, that good health is not a consumer commodity, but a basic human right.

An hon. member: How about that, Stan Randall?

Mr. Gisborn: That goes for housing too!

Hon. Mr. Randall: I have always said that.

Mr. Bolton: My invitation to enter this debate came from the last speaker across the way, who stated that we confused the voters in Middlesex South on Medicare, he was speaking in response to a little needling perhaps from someone who is usually urbane—I refer to the member for Scarborough West (Mr. Lewis). You may recall the occasion, it is recorded on page 6886 of Hansard.

That is why, and I am not trying to put it through provocatively, that is why the government got 19 per cent of the vote in the urban polls of Middlesex South in East London, because you have not the slightest comprehension of what urban needs are.

The reply of the Minister of Trade and Development was:

You confused them on Medicare.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): He is the one who is confused.

Mr. Pilkey: Not saying very much for the electors in Middlesex South.

Mr. Bolton: I challenge—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Bolton: I challenge anyone in this House to produce one statement that was made by myself or on my behalf in Middlesex South, that could be called confusing people about Medicare.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Ben: Now this is confusing.

Mr. Bolton: The people in Middlesex South, I say to my friend to the right, are not easily confused.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Randall: Not any more they are not.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Bolton: Speaking of confusion, may I—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Bolton: May I continue?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Bolton: Sir William Osler said that medicine arose out of primal sympathy of man with man, out of a desire to help those in sorrow, need and sickness. I spent far too much of my life, from the year 1932 until now, at various bedsides and various hospitals and at gravesides to enjoy cheap comment about the health of our people. I, too, regret the nature of some of this debate that has arisen about Medicare. This is a matter that concerns the dignity of human beings and the basic issues of their life. It does not sit well that we should debate this in any light, frivolous or cheap terms.

And yet, we have to remember that economics does enter into this picture so we find Dr. Norman Cohen of the Manitoba Medical Services, president thereof, saying, "We need to modify our health care system in such a way to be more responsive to the checks and balances of the market-place. I wish I could share with the last speaker, to my extreme right, his conviction that the new Minister of Health has read the message that came from Middlesex South and indeed from across the whole of Ontario. I wish this were so, but I must say I read with grave concern a statement attributed to him, November 13, CP press release, headlines:

WELLS URGES STAND AGAINST SOCIALISM

Ontario's Health Minister, Thomas Wells, Wednesday, defended adoption of the federal Medical Health Insurance Plan and called on all Conservative members to back that decision against the socialists. He called on about 500 party members attending the Conservative Businessmen's Club luncheon not to fall into the hands of those "who seek to divide us into the hands of the socialists."

And so on; and I will read from a paper which I think is not notably pro-NDP. November 14 Globe and Mail, headed

QUITE THE WRONG FISH

Even a red herring should at least be a herring in the first place. In his flailing attempts to defend the Ontario Health Services Insurance Plan, Health Minister Thomas Wells lumped its critics together as socialists. He urged Conservatives to unite behind the government's version of Medicare and not to fall into the hands of those, "who seek to divide us into the hands of the socialists."

Reaching back 26 years—the length of time the government was in Middlesex South:

—he asserted that the Conservatives had come to power by fighting off "an attempt by socialists to take over this province. Today we are facing the same challenge. I do not want to lead this province down the road of state-socialistic medicine!"

But what has all that got to do with OHSIP?

Is it being socialistic to object to being required to pay the highest Medicare premiums in Canada? We would have thought it was rather the opposite, that here is a free-enterprise bellow if ever there was one.

Is it being socialistic to be angry because OHSIP protects the Ontario people against only 90 per cent of their medical costs, where before—under private free-enterprise plans—they were able to enjoy 100 per cent protection?

I was disappointed.

I believe that health care can, and should supersede partisan politics. It is a principle that all doctors recognize that in all these things the patient comes first, and the patient is a person, not merely a vote, not merely a legal entity or political football. The patient should be regarded as a total person and health programmes should be total programmes. That has been said already by the leader of the Opposition, and by our own leader. I need not elaborate on that except to say that you cannot separate people into sections, you see their total need, and one of the greatest things I have noticed of recent years, is the high recovery rate, or the rapid recovery rate of those who are freed from economic concern.

I remember in my earlier days, as a parish priest, when people were really very worried about finances, how this held back their recovery. They lay in bed worrying about their finances, how their families were getting along and the measure of help that they were given has helped in their more rapid recovery. I urge that we recognize that fact in a wealthy country like Canada a wealthy province like Ontario can afford the things for which we are asking. It can be done, the money is here and when you start talking about what it is going to cost, I ask you to remember, "What does it cost to allow people to evade their health responsibilities?"

We need preventive medicine, we need nothing to discourage a person from going to a doctor in the first place, even this miserable 50 cents they have to put on a plate in the doctor's office, can be to some people a deterrent. Ah, but you say, "We provide for the poor. We give them a chance, if they are in trouble, to make a special petition to be relieved." This hurts the dignity of our people.

We do not say that this can be free, what we do say is this, there is a better way of paying—and I include myself—those who can afford to pay, should pay and pay gladly through progressive taxation, not the regressive forms we have. This provides for the dignity of our people—it can be done, it should be done. Hall said a long time ago it could be done, there is no reason to deny it. A universal, comprehensive programme is feasible, practicable, economical to administer and immediately effective for the total population. The device of tax payments to achieve universal coverage is acceptable to a great majority of Canadians.

I wish I had more time, there are many more interesting things on this subject. I want to say in conclusion that I firmly believe that this province is saying to the government "reform this decision". I was accused of confusing the people of Middlesex South. The people in Middlesex South are not very easily confused. What has happened is this, they have begun to see clearly what is involved and they, along with the rest of Ontario, are demanding a change.

It may be just a change in Medicare, it may be a change in government.

The term "red herring" reminds me of an experience in my undergraduate days when a group of people in Manitoba, weary of a rather starchy weekly paper called, The Manitoban, produced a document of their own called "The Red Herring". The authors were never discovered; I can tell you now, 30 years or so later, one became an ambassador for Canada, another became the head of the biggest United Church in Canada, so he recovered from this particular issue. It was called The Red Herring, the first issue and the only one—it was suppressed afterwards—was called "Case 1, Tin 1" and the slogan was, "It smells, but it sells". The red herring drawn across the Medicare programme may smell but it certainly is not going to sell, it will not be bought.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Parkdale.

Mr. J. B. Trotter (Parkdale): Mr. Chairman, I rise to support my leader's motion that the salary of the Minister be reduced by $12,000. Of course, we are all aware this is more or less a manner of expressing our opinion as to government's policy. One might ask: "Why do this to a Minister who has only held the portfolio for two months?" The main reason is this, that the reason why OHSIP and our medical and hospital costs are so high in this province is simply because the Minister is representing a portfolio that has not taken the necessary action over a long number of years.

We on this side of the House, despite the things the member for York South has said, have believed that medical insurance or Medicare, whatever you want to call it, has been on its way for some considerable time. A number of us have believed it has been long overdue. And I do not want to get into any political hassle with the member for York South because a lot of the things he has said are now ancient history and some of his history is completely inaccurate. There are too many members I have known over a long period of time in the Liberal party sitting as members and working with the Liberal party who have advocated hospital insurance and medical insurance for a great many years.

And just in passing I say to the member for York South, through you, Mr. Chairman, that the hon. Paul Martin is the man who made hospital insurance possible throughout all of Canada.

I know as I became active as a young Liberal in this party that I had an opportunity to watch the work that was being done and it is true when he began it took him three years in organizing the manner hospitalization should be brought in, but because they knew what they wanted and they knew what to do, they never let hospitalization get into the administrative chaos that medical insurance is in at the present time. One of the main reasons why this province has had so much difficulty with the administration of medical insurance is that in its heart and in its mind it has fought it all the way down the line.

The other provinces, whether they had Social Credit governments, Conservative governments or what-have-you, never got into the mess that medical insurance is in in the province of Ontario at the present time.

An hon. member: They have a mental block.

Mr. Trotter: A member in my own party says this government has a mental block and so it has. I know the former Minister of Health (Mr. Dymond), the man who, incidentally, despite the criticisms that he has undergone, has a number of personal qualities that I admire. The former Minister of Health and I have disagreed on this subject vehemently over a long number of years and I remember when he campaigned for the leadership of the Progressive Conservative Party, he said there would never be medical insurance, that he would always be opposed to government medical insurance in the province of Ontario.

Well, of course, circumstances forced him to change his mind and we gradually have come about to a point where we have a government scheme—admittedly from pressure, you might say, put on this government by the federal government. I am glad such pressure was brought, because we have to realize that medical insurance, that health insurance—I prefer the term "health insurance"—is an absolute necessity for all of the people of Canada.

And when we advocate these schemes in the province of Ontario, we know it is costing the people of Ontario more money. We quite frankly admit that a greater burden of the cost is borne by the taxpayer of Ontario than any other part of Canada, and the reason for it is that we as a whole can afford it. We may have our problems in this province but as you look at the rest of Canada, we are mighty lucky that we are in this province, and we have a responsibility to the other parts of the country.

Well now, there is no question that the high cost has become chaotic, it has become difficult for patients, it is becoming difficult for the doctors. I know of one young doctor—I know we all think of doctors having money and I know once they get established they do quite well—but I know of one young doctor who started to practise four months ago and he was trying to stick as loyally as he could to billing the government directly. He has not received a single cheque over a period of four months, and he sent in a number of billings.

Now, that is four months, and that particular doctor's father called me and he said, "Well, you assume all these doctors have money, maybe the older men have, but certainly the young fellows don't." Well now, how can the medical profession—

Hon. Mr. Crossman: How long has he waited?

Mr. Trotter: Four months!

Hon. Mr. Crossman: How long has OHSIP been in effect?

Mr. Trotter: Well, he was billing OMSIP beforehand. He started four months ago and this was when OMSIP was in effect and he was billing the government directly.

Hon. Mr. Wells: And he has not received a cent?

Mr. Trotter: He has never received a cent.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Can we check him out?

Mr. Trotter: I will be glad to give the Minister the information privately. I do not wish to use his name.

Hon. Mr. Wells: That is fine.

Mr. Trotter: But when you know things like this go on, how can you expect the medical profession to have confidence in a system whose administration is in such a chaotic state? When we know that over a period of time the private plans, the non-profit plans, have been able to operate at a six to seven per cent administrative cost, and yet we know that this present scheme is somehow going to cost between 10 and 12 per cent of the total premiums that are gathered in, then there is something wrong with the whole government planning behind the scheme. And as far as I can gather, Mr. Chairman, the other provinces have not had the same difficulty that this particular government has had.

Of course, one of the main reasons is that you have far too many carriers, you have far too many private carriers, the private carriers should be taken out completely and the profit in health care eliminated.

I know some of the members in the NDP said, "Why did you support the bill that the government introduced this spring?" And, Mr. Chairman, to enlighten some of the members, it is this: we believed in the principle of medical insurance. This is the overall thing and many of us in this party over the years have advocated medical insurance and have advocated health insurance and I have gone on record on numerous occasions as saying health insurance across the board. Even one item the member for York South, I believe, left out—he did not cover sickness insurance, and the only reason why we have not advocated sickness insurance immediately is in truth what the hon. member for Humber said in his opening remarks on the estimates of this department, in that you have to depend to a certain extent on your economic base as to how fast and how far you can move. It is merely a matter of common sense. So let there be no question, Mr. Chairman, where this party stands now and where it has stood in the past; we believe in health insurance literally across the board for the people of Ontario and for the people of Canada.

Well now, my leader and this party have advocated one particular segment that I believe is extremely important in the payment of health costs. In our first statement, brought out when OHSIP first came in, we applied the theory primarily to the cost of OHSIP—to the medical costs—in that the premium system should be done away with and that progressive taxation should be the means by which we decide how much people should pay.

Today it is ridiculous that a married man with two children, earning $4,000 or in the area between $4,000 and $4,500, should be paying the same premium as a man who earns $10,000 or $15,000. We believe that the system should be the same used in the manner that we pay for the Canada Pension Plan, in that it is added to income and it would do away with all the premium payments. You would pay for it as you file your income tax. If you were not taxable, if you were not earning enough money to pay taxes, you did not pay a premium. I know that, technically, a premium is not a tax but for all intents and purposes the premium and the tax are the same thing. It comes out of your pocket and there is no question in my mind, as I believe there is not in the minds of my fellow members in the Liberal Party, that the premium system must inevitably be done away with. We are going to pay for these costs tied to the income of the individual and family concerned.

This is a much needed reform, Mr. Chairman, in the system of paying for health costs in this province and in this country. I cannot advocate too strongly the great need for the change in order to help carry the high costs.

There is no question that the doctors simply must be brought into line. I have said on many occasions that the average doctor is all right but they are poorly represented by the Ontario Medical Association. The Ontario Medical Association, to me, has always been an extremely narrow-minded group strictly out for their own interests, and interests that represent the medical profession most unfairly.

The average doctor is a pretty decent type; but the Ontario Medical Association, from what I have seen over the years, has got a blocked mind. I think the theory is utterly stupid when they claim that because government is in medical insurance it is interfering with the doctor-patient relationship.

I know perfectly well that lawyers who operate under the legal aid system in no way are interfered with when they consult with their own clients. The theory put forth by the Ontario Medical Association is nonsense and it is about time they quit giving the picture to the public that the doctors are a greedy, mean group.

I would hope that this government would accept the suggestion made by the leader of this party that no raise in the doctors' fees be made unless such a raise has the approval of the standing committee on health.

Surely, even the public exposure before such a group would help bring the doctors in line. Finally, Mr. Chairman, because I know that time is limited in this debate, I would urge the members to read again, if you have not already, the report of the standing committee on health that was tabled in this House by the hon. member for Quinte (Mr. Potter).

It has the support of all the parties in this House. It made many worthwhile suggestions. As well as mentioning the need for total care, it did emphasize the matter that would come under this vote and that is the important point that nursing care should be covered by our hospitalization. I have known so many cases over a period of time—and they seem to increase as time goes by—where patients, particularly people who require chronic care, are literally thrown out on their own because they cannot afford the cost of a nursing home.

Once they are removed from a hospital, where they are supposedly getting medical treatment, they simply cannot afford to carry the heavy cost of living in a nursing home. It is no satisfaction to a person who requires chronic care to be told "You do not need a doctor's care any more; you are free to go." There are patients who are told they are free to leave such a hospital as the Queen Elizabeth Hospital, who cannot walk. They have to be carried out. Where do they go? Unless their families can take care of them, they have nothing; or if they have a few dollars, the government does nothing until they are reduced to being a welfare patient. Many of the older persons hope they can save enough money so they do not have a pauper's grave.

This is a real fear among many of the older people who require nursing care—that their money is going so rapidly—the money that they have saved at a time when the dollar was worth a dollar. They fear they will not have enough money on hand to pay for their own funeral expenses.

It has been recommended by the standing committee that the hospital—at least the nursing care costs and the nursing home costs—be covered by the hospital premium.

These are tremendously needed reforms, Mr. Chairman. And there is no indication shown by the present Minister who is the youngest old Tory on the government side of the House—and I repeat that, he is the youngest old Tory on that side of the House—I rather despair that the much needed reforms will be brought about by the new Minister.

Interjections by hon. member.

Mr. Trotter: I hope I am wrong, but I underline again that there are tremendous changes that need to be made, not only in extending health care but certainly in the improvement in the administration, in order to cut the high cost of health care.

Mr. Chairman: I must point out to the committee that I do have a list of speakers but we have a motion before us which deals only with Vote 804. Is it the intention of the committee that we should deal with this motion on 804 now, so there will be additional time left for the remaining votes, or do they wish this vote to be carried to the end? You see the motion deals only with one vote.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Chairman, my understanding was that we would put the votes together for the discussions. I think if the hon. Minister can accommodate any questions that are put, it would be most convenient if you would accept discussion on all these votes. Perhaps it could be settled with the division of the House at an appropriate time.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: In the meantime, the Minister will be on his present salary.

Mr. Chairman: Is it the decision of the committee that this motion, which reads simply that Vote 804 be reduced by $12,000, should deal with Votes 804, 805, 806 and 807 at the same time?

Mr. Gisborn: Mr. Chairman, would it not be acceptable, I think we have arranged this before, that we deal with the three votes? Then we take the division as only applying to 804 and carry the other two votes immediately.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Mr. Chairman, it is my understanding, from the select committee and the recommendations that were adopted, that we would pass these votes at the end of the estimates. Would it not be possible to put each vote at the one time when the division bells have been rung at 10.30?

Mr. Chairman: This is what I had in mind. If I take a voice vote on 804, then the actual division need not take place until the debate on all of the votes has been completed. In that manner we will not restrict debate on the hospital services commission. But I want to point out that there is one hour left, or less, so I will now place the motion before the committee on Vote 804. It is not a division; it is a voice vote.

Mr. T. P. Reid: Mr. Chairman, does this mean that discussion is cut off on 804?

Mr. Chairman: No, not at all. It simply means we will defer it for the actual division bells to be rung until the end of the debate; all right!

Mr. Nixon has moved that Vote 804 be reduced by $12,000.

Those in favour please say "aye".

Those opposed please say "nay".

In my opinion the "nays" have it.

If the members will rise. All right now, do I have the consent of the committee to defer this division until the end of the debate?

Agreed.

The hon. member for High Park.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Chairman, everyone in this province is aware of the difficulties that individuals and subscribers to OHSIP and Ontario hospitalization have run into in this last year.

What the public is not aware of is the nightmare of paper work that the doctors have run into. I would like to tell you in the few minutes I have available to me just exactly what has happened to one doctor, and that is myself, and I have a relatively small practice as compared to most general practitioners.

OHSIP has now been in effect for two months. There are two ways that you can manage the paper work that is necessary. You can either prepare the cards with each patient as they come in daily, or you can wait until the end of the month and prepare them all at that time. I have tried both systems each for a month and each case is literally a nightmare; that is the only way to describe it.

During the month of October we waited until the end of the month. We carried on as normal, took the numbers of the patients each day and all the data that is necessary, then, at the end of the month, went back and prepared a card for every patient who had come in. We sorted those cards as we did them into the various piles for all the insurance companies and mailed them out.

It took three people working an entire weekend to get this done. You can multiply this by every doctor across the province and the number of man-hours of medical time that went into paper work that should have gone into looking after patients can be imagined.

In the old system a patient would come in, the information would go on his card, and, at the end of the month, the girl would type out the bills. It would take a few hours and out they would go.

This is no longer possible. The doctor must sign every card. The doctor must supply information for each card as to the diagnosis, and it means medical time is taken.

For the month of November I tried a different system. We tried filling a card out each time the patient came in, which slows down the rate of patient care somewhat, but it does not give you this tremendous problem at the end. We filed them in an index alphabetically. Then, I had two people come in on Sunday morning to take out all the cards and sort them out for the various insurance companies and send them out to the various companies. Total time elapsed, three hours. This is three hours on top of all the time that we took every day.

The reason for all this wasted time is pure and simple. It is because we have got these 30-odd insurance companies, all of whom have to be sent the bills. Now, if you had not put in this—and the only way to describe it is—this bastard scheme, if you had put in a sensible scheme where all bills go to OHSIP, where you eliminate the insurance companies, in addition to all the things that have been brought out by the other members, the waste of money and the tremendous waste of doctors' time which we have now would be avoided.

So, I strongly commend this to you, sir. You have already lost the votes of most of the public, if you wish to still save the doctors' vote, for whatever that is worth, I strongly suggest that before the next election you eliminate these private insurance companies.

If you cannot eliminate the private insurance companies, if you are too indebted to them, at least allow the doctors to send all the cards to OHSIP and let OHSIP sort them out. Otherwise your doctors are going to be so involved with paper work and so fed up with the nonsense that this OHSIP scheme has brought in that you could lose every one of them too. They are going to be tied up looking after paper when they should be looking after people.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Huron-Bruce.

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): Mr. Chairman, I want to say a word about the report which was issued by the chairman of the standing committee on health. In the report it was indicated, of course, that the committee felt that the government should move towards a total health care programme.

I would certainly subscribe to that philosophy and to that thought. I think that the committee is to be commended for the stance which it has taken in this regard.

I want to deal with one particular aspect of the committee's report, that is to say, chiropractic inclusion in OHSIP. I have talked a number of times and I have sponsored resolutions a number of times, in this House, dealing with the possibility and the desirability of extending OHSC coverage to nursing homes which are licensed. I believe that is a programme that the government could embark upon tomorrow.

You have your inspections; you have your regulations; you have your machinery all set up. Surely to goodness you can move in this area, because it has been indicated to me, time and time again, that great hardship is placed upon many of the older people in this province because you do not do it. I suggest to you that you should be moving in this area.

Then we come to the chiropractic. It seems to me that this is another very logical extension of the OHSIP programme. I say that for one reason. I think it is very conceivable that much of the cost incurred by including chiropractic in OHSIP would be a transfer payment. That is to say, it would not be an additional new cost, it would be a transfer payment.

I think this is borne out by the experience which has been indicated in the other provinces which have included chiropractic in their Medicare plans. I refer, of course, to British Columbia, Alberta and Manitoba.

These provinces have included chiropractic in their Medicare plans as an optional service, and I think it was recognized by them that people do not go to the two practitioners—they do not go to a chiropractor and a medical doctor. They either go to one or the other. And so, when a province does not include chiropractic in its Medicare programme, it simply means that you are legislating people out of one office into another.

I think this is discrimination, and certainly most unfair, because it seems to me that there is a place in the total health service field for chiropractic, for nursing homes, for drugs and so on. I think the government should be taking some positive steps to move in this direction.

Of course, we are always confronted with the task of coming up with a cost figure. Having come up with a cost figure, we are always confronted with the reality of having to pay for it. I want to indicate to you some of the costing figures which were done in the province of Alberta, for instance, which has had some experience with chiropractic as an option under their plan.

At the end of the first six-month period, the figures were as follows: premiums received, $368,000; the claims paid out for chiropractic services, $213,000. Mr. Chairman, this leaves a surplus of $155,000. I think those figures are rather remarkable and worthy of some study.

The recommendations of the Ontario Chiropractic Association in this regard, it seems to me, are very realistic. They have indicated, on an initial basis, an initial minimum basis, the chiropractors could be included under OHSIP on the following basis.

First of all, $125 per person per year maximum, which would include a payment of $10 for an initial visit and $6 per subsequent office visits. The second point they bring out in the brief which they have presented to the Minister is the $25 maximum per person per year for radiographic examination. Those two things.

They have suggested to the Minister that this would be a good place to start. I suggest to him that if this were provided as an optional service under the OHSIP plan, the cost would be very minimal indeed. The chiropractors have estimated that, at the very most, the cost of inclusion would be $8 million in the province of Ontario.

Now if the Minister wants to accept the Alberta plan, or the B.C. plan, and provide it as an optional service, at least it is a start. It is a move in the right direction.

If the Minister's actuaries say, "Well, we agree, we think it is going to cost $8 million"; then perhaps if the chiropractic services are included in OHSIP as an optional plan, a premium can be levied to take care of that extra inclusion. It would be optional for the people to decide whether or not they want that coverage.

I am indicating to the Minister that I think this is an important area. I think it is an area that could relieve, to an extent, the pressure on medical doctors across this province.

It seems to me, and I have felt this way and I feel it very strongly, I have felt this way for many years, I think a great deal can be achieved by co-operation of the medical doctors and the chiropractors across this province. I think there is a great area for co-operation here. I would hope that eventually the medical profession would see this and come to accept it and take steps to co-operate on that basis.

So I would be interested to listen to the Minister's reaction. I hope he feels as I do. I know he has to convince his Cabinet colleagues. I know there is always a problem insofar as convincing one's colleagues on any particular matter, but I suggest the Minister can make a very, very strong case for the inclusion of the chiropractic under the OHSIP plan at this time.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Wentworth.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Mr. Chairman, in the five minutes allotted to me I want to say first of all I concur with what the member for Huron-Bruce has said. I have, on occasions, spoken in exactly the same tone about the same subject.

I want to deal with two matters, one concerning the lack of communication between the department and the citizens of the area I represent.

I have tried, as has the member for Hamilton Centre (Mr. Davison), to bring to the Minister's attention the fact that the office that was set up to cover what was previously OMSIP and what is now OHSIP is totally inadequate; that it has never satisfied any need in that area in regard to assuring that the citizens of the area are able to ascertain where they stand in regard to their OMSIP and their OHSIP coverage.

We have asked the Minister repeatedly that he do something to beef up the staff in that office—I do not mean individually but in general terms—so that they might be able to meet the needs of the 300,000 to 500,000 people who have to make use of the services in the areas around Hamilton.

The Minister made a grand pronouncement through the member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. J. R. Smith) that there was going to be a zenith line installed about four or five weeks ago—even longer, I guess. To date absolutely nothing has happened.

I read in the weekend Hamilton Spectator that they are going to put an additional telephone into that office at some time in the future. We are getting sick and tired of it.

The manner in which this was brought in was deplorable, to say the least. The lack of communication between the department and the citizens cannot be condoned by anyone, and to completely ignore an area such as Hamilton in terms of trying to get information to them—to make staff available to assist them—we on this side of the House just will not tolerate it.

The other area I want to talk about is the area of subsidizing benefits. It is time that we got away from the feeling that hospitalization is somehow different from medical coverage. It is time that we recognized that a person who cannot afford to pay his medical coverage, obviously cannot afford to pay his hospitalization.

I have so many people coming to me who are able, through the subsidization programme in OHSIP or previously in OMSIP, to get a form of subsidization up to full payment because of their inability to meet their commitment. Yet they are still required to pay the full shot for Ontario hospital services.

This is ridiculous and I do not know how the Minister could stand in this House and justify it.

As far as I am concerned, the department has to bring this programme together, to dovetail it in such a way that when it is decided that a person cannot afford to pay for their OHSIP payments, that the Ontario hospital coverage is also provided free of charge or in a reduced fashion depending on what their income is.

There is no point in us saying that people are able to go to the doctor if when the doctor sends them to the hospital they are stuck with bills they just cannot possibly afford to pay.

That is four minutes and that is what I want to say, and I want to ask the Minister to take it into consideration.

As far as the Hamilton office is concerned, if he does not do something about it pretty soon, it will be too late to do anything anyway.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Rainy River.

Mr. T. P. Reid: Mr. Chairman, I am going to be very brief. I just want to make a couple of points that have already been well made by the member for Parkdale, especially in regard to the first point made by the leader of the NDP when this bill was first brought forward and they voted against it.

I am sure the leader of the NDP has been around long enough to know that when we voted for that bill, we were voting for the principle of Medicare. We were entirely consistent in our approach, and certainly they were entirely inconsistent in theirs.

The important part of the Medicare bill and the situation as it stands now is that there are more people covered under the Medicare scheme, some five to six per cent of the population of Ontario, who were not covered before. To me, this is the principle of the bill and the important part of the whole issue.

I wish the leader of the NDP was here, because I had a few other things to say to him about that, but I will save them.

Mr. Deans: How about the leader of the Opposition?

Mr. J. Renwick (Riverdale): He is not here either.

Mr. T. P. Reid: Maybe they are having a cup of coffee.

Mr. M. Makarchuk (Brantford): They are probably wondering what happened to Clarkson.

Mr. T. P. Reid: Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to bring to the Minister of Health the objections of the people of my riding, especially the formal objections I had from the United Steelworkers at Atikokan and the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill workers in Fort Frances in Ontario.

I am sure the Minister is aware of a letter that has been sent to the Prime Minister in this regard, but I think the letter from the pulp, sulphite and paper mill workers sums it up very well.

They say, "Our people are in favour of a Medicare plan, but certainly not one that is costing the citizen more than he is presently paying under private plans and yet receiving less coverage." If legislation has the power to tell the private citizen and taxpayer that he no longer has the privilege to paramedical coverage under separate insurance plans, then legislation should also see fit that full coverage is enacted under the Medicare plan.

Mr. Chairman, as I stated at the outset, we as Liberals supported the principle of Medicare, and as the party of reform we would like to see this reformed.

Surely this party is the one that has offered the solution that is most equitable, that is by having the Medicare premiums paid for as part of the general income tax, which was certainly the most progressive step of solving this retrogressive payment plan of the present government.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Hamilton East.

Mr. Gisborn: Mr. Chairman, I rise to support the motion to reduce this estimate by $12,000 and to express, in about four minutes, my views.

I certainly cannot go along with the friendly appeal of my friend from Port Arthur inasmuch as we should not make a political football out of the Medicare issue, that in fact we should give the young new Minister our support on this issue and give him time to work toward a decent Medicare programme.

The New Democratic Party's programme has been consistent for many years as far as where we stand for a national comprehensive Medicare programme, and the CCF before that. If anyone has played politics with the health of the people in this province it has been the federal Liberals, the provincial Tories aided and abetted by the provincial Liberals, and every other reactionary party in this province. You just have to look at the record.

Mr. Ben: You just lost all credibility.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Gisborn: Let me say that if there is a Liberal around for 100 years they will never make me believe that in June when we dealt with the second reading of the Ontario Health Insurance Plan, that they were voting for anything else but what was implicit in that bill; that there would be an extraordinarily high premium, and that there would be 90 per cent only paid to the doctors and that the industries under industrial programmes would have a mish-mash of a problem to iron out. It is only after the flak and the well of public opinion that the Liberals in the House pushed the panic button and moved into the twilight zone and came up with the programme they came in with in September, three months after, and the record shows just that.

Mr. D. A. Paterson (Essex South): You voted against the principle of Medicare.

Mr. Gaunt: Now we are trying to copy your programme.

Mr. Ben: Do you think they are absolutely ignorant and they believe this con job that you are giving them?

Mr. Gisborn: Well, you might have conned the people in Saskatchewan for a little while and in Newfoundland, but you are not going to con them in Ontario with that kind of a jump-off onto this position in three months.

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): What are you fellows doing in Ottawa?

Mr. Gisborn: Mr. Chairman, I want to get to one particular issue. The leader of our party has in a brief, general form put our position clearly—

Mr. Ben: Which leader?

Mr. Gisborn: It is well documented, in well readable form, as to its financial soundness.

Mr. Ben: You have not got any leader there today, have you?

Mr. Gisborn: There is one point that might have been missed. It is that we do intend, in the fullness of time, as a government, to move to a no-premium Medicare health insurance programme in this province, and there is a—

Hon. J. H. White (Minister of Revenue): That is not what your leader said.

Mr. Gisborn:—fundamental reason for that. Because when we say that we have a national health programme, we mean that at no time should any individual, or any group, be without coverage for any reason. The only way that can be brought about is when you have a no-premium programme, paid for on the basis of ability to pay on a progressive tax basis.

I want the Minister to listen carefully to my next remark, because I dealt with this area at a previous time. That is, the position of organized workers when they have a strike situation, and they are bound by a fixed premium, a mandatory premium, under any kind of a programme. I think that we have got to think about the type of coverage they will have when it is necessary to go on a legal strike. That should be arrived at either by the government establishing mandatory payments by the industry in which the employee works, until he goes back to work after the strike, or else a government sponsored and financed moratorium on those premiums.

We no longer can let this kind of a progressive programme in this province develop and establish another strong lever for industry in the collective bargaining field. Because the moment that an industry goes on strike, and they have this kind of coverage, they must come up with a premium that is beyond some of the local unions' ability to pay.

Hon. Mr. Wells: The industry has to pay!

Mr. Gisborn: They do not under our present system. The steelworkers' union had to come up with something like $125,000 cold cash the day after the strike started and something in the field of $250,000 the first of the next month.

Hon. Mr. Wells: That was before OHSIP.

Mr. Gisborn: They will have to do it now unless—is the Minister giving me some assurance that the situation is going to be changed?

Hon. Mr. Wells: The Act says, Mr. Chairman, that the employer of a mandatory group must collect these premiums. Even if they are on strike they are still employees; he has got to send in the premiums for all his employees in that group, whether they are on strike or not.

Mr. Gisborn: I thank the Minister for the statement. I think the air is a little clearer. I was not sure and could not arrive at any assurance up to this point. I will close off with that, because I think we have made some progress.

Hon. Mr. Wells: That is my understanding of the Act.

Mr. Gisborn: I hope you are right.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Chairman, I rise to support the motion of my leader in recommending that this vote be cut by $12,000, which would be the present indemnity allotted to the Minister.

I regret very much that this is the only vehicle by which we can express the inadequacies of the government Medicare plan. My leader most eloquently placed the position of the Liberal Party in a very carefully thought-out Medicare scheme.

I regret very much, Mr. Chairman, that the government, in their Medicare plan, see fit to be paying 90 per cent of Medicare premiums, and, as a result, many people are billed for the balance, ten per cent. In fact, just recently I received a telephone call at home from a party who refused to identify himself who said that on the desk in the doctor's office was a box asking for the 60 cents for the office visit.

I do not believe that any doctor would do a thing like that—would stoop that low, to sort of hint that another 60 cents is due for a $6 visit to the office. I think the doctors are a little bigger, so to speak, than stooping to request 60 cents of a $6 medical fee.

In my own case, Mr. Chairman, we have had a medical plan in the city of Windsor that has been in operation from back in the early 1930's. In fact, I would say that it was the original Medicare plan for Canada.

It was the first in the Dominion of Canada. It was studied intensively by various governments—provincial and state governments—and I really think that possibly The Department of National Health and Welfare of the federal government, with the hon. Paul Martin at that time, now Senator Martin, got the idea of the hospital plan for the Dominion from the Windsor medical services plan that was in operation in the said city. That, in connection with the hospital plan—that is, the medical plan with the hospital plan—would have meant fairly well a complete medical or a health coverage for the individual.

I understand, too, that the doctors are the only big business in which the ultimate consumer has no control over what he buys; that is, the fees charged by the medical profession. There should be some type of control, Mr. Chairman, otherwise the fee structure may eventually get completely out of hand. Under the Windsor medical care plan, the doctors have accepted as low as 75 per cent of their recognized fee schedule. Yet, as soon as we changed over to the Ontario medical plan, many of them have insisted—or some of them, I should say, have insisted—on a full 100 per cent, rather than being willing to accept the 90 per cent fee schedule.

I received numerous phone calls as a result of this additional ten per cent. The open line radio programme that is, in my own community, conducted over station CKWW, in which the public have an opportunity to express their feelings concerning the plan, very frequently has nothing but condemnation from listeners expressing their opinions concerning this added 10 per cent that the person on a medical plan must pay to the practitioner.

The place where this really hits and hits very severely is the senior citizen. Under the Windsor medical plan, we had an ideal plan. There were 100 per cent of the medical bills paid for by the plan. The holder of the insurance under this plan was not obliged to make any additional payment. As soon as this plan was taken over by the Ontario medical services, the individual finds himself quite often stuck with an additional fee.

The Windsor medical plan was cheaper for a single person and it was also cheaper for a married couple. It is only the families who have a cheaper plan under the OMSIP plan. And it is unfortunate that many of these married couples are senior citizens. They find themselves very hard pressed in an attempt to pay the premiums to carry the hospital and medical services.

My own city council was very much concerned over the fact that the Windsor medical plan was going to be supplanted by the government plan. On November 12 they passed the following resolution, which originated in the city of Kitchener and was endorsed by the Windsor city council. I will not read the whole resolution, because, more than likely the Minister has it; I will read the concluding paragraph.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Chairman, could I just ask the hon. member, did he say that the Windsor medical plan paid 100 per cent?

Mr. B. Newman: Windsor medical paid 100 per cent, they did not bill the patient.

Hon. Mr. Wells: It is my understanding, although perhaps the member has some information we do not have, that up until they switched over to OHSIP they were paying 90 per cent of the OMAC schedule.

Mr. B. Newman: They may have paid 90 per cent, but the patient was never billed.

The patient's bill was completely assumed by the Windsor medical service. There was no additional billing to them.

Hon. Mr. Wells: We appreciate that, but let us make it clear that, in other words, what the member means is that the doctors were accepting 90 per cent of full payment.

Mr. B. Newman: Yes, I made mention of that earlier in my comments. The thing is, the patients now under the Minister's plan, find themselves billed for the additional 10 per cent occasionally.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Who is to blame for that? Not us.

Mr. B. Newman: You people. Had you assumed 100 per cent of the fee schedule set by the medical services or by the Ontario Medical Association, these people would not be billed for that additional 10 per cent. They were not billed for it under the Windsor medical plan, but they are being billed for it under this plan.

Hon. Mr. Wells: But you see, Mr. Chairman, the point here is this, and this is what I was saying to a group on Friday, this has nothing to do with us. Those same doctors before OHSIP came in, were happily accepting 90 per cent. When OHSIP came in they decided to bill the extra 10 per cent. There is no reason why they should have done that.

Mr. B. Newman: Regardless of what the hon. Minister may say, the patient is the individual who eventually is concerned and he finds himself today billed an additional 10 per cent which he was not billed before under the plan that was in existence and operated very, very well, the best plan, we could say, we had in Canada.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Blame the doctors in Windsor, not us.

Mr. B. Newman: The Minister can blame the doctors, I do not blame them, I blame the plan.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): The government provoked all the doctors in the province to charge it.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Oh no, we did not.

Mr. B. Newman: Mr. Chairman, I was going on to the resolution that was passed by the city of Windsor council. The concluding paragraph is, and that is concerning the 90 per cent of Ontario Medical Association schedule of tariffs:

Be it resolved that the council of the corporation of the city of Kitchener make the strongest possible representation to the government of the province of Ontario to review and amend the Ontario Health Services Insurance Plan legislation to provide 100 per cent coverage for all available health and medical services.

That was originally passed by the city of Kitchener and endorsed by the city of Windsor.

Mr. Chairman: If I may just interrupt for a moment.

Mr. B. Newman: Yes.

Mr. Chairman: If there is to be a vote at 10:15, as I understand was arranged, I have three more speakers; and if the Minister is to reply, that leaves about two minutes for each remaining speaker.

Mr. B. Newman: I will speak just one more minute, Mr. Chairman, and curtail my remarks.

May I conclude my remarks by saying, Mr. Chairman, that the subject of chiropractors, likewise, was endorsed by the council of the city of Windsor. The original resolution came from the city of Chatham. The Liberal Party itself would do away with all premiums eventually, we would prefer to have premiums at the present rate tied to income rather than the way the government scheme is.

One of the things that I do regret is the fact that in the medical services you have a three-fee structure, but when it comes to the hospital services plan there is only a two-fee structure. Consideration should be given to having both plans the same, preferably with a three-fee structure and likewise with a subsidy to the hospital services plan, the same as the medical plan.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Oshawa.

Mr. Pilkey: Mr. Chairman, I want to touch on two subjects; one, when we discussed the question of collective bargaining agreements as related to Medicare, we were assured that this plan in no way would affect collective bargaining agreements. And, lo and behold, the collective bargaining agreements that call for 100 per cent of premiums and 100 per cent coverage under a medical plan, have now been negated under this government's legislation. The doctors are now saying that they are not prepared to accept 90 per cent as equivalent to 100 per cent, and this party urged the government to legislate in this area, thus protecting the collective bargaining agreements in this province. I only have to refer to the headlines in the Star, "Doctor Poll Finds 75 per cent Charge Over OHSIP Rate." When this matter was raised—I recall very vividly when the Premier of this province said that this would not happen and he had great faith in the doctors of this province. I am sure that his faith must be shattered now as a result of the doctors over-billing in this province.

As a matter of fact, I have a document here that was sent out to a number of patients of one doctor, and I just want to read it into the record. Here is a note that is given to every patient, and it says:

We do not accept direct payment from any insuring agency, government or otherwise. You are directly responsible to us for payment of the services rendered and you will be reimbursed by your insuring agency of 90 per cent of the OMA tariff. Our minimum—

Get that.

—our minimum is 100 per cent of the OMA tariff and for certain surgical procedures somewhat higher than the OMA tariff.

Mr. J. R. Smith (Hamilton Mountain): Who is he?

Mr. Pilkey: I will name him if the members want his name. Dr. S. H. Wetzill, MD, and associates, in Oshawa. There are a number of doctors giving out these kind of notices to their patients, and they are not even prepared to participate, and the member from Windsor pointed out under Windsor medical that they did accept 90 per cent. But why are the doctors refusing to accept 90 per cent of your schedule, or your new plan? PSI paid 100 per cent, PSI paid 100 per cent of the OMA schedule of fees, and there were some millions of workers in this province covered under the PSI plan.

I want to touch on one other point and that is the guidelines that this government has set up under the Ontario Hospital Commission in regard to hospital workers. We had Bill 41 and Bill 90 that provided compulsory arbitration for the hospital workers in this province, and I want to suggest, again, that if the Ontario Hospital Commission are going to set guidelines for hospital workers in this province, effectively killing free collective bargaining, then I would want to suggest to the Minister that they come to the bargaining table, they come to the bargaining table if they are going to set the guidelines.

Hon. Mr. Wells: You cannot say that.

Mr. Pilkey: I am saying it.

Mr. Chairman: Order please! It seems to me that the time has expired.

Mr. Pilkey: I just want to conclude by making one statement, that compulsory arbitration is widening the gap between the private sector and the hospital workers that are negotiating in the public sector under compulsory arbitration, and there has just got to be funds provided that give these workers the same kind of equity that the workers can get in the private sector.

Mr. Chairman: The Minister has three minutes to reply then, we would have to pass votes 805, 806 and 807 before we sound the division bells and put vote 804. Shall we pass these votes before the Minister replies?

The hon. Minister; three minutes.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Well Mr. Chairman, of course, it is very, very difficult to do justice to this important subject in three minutes.

Mr. Chairman: The time for adjournment is 10.30 I must point out.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I think that what I want to say first is this: I am happy to hear all the suggestions from the hon. members of this House, because as I indicated here . . .

Mr. Lawlor: Are you really the oldest young Tory of them all?

Mr. Ben: Well welcome back! Where has the member been?

Hon. Mr. Wells: We are looking at every aspect of this programme and all the suggestions that have been made here will go into the input as we look at it.

My hon. friend over here referred to chiropractors. I met with the chiropractors recently, and the pediatricists. I am very interested in what they propose and we are looking very seriously at what they suggested.

The report on the standing committee on health has been mentioned many, many times. I would say that the only trouble with this report is that they did not come and ask the Minister of Health what his department is doing.

As I explained here the other day, we have had a group of over 200 people working on a total health plan for this province which will be unveiled in late January, and it is in this context that a health package, future health planning for the whole of this province in all its areas, will be able to be set against, and will carry on. I think that when the hon. members see this they will see the kind of things that we are doing.

Now, I would like to refer to the hon. leader of the Opposition's mention about the health clinic. I would just like to say, because I think this is a very important subject, that we are very happy at the way our relationship has worked out with these health clinics. We think that they will provide a good demonstration project, to show another way of delivering health services. We are going to be signing an agreement with them very shortly to pay them on a capitation basis, something which the task force on the cost of health services in Canada suggested should be done under Medicare plans.

Also we are going to carry on research studies through the school of hygiene at the University of Toronto and the University of Michigan school of public health to find out a lot of things about how these clinics are operating, and whether they are bringing about savings in areas such as use of active treatment beds.

It means that instead of a fee for service basis, they will be paid a sum for each member on the rolls of the clinic per year. It is an entirely different way of paying and is instead of paying on a fee for service basis.

Mr. Nixon: Not just guaranteeing them a minimum?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Oh no; also do not forget that for instance in the St. Catharines clinic anyone in St. Catharines is, as I understand it, free to join. You do not have to be a member of the union, anyone can join.

Because I think that this is very significant, I would like to read this statement. It should also be pointed out that when our arrangements with the health centre were concluded, we were advised by senior officials of the centres that this was the most progressive province or government agency with which they ever dealt at any time.

Hon. W. D. McKeough (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Hear, hear.

Hon. Mr. Wells: In fact, Ontario is the first area in the world where the union-sponsored health centres have been able to conclude a capitation arrangement. So I hope that our hon. members will remember that when they talk about our demonstration projects. In regard to the administration arrangements that the hon. member for High Park and others have referred to, we realize that these arrangements are presenting some difficulties and these are being looked into. We are going to do everything possible to correct them. In the matter of arrangements for information services in the city of Hamilton, we are going to expand the office there when we know exactly what the level of calls is going to be once we get out of the crisis period. We are going to expand it to make it a full public information office as we are going to do in London and Ottawa.

Mr. Deans: Is that instead of the zenith line?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Yes. We have found out that the zenith line would not be practical because it would overload our Toronto switchboard. It would not adequately serve Hamilton.

Mr. Deans: Can I make this arrangement instead of the member for Hamilton Mountain?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Five weeks ago we thought this would work, but the Bell Telephone Company now tells us we would be better off if we did not do this and instead expand our office over there. We have taken this advice.

Mr. Chairman, I realize that I do not have any further time to deal with a lot of these things. I do want to say that I think the major area of concern of the people of this province has been with the 90 per cent payment of the OMA fee schedule. I think that we had hoped that many doctors would accept this. We still do not know exactly how many are; even the survey that was referred to in the Daily Star on Saturday was taken among doctors that were at a certain meeting. We are doing studies to find out just exactly what the picture is.

It was reported at a meeting in Burlington that doctors told me that they had not been paid and yet we got a printout from the computers and found that, in fact, they had received or been sent cheques from OHSIP. One in the middle of November. I guess they just forget. People get kind of worked up in their emotional concern with this matter, but I do want to remind the members what we have said.

Mr. Makarchuk: The payments on the swimming pools were probably due.

Hon. Mr. Wells: We did propose under the original OMSIP legislation to pay 100 per cent of the OMA fee schedule. I believe all our friends on the other side of the House argued at great length against this section and voted against it. Then eventually we decided we would have to change our legislation and pay 90 per cent of the OMA fee schedule, which of course—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Order!

Hon. Mr. Wells: This is, of course, why we moved to pay 90 per cent when we brought OHSIP in.

Mr. Chairman: Order!

Hon. Mr. Wells: These are the facts. The record shows that you voted against it. If you just listen to my whole story, which if taken in its total context, of course is that there is no province in Canada that is paying the full 100 per cent of the fee schedule. So when we think about this, you realize that if we are to change, it would be something different from what has been instituted in the other provinces.

Mr. F. Young (Yorkview): Except the other provinces say the doctors must accept.

Hon. Mr. Wells: No they do not. They say that if you work within the plan, you must accept, which is a little different.

Mr. Ben: You know if you play bridge you should keep in mind that you play best when you pass.

Hon. Mr. Wells: When we know what the situation is in this province, then we will be able to take the appropriate steps. As I told this House before, and I have told many groups around this province when we have spoken about OHSIP, everything concerned with this plan is under consideration and when we are finished, we will have the best health care plan in Canada.

Mr. Chairman: Shall the votes carry?

Votes 805 to 807, inclusive, agreed to.

On vote 804:

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Nixon has moved that vote 804 be reduced by the sum of $12,000. Those in favour of Mr. Nixon's motion will please rise.

Those opposed to Mr. Nixon's motion will please rise.

Call in the members.

Clerk of the House: Mr. Chairman, the "ayes" are 30, the "nays" 47.

Mr. Chairman: I declare the motion lost.

Vote 804 agreed too.

Mr. Chairman: This completes the estimates of The Department of Health.

Hon. Mr. Welch moves the committee rise and report certain resolutions and ask for leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: The committee of supply begs to report that it has come to certain resolutions and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

Hon. R. S. Welch (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, tomorrow we will take second readings and other matters that are on the order paper. At eight o'clock we will consider order number 26, that is, concurrence in the supply for The Department of Education.

Hon. Mr. Welch moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 10:45 o'clock p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1969

The House met at 2.00 o'clock, p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: This afternoon in our galleries we have as guests, students from Humber College in Toronto in the east gallery; and in the west gallery students from Mayfield Secondary School, Brampton, and St. Joseph's Commercial School, Toronto.

Later this afternoon in the east gallery we will have students from St. Martin de Porres Separate School, West Hill.

Statements by the Ministry.

Hon. J. P. Robarts (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I would like to tell the House that the commissioner of the Royal commission on Atlantic Acceptance delivered to me yesterday the first copy of his report. It is a four volume document and it will be some time before I will have a sufficient number of copies for distribution to all the members here and to all those who are interested in it, so it appears it will take another week or so. I would hope that we will be able to release it a week from tomorrow; that would be December 10. We will make arrangements for the necessary briefings and so on at that time.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence (Minister of Mines): Mr. Speaker, a leading authority in the field of pulmonary diseases will conduct a complete review and study of silicosis in Ontario mines. Dr. John F. Paterson, head of the department of medicine at Sunnybrook Hospital, will make a thorough study of the incidence of silicosis among miners, the efficacy of present preventative measures and methods of diagnosis and treatment.

This will, in effect, be an updating of Dr. Paterson's previous study conducted in 1958, and a review of the resultant developments in the prevention and treatment of silicosis, sir, since his findings were reported in The Department of Mines bulletin No. 158, published in December of 1959. Dr. Paterson is expected to have a new report of his findings and recommendations for delivery to me by June of 1971.

Dr. Paterson will be given a completely free hand in carrying out his investigations and he will have the complete co-operation of The Department of Mines and the mining industry in our efforts to further improve the miners' environment.

Silicosis, a lung condition arising from the inhalation of silica dust particles, has been of continuing concern to the mining industry and to the government. In his 1959 report, Dr. Paterson found that in the years immediately preceding his investigation, there had been a dramatic drop in the incidence of the disease among Ontario miners. He stated that adequate dust control and ventilation provided the most effective preventative measures. The purpose of this new study is to report and review material, statistics and development in the intervening years.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York Centre.

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a matter of personal privilege.

Yesterday I had occasion to direct two questions to the hon. Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs. The first question had to do with the source of funds in connection with the acquisition of certain real estate property in the city of Toronto by J. V. Franciotti Real Estate Limited, Toronto.

Subsequently, and without any intention on my part to connect it with the previous question, I questioned the same Minister as to the possibility of agreement with Switzerland for an exchange of information on tax and security offences. I wish to make it absolutely clear to all members of the House that there was no intention, on my part, to connect J. V. Franciotti Real Estate Limited with my enquiry as to information relative to tax and security offences.

I wish to make it amply clear also, and to confirm, that the source of funds has since been disclosed to me and that there is no evidence or suggestion of illegal or foreign funds involved. If this has caused any embarrassment to Mr. Franciotti or his associates, I wish to set the record straight.

Mr. Speaker: Oral questions.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of urgent public importance.

Mr. Speaker: Then perhaps we will not start the oral question period until this matter has been settled.

Mr. Sargent: Regarding an amendment to The Highway Traffic Act that came into effect yesterday—the mandatory breathalyzer tests.

This bill, as it stand today, Mr. Speaker, means that anyone who fails to comply—

Mr. Speaker: Just a minute.

Mr. Sargent: —could have a charge against them—

Mr. Speaker: Order! Order!

Mr. Sargent: —and could not be bonded—

Mr. Speaker: Order! The hon. member will resume his seat.

If the hon. member is of the opinion that he would like to move that the House adjourn to debate a matter of urgent public importance under the rules of the House, which in that respect have not been amended, then perhaps the hon. member will make his intention known to Mr. Speaker, so that Mr. Speaker may deal with it. This is not the opportunity for the hon. member to make a speech.

Mr. Sargent: I apologize for that, Mr. Speaker. I would like to adjourn to debate this very important issue. Anyone who fails to comply can never get a passport, can never be bonded, can never get a government job. All the rest of their lives they will have a criminal record against them, and I think this is a bad piece of law. We should debate that today.

Mr. Speaker: I would point to the hon. member that the rules have not changed with respect to these matters. The practice and procedure in this Legislature heretofore is that such a motion be submitted in writing to Mr. Speaker in the morning, and this has not been done. At seven minutes to two the hon. member acquainted me with his intention of making this motion.

However, that is not the important problem at the moment. The rules of the House provide that any bill, or any matter that has been considered and decided by the Legislature at the same session may not be raised again.

My understanding is that the hon. member wishes to debate a bill which has been passed by this House and is now in force. My observation to him would be that the only way that could be done, of course, would be by introducing a bill, if he were so inclined, to repeal this bill. So, therefore, the hon. member and his motion are quite out of order.

Oral questions.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Premier what significance the overwhelming support expressed by the citizens of Toronto for lotteries and for amalgamation might have on government policy and what reaction the government will make to the results of the referendum.

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Mr. Speaker, we will take note of the opinion expressed by those citizens who cast their ballots yesterday.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary question: Regarding the policy review pertaining to lotteries that the Premier indicated a few days ago was underway, does that include the possibility of arranging legal requirements for municipal lotteries?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Yes, it would, Mr. Speaker. It really embodies the examination of the means by which we can, if we decide to, have them implement the powers that are given to the province under the amendments to the Criminal Code of Canada.

Mr. Nixon: A further supplementary. Is this review being undertaken by a Cabinet committee or a committee of people in the administration? If so, would this group be receiving submissions from those people in the community that might be interested either way?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: No, I do not think so. The legislation does not come into effect until January 1. It is an examination by the government as to what action might be appropriate.

There is no question of receiving submissions from the public in that matter. The amendments to the Criminal Code have been made and we are simply looking at how we are going to handle it; that is all.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary question. Would not the Premier consider it advisable, before embarking on new policy in this matter, to get the views of those people in the community that might have some significant contribution to make in the formation of this policy?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: We have had, Mr. Speaker, an expression of opinion in this regard. The matter has been debated in the House of Commons because the legislation had to be passed there. I think that this was a pretty fair public examination.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I have a further question of the Premier, following his announcement that the Royal commission report pertaining to Atlantic Acceptance would be available soon. I have checked this with the hon. member for Downsview (Mr. Singer) who is infallible in these matters and he said that this commission has been sitting for four years.

Does the Premier think it might be advisable in these cases, as they come forward, to give the responsibility of the investigation to a Royal commission which can, let us say, give attention to it on a more immediate basis? In other words the commission might not have to share its responsibilities with other activities in the community. It seems to me that after four years the commission findings would be of great importance, but in fact it is reporting on something that is becoming ancient history.

Hon. Mr. Robarts: One can submit this to the Legislature and the government can, I suppose, impose any limitation they want on it. We have had some commissions with time limitation, and we have had select committees with time limitations within which they have to report, but this was a very involved matter. I think when members see the report they will understand that it could not be limited. I do not know; it may have been possible to do it in somewhat less time. I believe the report itself was completed last summer and it has taken this long to put it into the form in which it now is. I do not know that I particularly want to substitute my judgement for that of the commissioner, as to how much time he should take to carry out the terms of his commission.

I recognize that this has been going on a long time, but as I said it is a very complex matter. We asked the commissioner to make recommendations as to what might be done to see that matters like this did not happen again, and I suppose really he took the time that he considered necessary to do the job that he was asked to do.

Under the circumstances it might have been proper to put a time limit on the report as we did with the select committee that was dealing with the Smith report, but in any event it is much too late now. The hon. member is asking me a theoretical question. The report is there and I am quite sure it will prove to be valuable.

Mr. Nixon: I wonder if the Premier could tell me, as a supplementary question, if the chairman of the commission devoted his full time to it; or did he in fact undertake other responsibilities as a judge during that period?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: I will ask him.

Mr. Nixon: The Premier does not know?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: No, I do not. I rather doubt that he gave up all his other activities. On the other hand, in discussing the question of Royal commissions with judges, what really happens is that the judge is detached from his court room to serve as Royal commissioner and his fellow judges simply have to double up and do his work.

I have no idea as to the percentage of the working hours Mr. Justice Hughes devoted to this report, and how many were devoted to his normal duties, but I am quite certain that a great deal of his working time was taken up with it. The hearings continued on for months and months; that was the only way he could get at the facts. It is the most tangled web that one could imagine and it took a very very long time to sort it all out and I think the hon. member will perhaps be appreciative of the effort that went into it when he sees the report.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Attorney General: Yesterday he indicated that he might have something further to say about the charges made by Peter Lott as far as the Metropolitan—or I believe the city of Toronto—police force is concerned.

Is the Attorney General now prepared to give some further information as to whether or not he, in his capacity as Attorney General, may undertake an investigation into the charges made by Constable Lott?

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I can offer this further. It is not what I consider would be the answer I would propose to give perhaps tomorrow or the next day—but yesterday, when the hon. member asked his question, I had arranged at that time a meeting with the board of commissioners for police of Metropolitan Toronto. I met them this morning at nine o'clock and spent an hour and a half with the whole board.

Among the things which we reviewed was this particular case. I think the hon. member is aware from the newspaper reports that the chief will be filing a report and that they will be conducting an investigation.

I would say generally with respect to an investigation of this kind, that I feel that the board has a responsibility of its own to review in public these matters; many of them that are their duty and their responsibility. Yesterday when the hon. member asked the question of me, he referred to the Bennett case. Now I had spoken about the investigation of the Bennett matter and made some statement about it in the House. And he also referred to the Shirley Hunter case. In that case, I have been in correspondence with the board of police commissioners—I indicated that my views were they should conduct the enquiry, that they should not be reviewed by the Ontario Police Commission—and the thought of the citizens review board, this is something I do not accept as a sensible way to go.

I am making my statement that extensive at this time, but I just want to assure the hon. member that before he asked the question, I had yesterday arranged for discussion with the board and I have had that discussion. The investigation will be carried on by them and I will have something more to say a little later in the question period.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): They finally answered your letter of October 12—right?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: We had no difficulty communicating.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary question about the difficulty in communications. I understood the Attorney General to say in this House some weeks ago that he felt the Police Commission should undertake certain investigations and he informed them of this, but that they have not undertaken the investigation.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I should perhaps have made it clear; the Hunter case, which the hon. member seems to assume was finished—that is not the case.

Mr. Nixon: Is it being investigated now?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: That is one of the matters we also discussed this morning.

Mr. Nixon: What did they say about that?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I will tell the hon. member that later if he will ask the proper question.

Mr. Speaker: The member for High Park; a supplementary question.

Mr. Singer: Six weeks later.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: It takes time to get the facts.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): A supplementary question to the Attorney General: In light of the wide concern on the part of the public, with the traffic courts, would the Attorney General assure us that the Lott report will be made public?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I will report on that matter when I give my answers to the questions that were asked yesterday, including that of the hon. member.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): The Attorney General is very circumspect today.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. McKeough), could I put this question to the Prime Minister? Is it the government's intention to bring amendments to The Assessment Act, now before the House, to incorporate or at least to reflect the recommendations of the report of the committee on farm assessment and taxation?

Hon. Mr. Roberts: Mr. Speaker, might I ask that this question be held for the Minister of Municipal Affairs? If the Minister does not turn up later, before the question period is over, I will find out and let the hon. member know.

Mr. MacDonald: A question to the Attorney General: In view of the news dispatches this morning that the new section to the Criminal Code, with regard to breathalyzer tests, is not being implemented in some areas because of the lack of equipment and in other areas because the policemen have not yet received instructions, would the Attorney General indicate exactly what the situation is with regard to the adequacy of equipment across the province to enforce it; and what conceivably is meant by the proposition that they are waiting instructions to enforce the law?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Speaker, I think I can answer very fully. I have some notes before me and perhaps I might use those and expand upon them.

At the present time in Ontario there are 92 breathalyzer units; 55 are located in provincial police detachments and 37 in municipal police departments. We have conducted courses through the centre of forensic science to train police officers and technicians to operate these units.

With the proclamation of sections 223 and 224 of the code we have designated 394 persons as qualified technicians and 23 persons as analysts, that is 394 qualified technicians to take the tests and 23 persons as analysts. That is in compliance with section 224, subsection 6(a) and 224A, subsection 6(a).

These units—that is the 92 units—are located in the Ontario provincial police district headquarters and also in many of the Ontario provincial police detachments in the 17 districts, as well as within selected municipal police departments. I have a list of those placements.

There are, in the north part of Ontario, some areas which do not have units readily available. However, every provincial police detachment does have the containers which will enable the samples to be taken so that a prisoner does not have to be transported to the machine. To this extent there is full compliance with the proclamation.

The sections to which I refer have not been proclaimed—that is sections 224A, 1(c) 1, and 224A, 1(f) 3; they have not been proclaimed as the federal Attorney General has not as yet designated an approved container. Therefore, there is no requirement at this time to provide the accused with a sample of his breath. The law was designed in its thinking so that the accused might demand and receive a sample of the breath at the same time as the one was taken, yet they have not proclaimed this at the federal level.

On November 7 we forwarded a memorandum to all breathalyzer units outlining the provisions of the new Act, namely, that the impaired section still exists—that is section 222; that there is a new section 223—which enables the police officer to demand a sample of breath, and if the sample is refused, he can lay a charge for such refusal.

Section 224 makes it an offence to operate a motor vehicle with a blood alcohol count level in excess of 80 milligrams.

To continue further, we asked all police forces some time ago to send in the names of those persons whom we trained of that 394—those that they wished to be named as technicians—so that they could give them a formal appointment. Some municipal forces have not done this yet, however, they are coming in. I signed some certificates two weeks ago, or thereabouts, qualifying 394 persons as technicians, many of them OPP and many of them members of municipal police forces. I think we have quite fully prepared for the proclamation of this law. There may be one or two areas where there is a little difficulty and some police forces have not responded as quickly as we thought they would. But if they have not—

Mr. Speaker: The member for Grey-Bruce was on his feet for a supplementary.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I perhaps should add this, if they have not they are perhaps not in a position to demand the test; they have not qualified to do it.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, in a supplementary manner, may I ask—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York South asked the original question, I think he should have the right to ask the next supplementary.

Mr. MacDonald: The Attorney General did not reply to that part of my question in which I asked him for an explanation of the news broadcast to the effect that in some instances the police forces are awaiting instructions. My query was, what conceivable instructions are they awaiting when it is their responsibility to enforce the law?

Secondly, if I may by way of supplementary question, how exactly is the situation operating? It may be that each OPP detachment has the necessary equipment to be able to record a breathalyzer test, but does that mean there is one piece of equipment in each detachment and the detachment may be covering 40, 50, 60 or 70 miles? Anybody who is suspected and wants to have a test will have to be brought back to the police headquarters to have a test taken? Am I correct in that?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: The breath sample may have to be brought a distance if the person is stopped on the highway, but there are 92; as I pointed out, there are 17 provincial police districts within which there are a number of detachments. Every detachment has a breathalyzer as well as many of the municipal forces.

I think we are fairly well equipped with the mechanical means to carry this out. However, I can conceive of the situation, as I am sure all members can, where a person is in such a state that you have to do more than just take samples of his breath for the protection of himself and the protection of the public.

The instruction went out to all police forces as to how this change in the Act was to be carried out and we have been busy for months in training police personnel through our centre of forensic science; we have then asked the head of the force to name those personnel whom he wished to have qualified as qualified technicians, in accordance with the Act. Some of those police forces, as of today—only a few of them—have not responded. But, as I say, 394 persons were certified over my signature.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Correctional Services): They are the fellows who take your breath away.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Grey-Bruce has a supplementary?

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Attorney General if, when he leaves the Chamber tonight, and he is driving home and he has had a touch before he goes, if the officer does not know he is the Attorney General and he insists he take the breathalyzer test and he refuses, does the Attorney General think he should be charged with a criminal offence for the rest of his life? And secondly, I would ask if he thinks this is good law?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Speaker, the federal government passed the law—and made it part of the Criminal Code—the law which says a policeman now may require of a person whom he suspects to be under the influence of drink or narcotic or alcohol, to stop and give a sample of his breath for analysis. Procedures are laid down for the analysis and for the quantity of alcohol—80 milligrams per thousand—which determines impairment.

The next section goes on to say that if the request to supply the sample is refused, the person is guilty of an offence for refusing and subject to the same penalty as if he were—

Mr. Sargent: Is this good law?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: The hon. member asks, "Is this good law?" This was passed by our federal Parliament.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The Liberals, you know.

Mr. Sargent: Since when did they start passing "good laws?"

Hon. Mr. Wishart: The law, which is now part of our Criminal Code, is very similar in terms to that which has been in use in Britain for some time, and which has had the effect of reducing, to a very great extent, fatality and injury on the highways. I think it would be fair to say it is good law. We have had our Highway Traffic Act conform to it so that we have the right to lift or suspend a licence in connection with one of these offences.

Mr. Sargent: As a supplementary, I would like to ask the Attorney General for the record if he does not believe, in view of the fact there is no defence on these two points, that this is an invasion of privacy of a citizen of this province. It is an invasion of their personal life?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: This is a question of opinion, but I would be glad to answer it. Every law one passes—the law to keep you to the right side of the road, the law which makes you stop at a stoplight—every law takes away some privilege which without law everybody might exercise.

But every law, in curbing rights, extends generally and enlarges the rights of the public. For the safety and protection of the public it becomes necessary to impose certain restrictions. But that in effect widens the enjoyment and freedom and safety by which you go.

Mr. Sargent: I think it is pretty weak to accept that law.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, the first question: The Attorney General mentioned that he has signed 394 certificates of qualification; on what basis are those determined, by local tests or by province-wide tests?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: These were people who had been given training in the use of the breathalyzer—the taking of the sample that has to be sent in for analysis.

Mr. Singer: Yes, but by whom?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: By our centre of forensic sciences generally—

Mr. Singer: They are brought in?

Hon. Mr. Wishart:—and certain information and material given to the forces.

Mr. Singer: Well, are these students, these qualified persons brought in to a central location for this course of instruction.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I am not sure that all of them are. I could check that for the hon. member.

Mr. Singer: By way of further supplementary, I noticed in the press that the Metropolitan Toronto police said they were only going to enforce that section of the code if the reading was .1 or higher. And the OPP said that they were going to enforce the code if the reading was .08 or higher.

Does the Attorney General agree that it is logical to have two police forces in the province operating on different bases?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I think the practice will be that two samples will be taken. I think it is required to take two samples, 15 minutes apart. The lower one is to be the one to be relied upon, as I understand the procedure. Now, it is very new and we have not got it completely cleared, but I think, generally, that while 80 milligrams is .08 per cent, I would think that the police force should not set its own standards but should follow the law. I am told that if it is very close to .08 per cent there might be some discretion exercised—

Mr. Singer: The Metro police are going to be a bit more generous.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: A discretion is exercised. That is all I know at the moment.

Mr. Sargent: A further supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: There is a member toward the rear of the Opposition. The member for York Centre has a supplementary?

Mr. Deacon: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker. Has the Minister studied the feasibility of using alternative means of breath measurement, such as the glass capsule breathalyzer that is now on the market?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I have studied them in the sense that I have read about them, but this is the method that has been adopted generally across Canada and we have not contemplated another system at the present time.

Mr. Deacon: A further supplementary. Would the Minister study the feasibility of these as they would not require the same expertise in training on the part of individuals having to use them?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: We are considering them, Mr. Speaker, in the sense that we have been looking at the various methods which can be used, and those which are most feasible.

The main object is accuracy in the test. If you have a system which does not give accurate results, then it could result in great injustice.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent: Could I ask the Attorney General, Mr. Speaker, how does he equate the difference of tolerance in different people—a 100 pound man and a 250 pound man?

The member for High Park and the member for Welland, I mean, have different tolerances. How does he equate that?

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Sargent: I know neither one of them takes a drink, that is why I bring them up.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I think if they were over .08 per cent we would have to treat them both the same.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sarnia has a supplementary.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): Do I understand the Attorney General correctly that his instructions to the police are they are to give a test and wait 15 minutes and give a second test?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: No, that is not in the instructions.

Mr. Bullbrook: Could the Minister clarify what he said previously in connection with a second test?

Mr. MacDonald: Two samples, 15 minutes apart.

Mr. Bullbrook: That is what I understood.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Speaker, since the hon. members seem particularly interested in this matter, perhaps I might read a memorandum which went out to all breathalyzer units under date of November 7. That is the memo I referred to. This is what was sent forward.

It is directed to all breathalyzer units, dated November 7, and is headed, "Re Amendments to the Criminal Code Pertaining to Drinking and Driving".

Information available at present indicates that the relevant amendments to the Criminal Code may be proclaimed as early as December 1, 1969.

The following is forwarded as a guide to those parts of the new sections which may require some explanation from a technical point of view. For advice and points of law you should consult your Crown attorney. The recommended procedure for the use of the breathalyzer is included, so that there will be uniformity throughout the province.

Section 222: This section is identical to the present section 223, and therefore requires no explanation. Presumably the evidence required for this section from a breathalyzer operator will be the same as it is at present.

That is, impairment.

Section 223: This section allows a police officer to demand a sample of breath for analysis, and provides a penalty for the refusal to provide such a sample without reasonable excuse.

It must be stressed that this section only applies where the officer has reasonable and probable grounds to believe that the offence of impaired driving has been committed.

Presumably information received by a breathalyzer operator from another police officer constitutes reasonable and probable grounds.

A sample of his breath suitable to enable an analysis to be made is the requirement of the section.

And we go on to say—

A proper and complete breath test consists of the analysis of two, separate, deep lung specimens. The first specimen must not be collected until the accused has been in the breathalyzer operator's presence for at least 15 minutes.

The specimens should be collected about 15 minutes apart and the results of the analysis should agree within .02 per cent, or a third specimen should be taken.

Mr. MacDonald: It is a half-hour then.

Mr. Bullbrook: That sounds like a half hour to me.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: To continue:

Failure by an accused to provide a proper sample should constitute a refusal to comply with the demand except in cases where the accused is physically unable to give a deep lung sample. In such cases the operator should analyze the sample and record a proper description of the quality of the specimen collected along with the result. An offer by the accused to provide a blood sample may constitute reasonable excuse for refusal to provide a breath sample.

We go on to section 224.

This section makes it an offence for a person to operate a motor vehicle or have the care or control of a motor vehicle when his or her blood alcohol level exceeds 80 milligrams in 100 millilitres. All breathalyzer results should be expressed in terms of milligrams of alcohol in 100 millilitres. A conversion chart for per cent parts per thousand and milligrams in 100 millilitres is attached.

Breathalyzer readings should be taken to two decimal places and then expressed as milligrams in 100 millilitres. For example, a reading such as .088 per cent would be taken as .08 per cent and reported as 80 milligrams of alcohol in 100 millilitres of blood.

It should be noted that the offence requires that the blood alcohol level exceed 80 milligrams in 100 millilitres.

Thus the minimum, practical offence level is 90 milligrams of alcohol in 100 millilitres of blood, otherwise you have to take it out to a part decimal point. So we take it as 90.

Considering the accuracy—

And this has always become the question that the hon. member for Downsview asks—

Considering the accuracy and the instrumental tolerance of the breathalyzer, an additional ten milligrams per 100 millilitres should be allowed. It is therefore recommended that the minimum enforcement level be 100 milligrams of alcohol in 100 millilitres of blood.

Mr. Singer: Point one.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Point one.

When two breathalyzer tests are conducted 15 minutes apart, the results could vary by .01 per cent—that is 10 milligrams per 100 millilitres. Due to a normal variation in the quality of the two breath specimens, it is recommended that the lower result be reported on the certificate of analysis.

The lower one, not the higher one.

Then there were two pages of further technical directions with respect to this matter which I do not think I need to read. They dealt with the containers, how they would be sent in for analysis and so on.

We gave these instructions as I pointed out on November 7, and, I think, quite thoroughly.

Mr. Bullbrook: Do I understand correctly from what has been read to us by the Attorney General, that the accused will be taken into the presence of the person performing the necessary operation of the equipment, be held for 15 minutes and that a sample of his breath will be taken? He will then be held for another 15 minutes and another sample of the breath will be taken? I would like to clarify that; is that correct?

And if that is correct, I would like to ask the Attorney General on what legal basis the police have the right to hold an accused person without charge for the additional 15 minutes, for the second sample?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I do not think it will be necessary, as the hon. member states, or how rightly, Mr. Speaker, that the person stopped will be taken to a station or kept in custody if necessary. But what we point out is that the sample should not be taken unless the person has been in the presence of the officer for 15 minutes.

Mr. Bullbrook: In answer to my question, perhaps the hon. Minister intended to answer it—am I correct in assuming that he is held after the initial sample is given for an additional 15 minutes? And a second sample is taken? I ask the Attorney General what legal right the police have to hold the man without charge for the additional 15 minutes for the taking of the second sample.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I will have to check, Mr. Speaker, to get the authority for that but there is authority for it. I cannot be specific at the moment.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Downsview.

Mr. Singer: By way of supplementary arising out of what the Attorney General said. Do I understand correctly that those instructions that he read recommended that no charge be laid unless the reading is 0.1? Is that the last part he read?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Not exactly in those words. We pointed out the variation in the mechanical exactitude of this testing equipment, and the tolerance that should be allowed. This was a matter of tolerance and what we said was that it should be noted that the offence required that the blood alcohol level must exceed 80 milligrams. It would have to be more than 80. Thus the minimum practical offence level is 90 milligrams.

Then we said, considering the accuracy and the instrumental tolerance of the breathalyzer an additional 10 milligrams per 100 millilitres should be allowed; therefore we recommended that the minimum enforcement level be 100 milligrams of alcohol in the 100 millilitres of blood.

Mr. Singer: Would the Attorney General please bring that last sentence to the attention of the commissioner of the Ontario Provincial Police? By way of a further supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I understand—

Hon. Mr. Wishart: He has got it. They all have got that. Everyone concerned got that memorandum.

Mr. Singer: I understand that it is going to be the common practice of police forces, where a person has a reading of higher than .08, which is now a criminal offence, to charge them not only with that offence but also with the offence of driving while their ability is impaired. Has the Attorney General issued any instructions about the duplicity of this kind of charge, recognizing that they are two separate charges and perhaps would be two separate offences? Does the Attorney General not agree that this double charging would be unfair?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: The sections are still in the code. The offence of driving while impaired is there and then there is the provision for the taking of the test and then the further offence of refusing. I did not quite get from the hon. member—there would be the offence of impaired driving; what other offence does he say is being charged?

Mr. Singer: The amendment to the code has created a new offence of having a blood alcohol content of higher than .08; that by itself is an offence. Now it has been indicated by certain police departments and by certain Crown attorneys that it will be their intention to charge a person found in this condition with two offences—the offence of having a higher blood alcohol content than the code allows and, secondly, with the offence of driving while the ability is impaired. I was shocked when I read that and I wonder if the Attorney General has any views on it and has given any instructions to enforcement authorities about this.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I have not seen any such suggestion. I would be a bit shocked to find out if that were followed. But let me point out, it is not an offence for me to stand here and have .1 parts of alcohol in my blood. It is only an offence when connected with the control or operation of a vehicle. That is the impaired driving charge right there.

Mr. Singer: But the charge of ability impaired still continues. It is still there. It is an old one.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Only if it is related to the care, operation or control of a vehicle.

Mr. Singer: I know—they both relate.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: But if you pick up a person he must be at the wheel of a vehicle. If his blood content is over the permitted amount, then he is charged with operating a vehicle, if they are driving. I cannot see how you could charge two offences. It has got to be related to the vehicle.

Hon. S. J. Randall (Minister of Trade and Development): If you are going to drink and drive, make sure you have a car.

Mr. Speaker: I would think the academic legal problem raised here might be better decided by the courts at a later time. I think that we have had a very full discussion of this matter, therefore I would rule out of order further supplementaries on it.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: After our extended pre-occupation on this issue, I wonder if I might go back to my original question and put it to the Minister of Municipal Affairs? Is it the intention of the Minister to bring in amendments to The Assessment Act now before the House to incorporate, or at least to reflect, the import of the recommendations of the committee on farm assessment and taxation?

Hon. W. D. McKeough (Minister of Municipal Affairs): No, Mr. Speaker. I indicated before that it would not be possible at this session. We have, I believe, commenced testing recommendations of a report in a county. It will take a month or so to do that. Presumably, when we have the results of the testing and know what the implications of the report are on a whole county, or perhaps two counties, or parts of another county, then we will be in a position to move to amendments. I would hope early in the year.

Mr. Speaker: Has the member for Huron-Bruce a supplementary?

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker. On that point, is the Minister still intending to send the report to the agriculture committee?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: We seem to be having great trouble, Mr. Speaker, in arranging a meeting of the agricultural committee to do this. I understand that there are several committees meeting with the same personnel. The Minister of Agriculture and Food (Mr. Stewart) hoped to be there. I understand he is somewhat preoccupied with another committee at this point. The chairman's office was in touch with me this morning as to when a time could be arranged, and I do not think a time has been arranged as yet.

Mr. Speaker: Has the member for York South completed his questions? The member for Grey-Bruce has a question.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, a two-point question for the Provincial Treasurer. Can the hon. Treasurer advise the House of the millions of dollars he hopes to save this year by central purchasing? Secondly, why is The Department of Highways not included in central purchasing?

Hon. C. S. MacNaughton (Treasurer): I seem to recall answering a similar question the other day.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, that is not answering my question at all.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order!

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, I am trying to remember what I said.

Mr. Sargent: If he told the truth the first time—

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I always tell the truth; you know that.

Hon. Mr. Randall: He talks fast; just listen fast!

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: The Department of Highways is not excluded. That is rather a negative way to say it, but to the best of my information, The Department of Highways is involved in the central purchasing function.

Mr. Sargent: But they say not—

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: As a matter of fact, I may be wrong. But for a time at least, the Deputy Minister of Highways was a member of the central purchasing board. I am not in a position to tell you how much has been saved yet. I do not think that the central purchasing committee could tell us yet what has been saved, but they will. When they do we will be happy to tell the House.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Thunder Bay.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to ask a question of the Prime Minister. Would the Prime Minister look into the possibility of extending GO-Transit north from Metro Toronto to include places like Newmarket, Aurora and up as far as Barrie by the use of dayliners on the Canadian National Railways? It operates there on the weekend, but could be utilized to provide an extension of GO on weekdays with a stopover at Barrie overnight and coming southward the next morning from Monday to Friday?

Hon. Mr. Roberts: Mr. Speaker, I have no doubt that this possibility has been examined by the technical people who have been working on this whole question for some considerable time. I will check and find out. I do not know how feasible it is to set up a rail service that operates only on certain days of the week. However, I would be happy to check with the GO-Transit people.

I think I will find that they have looked into this possibility because they examined all possibilities as far as utilization of track is concerned, and other modes of transportation which was the basis of the report I gave the House last week.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Wentworth.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Education.

Has the Minister been in communication with the city of Hamilton board of education with regard to the pending resignations of some 80 per cent of the teachers in that area due to an inability to reach a satisfactory contract?

Hon. W. G. Davis (Minister of Education): Mr. Speaker, I believe there was some communication to my office this morning from the Hamilton board of education wishing to bring officially to my attention the situation as it exists in the city of Hamilton. I anticipate we will be meeting with them some time next week.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough East.

Mr. T. Reid (Scarborough East): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Education.

Did the Minister meet with the hon. Gerard Pelletier today to discuss the educational television arrangements, and if so, what were the results of the discussions?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, the council of Ministers of Education have been meeting yesterday and today here in the city of Toronto. Mr. Pelletier joined us for discussions this morning related to educational television, its definition, and one or two related matters, such as finance. The meetings were still going on, Mr. Speaker, when I returned here. I hope to eventually join them again later on this afternoon.

I would say with respect to the definition, we have made very substantial progress.

Mr. T. Reid: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, could the Minister tell us whether this government or the federal government will be paying for the over-$500,000 worth of capital equipment?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, in spite of the discussions and the rather awkward position that the Opposition placed the Minister of Education in at the education committee, our position is still the same with the federal government. We believe that the transmission should be paid for by the federal government. There has been no decision yet as to whether they will or not.

Mr. T. Reid: A second supplementary—

Hon. Mr. Randall: Tune in to channel 8 at 10.00 o'clock tonight.

Mr. T. Reid: The Minister might as well know that we support his request in this regard.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Cochrane South.

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Health.

In view of the growing concern in north-eastern Ontario about the delay in renewing the contract of the medical director of the northeastern psychiatric hospital, will the Minister inform the House if the doctor's contract will be renewed? If so, when will it be, and if not, why not?

Hon. T. L. Wells (Minister of Health): Mr. Speaker, I thank the hon. member for that question. It is certainly the kind of question that I will have to take under advisement and get the answer for him.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Huron-Bruce.

Mr. Gaunt: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Health.

In view of the concern expressed in response to a statement coming from a high official in OHSC when he said that the private ambulance operators across the province would all be out of business in two years' time, does this represent government policy? If so, when was this change in policy made?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of that statement. Is this something the hon. member has read in the paper recently? Certainly it does not represent government policy. It is not the policy of this government to put the private ambulance operators out of business.

It is our policy to provide an effective ambulance network for the province using private sources, public sources, and under various arrangements.

Mr. Gaunt: Would the Minister like to communicate with OHSC and transmit that message to them?

Mr. Speaker: Has the member for High Park a supplementary?

Then the member for Sandwich-Riverside.

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Energy and Resources Management.

Is the Minister making any presentation to the International Joint Commission meeting in Toronto today, other than the advertisement in the morning press?

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Minister of Energy and Resources Management): Mr. Speaker, representatives of my department, particularly OWRC, will be attending the meetings today in Toronto.

Mr. Burr: As a supplementary, could the Minister explain how water pollution is being reduced or eliminated in Ontario through the publication of such expensive and self-laudatory advertisements as this one appearing today?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, this is part of a campaign to make people aware of what the Ontario Water Resources Commission is doing. They had a certain amount of funds, as the hon. member knows, set aside in their current budget for this, and the advertisement in this morning's newspaper was part of this expenditure.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Rainy River has a supplementary?

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker. Could the Minister inform the House, of the some 19 recommendations of the report, which ones the OWRC were recommending be adopted by the IJC?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: You are talking about the preliminary report of the commission? Well, as far as the reports dealing with the Great Lakes are concerned in respect to detergents and matters such as that, the commission will be making submissions.

Rather than picking specific recommendations, the commission will be dealing with the whole sphere of the original presentation of IJC, and at the same time indicating to the International Joint Commission what we feel the standards should be in the lakes in order to prevent the further deterioration of those bodies of water.

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary question?

Mr. Burr: The Minister missed my last supplementary. Could he give me the cost of the ad in today's paper, and how many papers it was placed in?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: I understand the cost, Mr. Speaker, is approximately $10,000 and it will appear in 13 dailies.

Mr. M. Makarchuk (Brantford): A supplementary to the same question, Mr. Speaker. Will the presentations made by the OWRC today to the International Joint Commission consider the pollution in the St. Mary's River at the Soo?

Hon. Mr. Burr: Well, Mr. Speaker, this could be considered although the commission hearing today will deal mainly with waters that are international, where more than one jurisdiction borders on these waters, particularly the lakes. In view of the location of the St. Mary's River I would assume that this would be included.

Mr. Speaker: The member for High Park.

Mr. Shulman: I have a question of the Minister of Health, Mr. Speaker: Has the hon. Minister investigated the report that administrative expenses of hospital insurance are two-thirds higher in Ontario than in the rest of Canada, which report was prepared by the research and statistics branch of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare? If the hon. Minister has, what is the reason for this excessive cost in Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I have not seen this report from the United States source, and not having seen it I do not know what they base it on. If they have done a survey it must have been in regard to our OMSIP operation—

Mr. Shulman: Hospital insurance administration.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Oh I am sorry. Hospital administration. I will look into it and see. I have not seen the report.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, a question to the Attorney General: Due to the fact that many people across Ontario in business and commerce and industry are concerned about their privacy, will the Attorney General level with the House and tell us, is he or is he not going to give us a report on the extent of the electronic devices used by the police and by other people in this province? Is it forthcoming or not?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I think the hon. member, Mr. Speaker, is referring to a question he asked as to the amount of money in my estimates. We have that information fairly well completed. We have had to check with the detachments of the force and our estimates. I will have that answer for him very shortly. It is practically complete now.

Mr. Sargent: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Timiskaming.

Mr. D. Jackson (Timiskaming): A question of the Minister of Mines.

Am I correct in believing that Dr. Pater-son's study into the incidence of silicosis will include a study into the possibility of improving detection methods of silicosis and like diseases?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Yes.

Mr. Ferrier: May I ask a supplementary, Mr. Speaker? Will the study also include the relationship of such things as emphysema and cancer and TB in miners through their dust exposure and silica dust exposure?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: No, I do not believe so, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

Mr. Lewis: I have a question, Mr. Speaker, of the Minister without Portfolio, from Stormont.

What has the Minister without Portfolio done within the Cabinet to provide jobs and retraining for the 600 workers who have been displaced from Courtaulds Canada Limited?

Mr. Speaker: I am sure the member will realize that the way the question is worded, it is not a proper question because proceedings in the executive council are, I presume, in camera. If the hon. member wishes to rephrase his question, I am sure the Minister would answer it.

Mr. Lewis: Would the Minister without Portfolio indicate what measures the government is undertaking to provide jobs for the 600 workers displaced at Courtaulds Canada Limited, Cornwall?

Hon. F. Guindon (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, in reply to the hon. member, I first want to say my department has nothing to do with it.

Mr. Lewis: But the Minister will admit that he does?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I as a member did employ a few of these workers at Courtaulds who were laid off on November 1. I think the Minister of Trade and Development could give the hon. member some answers as to what we have done to save the jobs of many hundreds of people in Courtaulds.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: What is the NDP doing for them, except shedding crocodile tears?

Mr. Lewis: May I direct another question to the Minister?

Mr. Speaker: Yes, if it is on this same matter, it can be transferred to another Minister.

Mr. Lewis: Well, I prefer to refer to the Minister of Labour, if that is permissible on this question.

To the Minister of Labour: in what way has the retraining programme in the Cornwall area been expanded to accommodate 600 new members of the unemployed work force?

Hon. D. A. Bales (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, it has not been expanded as yet. We are working with Canada Manpower to assess the needs of those people, including retraining needs and the possibility of employment in the other industries.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary: is the Minister saying that with 1,600 people unemployed now and another 600 added, there is no expansion of the retraining programme?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, I did not say that at all.

Mr. Lewis: Well, the figure came from the Minister's colleague yesterday. Is he saying that in the face of that, there is no guaranteed expansion at the moment?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, regretfully I was not in the House yesterday and I did not hear those figures.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, has the Minister no definite policies about the 600 people who have been thrown into unemployment by virtue of the lay off, in fact by virtue of termination?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, initially I believe that this matter is being assessed, along with the Canada Manpower centres there, as to the needs of those people and the opportunities now present for employment.

Mr. Lewis: There are no opportunities.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Timiskaming.

Mr. Jackson: Actually by way of a supplementary to the Minister of Mines: will he include in his study, or request Dr. Paterson to include in his study, the relationship of emphysema and other diseases to the dust exposure in mines?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: No, Mr. Speaker. This is a subject matter that is receiving consideration for perhaps a further study at the moment.

Mr. Speaker: Are there any further questions?

Petitions.

Presenting reports.

Mr. J. R. Smith, from the standing education and university affairs committee, presented a report from the committee which was read as follows and adopted: Your committee begs to report the following bill without amendment:

Bill 41, The Ontario College of Art Act, 1968-1969.

Your committee begs to report the following bills with certain amendments:

Bill 45, An Act to amend The Schools Administration Act.

Bill 46, An Act to amend The Secondary Schools and Boards of Education Act.

Mr. Speaker: Now, we must deal with the disposition of the bills. The first one is Bill 41, The Ontario College of Art Act, 1968-1969. Shall it be ordered for third reading?

Agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: The next one is Bill 45, An Act to amend The Schools Administration Act. Shall it be ordered for third reading?

Agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: The next one is Bill 46, An Act to amend The Secondary Schools and Boards of Education Act. Shall it be ordered for third reading?

Agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: Presenting reports.

Hon. R. S. Welch (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present to the House the following reports:

The annual report of the Settlers Loan Commissioner for the year ended March 31, 1969.

The annual report of the Commission of Agricultural Loans for the year ended March 31, 1969.

Motions.

Introduction of bills.

Hon. J. Yaremko (Minister of Social and Family Services): Mr. Speaker, I would ask the permission of the House to introduce a bill without having given notice thereof. It is The Child Welfare Amendment Act, 1968-1969, No. 2, which has to do with the adoption case which was handed down recently by the Supreme Court of Canada.

Mr. Speaker: Do I have the unanimous consent of the House?

The Minister will proceed.

THE CHILD WELFARE ACT, 1965

Hon. Mr. Yaremko moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend The Child Welfare Act, 1965.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, as Minister of The Department of Social and Family Services, I am concerned for the welfare of the children who, through due process of law, find themselves wards of the Crown committed to the care of our children's aid societies.

A recent decision of the Supreme Court of Canada brought forcibly to our attention the need for clarification of our Child Welfare Act in order to fully protect such Crown wards as are placed on adoption.

Though the language of the bill is somewhat technical, the amendment that is proposed will make it clear that once a child has been made a Crown ward and placed in a home with parents who wish to adopt him, nothing should upset that placement if it is in the interests of the child to remain there.

We felt it of such importance to clarify the position of Crown wards in adoption homes that this amendment is introduced today without having been placed on the order paper in the knowledge that all members of the House will appreciate our desire to protect all parties concerned.

Mr. Speaker: Introduction of bills.

Orders of the day.

Clerk of the House: Eleventh order, House in committee of the whole; Mr. A. E. Reuter in the chair.

The Honourable, the Lieutenant-Governor recommends the following:

That,

an income tax shall be paid by every individual who was resident in or had income earned in Ontario, being 28 per cent of the tax payable under The Income Tax Act (Canada) in respect of the 1970 taxation year, as provided in Bill 223, An Act to amend The Income Tax Act, 1961-1962.

Resolution concurred in.

Hon. Mr. Welch moves the committee rise and report a certain resolution and ask for leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of the whole House begs to report a certain resolution, and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

Bill 228, An Act to amend The Department of Education Act.

Bill 231, An Act to amend The Ontario Municipal Board Act.

Bill 232, An Act to amend The Municipal Franchises Act.

Bill 233, An Act to amend The Highway Traffic Act.

Clerk of the House: In Her Majesty's name, the Honourable, the Lieutenant-Governor doth assent to these bills.

The Honourable, the Lieutenant-Governor was pleased to retire from the Chamber.

THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY ACT

Hon. J. P. Robarts (Prime Minister) moves second reading of Bill 236, An Act to amend The Legislative Assembly Act.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, when the bill was introduced by the Premier last week, he undertook to give quite an extensive list of reasons for the increase in indemnity and allowances of the members of the House and pertaining to the bill which I expect, sir, will be called next, The Executive Council Act.

I feel, as leader of the Opposition, I want to take part in this discussion which was initiated at the time of first reading by recalling the fact that this being December 2 we are halfway through the thirteenth month of this session, making it the longest session in the history of this Legislature, and one which has occupied our time quite completely for more than a year.

The extension of time is an interesting thing to examine. I recall a story around my home when the indemnity, I understand, was less than $1,000 a year, that The Legislative Assembly Act required the House to sit 30 days before even that indemnity was collected and when the period of time was less, that a per diem of, I think, $6 was payable.

The members of the then House, some years previously, had completed their business and to their surprise and perhaps horror, they found that the full 30 days had not elapsed. But I suppose the story is apocryphal. Still it is told that the Legislature passed a resolution to include Saturdays, which was, of course, a travelling day for members in those times, in the total list of days and they reached the required 30 days so that the indemnity was payable.

I think we have to discuss this matter as openly as we can. I do not know whether it is possible to justify any particular amount of indemnity because there is no doubt in our minds, Mr. Speaker, that many members of the House have their time more fully occupied with business here and business in their constituencies than others. There is nothing in The Election Act, or any other law that I know of, that makes the responsibilities of all members identical and you, sir, coming from a rural area must surely agree with me that the responsibilities pertaining to that sort of representation are responsibilities far different from those experienced by members from urban constituencies. But the time required for the consideration of the work of the Legislature, as well as the time required in the constituency, to deal with individual requirements of our constituents—often complaints, but often just simply calls for assistance and further information—have grown enormously in recent months and years as well.

I know that some of the members who have had the responsibility to sit in this House for far longer than I have told me that they can recall periods of time when perhaps the calls from their constituents would be numbered at two or three a week, whereas now if they are not at home their wives or someone helping them in their business will be receiving perhaps 10 or 12 calls a day, and my hon. friend from Huron-Bruce who really knows about these things says sometimes 30 calls. But the business has expanded in every way.

The second thing I want to bring to your attention, sir, is the fact that the new rules that were used experimentally for the last three weeks and up until the end of this session, seem to be working very well indeed. I would predict that in fact the next session of the Legislature will not be longer than this one, but will be shorter. Of course it would have to be, if we are going to have a session in which we do the work of the province in less than one year, and of course the yearly business must be done in less than a year. This is a very special circumstance; when the deliberations have extended beyond the 12 months.

I have often thought even before the session has got this long, that we were far too long here at the Legislature. On the other side of the coin, we were far too long away from the Legislature. When the session began, as it has customarily in recent years, in January or early February, and we sit right through into July and sometimes August in order to accomplish the business in one fell swoop, our connections with our constituencies grow very thin. We grow tired of the public business, and then when the work is completed, we are back at home in the constituency for perhaps six or seven months which is really a poor distribution of the time.

I look forward to a full year session, but a session that is divided into three sections of work: winter, spring and fall sessions, so that we are looking forward to the session when we are at home, doing the work of a constituency and when we are here, we realize that after two to three months of continuous work in the consideration of the estimates, the committee work and the consideration of legislation, that it has become and can become a more orderly job than it has been under the rules for the last five or six years.

The new rules, I believe, can accomplish this. They will bring a more orderly atmosphere if not, perhaps, more orderly debate into the consideration of the business of Ontario.

The third thing, sir, that I want to refer to are the travel requirements which are considered, of course, in the bill that is before us with 30 round trips to our constituencies paid for at ten cents a mile. This appears to be reasonably generous, but my feeling is that a member of the Legislature should have the right, at public expense, to travel between the capital and his constituency at any time that he judges it is in the interest of the constituency so to do.

People concerning themselves with this aspect of meeting members' requirements have laboured for a long time over the possibility of making better use of air travel. I am sure you will agree that while the use of trains is still quite convenient for a few of the members, for a good many of our fellow members the train is no longer a means of travel to consider. It is simply too long a time occupied and beyond that the restrictions of the train facilities themselves mean that far fewer of the communities are served by rail travel.

The pass on the train that has been historically given to the members and is still available to us is far less useful than it once was. I recall taking my father to the train in years gone by when he was the member for Brant before me. When he left for Toronto, he was gone for the week and would return Friday evening or Saturday morning. Things have changed. I can drive back and forth the 60 miles every day without too much inconvenience. Of course, if the requirements of my responsibilities are such that I should be here in town or some other town in the province, this can be much more easily managed than it had been in years gone by.

But I think, essentially, we should be looking to a time when travel requirements have no restrictions. The members should travel between their constituencies and the Parliament buildings when it is in their judgment useful and suitable for them to do so, and the availability of air transportation should be made use of at every opportunity.

The members' facilities are something that should be considered in conjunction with the change in the indemnity. We feel that these facilities have been improved but still, Mr. Speaker, you must be aware that members have legitimate complaints. Their offices are not adequate for the increased burden of work, pertaining to their presence here in the Legislature almost year around and the fact that our connections with the constituencies, I think, are much closer than they had been in the past.

We have more delegations; we have many more constituents calling on us here in the Legislature. The mail which comes to us on a number of issues is much heavier than it had been in the past. As I talk to you, sir, my eyes fall on the stack of letters on the desk of the hon. member for Downsview. He tells me this is the mail he has got today; I do not know how many letters are in my grasp, but there is quite a bunch of them. Mind you, he has served his constituency adequately and, as a matter of fact, very well indeed, so that he, like so many other members, finds that his connections with the constituency are becoming much more enormous as far as the use of the mail and the telephone is concerned. The job is increasing in its complexity and the time that it requires at a very rapid rate.

I think that this whole aspect of the close touch with the electorate is reflected in the indemnity and the assistance that is payable to members to meet their obligations. We have had some discussions in other places about the fact that many members for rural areas are put to considerable amounts of expense and time in travelling about their constituencies. There is no particular complaint about this until you get to the constituencies, perhaps in the far north, north-east and north-western Ontario, where the hon. members often are put to the expense of chartering aircraft or perhaps hitching a lift with the government aircraft in order to visit all parts of far ranging constituencies which would require many hundreds of miles of travel, often at their own expense.

The opposite side to that, of course, is in the heavily urbanized constituencies where many members have undertaken to provide offices or at least a special phone line so that the concentration of people requiring assistance and advice from their members or who wish to contact their members with complaints, or advice running in the other direction, would be able to do so conveniently. It will be well known and publicly well known how they might contact the member.

There is another matter that I want to bring to your attention, sir, and that is the disparity in costs that members must meet to travel some considerable distance to the Legislature. I was comparing those costs of the members in the immediate vicinity of these buildings, particularly in Metropolitan Toronto, and in the immediate constituencies around Toronto. We made an attempt in the last indemnity bill to make up for this disparity by including a $1,000 allowance that was payable to those members outside Toronto.

There were arguments both ways. I have heard members from Toronto say that their costs are equally high by the time they provided for their constituencies through offices and so on. But I am still, perhaps, a bit biased, being a member from outside of town. I would say to you, sir, that in my opinion there are more expenses associated with a constituency removed from Toronto, compared with those that are payable by a Toronto member.

These have not been accounted for in the bill, other than for the provision of the travel allowance which, at least in part, makes up for this difference in cost responsibility. I do not know what the answer to the problem would be. I know many people considered the possibility of some differences in indemnity or expenses, but still this bill gives a flat indemnity and the same expense allowance to members whatever their constituency or wherever their constituency is located.

Mr. Speaker, I find it difficult to justify any particular amount. It is true, when you look around at your friends in this Chamber, you can see many people have not accepted the responsibility of contesting a seat in a provincial election; and, being successful and coming here as members, they would have been earning far more, particularly if they are professional people back in their own areas. But I think one has to look at the other side of the coin. I do not think that all of us here as members of the House are giving up any great opportunities to earn princely sums in our private endeavours.

If I were not here as the member for Brant, I suppose I would be teaching school in one of the collegiates of the province, even though, from time to time, we are critical of the high salaries that are paid by boards of education, I can tell you that if I were head of the science department in the collegiate that I left back in 1961, I would be not earning $18,000 as I will if this bill successfully passes the House. I would probably be earning about $13,000 or $14,000.

I cannot say that if I were back in my own responsibilities as teacher that I would be doing better. But still the argument is kept up, and a very wide argument it is, that many members of this House have sacrificed a considerable amount of their earning ability over a number of years in order to take on the responsibility of the representation of a constituency.

It is true that when we run for election we know what the indemnities are that are to be paid. Still, over a period of three to four years, these things do change. I believe that we must be aware of the responsibility that all of us have to our families, to ourselves, certainly, and to our constituents. We have accepted a big responsibility. Part of that responsibility is rather unfortunately that we have to discuss among ourselves and decide what our pay and indemnity and expenses will be. We, on this side, as have other members, have undertaken this responsibility to discuss it among ourselves.

We have had some lengthy discussions and I put the thoughts that have come out of our caucus before you, sir. Certainly I want to conclude my remarks by saying that we support the two bills that are before us at the present time.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Mr. Speaker, I would like to associate myself with what the leader of the Opposition has said in speaking to second reading of these two bills. Indeed, with a very great proportion of what he has said I would be in such complete agreement that I am not going to take the time of the House to repeat it. There are just three or four points that I would like to add, by way of further consideration of the principle of these bills.

In the minds of some—and heading that list I can think of a gentleman by the name of Gordon Sinclair—I did not hear him, but I have heard some of the things he has supposed to have said—an increase in wages, or a reasonable income at this time, should be questioned because, presumably, it falls into the category of being inflationary.

Now, we in the New Democratic Party do not get caught on that hang-up. We have never opposed reasonable wages. And we refuse to accept the proposition that reasonable wages are the main thrust to inflation in this country.

Authorities are slowly moving to recognizing that, while wages may play a part, managed prices and profits play an even greater part. We do not accept for one moment the proposition that reasonable wages should be denied as a check on inflation when, up until now, government simply had refused to move effectively in coping with the other major contributors to inflation in this country. So, on the anti-inflationary kick, I simply just do not agree with it.

However, it brings up the very legitimate point—is $12,000 indemnity and $6,000 expenses a legitimate income, a reasonable income, for members of this Legislature?

I have no hesitation in saying here, as I shall say when the question is raised outside of this House, that the proposition of $12,000 for a person engaged in, what in my view, is the most important calling in this province—representatives of the people, duly chosen by the electorate, to represent them in the Legislature—that the calling is worth $12,000.

If one views today the kind of income that has been won, and I congratulate them for winning it—by certain crafts in the work world; if one takes a look at professional salaries, I venture to suggest that $12,000 is going to put you pretty close to the bottom of the list. And, therefore, I do not think one needs to hesitate in terms of saying that $12,000 is a fair amount, or wage if you will.

Now we come to the proposition of the $6,000 expenses. Sometimes an educational job has got to be done here. I am going to say a word in a moment or so on what can and should be done in educating the public and informing the public as to the nature of the expenses that a member of the Legislature has.

Very often we slip into the easy pattern of saying, "It is like a businessman's expenses." No businessman has expenses comparable to the kind of expenses that an elected representative of the people has, although they may have some expenses in common such as travel, and lodging, and eating. In addition, persisting claims are made, not only in terms of keeping one's potential organization going, the local riding association going, but also responding to the myriad appeals of a charity nature—sometimes not quite of a charity nature—to which one comes to the conclusion he must respond.

All of that certainly adds up—I am convinced that it is a very rare member of the Legislature at the end of the year, who does not find that that $6,000—and, indeed, often more—has gone.

Therefore one should look not at the $18,000 figure as income, because the $6,000 is an expense. Just as the doctors wrote to the leader of the Opposition and objected to $48,000 being credited as their income, because they said they had expenses. True they had expenses, but their net income was $31,000 on an average.

Out of the $18,000 you have expenses, leaving a net of $12,000. On any assessment in the work world, or in the professional world, I think that $12,000 can be defended.

There are two further comments that I want to make. They are, in one sense, of a critical nature, with regard to how we have handled this issue, but I hope that they will be taken in the spirit that they are given.

We have failed, once again, in handling this issue, as I think it should be handled—through an independent commission of competent persons to judge what is the reasonable income and expenditures of a member of the Legislature.

I know that there was some sort of a body, some sort of consultant, some sort of experts, who were asked to express an opinion. Those of us who were involved in discussions before this matter got to the House never saw that report. Indeed, I am inclined to suggest to the Prime Minister that, in the full context of things, I think the report should be made available for public observation.

I know of one or two points in it—and I know one reason why the government may be hesitant—but I think it underlines that the people who did the study were not competent. Anybody who comes back with a proposal that the members of the Legislature should be divided into junior and senior members just does not have a clue as to how a Legislature operates.

I can see that that kind of a study was made by people familiar with civil servants, but I defy anybody to categorize members of the Legislature as junior and senior. So, with respect—

Hon. J. H. White (Minister of Finance): I do not know—

Mr. MacDonald: As a matter of fact, I do not know whether the hon. Minister is junior or senior. He is the man who perplexes me most, so he should not intervene at this point.

Hon. Mr. White: I can size you fellows up pretty quickly.

Mr. MacDonald: I have been derailed from my train of thought, but I can get back to the main point that I wanted to make.

I suggest the public appointment of an independent body—so that everybody knows who is on the body. They should hold public hearings, so that anybody who wants to can make representation, including the members of the Legislature, or collectively through their party. Indeed, all the people who think that we are being paid too much, let them come and make representation.

Let it be done openly and publicly. Let the report be made publicly so that everybody knows exactly what has gone on. May I suggest, Mr. Speaker, to the Prime Minister, that that might be part of the educational process of letting the public know exactly what are the costs and therefore the legitimate remuneration of people who are the elected representatives of the people.

I think I am accurate in saying that the Prime Minister intended to handle the issue that way this time. Perhaps the particular body to which the issue was referred was just a bad choice. However, I hope that for the guidance of others, as well as for ours, that in the future it is done in a genuinely independent fashion.

The second point I want to make is that, in one respect, this bill is a step back rather than a step forward. This is in terms of acknowledging the fact that certain members of the Legislature who are not what I would describe as commuting members, living either in Metro or close enough that they can drive, those members of the Legislature obviously have higher expenses than those of us who are commuting members.

I know one can make a case that urban members have particular kinds of costs and particular kinds of problems that counterbalance, but I am not going to enter into that. I think the people who live at a distance obviously have higher expenditures.

In the last amendments to The Legislative Assembly Act, we made a gesture in the direction of acknowledging this—the difference between $4,000 and $3,000 for expenses for the out-of-town members and the metropolitan members. There were offensive features to that and I do not think one needs to detail them. Therefore, they have been dropped altogether.

But it simply means, Mr. Speaker, that we have admitted to ourselves and to the public that we have been incapable of coming up with some sort of a formula that acknowledges the greater costs of those who are non-commuting members. I would hope that, in the years that lie ahead, in Ottawa and here, that some of the best brains of the nation might be put to this matter. I think one has to concede, Mr. Speaker, that at Ottawa this has not been dealt with either.

If you are a member who represents Ottawa East, or if you are a member who represents the Northwest Territories, you get the same income, apart from the travel allowances that are met. The basic income and expenses are the same.

So our failure is unique, but I am a little sorry in this bill that, having at least acknowledged in principle that there was an inequity before, we have now stepped back from even acknowledging the principle, and the inadequate and perhaps questionable way in which we implemented that principle in the last amendments to The Legislative Assembly Act.

As I look at the Provincial Secretary, he is obviously an intelligent fellow. I think, in his spare time driving between here and St. Catharines for the next four, five, six or eight years, he should ponder this matter. I am sure he will come up with some sort of a formula that will acknowledge both the inequity in the same kind of a payment and, secondly, come up with some sort of a mechanism to cope with it.

Those are the comments I would like to make in expressing our support for second reading of this bill.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): As one who was party to being critical of the hon. Prime Minister in this regard, I would like to say it was a tough job for him to get up in the Legislature and make this type of legislation law. He has done some things before, and I think this was one of the toughest things any Prime Minister can do.

I want to say for my part that I have no apologies for the fact I was party to encouraging that. I was very critical of him for not moving along these lines. I think there is a no more sincere group in this province than the members, regardless of our criticisms.

I think in the years to come that we will regard our Prime Minister as one having guts to do what he thought was right.

There is an old saying that there are a lot of high people rattling around in high places because good men cannot afford to, and I think this is very true in this Legislature. In the years to come, we will be able to attract better men to serve our people because of this, and I for one have no apologies in saying I am 100 per cent behind the Prime Minister.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. J. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Speaker, I want to deal briefly with one problem which is involved in the bill which is before us for second reading, and that is related to the fashionable talk which is around today that there is something invidious in the amount of the allowance which is non-taxable in the content of the bill.

I think, having been on the periphery and only on the periphery of the discussions related to this question, that it requires the attention of the government in the future to isolate exactly what the problem is which leads many people to believe that there should be no tax exempt content to the number of dollars which a member of a legislative assembly receives.

It is on this particular occasion, I think, appropriate to point out the problem which is involved in The Income Tax Act, and perhaps suggest some area in which the solution can be sought.

The Income Tax Act of Canada, under which all of us in Canada pay income tax, provides in substance that if you earn income from an office or an employment you fall within one category of persons who are subject to income tax. The other two categories do not apply to members of the assembly as such, that is, if you earn income from property or if you earn income from a business.

If one does earn income from a business, one can deduct reasonable expenses incurred for the purpose of producing that income. But since the office of a member of the Legislature is not a business, there is no provision within The Income Tax Act by which such expenses can be deducted and similarly, in the case of personal and living allowances which are not generally deductible and for very good reason, it is not possible for a member of the Legislature to bring within the ambit of his deductions, personal and living expenses which he might incur by virtue of his office and which could be categorized as reasonable and legitimate expenses for the purpose of discharging the duties of his office.

Having said that very briefly about the provisions of The Income Tax Act relating to income from property or income from a business, and having distinguished it from income arising from an office or employment, you then immediately have the problem that a member of the Legislature who holds an office is not a person who is an employee, and he does not hold an employment as such.

As an elected member of an assembly and an elected member of any democratic institution of representative government, in no sense can the person be said to have an employer. Therefore, those provisions of The Income Tax Act which restrict, rightly or wrongly, the expenses which could be deducted by a person who is an employee, are not applicable to members of the assembly.

It would appear that in the course of the last many years, the only solution which has been found to this problem of a person who holds an office, as distinct from an employment, is to provide for this non-taxable content of the income, or the number of dollars which an elected member receives.

That is reflected both in the English language and in The Income Tax Act, because the exemption to which we, as members of this assembly, will be entitled to in respect of the $6,000, as we have in the past been entitled to the exemption for either $3,000 or $4,000, depends upon the express provision of The Income Tax Act, which reads in substance that it is not necessary to include in computing your income "an allowance for expenses incident to the discharge of his duties as a member of a legislative assembly."

It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that the problem which the government is going to have to face up to, both at the provincial level and at the federal level, because of this fashionable talk which is current these days about this problem, is whether or not it is possible to so distinguish an office, which is the position of an elected member of the assembly, from an employment so that provision can adequately be made in The Income Tax Act for a person who holds an office to be able to deduct those reasonable expenses which are incurred by him incident to the discharge of his duties as a member.

Now it should be possible within the framework of The Income Tax Act, and within the administrative machinery of the tax revenue collecting departments of government, intelligently to appreciate and recognize—and in my view this can only be done if there is some adequate public study made of the problem—there are, in fact, reasonable expenses incident to the discharge of the duties of a member of the assembly.

These are quite separate and distinct from the considerations which may enter into what is a reasonable deduction from the income of a person who is employed and are quite separate and distinct from the kind of expenses which may be reasonable for deduction from a person who earns his income from property, and are quite separate and distinct from the kind of expenses which could be deducted by a person who earns his income from a business.

I would suggest that, in my view, it is quite likely possible to so amend The Income Tax Act to provide that all the dollars which a member of the assembly receives by way of income to him should be included in income for tax purposes provided there is some flexible, intelligent, administration of that vexed and very difficult area of determining what exactly are those expenses which are incident to the discharge of the duties of a duly elected member of a representative body in the democratic institutions of this society.

Somehow or other that problem has got to be solved. I do not think it is possible, other than by being arbitrary, to do other than we have done at the present time, namely, to specify a specific number of dollars which categorically is stated to be not included in income.

I wanted to make these remarks because I do not take as necessarily accurate or clearly reflecting the terms of The Income Tax of Canada, that in some way or other, a person holding an office as an elected member, is simply an employee on the one hand or, on the other hand, earns his income from carrying on a business. He does neither, and I think The Income Tax Act, at some point in time, after appropriate study, should reflect that particular difference and distinction and make provision for a person holding an office to be able to deduct from his income those expenses incident to the discharge of his duties as a member.

I think it is an important element of the kind of problem which has come to the surface in the course of these discussions.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Thunder Bay.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Mr. Speaker, the member for High Park (Mr. Shulman) had to leave the chamber so he requested me to inform the House of his support of this bill in the light of the financial problems of many of the members of this Legislature.

However, prior to the last election, the member for High Park assured his constituents that he would serve the term of this Legislature at the then stated indemnity, and therefore, it is intention to turn the increase over to charity.

An hon. member: Cheap politics.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Correctional Services): I wish we were all millionaires.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak on the bill? If not, does the hon. Prime Minister wish to reply to any of the remarks?

Hon. Mr. Robarts: Mr. Speaker, the comments I made on first reading are my comments until this time.

Mr. Speaker: The motion is for second reading of Bill 236.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill stand referred to third reading?

Agreed to.

THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL ACT

Hon. Mr. Robarts moves second reading of Bill 237, An Act to amend The Executive Council Act.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this be referred to third reading?

Agreed to.

TORONTO HOSPITALS' STEAM CORPORATION

Hon. T. L. Wells (Minister of Health) moves second reading of Bill 230, An Act to incorporate the Toronto Hospitals' Steam Corporation.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Humber.

Mr. G. Ben (Humber): Mr. Speaker, I would just like to say a few words on this bill.

It is understood by all members of this House that the purpose for introducing this bill is to enable the various downtown hospitals in this hospital complex which we have south of us to unite in a money-saving endeavour to lower the cost of providing their linen. This project of theirs engendered a lot of heated discussion, probably more heat than their whole furnaces are going to, in the city council. The reason is that while on the one hand we try to fight pollution, on the other hand we take steps to permit people to generate it. Of course, it has been suggested by the people seeking this incorporation, that the height of the chimney is going to in itself, control the emission of pollution. I suggest, Mr. Speaker, that we are working at odds with ourselves.

As I pointed out yesterday, it is established that dilution is no solution to pollution, and this is exactly the solution that these people are trying to bring about through this bill. It is agreed that this stack, when compared to others that have been erected in the city and elsewhere, does have some aesthetic—I would not use the word taste—style, some aesthetic style, and perhaps it could become famous if they were to put a restaurant or something on it, but the fact is it is still going to be polluting the air.

I think the solution would have been to try to buy either power from the Hydro—and this is striking at Hydro for Ontario. Hydro has its offices directly across the road from this plant—but I think the purpose could have been served if they had bought their power from Hydro since Hydro does sell industrial power at less than it sells domestic power and we would have carried out the principles in this bill, and at the same time have cut down on pollution.

I do, however, consider it indeed strange that this Minister introduces a bill into this House which is going to have the effect of increasing the pollution in the downtown area, and, Mr. Speaker, I do hope that the hon. Minister will not get up and say to us that if it was not for this one stack they are putting up we would have two or three stacks as every hospital would probably have its own laundry. I do not think that would make a solid argument.

We are entering into an age of science when fossil fuels or gas derived from fossil fuels is not necessarily the only or the best source of power or even the cheapest source of power. I think that where we have the necessity of putting an industry or a laundry of this type in the core of the city—

An hon. member: Steam plant.

Mr. Ben: Steam plant, all right, it is a steam plant, it is a laundry—a steam plant.

But the fact is if we have to put a steam plant in the heart of the city then I would suggest that under those circumstances we ought to look into the future and try to keep our downtown clean—the core of the city, the heart of the city, clean. And under those circumstances this plant should have been powered, or the steam should have been generated, by electricity and not fossil fuel, or gas.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak to this bill before the Minister replies?

If not, the hon. Minister.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, in reply to the comments of the hon. member which I am happy to have, we are, of course, concerned about the pollution effects of this installation.

The installation was approved by the air pollution control section. They approved the height of the stack. Their concern also was with the fuels to be burned, and I think that it should be emphasized that the fuels that will be burned in this steam plant are not the same kind of fuels that will be burned at the Hydro plants, for instance.

The fuel to be used is what they call interruptible gas, so that it is a gas operation. There is going to be no coal burned at all of any type. As a stand-by fuel they will use number two oil. As I understand it, this will perhaps only be used for one month of the year. So basically gas is going to be burned most of the time in the plant.

Insofar as the Toronto Hydro supplying the steam for this installation, this matter was gone into very extensively with the hospitals, with all concerned. It was found that Hydro could not provide the kind of service or the assurances that it could be provided completely as a hospital would need and so forth. So it became obvious that the hospitals would have to join together and build their own plant, which they are doing.

Incidentally, the operation of this is a joint facility, I understand, which will provide for a saving in excess of $75,000 per year in staffing and operation, and perhaps about half a million dollars in construction costs, rather than letting each hospital take care of their own needs.

Mr. Ben: May I ask the Minister a question, Mr. Speaker, before he goes on with his statement?

Mr. Speaker: Well, it is not in accordance with the procedures. If it is a very brief question and the Minister is agreeable?

Mr. Ben: Will the Minister file before third reading of this bill the sulphur dioxide emission from the burning of the gas and the burning of the fuel oil that they will use?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Well, I would have to look into that, Mr. Speaker. I do not know whether we have this information. I will check with the air pollution control people and see what information I can get.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill be referred to third reading?

Agreed to.

THE REGIONAL MUNICIPALITY OF NIAGARA ACT, 1968-1969

Hon. W. D. McKeough (Minister of Municipal Affairs) moves second reading of Bill 235, An Act to amend The Regional Municipality of Niagara Act, 1968-1969.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Niagara Falls.

Mr. G. Bukator (Niagara Falls): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a few comments on this bill. The Minister did say the other day that this is just a housekeeping group of amendments—some ten amendments—to the bill that has not as yet taken effect but will on January 1.

I would like to say to this Minister that I do not want to add any fuel to the argument that will be coming up with this group of intelligent men who have been elected to the new regional council, that this bill will eventually govern their procedure and the way they conduct their affairs in the next three years.

I do not want to be—and I say this most sincerely—political about this bill at this time. I think I could make many comments on the ten sections and keep the ball rolling, so to speak, but I believe that he has found that there are problems coming up.

He did admit, Mr. Speaker, that there will be differences of opinion and problems to wrestle with, and I do not want to make any more statements at this time pertaining to these things that will happen.

I know that he will hear loud and clear from the council when they get into operation, and as they will be governed by this bill, and housekeeping amendments were apparently required—I cannot dispute that at this time because I do not want anybody to believe that I was one to want to hinder the progress of this type of administration—but I do believe that he should be forewarned.

The battle is just starting. It will be most interesting to see how this bill is implemented and how well it works, because it strikes me that from this bill you are going to be establishing other regional areas.

I must say that I can see from what I have heard and what has been told to me in my riding, that there will be sufficient problems to wrestle with without my adding any more problems to this Minister's position at this time.

I would like to make one more point since I heard the Minister of Education chuckle a bit across the floor. Pertaining to the two school boards' names that I made reference to the other day, I think the point was well taken by a member of the riding that I represent. If you are going to have the two counties and you are going to make reference in the regional areas about the Lincoln county area, Lincoln south and Lincoln east or west, I think it would be good business for the Minister to have similar names for the two school boards so they would coincide.

I say again to you that my turn at bat will be much better in the next sitting of Parliament. I will be practising all winter after attending some of these council meetings to put this Minister exactly where he belongs—

Mr. Nixon: Oh, surely not.

Mr. Bukator: If credit is due I will be the first to give it to him.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other member wish to enter the debate? If not, does the hon. Minister wish to reply?

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill be ordered for third reading?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Mr. Speaker, there is a small amendment coming through from legislative counsel which we would add in at the committee stage, so if it can be referred to the committee of the whole, so much the better.

Mr. Speaker: Does the committee concur that the bill should go to the committee of the whole House before third reading?

Agreed to.

THE SEPARATE SCHOOLS ACT (1)

Hon. W. G. Davis (Minister of Education) moves second reading of Bill 47, An Act to amend The Separate Schools Act.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill be reported for third reading?

Mr. Nixon: Does the Minister not want it to go to committee?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, there was some discussion with the members for Peterborough and from Scarborough that both amendments to The Separate Schools Act would go to the standing committee.

Mr. Speaker: Is it agreed that this bill go to the standing committee?

Agreed to.

THE SEPARATE SCHOOLS ACT(2)

Hon. Mr. Davis moves second reading of Bill 238, An Act to amend The Separate Schools Act.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill also go to the standing committee?

Agreed to.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS ACT

Hon. Mr. Davis moves second reading of Bill 239, An Act to amend The Public Schools Act.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill be reported for third reading?

Mr. Nixon: Does the Minister want that to be considered by the committee?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, it was my understanding in discussing it with the two critics that it was all housekeeping and we would go right to third reading.

Mr. Speaker: Agreed for third reading?

Agreed to.

THE LANDLORD AND TENANT ACT

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Minister of Justice) moves second reading of Bill 234, An Act to amend The Landlord and Tenant Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Mr. Speaker, Bill 234 is an outstanding achievement, I think, by this Legislature. I think there should be, and there has to be recognition from the government. I am sorry it did not come when the bill was introduced or on the number of occasions on which this matter was introduced by Opposition members, and particularly by Liberal members—by my colleague from Parkdale (Mr. Trotter), and by myself, over a long period of time.

It has been somewhat like drawing teeth really to get the government to take action. The difficulties which ensued and the pain with which this statute primarily arrived, when it was primarily produced in this world! It is difficult, Mr. Speaker, to understand why it has taken the government quite so long to bring in this statute. However, it is here and as I said at the beginning of my remarks, this is, to my mind, a substantial step forward. On the other hand, it is fascinating to go through this statute, Mr. Speaker, and to look at some of the inconsistencies.

The debates in the Cabinet and the debates in the government caucus must have been very fascinating as compromises were made on one side and the other. It would seem to me that some of the compromises have rendered some of the main objectives of this statute almost impotent. For instance, one of the main suggestions, both in the debates in this Legislature over the years and in the comments and the recommendations of the law reform commission, was that there be a review board.

That suggestion has been really rendered mandatory by this provision for a landlord and tenant advisory bureau. The suggestion has been made it is a worthless pact when you try to figure out if and how it is going to work. Let us look for a moment, Mr.

Speaker, at the latter provisions of this statute relating to the tenant advisory bureau.

It is fascinating and included only in one comparatively short section; the section says that a municipality may, by bylaw, establish a landlord and tenant advisory bureau. Nobody suggests, Mr. Speaker, whether it will have 50 or five or one member; nobody suggests whether the landlord and tenant advisory bureau is going to consist of elected persons or appointed persons. Nobody suggests, whether or not the municipalities are going to have the power to pay the landlord and tenant advisory bureau.

You are aware, Mr. Speaker, as I am, that when responsibilities are given to municipalities, in relation to the spending of money, somebody has to bring in the necessary amendment to The Municipal Act. One must conclude, I would think, Mr. Speaker, that the landlord and tenant advisory bureau, if it does not consist of municipal civil servants or members of the council who do this without any remuneration, it must be a group of citizen volunteers who cannot get any money for it.

That is a fascinating thought and perhaps it might work. I am more than a little skeptical about it, but it might be of some value—until you read the other section. The other sub-sections of section 108 set out what the bureau's duties are to advise landlords on received complaints. There is no authorization for any bureaucracy or any secretariat; nor any permission to spend money to prepare forms, to set up offices. It seems to be the kind of an idea that somebody said, "We do not like a rental review board, because of some of the ramifications"—and I am going to deal with some of those in a little while. That somebody said, "But let us put in something that we call a landlord and tenant advisory bureau. It does not matter just as long as we have something in there that somebody might go to".

What initiative is given to the municipalities to set up this board? What instructions are they given? What powers really are given? There are no powers here, Mr. Speaker, for the advisory bureau to subpoena a witness. There is no power, really, that would allow them to subpoena documents. There is no power for them to do anything other than to shout about their appointed meeting place and determine, if anybody happens to come before them, really what that person's complaint is.

There is no right, Mr. Speaker, for the person going there to appear with counsel or without counsel. It is not mentioned. I do not know whether it is intended to be as delightfully vague as this but, really, as you listen to tenants' complaints about landlords and landlords' complaints about tenants, very often one has to believe that there are two sides to every story. Without any powers of investigation, or to hire a new staff, or to compel attendance, or to examine documents. It seems to me that the government could have not conceived a more useless body to set up in answer to the great concern that exists amongst tenants who want some form of mediation of their complaints.

It may be that is the idea of the board. One of the ideas is to receive complaints and to seek to mediate in disputes between the landlord and tenant. How can you mediate anything if you have got only one side of the argument before you, and you cannot possibly compel the other side to come before you. I would think mediation, even the thought of mediation, is ridiculous. Now to advise landlords and tenants in tenancy matters, I think there must be a substantial intelligence if that function is going to be properly carried out.

However, it would seem to me, Mr. Speaker, that if the landlords and tenants are going to be advised about tenancy matters and about their rights, surely there should be some indications as to who is going to advise them? It would seem reasonable and logical to me, in any event, that you provide for this since you have some knowledge of the law, particularly the law of landlord and tenant. Perhaps you have some knowledge of other provincial statutes which might effect landlords' rights and tenants' rights.

Where are you going to find these people and again who is going to pay them? It would seem to me that if the government feels that this is an important function of the landlord and tenant advisory bureau, rather than throwing the burden on to the municipality of providing this kind of a service, properly this burden lies at the door of the provincial government. Surely, the government should do this, at least in our big cities, Mr. Speaker. It should provide this kind of service and set up government advisory boards that can advise tenants about disputes with landlords, and advise landlords about disputes with tenants. While they are at it—and this is another idea that we have put forward on many occasions—they can advise people in Ontario about their various rights in relation to welfare and housing and family allowances and all the other things that people are concerned about. Because problems are not isolated insofar as they concern the people who live in this province.

When you get someone who wants to seek some kind of independent advice as to their rights, surely they should be able to ask additional questions about their rights under various provincial statutes. It would seem to me that the time is here when all those Ministers of the Crown who are concerned about providing sufficient information to our people who have problems affecting various departments of government, should form some sort of an agreement whereby provincial advice bureaux are going to be set up. Only in this way can this kind of a provision in a statute be made meaningful.

There is no provision even in this section that the hearings of this advice bureau are going to have to be held in public.

One of the main ideas about the rental review board was that, in the event that it became apparent to the public that a rent being requested was exorbitant and out of line, there would be some kind of sanction in public opinion brought down on the landlord who is demanding or insisting upon an exorbitant kind of a rent. There is no provision here at all that the meetings, if they can take place and if they can be called meetings—must be held in public. There is no provision for any rules of procedure for these boards. In fact, I do not know why they bothered at all.

If the government was afraid of rental review boards—and my suspicion is that they were substantially afraid of them. Certainly, there was ample gossip around these corridors, Mr. Speaker, to indicate to anyone who had his ear at all close to the ground, that the reason the bill took so long in coming in after the Attorney General told us it was just about ready, was because Cabinet was split over the whole recommendation about rental review boards. Those who were opposed to it, I gather, had their way because we have not got any rental review boards.

We have some useless body called a landlord and tenant advisory bureau which has no power to advise anybody about anything because it has not even got power to bring anybody before it. There is no ability, apparently, to spend any money; there are no ground rules for its establishment; there is no ability to force attendance; there is no ability to subpoena papers.

I think that is enough for that, Mr. Speaker. It is not enough to destroy the bill. Certainly, when we get into committee, we are going to vote against the inclusion of section 108 and suggest that the original recommendation about rental review boards be included.

A second provision that I am disappointed is lacking—the Attorney General pointed it out in his original remarks—was the failure to provide for a standard form of lease. I would have thought that it would have been a comparatively simple matter in the time the government has had this bill under consideration, to bring forward some kind of standard form of lease. And to make that mandatory as a major part of all of the leases providing that if additional clauses were to be added to the lease they be written in reasonable size in ink, so they can be read easily by the tenants. They should be drawn particularly to the tenants' attention to ensure some fairness about this whole leasing process.

You may recall, Mr. Speaker, a couple of years ago, when I had occasion to refer at some length to a lease that was being used by the Ontario Housing Corporation. It did not take them really long after they were embarrassed, to bring in a new form of lease for the Ontario Housing Corporation. If they were able to move with that dispatch—and I will not say that they moved that quickly but certainly they moved more quickly than they are moving now—when they were embarrassed and when their faces were red; that is when the hon. Minister of Correctional Services lost his QC. You will remember that debate very carefully.

If they were able to bring in a revised form of lease for the Ontario Housing Corporation, it would seem to me, as we take this comparatively giant step forward in changing the common law of the province of Ontario, that they could have brought in some better standard form of lease than is presently contained in The Short Form of Leases Act.

Those are some of the comments, Mr. Speaker, that we are going to expand upon when the bill gets into committee. I think those are the major criticisms. There is one more that I wanted to make as well as those two criticisms. I also wanted to say a word about sub-letting. The Attorney General has worked out a marvellous formula about sub-letting. He says no longer will you be allowed to put in the lease, once you use the word sub-let, that the permission to sub-let can be arbitrarily withheld. Fair enough.

But then he goes on to say, "If you are astute enough not to use the word sub-let in your lease—that is it—end, period—you cannot sub-let." By the exclusion of the phrase, Mr. Speaker, the disease the Attorney General is seeking to cure is reinstated. If, by not using the word sub-let at all, you can arbitrarily withhold permission to sub-let that is what in fact happens. What have you really changed is you are putting some window-dressing on something and pretending that you are giving some great benefit when, in fact, you are giving no benefit at all. Because the landlord, and landlords, really, Mr. Speaker, as a group, are not ill-informed and are not unable to get legal advice. What I am saying certainly is telling no secret out of school; I am quite certain that as this bill is proceeding through this Legislature, landlords' lawyers are reading it very carefully and they are advising their clients, as they should, as they are retained to do, about how they can provide new forms of leases that are going to give the landlords every benefit that they are able, legally, to assert.

There is nothing wrong with that. But I am suggesting, Mr. Speaker, that if the government intends to do something about sub-letting there has to be something far better than is in this Act now. What the Attorney General suggests is merely a play with words that fools nobody. Certainly it should not have fooled the Attorney General if he was serious in the remarks that he was putting forward that he was bringing in some great reform.

With those remarks, Mr. Speaker, I will say that we are going to support the principle of this bill; we think that we need a new landlord and tenant law. These are three of the very serious defects that are contained in it and I would hope that the Attorney General will be able to bring a little muscle to some of the things he became very weak-kneed about.

Let us have a rental review board that is going to be meaningful or, if you do not believe in it, and you are concerned about what might follow in the form of rent control, do not pretend that you are doing something by creating these meaningless landlord and tenant advisory bureaus.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Why do you pretend to support it? You must have had some conflict in your caucus.

Mr. Singer: I do not think so. The hon. Minister is concerned about conflict; I guess I must have struck a tender cord. I am sorry that I have embarrassed the hon. Minister, Mr. Speaker, because I would think that if you are going to compromise, at least compromise in a meaningful way. I would think that you and your colleagues should have had enough intelligence to recognize this really was not going to fool anybody. The second thing, as I say, is the standard form of lease. The third thing—in the sub-letting provision—for goodness sakes, put them in a form where they do, in fact, make sense. What you have done is to turn the thing upside down and the situation is exactly the same as it was before.

Mr. J. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Speaker, I want to deal with a number of matters related to the principle of the bill before us. I think we must not lose sight of the fact which is mirrored in one sentence in the law reform commission's report that has led to the introduction of this bill. I quote that particular sentence:

The greatest single obstacle to stability and fair dealing in this area of the law is the acute shortage of housing accommodation.

That is not appropriate in the amendments to the law of landlord and tenant which the Attorney General has introduced but it is the context within which these changes are being made.

We reiterate the proposition that regardless of what the Minister of Justice or Attorney General may do, until the government is prepared to deal with that question of acute housing shortage in the province of Ontario, we cannot expect very much from this bill.

I think, Mr. Speaker, I must refer very briefly to the history of the bill. It is interesting to note that from the time the law of landlord and tenant was passed in 1911 there has not been a single amendment of any kind to that Act. I had occasion to look at the microfilm of the Mail and Empire which at that time, carried a Hansard synopsis. It is very interesting to note that there was no debate when the present law of landlord and tenant was introduced in 1911, on second reading. The headline of the newspaper column of the day, which dealt with the statute law revisions, including the law of landlord and tenant when they were in committee, referred to the drowsy session in which some 23 or 24 members happened to be in attendance. No comments were made about it in committee.

I mention that to point out to the Minister that we have passed into a period of time when the law cannot be allowed to become as anachronistic and so out of date for such a long period of time; and that when anachronistic provisions of the bill are removed, we must hail it as a great achievement by the government. We do not.

We think it is absolutely essential that the law, if I may use a trite phrase, keep pace with the economic relationships which affect the quality of life of the people of the province. The basic amendments which the Minister of Justice has introduced into the law of landlord and tenant are simply the elimination of anachronistic provisions or, if not the elimination of them, the amelioration of certain of them in ways which should have been done many years ago.

Again there has been reference to the antiquity of the law of landlord and tenant and its total inappropriateness to the province of Ontario and it is interesting to note that the predecessor of the 1911 bill, which has stood without amendment to this date, was set out in the revised statutes of Ontario for 1897.

In chapter 342 of those particular revised statutes, we have the notations which indicate the antiquity again of many of the phrases which were actually carried forward into the so-called revision of the law of landlord and tenant made in 1911. It is interesting to note there are various provisions that refer to the following reigns of the following monarchs of England, the fourth year of the reign of George II, the eighth year of the reign of Ann, the thirty-second year of the reign of Henry VIII, the fifty-second year of the reign of Henry III.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): It was 1267.

Mr. J. Renwick: The second year of the reign of William and Mary. The eleventh year of George II, the fifty-second year of the reign, again of Henry III. The fifty-first year of the reign of Henry III, and so it goes on. The third year of the reign of Edward I, which I assume is probably the earliest date contained in the law.

Mr. Lawlor: Oh no, it is 1275, still earlier.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Henry VIII must have had trouble with accommodation.

Mr. J. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, I want to say that I recognize what the law reform commission has said, that there are other areas of the law of landlord and tenant which, perhaps in another report, will deal with parts I, II and III, which still carry forward the phraseology and the words from those ancient statutes which have little if any application to modern life in the province of Ontario. I want in that sense to be fair. My remarks are not going to be directed, with one exception, to the area which the law reform commission and the Minister of Justice have on other occasions stated will be dealt with in a subsequent report.

I think it is too late or much too slow, but at least I am not going to try to deal with those areas which are going to be dealt with in the subsequent report of the law reform commission. I make the one exception and that is in the question of the standard form of lease. I think it could have been done and can well now be done without awaiting dealing with the rest of the law of landlord and tenant, if the law reform commission were commissioned directly, now, by the Minister of Justice, to produce in the shortest possible time a standard form of residential lease in simple language which can be clearly understood, which would enable a person to read his lease, to understand what it means, to understand the obligations which he is incurring, and the obligations which the landlord is incurring, in executing the lease.

And I think it could then be quite permissible that any variations in that language would be required by law to be printed either in a distinguishing form of type or in a different coloured type. This would enable a person who was entering into a lease for a short period of time—a relatively short-term lease, as most residential tenancies are, one year, two years, six months—to see quite clearly and distinctly the areas within which the landlord had seen fit to present him with the lease which did not accord with the standard lease, which was available for inspection in the statutes of the province of Ontario.

I do not think it is necessary for that standard form of residential lease to await the dealing with and the elimination of the strange antiquities which remain in parts I, II and III of the law of landlord and tenant.

Again, Mr. Speaker, I reiterate, I stay within the context of what the law reform commission has said, and I will not further encroach upon what we will await in the second or further report of the law reform commission in those areas.

The most important part of the report, Mr. Speaker, of the law reform commission, and it is the part which in my judgment the Attorney General has totally missed, is contained in certain paragraphs in chapter I of the report. The other chapters of the report deal with the specific areas which the law reform commission is dealing with and can be itemized and substantially, with some variations which we will deal with in committee, are dealt with in the specific clauses of the bill which is before us. They are listed in the index, they are covered individually by chapter, they are listed in the introductory area of chapter 1, but the gut part of the law reform commission report which the Attorney General has chosen to ignore—and I assume the government has chosen to ignore in presenting this bill—is covered in pages 9 to 13 of the report of the commission.

I commend the reading of those particular pages to the Attorney General, I think he must have skipped them when he first saw the report or perhaps they were missing from the copy which came to his hand. I only recite a couple of sentences to point out what the law reform commission was saying. The law reform commission pointed out very clearly that the equitable principles of the courts and the equitable remedial legislation of the legislative assembly of the province of Ontario have dealt with what the law reform commission refers to as the "vital interests" of the relationship between mortgagor and mortgagee. It then goes on very clearly to point out that what has never been done in the law of landlord and tenant is to recognize the vital interest of the landlord on the one hand and the tenant on the other in that relationship.

In connection with the relationship of the mortgagor and the mortgagee, the law reform commission states that,

The courts in the exercise of their equitable jurisdiction and the Legislature, in keeping with the equitable principles developed by the courts, have necessarily made value judgments concerning the essential rights of mortgagors and mortgagees.

and I end that particular quotation.

It goes on to say that,

The common law of landlord and tenant, over the centuries, has not developed any legal philosophy based on a theory of vital interests.

And it goes on a few phrases later to say,

In a sense, the common law of landlord and tenant is mechanical in that its conclusions as to the rights of the parties, are not based on any realistic standard of vital interests which the law will endeavour to protect.

What I am saying, Mr. Speaker, to the Attorney General and the reason we will propose a reasoned amendment on the second reading of this bill, is that until the government recognizes that you are talking about an economic relationship of significant importance to large numbers of people in the province of Ontario and of growing importance directly to the quality of the lives of the people of the province, then it will not be possible for us adequately to recast and rephrase the law of landlord and tenant, and we will continue to be faced by the Attorney General with what the Ontario Law Reform Commission refers to as mechanical adjustment in a traditional legal sense, divorced entirely from the vital interests of the persons who are involved in it.

We will be faced with these mechanical amendments from time to time of the law of landlord and tenant.

I happen to conceive of the relationship as being one which is so vital that it is not possible to have the so-called private contract as the sole method by which the landlord, as owner of multiple accommodation, many times administered through a trust company or estate management concern, is going to deal with the individual tenant, the ordinary citizen of the province.

Again, the Ontario Law Reform Commission comments about that particular relationship:

In each of these latter cases, statutory protection recognizes inequality of bargaining positions and the absence of freedom of contract in any real sense.

Remedial legislation in such cases is admittedly based on value judgments concerning the basic interests of the parties which must be protected. The principle of freedom of contract must be flexible enough to yield where experience has shown it to be a pious hope and an unrealistic assumption.

And in the previous instances to which they referred they were speaking about consumer contracts and personal property security contracts. A fact which the member for Downsview has pointed out from time to time, is that the landlord often presents a lease, the tenant does not read it, he is then faced with the proposition that he did, in fact, sign it.

He knows very well that had he read it he would not have understood it in the first place; he cannot afford the expense of consulting a lawyer to explain the meaning of the clauses to him in the second place; and in the third place he knows very well that if he went through that particular exercise the landlord would not vary one of the clauses one single iota. So that a tenant, being a sensible person, simply signs the document and is then faced, from time to time, with the fact that he signed it. And under the guise of some kind of principle of the equality of bargaining positions and the freedom of contract, we make a fool out of the law which is supposed to govern and provide the kind of basic stability and security and fair dealing which we are anxious to achieve in this particular area of the law as well as in many others.

I am going to suggest, Mr. Speaker, that the time has come when the Attorney General is going to have to think about other than property and money relationships. The Attorney General and the government have no difficulty in coping, as they did many years ago, with remedial legislation relating to the law of mortgagor and mortgagee, because that, in many cases, was involved with property and money. When the Attorney General comes to dealing with the relationship of landlord and tenant, it is certain that he is talking about property and the use of premises by one party which are owned by the other party; he is also talking about an economic factor of the payment of rent. However, in this society he is talking, in fact, about the basic economic relationship which determines the quality of life of a growing and a substantial number of people.

I said that earlier, Mr. Speaker. I repeat it because it is the guts of the argument that I try to place before the Attorney General at this time. And you notice that when he introduced the law of condominiums, he had no problem. He has no problem because it was so tied up with something called ownership of property that he provided, Yes, everyone can own their particular apartment in the condominium, whether it is a multiple high-rise development or a multiple horizontal development; everyone could own their particular few rooms or their apartment. But to the extent that there were common facilities to be shared and maintained, the statute provides an obligatory corporation without share capital to which each person in the condominium must, whether he likes it or not, be a member; and that that condominium corporation without share capital will collectively determine the upkeep the maintenance and the use of the areas which are owned in common, the services which are available in common, and the kind of caretaking and other upkeep facilities which will be required in order to maintain that condominium.

I am suggesting, Mr. Speaker, to the Attorney General, that it is not so far removed from a condominium to say that in a building owned by a landlord which provides multiple accommodation, it should not be difficult for him to envisage that the tenants in that building constitute a corporation without share capital, and that that corporation, without share capital, run as a members' organization of the tenants, should have certain collective bargaining arrangements with the landlord who owns the building.

That is one alternative. I happen to think it is one of the methods by which we can improve distinctly and clearly the relationship of landlord and tenant. I think we can so change the relationship that we will begin to deal with what the Law Reform Commission refers to as "the vital interests of landlord and tenant", because of the economic relationship and because of the need to provide an adequate method by which the tenants on the one hand, in an association of members as a corporation without share capital, could bargain in good faith with the landlord, and where the law of this province will require the landlord to bargain in good faith with such an association.

I said, Mr. Speaker, that the Minister of Justice and Attorney General had no difficulty whatsoever in dealing with that in terms of the law of condominium and he made it obligatory that everybody within the condominium must be a member of that particular corporation without share capital. I am not even asking the Attorney General to go that far in the relationship between the landlord and the tenant. I am suggesting to the Attorney General that he leave it to the tenant, and that if 51 per cent of the tenants in a particular multiple-dwelling accommodation decide to do so, that they can, and for want of a better facility, apply to the Ontario Labour Relations Board to be certified as the collective bargaining agent for all the tenants in that building in their relationship with the landlord.

Indeed, it may well be that at that particular point the law could provide that on being so certified it became a corporation without share capital, simply by law, so that then, looking at The Corporations Act, in that particular section dealing with members' associations, they would have a code of governance that would permit them to move easily and efficiently and effectively into a collective bargaining posture with their landlord. Then, it would seem to me that if that kind of arrangement is made, in many ways we leave it within the framework of collective bargaining to find out whether or not the landlord is justified in good faith in increasing the rents; whether the landlord could request that association of tenants to make certain that it as the certified collective bargaining agent was maintaining his property so that it was not subjected to unnecessary wear.

That kind of collective bargaining arrangement, I think, from the point of view of the community of people, would have very many real advantages, because I suggest that part of the deterioration of apartment buildings to the extent that tenants cause that deterioration is because of something called an "I am all right Jack" attitude. Nobody looks after the common facilities except one poor superintendent in a building who cannot possibly cope with the work which is involved in it, and each tenant thinks only about shutting his own apartment door, and he makes his way through varying degrees of debris each morning in order to get out to the garage and get out on the street and drive downtown to his place of employment.

I have not expressed it very well but there seems to me, Mr. Speaker, to be a very real, vital, growing area which is available to the government if they will grasp it, to deal with this kind of a problem. I do not believe that solutions to problems are exclusive and that there is any one road to the final solution, but this may be one possible road in addition to other methods which are available for beginning to solve the kind of problem which is of the essence of the life which we lead, particularly in the urban centres of the province of Ontario.

I leave that particular point there, Mr. Speaker. At an appropriate time we will hope that we will have an opportunity to introduce an amendment which will at least convey the idea in legal language of what we are attempting to propose in terms of providing for this kind of collective bargaining arrangement between a landlord on the one hand and the tenants in a multiple accommodation dwelling on the other hand.

There is another area I note in the bill where the Attorney General has not dealt with the gut relationship. There is, I understand, no provision by which, from the point of view of a Conservative government, the tenant may withhold the sacrosanct payment of his rent, in order to enforce the correlative obligations of the landlord.

Certainly the bill makes a gesture towards providing, at least for the dependency of the mutual covenants which are involved. But still there is no provision that I could find in the bill which permits a tenant, on the failure of the landlord to comply with his obligations, to immediately say, "All right, I am now going to withhold the rent." Or, "I am now going to deposit the rent in trust with some appropriate official," say, of the court, in order to make the landlord begin to comply with the obligations which the landlord has assumed in that relationship.

Mr. Speaker, I only have one other area that I want to deal with. I think again the Attorney General has misunderstood the bill.

He has misunderstood it for the same reasons that he did not understand the kind of basic change of legal philosophy which the law reform commission was referring to in the early parts of chapter 1 of the report. That part of the report where I referred to one, two or three of the sentences, in order to illustrate what the law reform commission was talking about. In no specific place is this more evident than in the way in which the Minister of Justice has emasculated the provisions of the bill related to rent control.

I think the Attorney General has got to look again and realize that it is a single chapter that the law reform commission dealt with when it referred to rent control, just as it was a single chapter that they dealt with when they dealt with, for example, distress or security deposits and all the rest of it. They dealt with the legal advisory bureaus in one chapter and they immediately followed it with a rent control chapter and it was all of one piece.

The legal advisory bureau was the body which was to endeavour, in this atomized way in which the Attorney General looks at this relationship, to mediate disputes. But it then went on to provide, in the chapter dealing with rent control, with rental review officers and for the establishment of rental review boards.

I am going to take the time to put on the record exactly what the law reform commission recommended in terms of rent control, because of the emasculation which has taken place in the hands of the Minister of Justice. These recommendations are nine in number and the first eight are very pertinent and number nine is the conclusion. The Attorney General has taken the very first one only.

The first one—and these are from page 71 of the law reform commission's report:

1. Municipalities shall be empowered to appoint rent review officers within the organization—

Excuse me, Mr. Speaker, the Attorney General did not deal with any of these recommendations. He dealt with the recommendations of establishing leasehold advisory bureaus, recommended in the previous chapter of the report and the first one is:

1. Municipalities should be empowered to appoint rent review officers within the organization of leasehold advisory bureaus.

2. Rent review officers shall be authorized to investigate complaints of unreasonable rent increases brought to them; to mediate between the parties in an effort to obtain a proper settlement of the dispute, and to recommend to the parties what increase of rent, if any, is justifiable in a given situation.

3. Municipalities should be empowered to establish rent review boards.

4. Rent review boards should be authorized, on the application of a rent review officer, a landlord or a tenant, to reinvestigate a case where the rent review officer's recommendations have not been followed or where any party is dissatisfied with the officer's disposition of the case.

5. After making its investigation, the rent review board shall send a copy of its findings and its recommendations as to what would constitute a joint resolution of the case to all parties in the form of a written report.

6. Where a landlord fails to act in accordance with the rent review board's recommendations, the board shall be under a duty to send a copy of its findings and recommendations, together with the landlord's response to them, to the local municipal council.

7. The local municipal council shall be empowered to publish the report of the board.

8. Either the Attorney General or the Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs should exercise a general supervisory role over the entire scheme.

Mr. Speaker, I pause, before referring to recommendation number 9, to make two points. One is that this may appear to be a long drawn out and cumbersome procedure. It may well be so long drawn out and so protracted that a tenant is exhausted by the time he has endeavoured to obtain any adequate hearing on even those recommendations.

But, even given that defect, the Attorney General has got to recognize that the legal advisory bureaus have nothing to do with rental review or rental control in the terms in which the law reform commission is dealing with it.

The main point is the last recommendation, which illustrates conclusively that the law reform commission was not endeavouring to deal with the economic factors of rents within the province of Ontario. They quite recognize that they had not done the studies which would support that kind of intrusion by the law reform commission into an area of the economics of the relationship which existed.

What they did realize is that they had done all that they could do to recommend what could be done, without intruding on the economics of the relationship, in order to introduce into the law of the province a viable method by which a tenant could deal with his landlord on all matters related to the lease. Particularly in matters related to this question of the level of rents within the province, because that is where there is no basic stability in the relationship which exists. That is why it is a continuous contribution to the unsettling of the economic security of the relationship of people within the Metropolitan area. This government must deal with it because it is a matter solely, conclusively and entirely within the jurisdiction of this government.

The law reform commission ended up with its ninth recommendation,

If these measures do not prove sufficient—

And that is not only the legal advisory bureau, but all the eight previous recommendations which I have enumerated verbatim in the purposes of the records—it said that:

If these measures do not prove sufficient to secure just rents, the introduction of a more stringent and compulsory system of control should be considered. Such control should be considered after a careful study of the economic factors involved and the effect that it may have on them and on provision for future housing accommodation.

Mr. Speaker, the law reform commission recognized better than the government what the gut problem is in this relationship and the limited area which was available to effect changes in the law of landlord or tenant. But within those restrictive requirements of the law reform they devised a system which was directed toward dealing with rents, a basic social need.

What has the Attorney General done? The Attorney General has totally ignored that section of their report. And when he totally ignored that section of their report and those eight recommendations, he did not leave himself an area where, ultimately, he can say, "Well, that did not work, I am now going to look at recommendation No. 9." He has emasculated it in such a way that he has seriously and grievously affected the validity of the other measures which he has introduced.

Certainly, for example, the Urban Development Institute came right into the proposition very, very quickly. This is why the bill is flawed in principle. They have said that, because the Minister of Justice was fool enough to omit the provisions of the law reform commission dealing with rent control, we are going to let him know that even the elimination of distress; and even the elimination of security deposits is something which he should not do because it is going to raise the rent.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. J. Renwick: Let us be perfectly clear about it, Mr. Speaker, the bill is flawed in principle. The Attorney General has not dealt with the basic change in legal philosophy which the Law Reform Commission was putting in front of him on pages 9, 10 and 12 of their report.

He has not absorbed what they were talking about. Because of that, he has thought that it is possible to get the rest of the report adopted and leave out the gut relationship that deals with the economic relationship of most people which affects the quality of their lives in the province, the kind of housing which they are going to have. The substitution which he has provided is to simply provide for an increase in rent for people in this city, and in the other urban centres across the province that the people cannot afford.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to say to the Minister that I do not accept the proposition that this bill should now go to committee of the whole House. This bill has got to go to the legal and municipal bills committee which will provide adequate opportunity for the landlords, certainly—mind you, they always have the ear of the government—and for the tenants of the city, individually and collectively, and the tenants associations in the province to come before the committee. They can put their case, let the members of this assembly understand what the problems are, and try to convey to the government what is wrong with the bill.

I think that has got to take place before this session adjourns, so the bill can be amended where amendments are appropriate and required. And that this law, adequately amended to incorporate the balance of the recommendations of the Law Reform Commission can be passed before this House recesses for the Christmas vacation. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by my colleague, the member for Lakeshore, that the motion for second reading of Bill 234, intituled, An Act to amend The Landlord and Tenant Act be amended by deleting all the words after "that" and substituting therefor the words:

This House is of the opinion that the bill is fundamentally defective in principle in that; (1) it fails to make provision for rental review officers and for rental review boards to control the rise and level of rents in the province;

(2) it fails to confront or to deal with the present disparity between available housing units and the needs of the population at rentals which people can afford to pay or to provide adequate organs for the redress of grievances; and this House is further of the opinion that Bill 234 should be withdrawn and a new bill meeting the objections in principle listed above be introduced forthwith.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I think that this can be accepted as a reasoned amendment.

The Minister from St. George.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence (Minister of Mines): Mr. Speaker, I am very glad to have the opportunity of speaking on what I thought was going to be the motion for second reading. However, the debate is now on a motion introduced by the deputy leader of the New Democratic Party, which essentially is negative in character and for all practical purposes would have the result of killing this legislation, certainly for this session. It would have the result that we would be further delayed in bringing about much needed reforms, in landlord-tenant relationships in this province.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): Not possible under that bill.

Mr. J. Renwick: It could be done overnight.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: I am very pleased, as I say, to have the opportunity to speak to the bill in view of the fact that ever since my first election to this House, in May, 1958, I have been a strong advocate of many of the reforms which the bill contains. As a matter of fact, prior to the 1967 election, on at least two occasions in this House, I was the initiator of debate in this House respecting abuses that now exist and existed at that time in respect to landlord-tenant relationships. Although I have not checked with the Minister of Justice about it, I strongly suspect that the public pressures engendered both within and without this House, as a result of a private member's notice of motion, which I had the honour of moving in this House late in spring, 1967, helped to convince the government of the day and the then Attorney General, the present Minister of Justice, to commission or have the law reform commission—

Mr. Gisborn: You cannot just blame the Attorney General for the bill.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: —commission the particular report which has resulted in this bill before us today.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): And you did a poor job.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: During the 1967 election campaign, I made a promise, one of several to my constituents in St. George, that I would not seek another term of office unless legislation was passed by this government to guarantee the rights of tenants in the province of Ontario. I am happy and rather relieved to see that the bill has been moved by the government.

Mr. Lewis: When is the Minister stepping down then?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: In the past, there has been much justifiable criticism of the state of the law of landlord and tenant in Ontario. But with the enactment of this bill, I think we will be able to look with pride upon this area of our law in the knowledge that it is one of the most modern and progressive anywhere. The beneficial effects of these reforms will be felt by many citizens in many parts of the province. But, nowhere, Mr. Speaker, will they carry more significance than they do in the downtown area of the city of Toronto and in particular, in the constituency of St. George which I represent.

Mr. Lewis: All of those people will pay higher rent as a result of this bill.

An hon. member: You represent them well.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: At the present time, I would estimate that some 70 per cent of the people who live in St. George occupy apartments. If the present trend continues, and I have no doubt that it will continue, that figure will, in all likelihood, rise to over 90 per cent within the next five to ten years. The members of this House, if they have their eyes about them instead of other bodily functions which they now appear to be using on that side, will merely look out the window, they can see the great increase in apartment structures that are taking place in this area, particularly to the east of the building, day by day today. This is the area of St. George riding. I think that this trend will be reflected in the downtown areas of all our major cities in the future.

Mr. Lawlor: Is this bill the last rags of your radicalism?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: All of these people will benefit directly as a result of this legislation.

Mr. M. Makarchuk (Brantford): Wait until the rent goes up.

Mr. Lewis: You will lose your deposit on this bill; and I do not mean security deposit.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: As I said, in July of 1967, the commission began its investigation of the whole field of landlord and tenant law in Ontario, and in December of the same year the commission presented a report and recommendations to the Attorney General.

Mrs. M. Renwick (Scarborough Centre): With a review board.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: The commission's recommendations formed the basis of this legislation, in fact the government has adopted their recommendations almost in their entirety. The body of law governing the relationship between a landlord and his tenant was probably best described as feudal in origin.

In spite of some modifications it has perpetuated a relationship in which the landlord ruled like a medieval baron over his tenant. The rights allowed him by law, even though they have been resorted to less and less, were greater than those of any other class of persons involved in commercial dealings with the public.

Although the kind of relationship created by the old Landlord and Tenant Act may have been appropriate to a feudal setting, it has become less and less appropriate to the relationship between the apartment owner and the tenant in a modern, urban community.

The provisions of the old legislation may have contemplated a typical kind of relationship existing between a homeowner who occupied a part of his home with his family and rented out an attic or a spare room to a tenant. However, it never contemplated the kind of relationship which exists between the average city apartment dweller and his remote, corporate landlord.

Moreover, it would not have contemplated the enormous social, economic and physical changes that have taken place in the nature of our larger cities in our lifetime.

At one time, it may have been feasible for a young man of modest means to buy a home close to the downtown area of this city or any other city.

Today this choice has been virtually eliminated. More and more people, both young and old, by reason of their financial position and the existing employment opportunities, are virtually forced to seek out apartment accommodation that is both within their budget and close to the job market of cities such as Toronto. We can expect this trend to continue.

The number of single family dwellings is not likely to grow as quickly as the population of our cities, thus the proportion of those who will have to opt for apartment living can be expected to increase.

There are many provisions in this Act which help to correct the bias which has undeniably existed in favour of the landlord, and to place the tenant and his landlord on a footing of equality. Indeed, this was the whole purpose, the sum and substance of the commission's report and which I think even the member for Riverdale would agree is an attempt to balance that inequality that has existed up until now.

I would like to comment on several of them.

First of all, this legislation abolishes the right of the landlord to demand a security deposit from his tenant on the signing of a lease. This has been the source of much friction, both because of the difficulty which many tenants have encountered when they have attempted to recover their deposit at the end of their leases and when they wished to obtain recovery of their deposit from a reluctant landlord, they were forced to initiate legal proceedings and to incur all the inconvenience and expense that is involved.

Under the terms of this new legislation, it will be illegal for a landlord to demand or to receive a security deposit against damage or any other contingency in connection with the tenancy. When the term of the lease expires, if the landlord wishes to hold his tenant responsible for any damage, the onus will be upon him, the landlord, to initiate legal proceedings, to sue the tenant and to prove his claim in a court of law like any other citizen.

In addition, the new legislation also makes it mandatory for landlords who hold security deposits under existing leases to pay interest on them. Therefore, in the future, the landlord will be permitted to collect the last month's rent in advance, but this will serve as security against the tenant leaving with rent in arrears and for that reason only.

When existing leases expire, the tenants will be entitled to receive the amount of their deposit—that is their existing deposit under existing leases—plus interest at six per cent calculated from the date that this legislation comes into force.

If a landlord seeks to retain part of an existing security deposit to pay for any alleged damages and the tenant does not consent, in writing, to forfeit that part of the security deposit, the landlord will be forced to initiate legal action against the tenant within ten days of the expiry of the lease or else he will lose his right to claim it.

This is a further attempt to balance the inequalities that have existed.

Although the benefits to the tenants of the provisions of this legislation with respect to security deposits are, as I have noted, substantial, they will not adversely affect the position of the landlord, and should not be used as an excuse on the part of the landlord to demand increased rent.

There is no reason to believe that the abolition of security deposits will result in more damage being caused by more tenants. In fact, the history of security deposits shows that they have not acted as a deterrent to the small number of tenants who do cause damage. After months of intensive study, the commission found that evidence does not support the fear of the landlord that tenants will act irresponsibly if no security deposit is maintained.

No doubt, a very small minority of tenants act irresponsibly under any conditions, but there does not appear to have been a marked decrease in damage attributable to tenants since security deposits became a feature of the landlord and tenant relationship.

The simple fact of the matter is that security deposits will not prevent an irresponsible tenant from causing damage, and landlords who wish to protect themselves and the occupants of their buildings against this problem will simply refuse to rent to persons who have a history of this kind of irresponsible behaviour.

The second major reform is in connection with the so-called right of distress for non-payment. This antique remedy is one of the few examples of judicial self-help that remain in our law.

It extends to the landlord the extraordinary privilege, once a tenant's rent is in arrears, to enter the tenant's premises and seize enough of his personal property to provide security for the unpaid rent, plus any expenses in connection with the seizure. Moreover, if the rent remains unpaid, the landlord has the right to sell his tenant's property and to apply the proceeds of the sale towards the arrears of rent and expenses.

But the significant feature of the right of distress is that the landlord has been at liberty to take this extreme measure which, if successful, could, in theory, leave a tenant with nothing but the clothes on his back and without any resort to any legal process.

The landlord could simply step in, seize his tenant's property without establishing either the necessity or the legality of his action to any judge, and he could carry out his seizure without supervision from any court.

The effect of the exercise of this right has usually been to force the tenant into the street, leaving him not only without a place to live, but without his furniture and his personal belongings, and unable to provide for himself and his family.

I need hardly comment upon the injustice of these rights. No other category of creditors is provided with such a devastating weapon for the collection of their debt. It is a recognized principle of commercial credit that the risk and the responsibility for credit losses should rest on the creditor who grants credit without proper investigation.

In the words of the commission:

There can be no suggestion that a landlord in the private sector is under any obligation to rent to a tenant whose credit record and past record as a tenant provides a clear indication that such a prospective tenant represents a bad risk.

The same facilities for investigation of the circumstances of an individual to whom credit is to be extended are available to landlords and other commercial creditors alike, and there is no justification for the landlord being provided with any special privileges or collection procedures not available to other commercial creditors. Therefore, under this new legislation, the landlord's right to distress is abolished.

Thirdly, there are many other special privileges now enjoyed by landlords which this legislation will eliminate. Under the existing law, the landlord is not obliged to make any repairs to the leased premises unless he undertakes to do so in the lease. However, the commission recognized, and the government now recognizes, that though this once may have been appropriate, as the commission states:

It is an economic fact that the modern residential tenant is less likely to be able to bear the cost of undertaking repairs.

In the typical urban apartment tenancy which is usually of short duration, the landlord is generally considered to be the person having the major interest in the condition of the leased premises. It is the landlord who receives not only the rent, but also the benefit which results from improvements to the property, including repairs. It is the landlord, therefore, who ought to bear the primary responsibility to repair.

I would hope that all of the members in the House would say "amen" to those sentiments.

Therefore, under this legislation the landlord will be under an obligation to hand over the premises to the tenant in a good state of repair and fit for habitation, and to make all necessary repairs to the premises during the term of the lease so that the premises are maintained in that condition. Thus landlords will be forced to meet the relevant public health legislation and the minimum housing standards bylaws.

In addition, tenants will have the right to terminate their tenancies if, after they have given notice to their landlord, and have obtained a court order, he still fails to make the necessary repairs. Under the present law a landlord can prohibit a tenant from subletting his premises, or if he grants his tenants this right, he can reserve to himself the absolute right to veto a prospective tenant for any reason, real or imaginary, leaving the tenant no recourse.

Under the new legislation, the right to assign or sublet cannot be unreasonably withheld, and should there be any disagreement between the landlord and the tenant, then the court can consider the relevant circumstances for relief by either one of these two parties.

There are other much needed reforms in the legislation, but I would like to assure the House that this is not the end of the changes. This is an on-going process of change. This is only, as I understand it, an interim report, specifically relating to these matters, from people commissioned by the law reform commission.

I sincerely want to congratulate the Minister of Justice for bringing this legislation forward, and for enacting the legislation and putting into effect the very worthwhile reforms advocated in this interim report by the commission itself.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, we regret the Minister of Justice did not include a rental review board in this bill. It has been discussed on the floor of this House many times, and we know, according to the hon. Minister of Correctional Services, that it was discussed at length in the Cabinet, at least he implied that there was some division of opinion.

I regret very much that the Cabinet did not see fit to accept this recommendation and bring forward this aspect of the bill, as we believe it would have been in the best interests of the tenants in this community, the community of Toronto, and elsewhere in the province.

As a matter of fact, we as Liberals, have seen the real need on some occasions, and in circumstances that we have experienced in recent months in Ontario, for some provisions for rent control itself.

I have been informed that the Minister of Municipal Affairs administers a statute which, if he were to make use of it in conjunction with the municipalities, would permit those areas in heavily populated urban areas to implement a form of rent control if the circumstances required it.

There is no doubt there are many areas in Ottawa, Kingston, Windsor—as my hon. friend says—and here in Toronto, where pressures on families, particularly young families, are such that it is almost impossible to give the sort of housing that would be deemed adequate by any reasonable judge.

The Minister in charge of housing has made an attempt which we have criticized sincerely and at length on this side to provide low rental housing for those in the community who have access to no other alternatives. But surely the aim of the policy of the government should be to have an economy with apartments and housing in a modern sense that will meet the needs that can be predicted by brains that are available to the government, if not on the front benches, at least those in the administration are prepared to give this advice.

Still it is apparent that the government is not prepared to bring into legislation a rental review board, or to even make in a useful form the rent control legislation that is already available. In my view, and it has already been stated by the hon. member for Downsview, the advisory bureaus that are contained in the bill are going to be toothless wonders indeed.

The attendance of no one can be required. In many ways, these bureaus, if they are going to function at all, will be very much like the kitchen table committees that the Minister of Agriculture and Food (Mr. Stewart) uses in his expropriation procedures that he is so proud of in the way they are functioning.

We believe that a particular section of the bill is inadequate, and for that reason we would intend to bring forward an amendment when the bill comes before the committee of the House.

Mr. Lewis: Oh, I see.

Mr. Nixon: Yes, the hon. member for Scarborough West he sees, and I would say, Mr. Speaker, that we see what he intends to do, too. Their whole position in opposing the bill, or at least putting forward a reasoned amendment which I suppose lands on both sides of the issue, is so that when rents do go up and additional hardship is experienced by those people in the community that this bill is intended to help, and I believe in large measure will assist, that they will be able to say, "See, we told you. This bill is creating higher rents", and only the NDP who opposed the bill in principle will be able to take credit.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Nixon: We have seen this sort of political hair splitting in the past. I believe that essentially it is using the democratic process, Mr. Speaker, to mislead those people that this bill deals with.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Nixon: Now surely it is possible in this House, Mr. Speaker, to recognize value in a bill such as this bill contains within it, and to point out that it does not contain all of the measures for assistance to those who live in rented accommodations, that it might. We will use the facilities of the democratic process that are there for all to use, and all to understand, if they choose, rather than to mislead. We will use the facilities to propose amendments which hopefully would be accepted by a reasonable administration.

We have looked at the provisions of the bill and we believe in the abolition of security deposits. We believe in the rights of tenants that are put forward in conjunction with the report of the commission that the bill is modelled on.

We believe that the availability of rent controls is already on the statutes of this province and that they should be made use of in certain particular areas that all of us are aware of and that I have mentioned already.

I have indicated to you, Mr. Speaker, that the advisory bureau, we think, is a very weak substitution for a rental review board which itself would not be tantamount to rent control, but which could be designed to impel the attendance of landlords and tenants when there is a problem that so often would occur under these circumstances.

But considering the bill, we believe the only responsible position is to support it in principle after having said that we disagree with at least one or two of the provisions. We intend to use the facilities of the democratic process to attempt to improve those bills rather than to vote against the bill, which essentially means that anyone who does so is not in favour of the abolition of security deposits—

Mr. Singer: Right.

Mr. Nixon: That they are not and the hon. leader of the NDP puts forward—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Nixon: —a reasoned amendment which will permit him to have his cake and stuff it down his throat at the same time. I would say to you, sir, that there are bound to be misleading facts.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Nixon: I would predict that we will all be on public platforms in this House and elsewhere when the leader of the NDP will shake his head about increasing rents and say we could have prevented this, but the Liberals would not—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Nixon: I put this to you, Mr. Speaker, that—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Nixon: I would put it to you, Mr. Speaker, that the people of the province would not easily be misled because we on this side do oppose security deposits. We believe they should be outlawed.

We believe the other provisions of this bill, with the exception of the advisory bureau, are good provisions. We would have hoped that there would have been a standard lease put forward so that there would not have been all of the legal requirements necessary for any tenant who would have to retain a lawyer to have his particular lease investigated. If it were a standard lease the tenant would know that it would protect his interest and he would not have to resort to legal advice on his own behalf with all the costs that that would entail.

The hon. member for Downsview has referred to the weaknesses in the bill pertaining to sub-letting and we will refer to that when it comes to the committee stage, where it is our responsibility and our intention to improve the bill by offering amendments. But essentially the principles are as we understand it and we support these principles and for that reason we will be voting in favour of second reading of this bill.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, I shall leave my colleague, the hon. member for Lakeshore, to deal with the substance of this bill. I rise for just about a three-minute interjection. If this sounds like a little lesson in the basics of the operating of the parliamentary system—

Mr. Nixon: The hon. member needs a lesson maybe in the basics of politics—

Mr. MacDonald: —in reference to a reasoned amendment, forgive me, but obviously that is needed at the moment.

A reasoned amendment does not necessarily object to the substance of the bill.

Mr. Nixon: No, as long as the hon. member did not go on both sides of the issue.

Mr. MacDonald: A reasoned amendment points to a serious omission that must be included in the bill, otherwise its basic principle is seriously flawed. And our contention in this instance, Mr. Speaker—no effort on the member's part is going to pervert this—

Mr. Nixon: It means you are voting against the abolition of security deposits.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: Does it not amaze you how they get disturbed? Our contention, Mr. Speaker, is that this bill is made up of one part in which there is a legal tidying up and this is done quite well.

An hon. member: So you vote against it.

Mr. MacDonald: There is a second aspect of a landlord and tenant Act—the economic aspects of it. And that is where your rent review board must come in. Without that the bill is seriously flawed.

Indeed, if you ban security deposits, the landlords have already warned they are going to put the rents up. If you have not a rent review board, you are not going to be in a position to cope with unjustified increases.

The purpose of a reasoned amendment is to say, as far as the bill goes it may, generally speaking in principle, be acceptable, but it is seriously flawed because it does not go far enough. The amendment points to where you must go further, and that is what this amendment does.

Forgive me for the little lesson in the basics of the parliamentary system. It is chiefly for the benefit of the Liberals. We thought after Middlesex South you would learn, but obviously you have not. You are like the Tories, you learn slowly.

Mr. Lawlor: Mr. Speaker, if I may join in the debate—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lawlor: This Act as it was, Mr. Speaker—just between you and I if the others want to talk among themselves—is a hoary old bird.

Hon. S. J. Randall (Minister of Trade and Development): The hon. member is talking about the fellow I love.

Mr. Lawlor: According to the length of the hon. Minister's leases, one would think so. He is going to have to set the printing press up in the backyard. His leases are about the most iniquitous and brazen of the lot, as was proved here in the House a year ago.

Hon. Mr. Randall: Lawyers drew it up, I was just a washing machine peddler.

Mr. Lawlor: Hidebound by the—

Mr. Singer: The hon. Minister is right.

Mr. Lewis: A washing machine peddler! Is that all the hon. Minister is? I have been wondering for years.

Mr. MacDonald: We guessed it but we are glad to have it confirmed.

Mr. Speaker: Order, the hon. member for Lakeshore has the floor. Let us hear him.

Mr. Lewis: We do not have revelations like this very often.

Mr. Lawlor: We must remember these wise words of self-assessment on the part of the Minister.

Mr. Lewis: Right. Pretty accurate.

Mr. Lawlor: It does not always come to that, you know, the degree of objectivity is not overpowering.

I said, this is a hoary old bird, and I meant it. It reminds me of verdigris or a blue mould under glass. As we go through section after section we will see just how anachronistic this legislation really is. And how a government that makes any pretenses of holding up its head and having any enlightenment at all, could live with this legislation, basking in the sunshine as it did for all these years, passes my imagination.

You can say that, "A Daniel" comes to judgment" and that finally the realizations have dawned, the light came on in the corridor and this is the afternoon on which it came, and then you can accolade yourself, thump yourself on the chest and say, "We have come and we are going to conquer", but it is hardly a vindication of a position taken over a period of 26 years in which you people have had power and in which this Act was not amended a single time and which inflicted innumerable wrongs upon innumerable human beings in the province. One can always, as I say, rejoice a little that finally some alleviation has come and some soothing unction has been applied. The clauses have been amended that we have cried out for in this party for many, many years now, and I will quite blatantly state that we were the first, as usual, to bring these matters to thorough review and to the attention of this assembly.

I have in my hand a press release of February 21, 1967, in which a ten-point fair human rights code for apartment dwellers and tenants as a whole was set forth, after perusal by our legal caucus, and presented through this caucus to this House.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: What was the date of that? It was after my speeches.

Mr. Lawlor: That gave the hon. Minister his fillip; it gave him the initial impetus by which he then took up the cause. He has a glint in his eye, late in the afternoon sometimes, when we come forward with good recommendations, except of course in his own field, which is mining, where he is totally obtuse.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Flattery will get you nowhere.

Mr. Lawlor: Some of these recommendations coming before us here this afternoon, Mr. Speaker, are not yet law and I would like to hear the Attorney General's comments, either here or in committee, as to why they have been omitted. They have not been embodied in this legislation even as they have been promoted and put forward by the commission. We will come to several heads in just a moment. We called it number one—the abolition of security deposits. It is less than intellectually honest on the part of the leader of the Opposition to stand up and make that ostrich-like dance that he does on occasion—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lawlor: —like some unbending crane, in placing in our mouths and in our minds what he knows is quite a traducing of a position we have taken for years almost ad nauseam, in this House. Having heard it so often, he begins to repeat it himself, Mr. Speaker. That is the general position of the temporizing Liberal Party in most issues.

Mr. Lewis: This is very consistent.

Mr. Lawlor: We wanted a rental and tenancy review board at that time and we still want it and we want it so badly that we are prepared to fight for it. The role of the Opposition, as I see it in this House, is not to temporize, not to fence-sit, not to mollycoddle, not to say we are willing to take half a loaf rather than none.

Mr. MacDonald: The crumbs from the Tory table.

Mr. Lawlor: Our job is to be Opposition people. To tell you when you are wrong; to demand the full loaf. We want the full loaf on this occasion and if—

Mr. Nixon: So you are going to vote against the abolition of the security deposits? I hope the constituents in Lakeshore riding like that.

Mr. Lawlor: If you are not prepared to do that then so much the worse.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lawlor: But to be a half-hearted, venal Opposition and unable to rise to the occasion on pieces of legislation, time after time. Of course, the one that comes mostly to mind is Medicare. I mean you were certainly caught with your socks down that time.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Randall: That is not the way I heard it.

Mr. Lawlor: I predict a similar situation this afternoon.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lawlor: Do you never learn? If you just take your lead from us, we will take you into the vestibule or into the promised land.

Mr. C. G. Pilkey (Oshawa): The 21st century at least.

Mr. Lawlor: They wanted a standard form of lease. The legislation here does not call for a standard form precisely; it says that a lease as drawn will be good; this is a good move. It is not world-shattering.

Mr. Nixon: Vote against it.

Mr. Lawlor: It is not Mount Parnassus throwing up volcanic ash or anything like that. It is a little flower growing in a distant field. He has said that the landlord must give the tenant a copy, an executed copy, of the lease.

Hon. Mr. Randall: It is all in the book.

Mr. Lawlor: You do not have to get down on your knees in those circumstances like the Liberals do and begin to adore the false gods. It is only a little flower. It is not even an orchid, for heaven's sake.

Hon. Mr. Randall: Give him another pitchfork!

Mr. Lewis: It must be nice to have an extra supporting group in this House.

Mr. Lawlor: There is a clause and this is on the business of outlawing all clauses in leases restricting tenants' rights to purchase milk, bread, other foodstuffs and personal services from the merchant of his choice; your law reform commission made recommendations under this head.

You have chosen to ignore them; I do not think you should. This is a fairly iniquitous practice. Whether it is the owner of the apartment house who is getting a rake-off or a cut-back because he gives certain concessions to a certain bread company or milk company or whatever peddler it may happen to be, this is inconvenient to him, too; or whether it is the superintendents that are carrying out these things to supplement their incomes. Lord help us, in most cases they are low enough for superintendents of apartment houses. Whether this a gratuity which they expect to receive over and above any other moneys they may get; there is a desire to preserve this sort of thing in either of those instances. The thing is venal and should be stopped. It is questionable and I wonder why you have not embodied in the legislation something prohibiting this particular practice which is very widespread.

Of course, it acts detrimentally, as we all know, to the tenants in the apartment house because in giving this privilege, the amount that is charged to the tenant who purchases that service, can be expected to be greater than what he would get from a competitive market. He pays more for it.

Therefore, you are penalizing tenants by permitting the practice to continue and giving it affirmation by refusing to alter it. In legislation, that is the way things are. If you do not do something, it is as much a positive act as if you did.

Mr. Lewis: That is why we are opposing this.

Mr. Lawlor: There is also the business of the landlord charging tenants for extra occupants. This is a fairly widespread practice, too. I suppose the Attorney General could argue under that head, "The parties themselves can provide for that eventuality in their leases". But very often it happens that strangers or visitors or kinfolk drop in and the landlords then approach them and say, "If they are going to stay here for a day or two they are going to pay me for the accommodation". There is nothing in the lease and it can be quite heavy and exorbitant.

I am not going to run through all the magnificent ten decaloguish categories which we gave almost three years ago now. They have come to pass not even in totality this afternoon; by no means, although we may revert to that.

What I want to do at the moment is to question the Attorney General in principle on—

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps if the hon. member is now about to start on his main criticism of the bill, he might adjourn the debate.

Mr. Lawlor: I thought I did that.

Mr. MacDonald: That is what you call a floral prelude!

Mr. Lawlor: I thought I would talk with great rapidity and get my second minor point over with before I came to the third minor point.

Mr. Lawlor moves the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

It being 6.00 o'clock p.m., the House took recess.

CONCURRENCE IN SUPPLY, DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

Mr. Speaker: The question this evening is for concurrence in the report of the committee of supply on The Department of Education. Is it the pleasure of the Minister to open the debate and close it, or just to close it?

Hon. W. G. Davis (Minister of Education): Mr. Speaker, I thought I would just close the debate tonight.

Mr. J. R. Smith (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, as the newly appointed chairman of the education and university affairs committee, I would like to say a few impromptu remarks regarding the proceedings of this particular group.

Firstly, I would like to commend and offer my appreciation to the members of that committee who so faithfully attended the meetings and participated in the dialogue that ensued. I think that a great deal of satisfaction was gained by those members who were also members of the select committee this summer on House rules and procedure to see some of their recommendations taking shape in action while this committee was studying the estimates.

Perhaps, if you looked over the roster of the members of this committee, you would soon discover that at last the teachers of this province have perhaps gained equal rank with the lawyers who are members of this House, and are more or less going from strength to strength in this committee.

Mr. Speaker, one of the really progressive things that happened at this committee level was the fact that we now had an opportunity to sit down and question and establish a dialogue, not only between the members of the committee and the Minister, but between the members and the selected senior civil servants of the various branches of this department. I think that the members were faithful in their attendance and got into this programme very well.

In fact, one of the best discussions that ensued during the committee hearings, was a topic surrounding OISE. For many of us who were unfamiliar with the programmes OISE, we certainly became fully conscious of its existence and the many problems and the programmes that they are undertaking.

While we might not be in agreement over all the things that were said, nevertheless, I think the members for the first time in this committee had an opportunity to learn a great deal that they otherwise might not have found out.

I would also like to thank the technical people connected with this committee who gave tremendous assistance, not only from the Hansard people, but also the people in charge of the audio system.

Now, Mr. Speaker, one of the greatest blocks of time was spent with OISE and educational television in the province, and I am somewhat concerned about the fact that perhaps some of the research findings of OISE are not being disseminated to the teaching profession and other education bodies in the province of Ontario as well as they should be.

Many things we discovered are being researched and documented, but perhaps a lot of these findings are not getting down to the classroom teachers. I was surprised that the educational programmes for our gifted children were not discussed.

We live in an age, Mr. Speaker, of various pressure groups and associations. It is a sort of "in thing" to have your own organization. Almost every professional, every minority group, almost every special interest group has their own professional organization, or society.

I think this is one of the reasons we have seen such remarkable progress in the province of Ontario. We saw work that was initiated through the parents of retarded children, the stage where they were eventually recognized and incorporated into the public school system of this province. Of recent years we have had parents' action groups for the emotionally disturbed and the perceptually handicapped and so on. But perhaps one of the groups that has really no voice, organized voice, that is, is that of the parents of the gifted children of this province.

It is with this particular group of our school community that much of our destiny lies. I think that as we move forward into a programme in this province of more open-ended systems where children are allowed to select individual study programmes, there is a tremendous challenge opening up for these involved with the teaching of the gifted child, whether it is in the elementary or the secondary school system.

I know in the city of Hamilton, ten or so years ago, they initiated a programme of enrichment classes in grades 7 and 8, and this has been advanced now into special individual programmes for these children when they graduate into the secondary school system.

However, this is not enough, and I know a great deal of the enthusiasm which at first came with this new interest is beginning to wane. Many of the people involved with initiating the project have become involved with other special areas of education, because many of them, of course, are the leaders in the teaching profession, always ready to accept new challenges and open up new programmes.

I think, Mr. Speaker, one of the challenges in our new school system is the open-ended concept in education and, of course, tied to this is the greater need for better libraries. Now, those of us in my generation, when we return back to the schools, the one thing we notice is the change in the research and audio-visual and library facilities.

Today the children use multi-media loops, sophisticated reading lists; they use documents and clipping services in their new research facilities. Perhaps this is one area where we are going to have to spend a great deal of money providing the resources for the children involved in these programmes to be able to develop their own individual programmes.

Mr. Speaker, I know there are a great number wishing to participate in this debate and there are so many things you could discuss under these estimates, I will conclude.

Mr. T. Reid (Scarborough East): Mr. Speaker, I would like to touch on two areas in these remarks.

We did, indeed, have a very full discussion of some of the issues involved in education and educational finance in this province in the standing committee, and I would like to say that the vice-chairman, now promoted to chairman, did a first-class job of chairing that committee and making it possible for a meaningful debate to go on, although I did wonder, Mr. Speaker, why the Minister was allowed to sit down when he spoke and why the members of the Opposition had to stand up when they wanted to speak.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Strictly a technical difference.

Mr. T. Reid: Yes, technical I—

An hon. member: He had a bad back and the doctor said rest.

Mr. T. Reid: Well, if he had a bad back that is all right.

An hon. member: Do not let it get to your head.

Mr. T. Reid: I recommend to the chairman that in terms of equity perhaps next year the Minister should have to stand up when he wants to speak and the Opposition members will be able to sit down and heckle him from their seats.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): I would just as soon stand up when I am talking to a Minister.

Mr. W. G. Pitman (Peterborough): You can move faster that way.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): You can talk down to him then.

Mr. T. Reid: But, Mr. Speaker, I would like to inform the Minister that in March, 1969, I sent a series of comprehensive educational questionnaires to random sample groups of parents, trustees, principals and teachers across the province. I got the addresses of the parents, for example, from telephone books on a random basis and so it was not a cooked sample.

Each group was further broken down into urban, small town and rural with the educators further divided into public and separate, elementary and secondary, and I put into my opening statement on the questionnaire the following statements:

Does government know what you think and feel about education? I need your help in making your views known in the Ontario Legislature. Answer and comment on these questions and mail back to me, etc. No need to tell me your name.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I nearly sent you my reply—

Mr. MacDonald: How many Ministers did you send it to?

Mr. T. Reid: Well, I do not know, it was probably somewhere in Peel County in those rolling hills of Conservative pastoral splendor. The Minister found one in the cow pasture.

The point is, Mr. Speaker, that these questionnaires were sent back unsigned and they were very, very helpful in helping me to understand the views of many people in this province. I would like to table with Hansard the report I have here and to have it reproduced in Hansard as an appendage rather than read the entire results, if that is all right. (See Appendix).

I would like to say a few things about the replies I had to this questionnaire. There were 300 questionnaires sent to parents across this province and between 12 and 13 per cent replied in full. (There were 50 questionnaires sent to school trustees and only six replied. There were 40 sent to principals of schools in this province and there was only one reply. There were 17 sent to teachers in this province and only three replied. The total number of questionnaires mailed out was 460. There were 47 replies, that is a 10 per cent return.

The only replies I considered significant in a quantitative sense are those from parents and I would like to pass on to the Minister some of the views expressed to me by the parents of children in the schools in this province.

I maintain this government, and this department in particular, is very much out of touch with the thinking of the people of this province, particularly the parents of the children in our school system. I will report these replies without imposing my own value judgment or interpretation on them:

With regard to corporal punishment, there was a real split in the replies from parents. It was a 50-50 split, but it is interesting to note there was a very definite correlation between income level and degree of opposition. That is to say, Mr. Speaker, the higher the income level of the parents and the more detailed the replies to this question, the stronger the opposition to the use of corporal punishment. Conversely, the lower the income category and the more sketchy the reply, the stronger the support for the continuation of corporal punishment in the schools.

On special education I found the wording of the special education question may have been ambiguous because most respondents appeared to think the question related only to physically handicapped children, so I am not too sure just what the results mean in this. But there was an overwhelming consensus among all the respondents that parents did not know what facilities were available to them.

In other words, there seems to be, as we discussed in the committee, a gap in understanding between the facilities that to a large extent are made available through the Minister's department in financial incentives and so forth, at the local level, local school board level, and the knowledge that parents have of those facilities.

On oral French, ninety per cent were in favour of early, that is Grade 3 oral French. The remaining ten per cent were opposed to the teaching of French in principle.

On educational television, we again see the information gap between what we in this House know, particularly the Minister and the Opposition members who are charged with the responsibility of constructively criticizing his department, there is a gap between our knowledge and the knowledge of parents in this province about the question of educational television.

About 40 per cent of the respondents knew nothing about ETV, but still had positive feelings about their children being taught in such a way because of the way they, the children, react to ordinary television. The remaining 60 per cent, with only three exceptions, were completely in favour of ETV so long as the teachers know how to use it. I find that quite interesting because there is an indication here that we should be perhaps sponsoring, through the Minister's department, teacher-training of a very special sort—the use of audio-visual equipment in the schools themselves.

The questionnaire which I sent out asked them about weaknesses in the education system in this province and I will pass on to the Minister at this time only a few of those comments. There was general agreement by the parents that the quality of teaching could and should be improved through better teacher training. Related to this view, in the question asked about the job done by their own children's teachers, there is generally a feeling, about 75 per cent, that the teachers' work was being satisfactorily done.

The blame for inadequate teaching was generally placed on poor teacher training. I think, as the hon. member for Peterborough has said on many occasions, one of the key issues in Ontario's education system is the question of teacher training at both the secondary and elementary school level. When asked about the parent-teacher association, 90 per cent of the parents said they were useless.

I think the Minister should recognize this because he has often stated in this House and elsewhere, Mr. Speaker, that the parent-teachers associations should have a stronger role in the formulation of policies in our schools. When I asked about student demonstrations, the parents were about 65 per cent in favour of these so long as there was no actual damage. The other 35 per cent were uniformly opposed. On sex education or family life education—I found this quite interesting—60 per cent favoured the introduction of this in the fourth grade; 25 per cent to teen-agers and 15 per cent not at all, in the school system.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, on this aspect of my remarks, when asked how the system could be improved, 60 per cent of the parents who replied felt that there was room for improvement, again, mainly in the area of teacher training. Well, I will not go into any further detail on the replies, Mr. Speaker, but I think that if there is anything that emerges from the feeling of the parents—and I accept it as a proper random distribution—my interpretation in the House, a proper objective interpretation, is that the parents feel that somehow or other, a lot more could be done through teacher education to improve the education of their children in the school system.

I think there are two possible conclusions from this. One, we can assume that they are good observers of the school system and, on that assumption, the fact emerges that they feel that teacher training in this province could be much better than it is. Secondly, we can make an opposite assumption that they are misinformed about the education their children are getting and the teaching that the children are getting in the schools.

If we make that assumption, the conclusion is that parents are misinformed about the education system and therefore more must be done under the leadership of the Minister, and this government, to communicate more meaningfully with the parents about what is happening in the school system. I shall leave that aspect of my remarks, Mr. Speaker, and turn to the second aspect.

It has to do with the poverty cycle in this province, which affects at least one in five families and more than one in five children in this province. I return to this theme because I maintain that in addition to the alienation of parents from the school system, as I interpret it from the answers to the questionnaire I sent out, there is a deeper social problem centering around the question of who benefits from the education system in Ontario.

I would like to begin my remarks in this area by quoting a new source to the Minister. It is a paper prepared by Professor D. L. McQueen who is now professor of economics at Glendon College at York University and who was formerly the vice-chairman of the Economic Council of Canada and instrumental in the last two annual reports of the council which centred to a great extent on the issues of poverty in our society. This is the first time, to my knowledge, that David McQueen has made his views known in public on the issue of poverty in Canada and also in Ontario.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): It is about time they grasped this.

Mr. T. Reid: Yes, I am getting tired of it too.

I would like to quote a few very select sections from Professor McQueen's paper to the Provincial Council of Women of Ontario from a speech he made in Toronto on November 19, 1969. I would like to put this right in the record to try to hammer them home even more to the Minister. These are the remarks of David McQueen, Mr. Chairman, and I think they are very succinct and very relevant to the issue of poverty in Ontario and it is about time we got off our something or other and pursued public policies in this province that are designed to break the cycle of poverty as opposed to perpetuating it.

Professor McQueen says this:

There is no panacea for poverty and we have much still to learn but enough is known to justify more action than we are now undertaking.

Of course, he is referring to the federal government as well as to the provincial government. Professor McQueen continues:

While the poor lack many things, their most fundamental lack is one of opportunity, of the liberty to exercise meaningful choices in our economy and in our society. If they had that liberty in ample measure, then today they, or at any rate their children, would themselves perform the greater part of the job of lifting themselves out of poverty.

David McQueen then goes on to comment on the Economic Council of Canada's review and he says the review said a number of things about poverty in Canada. These are things with which many members of this group will be familiar. For example, there is the statement about the persistence of widespread poverty at a time when the bulk of Canadians enjoy one of the highest standards of living in the world. This is a disgrace.

I say to the Minister and to his Cabinet colleagues that it is a disgrace that after over a quarter of century of government in this province, there is still widespread and deep poverty in this province.

Mr. Lewis: Poverty in thought as well as in means.

Mr. T. Reid: Professor McQueen states, Mr. Speaker:

Poverty in Canada is widespread and ubiquitous. It is not always readily visible. It is among us here in Toronto and other large cities, and not just tucked away in Indian reservations and the less savoured parts of the Atlantic provinces and eastern Quebec. And it is here in otherwise prosperous urban Canada in significant amounts.

Then he notes, in terms of the solutions that governments traditionally have tried to defeat poverty, a number of very interesting points, one of which is this, and I quote:

We have here in Canada a major problem, one which the so-to-speak natural expanse of forces of the economy is not eliminating fast enough.

So ends the myth that economic growth can abolish poverty in urban Ontario and urban Canada.

Professor McQueen says, and I would like to drive this home to the Minister:

A large proportion of our poor live in Toronto and the other localities not normally in the target-zone of programmes to help disfavoured regions.

If the Minister would read his speech he would find that David McQueen is really hitting the federal government, as I hit the federal government, in assuming that the department under Minister Marchand, concerned with regional disparity, can do very much for poverty in this province.

Mr. Speaker, the former vice-chairman of the Economic Council of Canada quotes James Tobin, a U.S. professor of economics, under whom, by the way, I studied at Yale. I am not worried, I am so much a Canadian national that I can never be Americanized.

James Tobin says this and it applies to this country as well as to the United States:

Inequality of condition means inequality of opportunity. Poverty and inequality perpetuate themselves in children whose capacities and motivations to learn are impaired perhaps by physical handicap due to malnutrition or inadequate medical care before or after birth; perhaps by intellectually and culturally deprived homes and neighbourhoods. Improvement in the conditions under which children are born and raised would increase, not diminish, their earning capacity as adults.

Now, I say simply that if this government really wanted to do something to intervene in the cycle of poverty, they could turn many taxeaters into taxpayers over the next 15 years.

Then Professor McQueen notes that the guaranteed minimum income will not be a cure for poverty. He breaks another myth that is receiving widespread acceptance in Canada. He says, "Only to a limited extent will it deal with causes".

So let us get that fact straight in this province. The guaranteed minimum income cannot really break the cycle of poverty. It is really another maintenance type of welfare programme, a necessary one, one that would be fair and less inequitable, but basically is not designed to be a programme of intervention in the cycle of poverty.

Mr. Speaker, I could quote further from Professor McQueen's remarks on this issue, but the point comes down to this. The Minister is aware of my thoughts on this; if we are going to intervene in the cycle of poverty, we must have educational programmes for the children of the poor.

If we are going to do that, then this provincial government under the Minister of Education's leadership, whoever he might be, must take an active leadership role in promoting those types of programmes.

It is no longer enough to have the grant structure under which this province makes its grants to the local school boards, starting only at kindergarten. There must be special grants to school boards who want to involve themselves in programmes of education for children from the inner city and from the rural slum areas of this province.

Not only must there be financial assistance, there must be a teacher training programme for the inner city schools, train sensitized Cabbage Town street workers. It is no longer enough to have a teacher tucked away in a school. The teachers must come on to the street, the teachers must go into those apartment buildings and teach. I submit, Mr.

Speaker, that the Minister has not realized the consequences of sitting back and doing very little about this issue.

The Minister made one point, Mr. Speaker, in the debate on the estimate before us; he proudly pointed out that 47.7 per cent of the students now at university were from homes where the family income was $8,000 or less.

I say to the Minister, so what? 85 per cent of the families in this province have incomes of $8,000 or less. And I say that is inequitable and not fair, when 85 per cent of the families have $8,000 or less and their children account for less than half the children in the university.

To put it another way, children of the 15 per cent of the wealthy families in this province with incomes over $8,000, account for over 52 per cent of those children in the universities. That is inequality, and that is wrong.

Mr. Speaker, with those remarks, I move, seconded by the leader of the Opposition, that this House regrets the Minister has not given more serious attention to providing effective early childhood learning opportunities in the formal education system of the province to the children of the poor to enable most of them to perform the greater part of the job of lifting themselves out of poverty over the next 15 years.

Mr. Lewis: Another regretful Liberal motion that has no policy, no—

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): You may have an opportunity to comment on it briefly in a moment.

Mr. Lewis: They are a branch of that government party.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. In amendment to the concurrence motion, Mr. T. Reid, Scarborough East, moves, seconded by Mr. Nixon, that this House regrets that the Minister has not given more serious attention to providing effective early childhood learning opportunities in the formal education system of the province to the children of the poor to enable most of them to perform the greater part of the job of lifting themselves out of poverty over the next 15 years.

Mr. M. Makarchuk (Brantford): That is not a motion, that is a fraternal greeting.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Peterborough now has the floor.

Mr. Pitman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I suppose that I should indicate also, my concurrence with the feelings of the member for Scarborough East and the chairman of the committee, the member for Hamilton Mountain.

Mr. Nixon: That would be a wise thing to do; let us look into the future.

Mr. Pitman: The use of the committee is, indeed, a far more effective way of dealing with the estimates of The Department of Education, than dealing with them in this House can possibly be, and one can only hope that next year we may also bring the estimates of The Department of University Affairs into that forum as well.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Thank you very much.

Mr. Pitman: Because I think, in all fairness, we had a confrontation there which certainly was of far greater use than anything we have accomplished so far. If I was to characterize my comments tonight, and give them a title, I suppose I would say I would like to talk a little bit about goals and gold, or perhaps to put it more in the vernacular, direction and 'dough'.

Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to cover the estimates of this department item by item in my opening remarks nor do I intend to re-debate the various issues which came before this committee and which aroused some contention and some confrontation. Rather, I think this is the opportunity to set down on a broad canvas the position of this party in the Legislature of Ontario in the matters affecting the education of young people in our society today.

There is a crisis in education—not just a provincial crisis, not just a national crisis, indeed, it is a world crisis. For the past decade there has been an uncritical worship of education as the panacea which will bring an end to war, to solve the social ills, expand the economy and generally give the good life to all. Indeed, some social critics have declared that education or annihilation are the alternatives in this troubled world.

But the irony is, Mr. Speaker, that we can have both education and annihilation. In fact, how ironic that the nation which has provided its young with more education than any other state in history, in the same year can put a man on the moon and yet be the bearers of slaughter and inhumanity in a jungle in south-east Asia, and can, indeed, commit atrocities which would make Ghengis Khan wince. How ironic that a nation that has hallowed liberal education should be able to create the highest standard of living, and yet be so incapable of distributing its wealth that some of its citizens, too many of them, black in colour, live at the level of a Hindu outcast in Calcutta.

How ironic that a nation which has mouthed the words of equality and individuality in its educational philosophy, should now be questioning whether it has lost its soul in an urban technological madness. And so today, that nation considers what it is spending in the name of education.

In a strange "gut" way, the people of Ontario are questioning the explosion in expenditures and activity all in the name of education. Unless we do something in this jurisdiction, I am afraid the worship will turn to disdain and cynicism. During this period of expansion, we have acted as though any expenditure in the name of education was good and worthwhile. Citizens are wondering to what extent the rising cost of education can be tolerated, as long as it appears that decisions are made which are completely uncritical. The argument that money spent on education will be repaid with interest, that, indeed, all educational spending is an investment, will simply no longer hold water. We are realizing slowly that all spending on education is not necessarily going to produce growth of any kind.

We are realizing that all spending on education does not provide individual growth, does not encourage tolerance, wisdom, or many of the other worthwhile attributes. In other words, it is the position of this party that it is time that The Department of Education in the province of Ontario not only examined its aims and objectives, but its actions and its expenditures. There is a plethora of foggy, ill-conceived, jargon-filled platitudinizing, which takes the place of hard thinking. The Minister's report and its philosophic exposition—to coin a phrase of Stephen Leacock's on this the one hundredth anniversary of his birth—leaps on its horse and races off in all directions. Because this department will not define and refine its intellectual base, its treatment of various programmes is equally vague.

Taken one by one, and I think this is the feeling of those who sat on this committee, taken one by one as the people appeared before us and we questioned them, and as we examined the estimates, the work going on in each of these sections was found worthwhile. ETV, many accomplishments, but no philosophy of what it is expected to do.

Teacher training—a number of interesting experiments in the direction of a more meaningful experience to those who are involved, but so far removed from the realities of the educational experience in Ontario.

One could go on. Taken one by one, we saw many people of talent and goodwill doing their 'thing', with dedication, but taken as a whole it becomes a great amorphous collection of activities with little direction or purpose. The budget goes up, the activity continues, and the taxpayer stands open-mouthed.

The revolt will come, and unless this department sets up goals and establishes priorities, education itself will suffer. The great problem is that we add, but we rarely subtract. We never dismantle, we pile on. Rarely does a programme phase out, it is simply supplemented. This comes once again of a total inability to define direction. We hold on to all we are doing so that we cannot be faulted for changing too quickly, and at the same time we tinker with the system for fear of being accused of being out of date.

I was very interested, Mr. Speaker, to read an article by a man called Peter Drucker. It is called "The Sickness of Government" and I would hope, some time, perhaps all members of the House might take it upon themselves to get this publication out of the library, it is called The Public Interest, Winter, 1969. The article is called "Sickness of Government" and this is a general tendency which the author talks about here and I quote:

There is mounting evidence that government is big rather than strong.

I wonder what department is big rather than strong.

That it is fat and flabby rather than powerful, that it costs a great deal to build but does not achieve much. There is mounting evidence also, the citizen less and less believes in government and is increasingly disenchanted with it. Indeed government is sick, and just at the time when we need a strong, healthy vigorous government.

I will skip a page or two and go on:

The inability of government to abandon anything is not limited to the economic sphere.

He goes on to examine the military draft in the United States.

No one defends our present system and yet we extend it year after year on a temporary basis. The same inability to abandon applies to research projects supported by government. It holds true as soon as government supports the arts. Every beneficiary of a government programme immediately becomes a constituent. He immediately organizes himself for effective, political action for pressure on the decision-maker. All institutions, of course, find it hard to abandon yesterday's task and stop doing the unproductive. All man's institutions, and for that matter all men, are committed to what they are used to and reluctant to accept that it no longer needs doing or that it has not produced results. But government is under far greater pressure to cling to yesterday than any other institution, indeed, the typical response of government to the failure of activity is to double its budget and its staff.

Well, perhaps the whole process is best characterized by what has happened to the Hall-Dennis report on Aims and Objectives of Education in The Province of Ontario. Here was a massive effort to give direction. But the Hall-Dennis report has not become a medium for establishing provincial goals, it has become a target.

The Minister has initiated an endless debate but has failed to structure any result. Mr. Dennis tramped the province, with great merit; committee members attended countless meetings. One must admit that the report became a focus of much of the debate on education for the last 16 months. But for what purpose, Mr. Speaker?

Now, one only has to mention the Hall-Dennis and teachers groan and principals fly for cover. Its main use today is that of justifying almost any change in the curriculum or timetable, often uncritically and with virtually no recognition of the implications.

All of us would recognize that one does not have to put into motion 263 of the recommendations of this report to make real changes in the educational system of Ontario. But the fact is that single recommendations are being implemented without recognizing all the implications which extend around that particular innovation. Often the changes which are being justified began before the report was presented, or it is blamed for every failing of the school system and particularly the department of all the young people in general.

For new levels of non sequitur, one has only to listen to people who blame Hall-Dennis for the behaviour of young people who were out of school before the report was even written. Surely, what we must have now is a structure for bringing the Hall-Dennis report before teachers' federations, for their views, written and put into some sort of form which can be dealt with.

The same, too, with other organizations, home and school, indeed the community as a whole as far as we can, within that organization with a purpose of finding a direction for education in this province of Ontario.

We cannot simply leave the report as some kind of intellectual battleground for reformers and reactionaries for the next decade or so. I repeat, unless some goals are forthcoming, unless some priorities are established on the basis of these goals, we are in trouble.

As I have said before, I think this revolt is coming and it will strike those areas most accessible and most vulnerable, largely at the school board level and, unfortunately, largely on the early years of elementary education, the cuts will be made.

Or, services to mentally retarded and emotionally disturbed children or to professional development and redevelopment of teachers. These priorities, if not established by the Minister, will be established by someone else, perhaps the taxpayers, perhaps the noisiest and least wise of those taxpayers. I suggest this revolt, the next revolt, will not be over peripheral matters such as trips to Hawaii and some rather lavish farewells to exalted educational administrators. It will be a revolt of the disillusioned, the crashing down of the misplaced trust in those who have been responsible for educational leadership in this province.

The Minister is quite aware of the nature and extent of the financial crisis, one only has to quote the Provincial Treasurer:

This year, the total school budget was $1.9 billion and the potential increase to $3.4 billion in four years represents the total amount of the anticipated increase in the province's revenue during the same four-year period. In other words, if education costs were allowed to increase at their present rate, there would be no new revenue left for the required expansion and maintenance of all other programmes.

And, Mr. Speaker, we are not willing to countenance the cutting back of health programmes, we are not willing to countenance the cutting back in The Department of Social and Family Services. We think there are priorities here which have some validity and we wonder about the way in which costs are going.

One looks at the extensions, the projections by Dr. Cecily Watson, OISE from 1956 to 1966. There is a 318 per cent increase yearly in school expenditure in those ten years. The projected increase from 1966 to 1978 is 270 per cent.

One looks in terms of money—in 1956, a budget of $263 million which by 1966 had become $1,101,000,000. By 1971, projected, $2,182,000,000.

By 1976, $3 billion—$3.5 billion virtually—and by 1978, $4,000,073,000. This is what the taxpayers of this province look somewhat aghast at.

Perhaps the financial crisis will be our salvation? When money could be spent without justification, one could go in all directions, uncritically, but now this gate is being closed, there must be priorities set and directions chosen consciously, recognizing the full implications of every section.

Without these goals and priorities in spending, our examination of the estimates of this department borders on the ludicrous. As I say, each section of this department comes before the committee, with its own role and responsibility, yet it is when one tries to fit them all together that the problem arises.

For example, OISE, as the member for Hamilton Mountain has mentioned, has already established itself as an institution of some merit in research and graduate studies. Within the lines of its role as part of the school of graduate studies of the University of Toronto, it is justifying the many millions of dollars that have been spent. But it has failed to define its role in relation to the total thrust of education across the whole province.

Much of its research is irrelevant, fragmentary and of little value except as a stepping stone to the academic who is concerned. The institution has failed to be of influence on either of the great developments of the past two years—the Hall-Dennis report or the organization of county boards of education. It is almost totally insensitive to the feelings of teachers and administrators who feel it is failing them. In an age of greater participation it has to be dragged into realizing that its own students must be allowed an opportunity to be of influence.

I will not even bother to comment on the Americanization of the institution. Alone, it justifies itself. As a part of any pattern of provincial development, it fails and it fails miserably.

The ETV branch is a gem in the Minister's crown. It produces first-class material, it wins awards in the United States. Could anyone have a greater justification for worth, than that? But if one looks to see what total role it is playing in Ontario, one soon realizes that few students, particularly the secondary schools, ever see the programmes. That, we hope, will be remedied with channel 19 and the development of local ETV groupings.

This, along with a sensible grant policy toward the acquisition of necessary hardware, will at least put the picture on the tube in front of the children. But where is there any definitive definition of the role of ETV as it relates to all the other activities of the department? To what extent is it related to what is going on in the curriculum branch affecting drastic changes in courses or building bridges between established disciplines? How is it relating to the individualization of education experience? We fail to get much of an answer.

Another activity, heavily costed, is added. On and on the story goes. The teachers' colleges are being placed in universities, for what purpose? Well obviously to put more students—mature, knowledgeable teachers—in our classrooms. In itself, a worthwhile direction but how will the university experience make these young people more compassionate, more understanding, more tolerant?

What courses in the psychology department would be of most use and in the history department and the philosophy department? Does the Minister think the university, where teacher education is certainly a peripheral aspect of its concern, is making a total effort to work this out? Will the creation of a local committee be enough to give this important development its proper place? I doubt it.

This is where there should be a total reaction on the part of teachers who are so concerned about teacher education and have been for decades; once again a crucial activity but totally unrelated to the entire pattern.

If the Minister will decide on some goals, we might be able to decide priorities, dismantle existing structures and organize ourselves to carry them out. We might also trim off some of the fat. This is what we have to do.

Well, what are we doing? More, I suggest that if the goals include individualizing the educational experience for every child—if it includes equality of educational opportunity for all—then certain directions are obvious.

It means we cannot simply raise, for example, the teacher-pupil ratio as a means of cutting costs. But surely there are other alternatives which do correspond to these kinds of goals and do save money.

We have not begun to make an effective use of human resources—and this is where the crunch is—as the Minister well knows, it is not in the area of buildings and hardware. Buildings are a small part of the total cost of education. We have not realized that the teaching task can be broken down into clerical routines, classroom activities that much less trained and lower-paid personnel—teacher aides, teacher-assistants—could perform.

We have not even begun to scratch the surface of the use of parent volunteers. And we must do this if we are going to control costs.

However, before we can make that kind of a thrust, we have to change the role of teachers, from simply being “help” to being participants in the process. This means restructuring the school from the captain-crew attitude to a more democratic pattern. It means bringing teachers in at the board level to discuss objectives. They must see for themselves the cost factor and be willing to deal with it.

The other direction, I suggest, Mr. Speaker, means disaster. Now 14,000 British teachers are on strike; Hamilton teachers have handed in their resignations; in Bruce county I understand teachers have handed their resignations in; two of these jurisdictions are now pink listed. We have seen strikes in Quebec, we have seen strikes in New York. I understand, Mr. Speaker, that very recently New York has brought in men to organize these strikes up in Ontario—perhaps for obvious reasons. Surely our priorities demand that good teachers and good teaching conditions can alone give the quality of education we desire.

But with no aims, with no priorities, with no strategy to cut costs where priorities do not exist, the annual bargaining of teacher and board becomes the most obvious place to cut the budget.

Surely it is time to foster a different role. As participants in the process let us stop the platitudes of team work et al and give teachers some power on advisory boards, which have some influence, as well as a restructuring of the school. This way, schools could be run by the committee approach rather than by the power of the principal dribbling down to the bottom, where the teachers will have little influence.

When we are talking about industrial democracy, it is ironic that in 1969 teachers feel they have less voice than ever before.

Perhaps it is just the whole problem of bigness, in the very jurisdictions that have been created.

However, certainly what we have at present, the atmosphere that I feel about need in the province is of a union-management confrontation which is about to take place in this province. We must bring teachers in to discuss basic objectives and not simply to carry out the decisions that have been made at the board level.

I doubt if greater individualization is possible unless education becomes a community effort, indeed the return of education to family influence is perhaps the only hope. That is what I mean by bringing parents into the schools to play a role; we can cut costs by doing this. In other words, parents must be encouraged to help in the school setting. Along with this and hand in hand, parents must also be encouraged to participate in the decisions which affect them and their children.

I think costs can be controlled and cut down, but it demands a total commitment to democratization and participation in the schools of Ontario.

There are even more opportunities in the use of students. I notice York University is providing student tutors in some of the high schools. Glendon College, for example, is providing a “buddy” system where an individual from first or second year in Glendon College is going out and offering himself as a “buddy” student in Grade 10—in low-income families incidentally—an approach which I think the member for Scarborough East might be interested in.

Why not a programme to make use of Grade 13 students to help Grade nine and ten students? If a goal of education is that of producing young people who recognize their social responsibility and have compassion, what better opportunity than that kind of activity?

Here, again, it must go hand in hand with the right to participate in the governing activities of the school. Surely rights should go hand in hand with responsibilities.

The department has failed to make use of its regional offices, to make them a local task force for innovation of a basic and exciting nature—not just helping to shore up the inadequate, but seminars for principals and vice-principals. We have to bring these people in to realize what is happening in education and how it affects their position and their role. What a waste of human resources we have, indeed, in the administration of the schools. For heaven's sake, let us get rid of $17,000 a year clerks in our schools, too often the role of those we call vice-principal. Let our principals loose as innovation agents, but let us help them redevelop these views first.

If the goal is the highest development of the individual child as a curious, creative, sensitive human being, as an individual capable of solving problems, and of contributing his talent to the service of his society, it sets out priorities.

One of the greatest costs in this province has been that of vocational education. Now, this perhaps is a matter which is of some interest to me because I happened to be in Ottawa when the education bill went through that particular legislature. And I remember trying to find out somewhere where decisions were being made. I went, of course, to The Department of Labour under which this piece of legislation had been handled and their answer was: "We have nothing to do with education, we just hand some money over to the province".

I went to the provincial department and the answer I got was, "Well, this is the Dominion government's plan, this is their proposal, we have nothing to do with this". And I said, "Well, is this not going to distort your educational system, is it not going to have to make basic changes?" and they said, "Well, it is not our problem, really the Dominion government has handed the money to the municipalities."

Well, you go to the municipalities and, of course, 75 cents on the dollar is really the only thing which they were concerned about. As an example—and I may have mentioned this before—we ended up by building a wood-working shop in Ontario for every single student who graduated in woodworking in 1960. Now, what priority is there? I wonder what woodworking has to do with the future of either vocational choices or with a realistic grasp of the direction this country is going in.

Is it time to make further efforts to decide whether more vocational training should take place in industry? So many employers say the training they receive in school is useless—obsolete machinery producing obsolete workers, they tell us. Then why are we spending millions and millions, why do we not leave it up to them, put more emphasis in this direction? Because we have committed ourselves to capital expenditures of some hundreds of millions of dollars.

That was the answer I received from a provincial official some years ago when I mentioned this whole problem. He said, "Well, you know, really what we will do is we will be able to use these buildings for something else." When we put so much expensive machinery in the buildings it was very hard to use them for anything else. Now, the Minister says we achieved a balance.

I will accept the suggestion that there was a need for vocational opportunities at that level, there was a need if we were going to be able to expand the number of students kept in school at the Grade 11, 12 and 13 levels. But one wonders now at this point in time whether there should not be a re-thinking in terms of the cost-value relationship of that particular thrust.

We have finally recognized the value of outdoor education for the individualization of the education of the child. I prefer to call it the "in the community education", because outdoor education always seems to me something you do with walking around among the trees and grass. I think this is a bit more sophisticated. I think it is time to question the need for educational facilities every time a community thinks it needs another school. Is it time to start experimenting with mini-schools such as the Paul Goodman concept has brought forth?

Surely no school should be built in Ontario today which is not of a low-cost modular type, if the goal is to create an educational system which is flexible and adaptable in the hope that flexible and adaptable children might result. Have we gone far enough in effective scheduling and timetabling? I know there are difficulties in all-year timetabling, I know there are difficulties in extending timetabling over the longer part of the day, but these are things I think which we might very well begin to put into the mix.

Have we ever considered commuter bussing so that we move kids to facilities rather than continually attempt to build facilities right on top of kids? That is another area where money can be saved.

As well we must make use of the teachers' colleges. Students will be involved in the academic content of a BA degree. But surely these young people should be encouraged to play a role in the schools of the community. This is not simply a matter of finding cheap help but rather making their professional training worthwhile and meaningful. But if these institutions could be regarded as a community resource, then once again I think you have access to valuable human resources.

Is it time we looked carefully at the influence of the educational industry? Perhaps no other part of our economy has grown as quickly in the past few years.

With no clear definition of goal, teachers, administrators and boards have been easy prey for the massive promotion activities of the education industry. Read educational journals, wander through the Canadian Educational Showcase. There are many pieces of hardware which have added to the classroom experience of students, but much is the extension of an industry—much of it American-owned—which wants to sell its product.

A great deal of money has been spent; little research has been made of the value of much of the material, little material can be found on this question. Often it is hard to find out whether this kind of hardware, whether this machine, whether this material, properly relates to the curriculum practices or teaching methods in our schools. Too often, one sees this kind of hardware lying around unused, or little used, in a school. Surely we need a consumers' guide to educational technology in this province. When aimless innovation becomes the order of the day, pointless buying becomes the danger of the moment.

When there is some co-ordination of curriculum, teaching practice and goal; when there is some recognizable framework in which to judge all these machines and materials, it will be possible to make judgments about their worth, or at least their position in a priority list of school needs.

One hesitates to suggest a moratorium. One would hope to see the direction clarified. At least one can say this: It is time to call a halt to the "bandwagon" approach to educational hardware. Before a new piece of technology is introduced and the province is expected to pay a grant, the buyer should be able to state how this machine will contribute to the total educational experience of the young people; what is the cost-value relationship, and if the conditions for the maximum utilization of that hardware exists in the school where it is to rest. Until the goals are established at least this much information should be available.

I have mentioned again and again this evening the need to establish priorities. I have indicated where goals would help establish these priorities, where savings could be made.

I now wish to indicate where the NDP would reject cut-backs and dangerous economizing:

1. The priorities of compassion. If we believe in equalization of educational opportunity it must surely begin with full services to emotionally disturbed children, children with learning difficulties, retarded children, blind and deaf children. As well, this emphasis must involve surely culturally and economically deprived children—as the member for Scarborough East has emphasized—head-start programmes, which have a carry-on feature. Even more, an organized effort to bring adult education to low-income families, not just adult retraining but the development of a strategy for social change. In doing this, the presence of the school in the community as a total community resource must be recognized.

Educational TV could play a role if structured for participation by low-income citizens. This alone can provide a home environment in which education for the culturally deprived and the education as a whole can relieve rather than magnify class stratification.

A programme of concentration on counselling as "buddying", as we have already described it at the Grade 9 and 10 level, could provide a turning point in future goals of these young people.

We suggested priorities of necessity—and one of these priorities, of course we have suggested, being assistance to Roman Catholic high schools. I am not going to go into that whole problem. We in this party believe, we have stated quite pointedly, that the Roman Catholic elementary schools exist, they are part of the constitutional fabric of this country. We have no way of getting rid of them, and in fact, if the government at any point wanted to get rid of them, it was some years ago when they were given the opportunities of extension and expansion under the foundation plan.

We have stated this—that now it is a matter of tidying up so that what we probably should be expecting from the Minister is some indication of what those costs are, if we develop the kind of co-ordinated approach, the kind of sharing process, which we have stated should go along with this kind of justice; surely we might even be giving incentive grants for this kind of co-operation.

Surely we should make it possible for Roman Catholics to buy and sell services the same as the public school board. Surely we should make it possible for Roman Catholic schools to receive grants as a result of a mixed marriage when the Protestant husband wants to make grants available to the Roman Catholic school that his children are going to.

Perhaps the most terrifying point at which the goal-less and priority-less situation comes to the fore is in the area of the post-secondary level. The Minister has initiated a massive enlargement of the post-secondary school system. A decade ago this province had no colleges of applied arts and technology, and a few relatively small universities. Now we are told by 1975 a number approaching 25 per cent of the age group of 18 to 21 will be in a university. A similar number will be in a college of applied arts and technology.

The Minister brings no evidence that it is a rational or appropriate mix, either from an intellectual, a motivational, social or economic point of view. The costs of this expansion, particularly at the university level, are massive. Naturally, Treasury Board, through the committee on university affairs, has had to limit the needs.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Would the hon. member have a smaller percentage?

Mr. Pitman: It is very possible that a smaller percentage would be more appropriate at university level with a larger percentage at the college of applied arts and technology, and with a larger percentage in the adult education spectrum. I am suggesting that—

Hon. Mr. Davis: But still a larger percentage in the total.

Mr. Pitman:—that you have not one iota of evidence that the mix, which will be a massive problem for the taxpayers of this province, has any rational existence.

I simply want to say that the method of distributing the money available is by formula-financing. This system, because it gives money on the basis of population, encourages universities to gather in large numbers, and the Minister only has to ask the Premier of the province what happened at the University of Western Ontario where they extended the incoming students by 1,000 past the projection and put $1.5 million in the bank. The intellectual sorting out process of Grade 13 has gone—an open door lies ahead. No doubt 25 per cent is the base of the projection.

The question must be asked—is university education as we conceive it in Ontario carrying out its role? If so, can the nature of the university be changed by encouraging them to enlarge at the expense of quality? If not, then set new goals, but do not create an end through the manipulation of the means.

All parties have encouraged the increase in educational opportunities in the post-secondary level. We encouraged more university places because there were indications that students with ability were being kept out and that these were too often the children of low-income families. And there was no other place to go. Now the colleges of applied arts and technology have appeared, we may be on the way to a totally new spectrum. We realize that simply widening the door for one thing did not create the kind of social mix, and did not end the social stratification which we had expected. Is there a misplaced kind of idealism in this obsession with keeping everyone in school until age 21? Once again it is a matter of goal. As long as the goal is the transfer of information in the educational system then of course we must keep them at school longer, but that goal today is surely ludicrous.

If the reason for keeping people institutionalized to age 21 is because the economic system cannot cope with them, then let us look at this a little more closely. That becomes a total social problem and perhaps we should be making use of these human resources in many effective ways—fighting pollution, creating housing, providing services for the elderly. It would be more productive and cheaper and as long as the opportunity for subsidized education at the adult level is always left open it would also be just and considerably less costly to the people of this province.

We have condemned everyone as a dropout who does not stay in school until age 21, yet if we really believe in individual education, many would be better off in some other activity—recognizing that the opportunity for adult education must be extended, and here is the priority. In the name of economic well-being of individual opportunity, must we institutionalize the whole youth population to the age of 21 and probably destroy the quality and destroy the purpose of this educational system while doing it? As well as placing a monstrous burden on the taxpayers we are exacerbating all the factors which lead to disillusionment and revolt of the young people—large classes, impersonal education et al, and a feeling of being processed.

It comes back to goals, but strangely enough, the goals are being decided essentially by the commission set aside to study post-secondary education in Ontario. I will not read them because I do not have the time, but I simply state that by the time this report comes out it will be too late, the die will have been cast unless the Minister starts thinking this out now; it will be simply too late. In the meantime, legal compulsion to 16, social compulsion and active recruitment will set the path of policy, and along with the presence of relative monetary deprivation for those learning in later years, this solidifies the view that education is schooling for the young.

Well, my total thrust this evening has been that of two things—simply saying the Minister must set the goals, must decide the direction of the educational system. We cannot go in all directions at once. For one thing we will bankrupt the province if we try to do this.

I think he can put education back on the tracks. First he has many things to his advantage. He has a long tradition in this province of respect for education. He has a provincial system which can, and which is able to, make changes; he has proven that in the last number of years. It is conditioned to change. He has, in this province, a lack of hang-ups. We do not have racial problems and class problems exacerbating to a degree which we find for example in the United Kingdom or certainly in the United States. We have reached the plateau in terms of capital investment, in terms of the use of human resources. What he must do now is be selective and decide the goals and priorities. We cannot continue to innovate without knowing where we are going; but we can do it, all we need is the will and the courage.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, sometimes I think this Minister has had his portfolio about long enough. I have heard the hon. member for Scarborough East bring forward his ideas about the need for some concentration by the department on giving opportunities for the poverty stricken in the urban and rural areas of the province and I have heard the ideas of the member for Peterborough tumbling out onto the floor of this Legislature one after the other—at great length—all of them good ideas. But they just sink into the carpet like stale beer. The Minister rubs his eyes and he is saying to himself—well, we have heard all this before and I will be able to satisfy these earnest gentlemen and will carry on running the department as we have in the past. Since I say—what, 1962?

But I think that even for this Minister it is beginning to tell, because during this year, as the Minister well knows, there has been practically no discussion of his legislation. In fact, most of it has been sitting on the order paper for almost a full year; unprecedented, Mr. Speaker. The only opportunity was in the rather abortive bill to improve the administration of the Ontario college of art that was debated in an afternoon in March that I recall.

The standing committee on education has had nothing but rather useless meetings until the last couple of weeks in which they have been discussing the Minister's long-awaited legislation. One meeting back in the spring was to name a chairman.

The committee then adjourned and the second was to hear the proforma propositions put forward by the teachers' federation and then it adjourned and nothing was done.

I am sure the Minister must feel a bit sensitive about his role. If, in fact, he is not becoming cynical about the democratic process.

The propositions that have been put before him tonight are many that are extremely useful, but I think of all of the so-called debates that have gone on in the education estimates in the past and how futile they were. In fact, the Minister retires to a cosy corner of this Chamber or somewhere in his offices scattered across the city and makes the decisions which spend far more money than any one of his colleagues; in fact, of all of his colleagues combined year to year and have more impact on the community and the families of this province than the decisions of anyone else.

He has been able to do this since 1962 until this year without getting into serious trouble. I suppose, by the simple lapse of time, he is able to spend or get approval for the expenditure of funds already spent—so that many of us feel that this is just a little bit futile. Even the Minister, as he glances from time to time at the clock, realizes that the $2.4 billion over which he has jurisdiction is about to be voted with little or no trouble to him and that he can continue running—

Hon. Mr. Davis: How much?

Mr. Nixon: —running The Department of Education and the schools of this province out of his hip pocket. This $2.4 billion is composed of the following amounts—$931,419,000 in the general vote that we are discussing tonight; an additional $49,700,000 of extraordinary expenditure, which is another story which should be dealt with at length; $365,848,000 for university affairs.

Hon. Mr. Davis: We are not voting that tonight—

Mr. Nixon: It is already voted, but surely you have the control of its expenditure; do you deny it? Of course not.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No.

Mr. Nixon: $175 million for the Ontario Educational Capital Aid Corporation which, of course, is repaid as our commitments to the government of Canada fall due. A further $170 million for the University Capital Aid Corporation which, I admit, is dealt with under another department—The Department of the Treasury—but every dollar of which is spent only with the Minister's approval. And a further $700 million which is raised at the local level but is spent by the county boards of education and the city boards of education only with the approval of the Minister.

As I add this up, it comes to $2,391,967,000 and I suppose if you will permit a liberal exaggeration I will call this $2.4 billion. This is the amount of money the Minister spends—has mostly already spent this year.

I think of a good many proposals that have been put forward. I think of the debate on community colleges, all of the references to educational television. Much of it has been water cast on sand and it has simply sunk away. The Minister has run this with a complete disregard for the fact that all of us, too, have stood for election. That all of us, too, must return to our constituents and attempt to justify—and the Minister would be surprised how often we do justify or attempt to justify his actions—the expenditure of $2.4 billion on the educational processes for one year in this province. As a matter of fact, sometimes I attempt to try to describe to audiences how much money this is because anything over $700 or $800 is almost incomprehensible to me.

I must admit that my comprehension has expanded just recently in this matter. But when you talk about $7 million dollars a day, every day, this helps. Sometimes we try to do it in other ways but, in fact, the Minister controls the department which, in its monetary responsibilities, is simply fantastic. The expenditures of trivial matters amounting to a million here, $5 million there, hardly warrant his concern and he feels that there are those in his well-organized department, under the direction of his efficient and able Deputy Minister, that really do not require his personal attention.

In the probable five minutes that remain to me, I want to talk about some personal things. Some things that have been brought to the Minister's attention in the past, which he has satisfied us in the House as far as the vote is concerned, but has disappointed us in the House as far as his actions over a number of years are concerned.

Number one: the Minister is not interested in the teaching of history or the reform of the teaching of history. Mr. Speaker, I would venture to say that this is probably one of the sorest points that one can mention with this Minister, because for all of his assurance of the studies that are going on and the fact that emphasis on meaningful Canadian history is going to come about, still, since 1962 the changes have been insignificant and infinitesimal.

The Minister, I am sure, from time to time is asked to assist those in his family who are perhaps going through the system. He may have had to listen to somebody in his family talk about the five trips of Champlain—in Grade 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9. If you do not do something about that, I am going to get my heart into the replacement of this Minister and putting in his place somebody like my hon. colleague who can achieve some reform.

You know, I keep thinking that surely making meaningful the history of our nation is something that even this Minister, for all of his glib phrases and his glib reassurances, can eventually come to grips with. But he now has proved that he cannot, because three weeks ago I asked the same questions again.

Where did he go on his fifth trip? For all of the times that I have gone over it with four children, I still cannot remember myself and I must say I really do not care very much where he went. But I would say this—that there are aspects of our history that can be emphasized in a way that would make it live.

You know, I think of the Jesuit martyrs and how we always look at that terrible circumstance that happened up there at Midland from the standpoint of the Jesuit martyrs, without for a moment thinking of the contribution to our history. I know as a good politician the Minister is thinking more and more of the contribution to our history that has been the role of the Indian community and the fact that one of the longest periods of peace time in the world was undertaken by the philosophy of the Iroquois extending from the Hudson to Lake Michigan.

But no, we stick with the Jesuit martyrs—Father Brébeuf, an estimable man burned at the stake under terrible circumstances by the so-called savages. There are so many things in the teaching of the history of our nation that this Minister has got up and with all the power at his command, which is very significant, has assured the House that there are going to be changes. We are going to move in this regard—but he has done nothing, nothing of significance.

I have another personal beef, and this comes from my personal observations and that is the teaching of languages, particularly the French language in this province. The Minister can give us a good many statistics showing the number of schools that now teach it at the elementary level, and how experiments are taking place right down to kindergarten. And that we have spent a good deal of money in trying to train teachers in the new teachers' colleges so that we will have competent instruction.

But the Minister must surely realize that in most areas of this province the teaching of the French language is grossly inadequate. That it is, in fact, almost a crime that we cannot have some more value associated with the bilingual aspects of this province and this country. I must say, Mr. Speaker, that this Minister is solely responsible. He has had the resources of this province at his disposal in the way that the hon. member for Peterborough, who is no longer here—

Mr. Pitman: I am here.

Mr. Nixon: I am sorry—not in his seat—indicated a few moments ago that almost any expenditure was justified. We on this side were prepared to vote for it, but still the instruction in a second language, particularly French, is grossly inadequate. Hundreds of thousands of our young people are still going through the instruction ending, after five years with Grade 13, with a little bit of knowledge, as if they had been studying a secret code which is lost to them, just as it was lost to the Minister and, unfortunately, is lost to me. Now, I would say that the Minister and myself and others, sort of being the "old boys" in the Chamber as far as this is concerned, might look to the younger members and say, is it not great that they, coming after us, have had an opportunity to learn a second language and appreciate a second culture? But, in fact, this is not the case, and my son and the Minister's children are learning a language in the same inadequate way that both he and I were taught.

Perhaps you may say I am speaking for myself, but I am not only speaking for myself and my children, but many others like us.

I must say that our people probably do not have the benefits of what is available in Peel county, but I am not going to backtrack on this. Maybe we should have some of the Minister's kids come in and give us a little French dissertation so that we can judge for ourselves how effective it is, because I do not think it is that good.

All of these things have been discussed since 1962, and for all of the expansion and expenditure—now amounting to $2.4 billion this year—very little has changed. The schools are fine, the teachers' salaries have improved, the county boards of education with the assistance of $49 million have survived the first year and I think will establish themselves quite well.

But still we face the fact that the leadership to The Department of Education that could come from the Minister is inadequate, and the reason, I believe, is that the Minister is not a democrat. He is not prepared to turn to the members of this House, his own supporters or the people on this side, and to take some advice, some assistance from them.

Mind you, we are prepared to grant him a good deal of credit for certain improvement, but I do not think this system has improved that much since 1962. I think the Minister's predecessor could run The Department of Education with one hand and the province of Ontario with the other, and do just as good a job, so I do not know.

I used to think that the Minister of Education had his eyes on the throne itself. I was still prepared to say publicly a couple of weeks ago that if he did regain his interest in public affairs he could fit himself into the pecking order at a very high level.

But for now I feel he has abdicated. He has abdicated as a member of this House. He has abdicated as the Minister of Education. Maybe he should be considering the practice of law as something more fulfilling.

I do not intend to spend a long time on this. We want to distribute the time available to us among a number of members, but I know that the policy of this department—and I do not want to end on a crass note dealing with money alone—but the policy of the department, the policy of the government is to move from a level of support amounting to about 45 per cent to 60 per cent, which of course, as the Minister well knows, is the policy put forward by this party in the election of 1967.

The phrases are all there on a phased basis over three years. These are phrases extracted from the Budget of the Treasurer himself, that we will move to a greater share of the costs of education; that this will involve an increased expenditure of $250 million in the third year.

I can well remember having those discussions, not with the Minister, not with the Premier, but from public platforms in 1967 in an election campaign where the Tories were saying, "Where are you going to get the money?"

Our answer, of course, is that we get it through taxation, precisely the answer that the Minister and the Treasurer of Ontario must inherently put forward now.

I feel that a great deal of the financing of education is being wasted. I believe that this Minister has grown out of his job. I believe he is ready for something else. It might be the practice of law, it might be the premier-ship of Ontario.

I suppose whatever it is in his own hands, but I can say this, that frankly I have heard for too many years good proposals put from the Opposition and the government side of the House and the Minister deal with them in the House, with efficiency, with aplomb, to editorial plaudits, but in fact in the months following do little or no action. We can still complain about many of the matters that I have raised here and have been raised year by year.

I have not lost confidence in the Minister of Education. A more affable Minister we never had. But his responsibilities are bigger than could possibly be envisaged by the Minister of Public Works, and they may even be bigger than can be coped with by the Minister himself. Frankly, I am concerned about the expenditure and the state of education in the province, and I look forward to hearing the Minister reassure the House.

Mr. J. P. Spence (Kent): Mr. Speaker, I enter this debate on the estimates of education as a layman. I feel very humble as I feel unqualified to discuss the estimates of education, but I might say, Mr. Speaker, I feel as if I should take part in this debate because I am one who has been contacted on many occasions in regard to the situation of education in the province of Ontario.

Mr. Speaker, I am speaking on behalf of low-income people across the province of Ontario about a matter which is of tremendous concern to those people in the low-income bracket.

We have two classes, I feel, in the province of Ontario, the rich and the poor, and this is of great concern to those people who are what I call the have-nots.

I would like to say I have the greatest respect for the Minister of Education, but I want to say this, and this may be the last formal opportunity I have to make a single point for justice and equity on behalf, not only of my own constituents, but also of all those rural people who figure so largely in the bottom quarter of our population, the poor in the Ontario affluent society.

I am not against better education, Mr. Speaker, nor against equality of opportunity across the province of Ontario. In fact, I know that this is long overdue. But what I cannot accept is the fact that Ontario entered into a major reorganization of the schools jurisdiction in the way that it did.

When county school boards were set up at the beginning of the year, many of our constituents and supporters and citizens of the province of Ontario were led to believe that the county school boards system would not cost any more, or would not be too much more than under the township school system. When they were first set up, one of the things that startled the people of the province of Ontario was the salaries that were paid to the directors of education in the different counties across the province of Ontario.

These men who are directors of the heads of county school boards across the province are very able and capable men, but, Mr. Speaker, when people in the province of Ontario are only earning $2,500 a year, and when directors of county school boards are earning $27, $28, $29 and $30,000 there is too much difference in the two individuals in the province of Ontario. This is one of the things that shocked the people in my area and I do not think conditions such as that should exist.

I think, too, Mr. Speaker, the people were very concerned when they first heard of the salaries paid to the directors. They expected that a tremendous education bill was going to be a burden placed on the people of the province of Ontario, and they were concerned all through the summer and when they received their tax notices.

They came to me on many occasions, some of them coming with 75 per cent of their tax bill being education costs, many of them with 60 per cent. When you are in the low-income bracket that is a burden that sometimes even takes the bread and butter off the table.

We must have consideration for all the people of the province of Ontario, and I will tell you, Mr. Speaker, the low-income group—with the greatest respect to the Minister—was forgotten when county boards were set up across the province.

I must say with great respect to the Minister of Education, either the Minister knew what he was doing, and what the financial effects would be, in which case he should have told the people before the last election and allowed this reform to be put to a test before the electors of the province of Ontario.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Your party did.

Mr. Nixon: Only partly, and the Minister never told the public the truth of the matter.

Mr. Spence: And, Mr. Speaker, as most of us—

An hon. member: The hon. member took part of it.

Mr. Spence: They are upsetting me, these gentlemen are aggravating me, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Spence: He should have told the people before the election and allowed this reform to be put to the test at the ballot box. As most of us suspect he had absolutely no idea what events would take place through Bill 44, or any other subsequent legislation. Even this morning, Mr. Speaker, in committee, the Minister was still tying up the iniquities and the loose ends in a number of housekeeping bills.

Mr. Speaker, no amount of housekeeping will clean up the mess that the education system is in in the province.

Mr. Nixon: Change the government, that will do it.

Mr. Spence: It seems to the low-income group of this province, $50 million of equalization will not do it.

Mr. Speaker, nothing will bring a fair deal to these people, short of the provincial government accepting its total responsibility of picking up the tab of 80 per cent of the education costs across the province of Ontario.

I do not want to take up any more time, Mr. Speaker, but I do want to say to the Minister of Education, if he has a heart, the low-income group in the province of Ontario is finding it a hardship to pay the education costs that he has placed upon them.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker—

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Correctional Services): Now we will get the facts.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, in—

Mr. T. Reid: Is the Minister closing off? Where is the NDP?

An hon. member: The NDP have got a caucus meeting.

Mr. Speaker: Order please. I have no other speakers on my list.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, in rising to, shall we say, sum up—I assume—

Mr. Nixon: There is great interest in the NDP.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well I am very upset, I had a few remarks for the member for Peterborough.

Mr. Speaker, just to sum up the estimates of this department, as the leader of the Opposition pointed out, I guess for the seventh time—

Mr. Nixon: Seventh and last.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Seventh time—I do so with a few words related to the activities of the committee. I would like very generally to observe that while the hours spent in committee were somewhat arduous I think they were worthwhile. I think I would say to the leader of the Opposition that, in spite of his observations of a few moments ago, it was a very meaningful experience.

Mr. Nixon: I did not say anything about that committee, I thought that committee operated quite well.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Good, I am glad to hear that.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Where are all the important ones?

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): The most important ones are here.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Okay, let the record show two NDP present.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I also, Mr. Speaker, would like to express on behalf of the members the appreciation to the personnel of The Department of Education. While there have been a number of constructive criticisms made in the last number of months, some in the last few moments, some not completely constructive, but basically constructive suggestions, I think I can very clearly state that the officials in the department I administer have in what has been a rather difficult period of time—the last year and a half—dedicated themselves to the improvement of the educational programme, have worked under somewhat difficult circumstances in the last few months, and I would like to—and I hope I speak for the members on all sides—express appreciation to those people.

Mr. T. Reid: They have got too much power.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am very interested in the observations, of course, of the leader of the Opposition. He has participated for some years, Mr. Speaker, in the debates on education in this House.

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): He did a good job tonight.

Hon. Mr. Davis: He observes from time to time some of the inadequacies of the educational system and, Mr. Speaker, I do not think I ever have stated, as Minister, that we have achieved perfection. I do not think, Mr. Speaker, I have ever indicated that there are not problems to be solved and yet I say, and I say this as objectively as I can, that the educational system in this province in the past few years has made very substantial progress in many fields.

Mr. Nixon: And is the best.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well I would not go quite that far.

Mr. Nixon: The Minister did in his formal remarks.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Did I really? Well I would not want to do that.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: He stands corrected.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I would just clear up one particular point for the leader of the Opposition. It is not my intent at this precise moment to return to the practice of law. I assure him I am very interested in the involvement of the members on all sides of the House in educational deliberations. Very frankly I wish there were more.

I am not going into the history of the education committee because we debated this before, but I can indicate to him that the committee did schedule, did have other meetings during the spring part of the session, and very frankly some representatives from his own party had other duties—I am the first to admit this—and could not make themselves available for some of these discussions.

Mr. Nixon: No, no, he is wrong there, dead wrong.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I should also point out, Mr. Speaker, that this question of abdication of responsibility—and while I know these things are said in good fun from time to time—I would say, Mr. Speaker, that the leader of the Opposition I know is—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I know that the leader of the Opposition is particularly sensitive in these total areas of leadership and just what is happening, and I will not pursue this matter any further because I recognize his own frustrations in this particular area.

Mr. Nixon: That is unworthy of the Minister.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well I am saying it in a very kindly, and I hope a friendly, fashion, because I have great respect for the leader of the Opposition and I make no bones about it, Mr. Speaker.

Hon. Mr. Grosman: You always hurt the one you love.

Mr. Nixon: I always worry about putting that stuff in the bank.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, I know. I really feel very badly that I cannot reply to the member for Peterborough because I listened to his remarks with very great interest. And Mr. Speaker, I sensed, as I do on occasion, from the member for Peterborough—once again a very sincere member of this House, and I say this objectively—some, shall we say, contradictions in the presentations he has made; some contradictions based on the setting of objectives, highly desirable goals.

I believe they are there, not as definitive as we would like perhaps because I think goals and objectives of necessity must change as times and conditions change.

I also sense that in his suggestion of the establishment of priorities, if one looks at them, there is some validity. I also suggest, with respect, Mr. Speaker, that when one assesses these, attaches the economic involvement thereto, one would find there would be no diminution in the educational investment.

I think, very frankly, there would be an increase. Let us be very frank about it. I recognize, all members of this House recognize, the concern and the growing concern the taxpayer has with respect to educational investment. I was interested during the committee hearings, I sat there and I like to think we participated in a way that was helpful on most occasions, perhaps not in all—

Mr. T. Reid: The Minister never set up one.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, I did not, but I hope the answers were sufficient. But I was interested. I was interested, Mr. Speaker. Not once during the discussions were there any specific recommendations as to how we could in a logical, intelligent way delete any meaningful sums from the estimates of The Department of Education.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: So what else is new?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Not once, Mr. Speaker, was there a suggestion, with great respect to the leader of the Opposition who gets up here tonight and talks about history and Champlain, Mr. Speaker, I am interested in Canadian history—

Mr. Nixon: Does the Minister remember the debate three years ago?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I remember the debates about language. Mr. Speaker, let us be very honest about it, too, and suggest that the leader of the Opposition, since he has been leader and as the Opposition critic of education, he himself never came up with any meaningful determination as to how educational investments could be reduced. In fact, Mr. Speaker,—

Mr. Nixon: It would be increased.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Without any question.

Mr. Nixon: Obviously, Mr. Speaker, the Minister is not following the debates. On a point of order, the Minister has not been following the debates. Surely he is aware that our policy would call for the expansion of expenditure to cover 80 per cent of the cost.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Let us leave the 80 per cent bit out for a moment.

Mr. Nixon: The Minister is talking about 60.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh no, I am not talking about 60.

Mr. Nixon: Does the Minister not talk to the Treasurer? He is talking about 60.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am talking about individual programmes and ways and means of reducing—

Mr. Nixon: How about reducing the Minister's salary?

Hon. Mr. Davis: —educational investment and I say with respect, Mr. Speaker, we cannot have it both ways.

Mr. Nixon: Oh, that is an old chestnut; you cannot have it both ways. Mr. Speaker, does the Minister want some further comments on this matter now?

Mr. Speaker: Order! The hon. Minister has the floor.

Hon. Mr. Davis: The hon. leader of the Opposition has had his opportunity, and I listened very carefully. But we went through the deliberations of the committee, I have gone through Hansard over the last four or five years, I have attempted to select those meaningful expressions of constructive criticism that have been helpful—and there have been some—and I would say to the leader of the Opposition that the concept of the Ontario Institute, the thrust that has been given, and I think rightfully so, in the field of educational research, Mr. Speaker, I am quite prepared to share some of the credit—not all of it—

Mr. Nixon: Do not blame anybody else.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —some of the credit with the leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Nixon: That $60 million was all the Minister's, he can have all the credit for that.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, that is fine. I can recall, Mr. Speaker, standing here and discussing the estimates of the Ontario—

Mr. Nixon: The Minister was standing right next to the Premier then.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, I was over there, I was down at that end.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, I was here somewhere.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: And the leader of the Opposition, was over there.

Hon. Mr. Davis: And, Mr. Speaker, I will be here somewhere for perhaps a shade longer than some of the members opposite.

Getting back to these deliberations—

Mr. Nixon: But the Minister is prepared to leave that to the people?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh, I certainly am. I am a great believer in leaving everything to the people.

Mr. Speaker, I was on a train of thought—the member for York South has a very happy expression, I was derailed. But we were talking about education research. Go back to Hansard, I would suggest to the leader of the Opposition, see the number of ways he had about spending more money over the last number of years.

Mr. Nixon: I told the Minister we would expand it considerably, up to—

Hon. Mr. Davis: But I am not talking about that.

Mr. Nixon: That is what I am talking about.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh no, it is not. I was talking about educational television. I think four years ago the member was saying, “Mr. Minister, here is a great way to get French language instructions—

Mr. Nixon: And that is a fact, the Minister never even tried it.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —to all parts of the province with the $16 or $6 million”.

Mr. Nixon: It was 1962, the Minister’s first year.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, how many million?

Mr. Nixon: The department has still not got educational television off the ground.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, quite right, we are still in the process.

Mr. Nixon: They have just got to secret negotiations with CBC.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Some $16 million. Mr. Speaker, when we deal with educational research—and I just want to spend a moment or two on it because I think it is important—we are talking with respect to the institute, I do not want to zero in on any particular situation, but we are talking about roughly a $10 million investment.

Mr. Nixon. And $60 million in buildings.

Hon. Mr. Davis: With great respect, Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member would get out his slide rule and work it out, I think he would find it is between $15 and $17 million.

Mr. Nixon: Two million dollars a year for 30 years is $60 million.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I would get into that in great detail if I had the time, but there are other areas—

Mr. Pitman: The Minister can go until 10.30.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh, do I go to 10.30? Because I could explain it to the hon. member if he would like. But take it from me, the figure, actually and properly costed, is around 15 to 17—

Mr. Nixon: That is $2 million a year for 30 years.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, no. Between 15 and 17.

Mr. Nixon: Is that new maths?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, it is, I think, very logical math. If the hon. member would work it out, I think he would find that to be the case. But, Mr. Speaker, this represents, out of the $2.4 billion that he is suggesting is being invested in education, an investment of some $10 or $11 million; some of it in the field of graduate work with respect to research. And if one took his own, shall we say, suggestions of four or five years ago, I think he would then say to me that it is a very minimal investment indeed in the field of educational research. It should be somewhat higher.

Mr. Nixon: Why is the Minister not teaching history better; why is he not teaching French better?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I recognize and I am the first to admit to the leader of the Opposition that history is important, I am also the first to admit that we can improve the French language programme.

Mr. Nixon: But the Minister would not admit that in 1963.

Hon. Mr. Davis: But I would say, with respect to the leader of the Opposition, that he is having to dig very deeply into whatever issues he wants, to zero in on those two particular items, and this is the total, shall we say, contribution he wishes to make.

So let us deal with the matter of total costs, leaving out, for the moment, Mr. Speaker, the contributions of the member for Scarborough East on the two items that he raised.

I must deal with the one, the questionnaire. I found it really very interesting when it was provided to me. I think there is some helpful information in it. I think some of the answers were relatively predictable and perhaps the member himself might have answered them prior to asking them, but nonetheless the question of the involvement—

Mr. T. Reid: I believe in asking the people before presuming to say what they think.

Hon. Mr. Davis: As I say, I think some of the answers were quite predictable and I would agree with some of them. I think, Mr. Speaker, there is great merit in involving, in a meaningful way, the parents of the children within the school system. I think there is great merit in involving the general public, if it is possible, in a greater understanding and awareness of what we are attempting to do in education. But when we say this, Mr. Speaker, it is fine to generalize. It is another thing to bring this about in practice, and I do not know whether other members agree with me but I found, for instance, the interest taken in some municipalities as recently as yesterday, in the number of people who actually got out and cast a ballot, with respect to school board elections, was a shade disheartening.

Mr. T. Reid: Make it a neighbourhood involvement.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I have no objection to a neighbourhood involvement, but I say to the hon. member—and I think he realizes this—to structure neighbourhood involvement with each individual school in, shall we say, a statutory sense, does not really make much sense.

Mr. Speaker, the hon. member spoke on matters related to—I see the member for Peterborough is back, I will get back to some of his thoughts in a few moments.

The hon. member for Scarborough East spoke on the problems we must face with respect to, shall we say, the culturally deprived children.

Mr. T. Reid: About poverty in our society.

Hon. Mr. Davis: All right. Mr. Speaker, I am not going to deal with the question of poverty in the total sense, I do not think this is either the time nor do I have the capacity to deal with it, in an overall sense.

Mr. T. Reid: That is the problem.

Hon. Mr. Davis: But let us deal with it as it relates to education, let us deal with the desirability—and, Mr. Speaker, there are many thoughts, we are not objecting to the desirability of some of these things; but let us look at some of the problems which are involved.

If we were to extend the educational programme on a total provincial basis—and I recognize it may not be necessary to do it on a total provincial basis, but let us use these figures—to the three- and four-year old children—and let us take an estimated per pupil cost of, say, a year from now, or two years from now, of some $6.45—

Mr. T. Reid: The Minister is talking about a programme I have not proposed.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am talking about the programme and extension of programmes to, say, the three- and four-year olds, the pre-kindergarten programme of four-year olds.

Mr. T. Reid: Which is a proposal I have not made in five years.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, no, if the member looks at Hansard, I think on page 134, there is some general discussion on this and I just want to give the hon. members some indication of what we are talking about, and if this were extended, we are talking about two hundred and some millions of dollars. In some areas too, the member for Peterborough wanted to have more meaningful research programmes. He was critical of some of the problems at OISE and I think with some justification, but in the same breath at the committee, he wanted extension of the services of OISE, shall we say, more research centres, related—

Mr. Pitman: Developmental.

Hon. Mr. Davis: More development areas in the county, and to do this we are only talking, I recognize, about a million dollars, but still, in my view a million dollars that is part of the total picture and one that must be considered. We look into some other areas of where suggestions were made at the committee, Mr. Speaker. We look into areas of teacher education, teacher training, and the member for Peterborough has suggested that there may be ways and means, although he did not specify—and I recognize it is difficult for him to do so—just where you would cut down on educational investment, and yet he enumerated, and I think with some validity again, many areas where educational investment in his view should be increased.

I think he recognizes that once we move the teacher training programme into the universities, once the university programmes involve some form of degree, we are talking about a substantial increase in the cost to the taxpayers of this province because there is no question that a person with degree qualifications in Grade 8, is going to be earning roughly the same salary as a teacher in Grade 9 with the same qualifications. And if the hon. member for Peterborough would do a little arithmetic, and if he were to equate now the economic implications of having all the teachers in our elementary school system with degrees receiving comparable salaries to the secondary school people, I think, Mr. Speaker, we were talking then in many, many millions of dollars. And I am not saying without validity, but I think, at the same time, we have to recognize the implications of what we are suggesting.

While it is desirable to have these objectives and these goals, let us at the same time recognize that if you are going to maintain the quality and the integrity of the system, and if the hon. member for Peterborough wants to maintain roughly the same student-teacher ratio—and I do not care how sophisticated his internal structures become with respect to reports, attendance, and all the rest of it—if the teacher-student ratios are to be maintained we are still talking roughly the same total investment. There is just no other way around it and let us not fool one another about it.

Mr. Speaker, he used some interesting figures and I hope that I quote them accurately. He was referring to the increase in costs from 1956 to 1966, and I think there was an increase from some $260 million to something around $1 billion. He is very worried, and I think with some reason, as to what the costs may be, shall we say, in 1976. If my memory serves me correctly, he was using the figures of Dr. Watson which indicated that the figure then could be $3.6 to $4 billion. Actually it is the same percentage increase, which is the interesting part, in the next ten years that took place in the last ten years.
